The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes Adventure XXVI – The Adventure of the Final Problem

By train and by boat, day and night,
Chased by Moriarty our duo takes flight.
 The end comes at the falls.
 For Holmes, duty calls.
“He’s the wisest man,” Watson will write.

Sandy Kozinn

Holmes fought Moriarty very well
Until from a ledge they both fell
 While poor Watson left for a trick
 About a woman said to be sick
He was left a lurid tale to sell

Karen Olson

They did meet at the Reichenbach Falls,
And both plunged down beside those steep walls,
 When Watson got there,
 And screamed through the air,
Alas no one did answer his calls.

Bill Dorn

Twice Holmes has faced a death-dealing threat
Around his foe he has cast a net
 At the falls they did face
 Both fell in a deep space
The best and wisest man Watson met
