The Mystery of the Young Millionaire

"Here," said Sherlock Holmes, "are fire clews concerning the young millionaire which enable me to tell not only where he went, but why, and a good deal else as well."

"Please, Mr. Holmes, where in my husband?" cried the distressed wife.

"This bottle of perfumery tells me he has gone to a city in Germany."

"Oh, what city, Mr. Holmes? I cannot tell by that"

"Cologne, madam. I see he left to dodge a collector. The bread shows what he prefers to do, showing him to be of an indolent character. The other clews, however, show him to be an athlete, one telling that he is something of a pugilist and the other indicating that he is a baseball player."
