

The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes

Adventure XXIV – The Adventure of the Greek Interpreter

1. What kind of childhood did Holmes have?
2. Are aversion to women and interest in music unemotional traits?
3. Were the golf club membership organizations?
4. Having more chance to practice, why wasn't Sherlock Holmes superior to Mycroft in observation and deduction?
5. Did Holmes or Watson discuss the ecliptic?
6. Did Holmes have another older brother to inherit the family property?
7. Was Holmes talking about his maternal or paternal grandmother?
8. How could anyone be well known in the Diogenes Club?
9. Is modesty an underestimate of one's self?
10. Does Mycroft dine at the Club, at his lodgings, or elsewhere?
11. What directed the path of the stroll?
12. Was "the Carlton" the Carlton Club?
13. Is auditing consistent with not taking the trouble to be proved right?
14. How did the Diogenes Club attract new members?
15. Does an observant person have a flabby handshake?
16. Does Mycroft go "everywhere" to hear of Sherlock?
17. What are ammunition boots?
18. Why not gifts for a relative's or neighbor's children?
19. Why not death from tuberculosis or any other disease plaguing 19th century England?
20. Why Orientals more than Occidentals?

Ralph Edwards, BSI

February 10, 1995