

LIMERICKS

The Return of Sherlock Holmes Adventure XXVIII – The Adventure of the Empty House

Three years of silence Holmes kept.
He'd ensured Moriarty leapt –
    Well, was pushed – to the stream.
    It all worked like a dream!
While in London poor Watson just wept!

Sandy Kozinn

Watson was sad to think Holmes was dead
Holmes needed him and came back instead
    Watson was shocked clear to his sox
    By the activity on his Baker Street blocks
A wax bust kept Sherlock from losing his head

Karen Olson

London's second most dangerous man,
Was the Colonel, Sebastian Moran,
    For the game was not fair,
    So he shot young Adair,
With an air gun he clutched in his hand.

Watson goes to scene of a killing
Adair dead counting pound and shilling
    Holmes makes dear Watson faint
    Using bookseller feint
Moran is caught with air-gun chilling

Steve Mason

Bill Dorn