17874. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES TAROT, by John Matthews and Wil Kingham (London: Connections Book Publishing, 2014) described earlier (August 15 #2) is now out-of-print but available on the Internet; Matthews is a modern-day shaman and Kingham is a shamanic artist, and they have produced a 160-page illustrated guidebook and 79 attractive Sherlockian cards.
17876. Proceedings of the Pondicherry Lodge is the semi-annual electronic newsletter edited by Jayantika Ganguly for The Sherlock Holmes Society of India; it's now in its fifth year, and the current issue (with 85 colorful pages) is available at <www.tinyurl.com/yat9h3ed>. David Marcum's "Automobiles in Sherlock Holmes" offers nicely-illustrated original research; note also the imaginative paper jewelry available from Patralankaar.
17877. Many years ago (June 79 #1) I noted that Peter Cook and Dudley Moore are reported to have played Holmes and Watson about ten years earlier in a five-minute sketch in "Not Only... But Also", asking for more information. The BBC television series aired from 1965 to 1970, and here's another request for more information.

17880. Samuel V. Wilson died on June 10. He was a retired Army lieutenant general who served in the Office of Special Services and the Central Intelligence Agency, and then as director of the Defense Intelligence Agency; the Washington Post obituary <www.tinyurl.com/y8xtclxp> for him noted that he once said: "Intelligence's real hero is Sherlock Holmes, not James Bond." The obit's well worth reading if you like to travel (see his detailed description of what he did roaming the five continents and the seven seas).
17881. For the completists: THE GLEN MICHAEL CAVALCADE ANNUAL [1974] has Sherlock Haggis on the cover, and includes a four-page comic strip "Sherlock Haggis and Dr. Neeps"; Michael was the presenter of a television series that ran for 26 years on Scotland's STV.
17882. The Basil Rathbone/Nigel Bruce film "Sherlock Holmes in Washington" (1943) is one of the best in Universal's series, and not just for those who live in Washington. The film is readily available at YouTube, in English and dubbed into Italian, Spanish and German. This poster for the film will be offered at Heritage Auctions on July 29, estimated at $1,500-$3,000; Its attractive graphics are quite different from the much more common version and the auction house explains that it's one of only two copies known to exist.
17883. It has taken almost two years to decide (October 15 #2), but Westminster City Council has given final approval to convert Baker Street to two-way traffic (taking it back, Catherine Cooke notes, to the way it was in Sherlock Holmes' day). Details at <www.bakerstreettwo-way.co.uk>.
17884. Richard Hughes, founder of The Baritsu Chapter of the BSI (the first Sherlockian society in Japan) had a fascinating and colorful life and career, as noted recently in the Japan Times <www.tinyurl.com/y9zthr29>. He liked to say he had been a spy during the Cold War (for both sides), and his memoirs FOREIGN DEVIL (1972) and Norman Macswan's biography THE MAN WHO READ THE EAST WIND (1982) are well worth reading.
17885. The Sherlocks. a British indie/rock band from Sheffield that plays on tour, have a web-site <www.thesherlocksmusic.co.uk> with links to their singles and to a video, and the BBC has a nice web-page <www.tinyurl.com/yd5ko2p6>; their first album ("Live for the Moment") will be issued on Aug. 18.
17887. Dana Richards has found Doyle's Delight (or rather that there is such a place): according to Wikipedia, it is the highest peak in Belize, and was named by Sharon Matola in 1989 in honor of "The Lost World" ("there must be something wild and wonderful in a country such as this, and we're the men to find it out"). Belize, for those who learned geography when I did, long ago, is the new name for British Honduras, in Central America.

17888. THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES: PART VI--2017 ANNUAL (London: MX Publishing, 2017; 671 pp., $48.95) is the latest in the series edited by David Marcum, and an excellent companion to earlier volumes, with almost three dozen traditional pastiches, a poetic tribute, and a radio script; the authors, old hands and new, ably show how nice it can be to have new and well-written short stories. MX's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
17889. Also from MX: Kieren McMullen's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MYSTERY OF THE BOER WAGON (2012; 225 pp., $16.95) has Holmes, Watson, and Conan Doyle in South Africa during the Boer War; Watson and Conan Doyle are at work in the Langman Field Hospital, Holmes is in disguise investigating a spy ring on behalf of Mycroft (assisted by Watson and Conan Doyle, of course), and Winston Churchill is on hand as a war correspondent.
17890. Brenda Rossini's GRACELAND CEMETERY IN CHICAGO: A SHERLOCKIAN WALK MIDST THE TOMBSTONES (2017; 54 pp., $8.95) provides visitors with a guided tour of the graves of Vincent Starrett and many others (accompanied by notes on their sometimes-tenuous Sherlockians connections), plus "The Story of Gina" (a lady who had a colorful life, and a thoroughly outré demise).
17891. And: Viktor Messick's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND A HOLE IN THE DEVIL'S TALE (2016; 130 pp., $9.95) has Holmes and Watson in London in the 1890s, investigating a series of murders committed by the Tarot Master. Petr Macek's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND HITLER'S MESSENGER OF DEATH (2017; 258 pp., $16.95) begins with Holmes and Watson preventing an assassination of Queen Victoria, and ends with a battle against German espionage that brings them to the U.S. on the airship Hindenberg. John Raffensperger and Richard Krevolin's THE DIARY OF YOUNG ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: ADVENTURES IN THE WILD WEST, 1878 (2017; 221 pp., $16.95) is set in 1878, when Dr. Joseph Bell brings his young medical assistant to Chicago to help solve a case that involves a series of murders and an attempt to assassinate President Rutherford B. Hayes.
17893. John A. Little's THE FINAL TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (VOLUME FOUR): THE CASE OF THE KEW GARDENS GNOMES (2017, 156 pp., $11.95) brings his series about Holmes and Watson in their 70s to a close, offering five stories that end with Watson deceased, and Holmes again in retirement on the Sussex Downs.
17894. And: Thomas Kent Miller's SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD (2017; 102 pp., $9.99) is a reprint from 1991; Leo Vincey (whom some will recall from Rider Haggard's SHE and AYESHA) in Lhasa in 1891, when he and Horace Holly encounter a Norwegian named Sigerson. Richard T. Ryan's THE STONE OF DESTINY (2017; 253 pp., $24.95) sends Holmes and Watson in pursuit of the Coronation Stone, stolen from Westminster Abbey by Irish nationalists after the death of Queen Victoria; the stone is recovered, as would be expected, and King Edward is duly crowned. Allan Mitchell's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LEY LINE MURDERS (2017; 331 pp., $16.95) challenges Holmes and Watson with gruesome murders near Stonehenge, and the mysterious "ancient ways".

17895. Michael Conan the grand-uncle and godfather, and namesake, or Arthur Conan Doyle. Conan was a journalist and art critic in Paris, where young Arthur visited and met him (and wrote about the meeting in MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES (1923). There is much more about Conan at The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia <www.tinyurl.com/ydhkgos9>, which is maintained and edited by Alexis Barquin; it's a detailed and delightful source for information about Sir Arthur.
17896. The Portsmouth City Council and Winchester University Press have published a facsimile edition of the manuscript of "The Creeping Man" (with an introduction and annotated transcription by Neil McCaw, who is professor of Victorian literature and culture at the University); £35.00 (postpaid) to the U.K. and £50.00 elsewhere <www.tinyurl.com/yd44skqx>.
17897. Further to the item about Steve Doyle playing Watson in 1983 (May 17 #7), Jennie Paton has noted that you can see an even-younger Steve as Watson in his high-school film "Sherlock Holmes vs. the Wolfman" (1976) at YouTube: <www.tinyurl.com/ydgasdpm>.

17898. Peter Sallis died on June 2. He had a long career as an actor, and for 37 years he played Norman Clegg on the BBC television series "Last of the Summer Wine". He also voiced Wallace in the "Wallace and Gromit" films, and played Dr. Watson in the original production of the musical "Baker Street" (1964) and Jonas Oldacre in the BBC Radio 4 "The Norwood Builder" (1993). You can hear Sallis sing "A Married Man" from "Baker Street" at Scott Monty's tribute at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/yd589wo4>.
17899. And there's theater: Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Bridges Covenant Church in Tavares, Fla., July 1-16 <www.tavarestheater.org>.
17900. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is scheduled at the Village Meadows Baptist Church in Sierra Vista, Ariz., July 20-23 <www.tinyurl.com/ydujdygw>. Also at Sanborn-Skyline County Park in Saratoga, Calif., Aug. 4-Sept. 3 <www.svshakespeare.org>.
17901. Ken Ludwig's comedy "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at the Ruth Caplin Theatre at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, Va., July 22-29 <www.tinyurl.com/y6vraozb>; and at the CAT Theatre in Richmond, Va., Sept. 1-16 <www.catttheatre.com>; and at the Wade James Theater in Edmonds, Wash., Sept. 8-24 <www.tinyurl.com/y7yfzqn5>.
17902. Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the American Problem" is scheduled at the Vertigo Theatre in Calgary, May 12-June 10, 2018; web-site at <www.vertigotheatre.com>.

17904. Mattias Boström's FRÅN HOLMES TILL SHERLOCK (August 13 #4) has now been translated from Swedish into English as FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK (New York: Mysterious Press, 2017; 597 pp., $28.00); it was reviewed here at length (April 17 #4) and it's grand to see it formally in print. Subtitled "the story of the men and women who created an icon," it's well-written and heartily recommended.
17905. THE ADVENTURES OF TWO BRITISH GENTLEMEN IN SWITZERLAND/DIE ABENTEUER ZWEIER BRITISCHER GENTLEMEN IN DER SCHWEIZ is a delightful book, edited by Nicole Glücklich and published by the Deutsche Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft (248 pp. in English and 270 pp. in German), presenting a colorfully-illustrated account of Conan Doyle's four visits to Switzerland, and Holmes' one visit, plus detailed discussion of Holmes' presence there today, on the ground, in pastiches, and in films and on television. Available in Germany from Amazon <www.amazon.de> (€29.00) and in the United States from the Mysterious Bookshop <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> ($49.95). Recommended.
17906. Conan Doyle was deceived by photographs of the Cottingley Fairies, and you can now have your very own, to decorate your garden (or home): Jennie Paton reports that the Victorian Trading Company is offering a colorful pair of them (in metal) for $24.95 <www.tinyurl.com/y7seh9h3>; there is a blog at the web-site with a display of the five photographs taken by Frances Griffiths and Elsie Wright.
17907. This year marks the 100th anniversary of the fairy photographs taken by the two girls, and an article in the Daily Telegraph www.tinyurl.com/y72nf952 attempts to answer the question "Why Do So Many People Still Believe in the Cottingley Fairies?"
17909. Steve McGarry's "KidTown" is a Sunday comic strip aimed at children, and it was Sherlockian on July 1 <www.gocomics.com/kidtown/2017/07/01>. There are similar comic strips, including "Slylock Fox" (now drawn by Bob Weber Sr. and Jr.) www.comicskingdom.com/slylock-fox-and-comics-for-kids/2017-07/01 in which Slylock always appears in Sherlockian costume.
17910. "I shall be the Hans Sloane of my age," Nathan Garrideb said (in "The Three Garridebs"), and you can now read a biography of Sloane: James Delbourgo's COLLECTING THE WORLD: THE LIFE AND CURIOSITY OF HANS SLOANE (London: Allen Lane, 2017; 544 pp., £25.00); the American edition is COLLECTING THE WORLD: HANS SLOANE AND THE ORIGINS OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM (from Belknap Press) and you can hear Delbourgo talk about his book in an interesting History Extra podcast available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y966eu5p>, and read a review of the book in The Economist at Greg Ruby's The Fourth Garrideb's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yb2428jh>.

17911. Greg Darak reports TAKING DETECTIVE STORIES SERIOUSLY: THE COLLECTED CRIME REVIEWS OF DOROTHY L. SAYERS (Perth: Tippermuir, 2017; 321 pp., £15.00); it is edited by Martin Edwards, who has assembled all of the book reviews that she wrote for The Sunday Times in the 1930s, including her perceptive review (Feb. 6, 1949) of John Dickson Carr's THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.
17912. "What the deuce is it to me?" said Sherlock Holmes impatiently (in "A Study in Scarlet"). "You say that we go round the sun. If we went round the moon it would not make a pennyworth of difference to me or to my work." It will make a difference to people who will have a chance to view a rare total eclipse of the sun on Aug. 21 (you'll need to be in a narrow band that crosses the U.S. diagonally from Salem, Oreg., to Charleston, S. Car.), and the Postal Service has honored the event using special heat-activated technology to create stamps printed with thermochromic ink: you can press on the black circle of the stamp with your finger, and an image of the full moon will be revealed.
17913. The Postal Service is becoming more and more creative: they've also issued a sheet of eight tactile "Have a Ball" stamps <www.tinyurl.com/ybejrhcr>; each of the eight balls has a distinctive feel, and they showcase football, volleyball, soccer, golf, baseball, basketball, tennis, and kickball. Note that four of them are Sherlockian or Doylean.
17914. "Shisha no teikoku" ["The Empire of Corpses"] was a Japanese animation (March 16 #5); John Watson, recruited by the British government for a covert mission in Afghanistan, poses as a newly recruited medic for the British army and learns that humans are being brought back from the dead in the form of Frankenstein's monster. But the film's also Sherlockian: there's a cameo appearance by Holmes, with Watson, in the midst of the closing credits.
17915. Howard Ostrom reports that people who make their own soap can make a "Sherlock Holmes-Inspired Masterpiece" ("221 Baker Street" soap) following instructions provided by Kate Carson (Royalty Soaps) and Bee (Sorcery Soap): there's a 20-minute video at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y8b9vzms>.
17916. "Smoking Gun or Distraction" was the headline on an article by Marc Fisher and David Nakamura in the Washington Post (July 13) about whether Donald J. Trump Jr.'s e-mails are important or not (which depends on how people feel about the issue <www.tinyurl.com/y8ms45bh>; the article notes the origin of the "smoking gun" phrase in "The Gloria Scott" (quoting the YALE BOOK OF QUOTATIONS), and Ben Panko digs deeper in a post at the Smithsonian Institution blog <www.tinyurl.com/y9lc4wjw>. noting William Safire's comments on the phrase in his "On Language" column in the N.Y. Times Magazine in 2003.

17917. Mo Lebowitz ("Arthur H. Staunton, the Forger") died on June 25. He had a long career as an art director, and he was highly regarded as a graphic designer, as the proprietor of the Antique Press, and as a bluegrass mandolinist. The Antique Press, located in the basement of his home, used handset letter press type and other old equipment to produce attractive booklets and broadsides, including some striking Sherlockiana. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1970.

17918. The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and the summer issue includes Donny Zaldin's interesting essay about "The Cubitt Family Autograph Album as a Source of the Cipher in 'The Dancing Men'"; published quarterly, the Muse costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230), and a copy of the summer issue costs $5.00 postpaid.
17919. One sees Sherlock everywhere, but seldom as cute as in an Italian television commercial <www.tinyurl.com/y8ny6ps4> advertising Amadori's new Würstel 100%, kindly reported by Howard Ostrom.
17920. The Wistow Maize Maze is an annual event in Leicestershire, and this year it celebrates the 130th anniversary of the publication of the first Sherlock Holmes story; it's open through Sept. 17, and you'll find details at <www.wistow.com/wistow-maze>.
17922. Canadian Holmes, published quarterly by The Bootmakers of Toronto, always is interesting; the winter 2016 issue included Hartley R. Nathan's "Mortimer's Penang Lawyer 1884" (an imaginative investigation Mortimer as well as of his walking-stick), and the spring 2017 issue offers John Linsenmeyer's "The Island of Uffa" (presenting a new candidate for the island mentioned in passing in "The Five Orange Pips"). There is much more to be found in the 40-page issues, which cost CA$12.00 postpaid, and you can subscribe for a year for $30.00 (US or CA), by mail to the Bootmakers at 3304-2045 Lakeshore Boulevard West, Etobicoke, ON M9B 2Z6, Canada, or at their web-site <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
17923. The summer 2017 issue of Canadian Holmes also is of interest: there always is something new to be said about the Canon, and Sonia Fetherston has done just that, in her "Canonical Canoodling: Kisses from the Pages of Sherlock Holmes"; Thelma Beam also discusses letters Conan Doyle wrote to his wife during their Canadian tour, and Kariaa Kuusisto examines the improvements over the years in the Strand Magazine's illustration by Sidney Paget.
17924. Nelsan Ellis died on July 8. He was a playwright, and an actor in film and on television, and played Shinwell Johnson in eleven episodes of the "Elementary" series.
17925. Further to the report (October 11 #4) about the "Sherlock" violin made by Steve Burnett from wood from the 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, Roger Johnson reports an excellent web-site devoted to the violin <www.tinyurl.com/y97dj8hm>, where you can read about its history, and listen to it being played by Ari Batikian in Usher Hall in Edinburgh.

17926. Michael Bond died on June 27. Bond created Paddington Bear in 1957, found a publisher in 1958, and went on to write 14 books about Paddington that sold 35 million copies worldwide and were translated into 40 languages, including Latin. Paddington also starred in a BBC television series in the 1970s and in a film in 2014, and his creator was appointed OBE in 1997 and CBE in 2015 for services to literature. Paddington used Sherlockian methods, and dialogue, in "Paddington Turns Detective" in MORE ABOUT PADDINGTON (1959) and PADDINGTON ON STAGE (1977). There is an image of Sherlock Paddington (designed by Benedict Cumberbatch) in the Nov. 2014 issue of this newsletter <www.tinyurl.com/yad7rhba>; the statue later sold in a charity auction for £17,000.
17928. Tim Johnson, curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, has an interesting blog "Special & Rare on a Stick" in which he occasionally offers Sherlockian posts, such as "Regarding Sherlock" in February, when he made some intriguing comments on the BBC television series <www.umbookworm.blogspot.com/2017/02>.
17929. The British Museum is planning to bring its world-famous Reading Room "to life again." The Reading Room, where Conan Doyle held a reader's card, was located in the Great Court of the British Museum, and was the main reading room of the British Library until 1997, when the Library was moved to a new building in St. Pancras.
17930. The Television Academy has announced its nominations for this year's Emmy Awards, and "Sherlock: The Lying Detective" won nominations in four categories: one for Benedict Cumberbatch (lead actor in a limited series or movie) and three for the program (outstanding television movie; outstanding sound mixing for a limited series, movie, or special; and outstanding sound editing for a limited series, movie, or special). The Emmy Award presentation will be broadcast in September.
17931. Further to the item about the giant rat of Sinatra (June 17 #3), Basil Rathbone did indeed appear on "The Frank Sinatra Show" on Mar. 24, 1951; there is a link to the 7-minute segment at Greg Ruby's "The Fourth Garrideb" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc2sexof>, along with diffusion of the Congressional Gold Medal awarded to Sinatra in 1998.

17934. THE CASE OF THE VANISHING PRAIRIE, by John Parr (Simcoe: Davus Publishing, 2015; 112 pp., $12.00) is a comic pastiche: Watson decides to strike out on his own in the Old West, becomes a veterinarian, encounters Dr. Acula (and his assistant Igor), deals with local ranchers, Indians, and a mysterious Old Timer; available from the publisher <www.davuspublishing.com>.
17935. Will Thomas' THE FATAL ENQUIRY (New York: Minotaur, 2014; 293 pp., $25.99) is an exciting addition to his series featuring Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman"); Barker is assisted, as usual, by Thomas Llewelyn (they battle a vicious killer who is Barker's long-time adversary, and we learn some details about Barker's mysterious back-story).
17936. Charlotte Montague's CREATING SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE REMARKABLE STORY OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (New York: Chartwell Books, 2017; 192 pp., $14.99) is a colorful introduction to Conan Doyle's heritage, career, and writings, with synopses of each of the Canonical tales, and a final chapter on "The Sherlock Holmes Legacy" (all in all a nice gift for someone who's just entering the Sherlockian/Doylean world).
17937. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Forged Stradivari: Did We Miss a Vital Clue for 130 Years?" is the title of an interesting post by Rachael Durkin (lecturer in music at Edinburgh Napier University) about the violins owned by Sherlock Holmes, and by another detective whose memoirs Conan Doyle may have read <www.tinyurl.com/ttd6ruq>.
17938. Howard Ostrom reports that Riva del Garda (in northern Italy) is celebrating Sherlock Holmes in this year's "Notte di Fiaba" on Aug. 24-27; details at <www.tinyurl.com/y7vau3th>. Click on the WWW button for information on all of the events, and play the YouTube video to see a preview for an app game that will be available during the festival.
17939. Further to earlier reports (March 04 #1
17940. and September 09 #1) on the Sherlockian and Doylean names of streets in Sherlock Holmes Estates in southeastern Carroll County, Md., Julie Snell reports that a number of homes are available for purchase by anyone who might want to live there <www.tinyurl.com/yccwto8a>.
17941. The Historical Society of the New York Courts publishes a series of calendars devoted to "Literature in the New York Courts", and this year they've chosen the title "Cases & Quotations" (presenting a colorful discussion of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for June). The society's president, the Hon. Albert M. Rosenblatt, creates the calendars, and copies of this year's version are available from AI for $4.00 postpaid (300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569).

17942. Howard Ostrom reports audio of Jack Benny as Sherlock Holmes on "The Jell-O Program at YouTube: on June 4, 1939, the show previewed the following week's performance of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.tinyurl.com/yysr9l9l>, and on June 11 the program included a 12-minute segment parodying the story (with a fine performance by Andy Devine as the Hound) <www.tinyurl.com/ydxm3jqc>.
17943. Harris Pest Control in South Carolina displays a modest silhouette of Sherlock Holmes at its web-site <www.harrispestcontrolinc.com>, and (spotted by Jennie Paton) a much more Sherlockian animation "Sherlock and the Case of the Termites" at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ybgszmvv>.
17944. Artwork for "The Old Grey Fox" at auction, at Menzies in Sydney, Australia, on Aug. 10 <www.menziesartbrands.com/items/old-grey-fox>: six paintings by George Goodwin Kilburne, conceived as illustrations to accompany the poem, which was published in Conan Doyle's SONGS OF ACTION (1898) and THE POEMS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE--COLLECTED EDITION (1922); does anyone know when and where and by whom the poem was published with these illustrations?
17945. The Magic Door IV in Pomona, Calif., is the fourth in a series of used-book stores owned by Dwain Kaiser, who in 1967 named his first store in honor of the book written by Arthur Conan Doyle. Kaiser unfortunately was shot and killed this month, but his widow Joann plans to keep the store open and to continue his legacy.
17946. Trevor Baxter died on July 16. He had a long acting career on television, stage, and screen, and was a playwright as well. Sherlockians will recall him as Prof. Litefoot in "Doctor Who: The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (1977).
17947. "Would Sherlock Holmes Pay £1.7m for 221B Baker Street?" was the question asked by Which? Mortgage Advisors. That's £1.7 million, and you can read about Paul Ryan's estimates for Holmes' two-bedroom Georgian flat and other (mostly) fictional properties at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ybjgn29f>.
17948. Theodora Goss' THE STRANGE CASE OF THE ALCHEMIST'S DAUGHTER (New York: Saga Press, 2017; 402 pp., $24.99) was inspired, she notes, by a question: Why did so many of the mad scientists in nineteenth-century narratives create, or start creating but then destroy, female monsters? Her answer involves characters from books written by Stevenson, Wells, Hawthorne, Shelley, and Stoker; Holmes and Watson appear in the story, consulted by Mary Jekyll and assisting the ladies in an imaginative tale.
17949. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with much Victorian flavor, and a mystery that visitors can solve) opened at the Wilbur D. May Museum in Reno, Nev., on July 29, and will run through Oct. 29 <www.maycenter.com>.

17951. Further to the item (April 17 #2) about Joseph Caminada, the Manchester policeman who began his career as a police constable in 1868 and had risen to the rank of superintendent of the city's police force when he retired in 1899 and became a private detective (some have suggested that he was an inspiration for Sherlock Holmes), Mancunian Matters reported on July 19 that a 15-bedroom hotel and pub in Manchester is to be named in honor of Caminada <www.tinyurl.com/y995vvy9>.
17952. When in Dijon: you can visit "221B Baker Street" (le bar des passionnés de Sherlock Holmes) <www.tinyurl.com/y9dstcgk>. Kindly reported by Howard Ostrom, who spotted it on-line (rather than in Dijon).
17953. Lora Roberts' THE AFFAIR OF THE INCOGNITO TENANT (Palo Alto: Perseverance Press/John Daniel & Co., 2004; 264 pp., $13.95), subtitled "a mystery with Sherlock Holmes," stars Charlotte Dodson, a housekeeper in Sussex, who discovers that her tenant, a Mr. Sigerson, is of great assistance in solving a mystery; it's an amusing story, and the book's still in print (and available at deep discount at Amazon).
17955. Orlando Pearson's THE REDACTED SHERLOCK HOLMES is a three-volume series of collections of pastiches, a mix of "what came after" extensions of Canonical cases, and other cases that involve Holmes and Watson with tax evasion, climate change, the royal family, cricket and the rise of Hitler in 1930, and much more; the first volume was published by Clink Street in 2015 (86 pp., $8.99) and the second and third by MX Publishing in 2016

(173/227 pp., $12.95/$14.95). The author's web-site is at <www.orlandopearson.com>, and MX's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.

17957. That's "Hounds" as in "The Hound of the Internet" (they're perhaps the old-on-going Sherlockian list-serv). Details on the Hounds of the Internet can be found at <www.sherlockian.net/hounds>, the web-site that was created by Chris Redmond in 1994, and recently was transferred to Michigan State University's WIDE Research Center (it's a valuable resource for the ever-growing population of Internet-savvy Sherlockians).
17958. H. B. Lyle's THE IRREGULAR (New York: Quercus, 2017; 294 pp., $26.99) features Wiggins, as a young man employed by Sherlock Holmes, and as an Army veteran in 1909 involved in the creation of the Secret Service Bureau (later split into MI5 and MI6); it's a colorful story, and the start of a series. The British edition is THE IRREGULAR: A DIFFERENT CLASS OF SPY (from Hodder & Stoughton, £17.99), and Mike Stotter's interview with Lyle is online at <www.shotsmag.co.uk/interview_view.aspx?interview_id=302>.

17959. And (as always) there's theater: the Illyria theater company is touring its open-air production of "The Lost World" in Britain through Sept. 3; the schedule is available at <www.illyria.uk.com>, and a photograph of the cast (without the company's "debutant dinosaur") ran with a story in the Lancashire Evening Post <www.tinyurl.com/ybnbm2o2>. This is not the first time the story has been staged (it was performed England in 2003 and in Russia in 2014).
17960. Kandie Carle's "William Gillette: Senator's Son to Super Sleuth" is being performed by the East Haddam Stage Company at Gillette Castle State Park in East Haddam, Conn., on weekends through Aug. 13 <www.ehsco.org>.
17961. Ken Ludwig's comedy "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed at the Lighthouse Festival Theatre in Port Dover, Ont., through Aug. 12 <www.lighthouse theatre.com>, And it's due at the Melbourne Civic Theatre in Melbourne, Fla., Oct. 6-Nov. 12 <www.mymct.org>; at the Playhouse in Liverpool, Dec. 7-Jan. 13 <www.everymanplayhouse.com>; and at Stage West in Calgary, Feb. 9-Apr. 15, 2018 <www.stagewestcalgary.com>.
17962. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed at Sand Harbor in Lake Tahoe Nevada State Park through Aug. 23 <www.tinyurl.com/yc5mafzd>. And at the Bauer Theatre at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S. through Aug. 26 <www.stfx.ca>. And it is scheduled at the New Theatre Royal in Portsmouth, Hants., Aug. 30-Sept. 2 <www.newtheatreroyal.com>.
17963. Linda Hein has reported from Baker Street West <www.bakerstreetwest.com> in Jackson, Calif.: the Baker Street Players Radio Theatre: will perform "The Problem of Thor Bridge" and "Murder in the Casbah" on Aug. 4 and 5, and "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Tolling Bell" on Aug. 17 and 18 (all from the old radio series starring either Basil Rathbone or Tom Conway). The Baker Street Players also will perform "A Study in Sherlock: The Last Voyage" as dinner mystery theater on Oct. 28 and Nov. 4 and 11.
17964. "The Baker Street Irregulars" (written by Flip Kobler and Cindy Marcus) is scheduled at the Phillips County Events Center in Holyoke, Colo., Aug. 11-13 <www.phillipscountyplayers.weebly.com>.
17965. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at St. Stephen's Anglican Hall in Adamstown, N.S.W., Aug. 11-Sept. 2; web-site at <www.theatreonbrunker.com>. Also at The Mowlen in Swanage, Dorset, Aug. 24-29 <www.mowlemtheatre.co.uk>.
17966. Jennifer Berman's "The Last Séance, the Odd Friendship of Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" is due at the Hudson Guild Theater in New York from Sept. 25 to Oct. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/y7o2fbzz>.
17967. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hooded Lance" (a new play by Pat Whymark and Julian Harries) will be performed at the New Wolsey Studio in Ipswich, Suffolk, Jan. 8-13, 2018 <www.wolseytheatre.co.uk>.

17968. Bonnie MacBird's UNQUIET SPIRITS: WHISKY, GHOSTS, MURDER (London: Collins Crime Club, 2017; 492 pp., £14.99) delivers on the promise of its subtitle; it's a sequel to her ART IN THE BLOOD (2015), with a complicated mystery in France and Scotland, and revelations about Holmes' life before he became a detective; the American edition is due in October. The author has an interesting web-site <www.macbird.com> where she blogs and offers annotations on both books, and there's a third novel (DEVIL'S DUE) in the works to extend the series.
17969. Further to the mention of Anthony Boucher (June 17 #1), you can learn a lot more about him in a recent post at Ray Betzner's blog "Studies in Starrett" <www.tinyurl.com/ycps74zy>. Boucher and Starrett were correspondents and friends.
17971. June Foray died on July 26. She began her career as a voice actress on radio at the age of 12, and provided voices for an astounding range of characters; animator Chuck Jones once said that "June Foray is not the female Mel Blanc; Mel Blanc was the male June Foray." She voiced Rocket J. Squirrel on the long-running series "The Rocky and Bullwinkle Show" and was Natasha Fatale in the same series (in one episode Natasha pretended to be Dr. Watkins to Boris Badenov's Herlock Soames), and she participated in a KPFK- FM (Los Angeles) reading of the entire Canon produced by Mike Hodel in Dec. 1980.
17972. Further to the item (June 17 #1) on Flicker Alley's upcoming Blu-ray edition of "The Lost World" (1925), with added features, you can still order at a discount <www.tinyurl.com/ycy4wd5s>, and see a short but colorful preview.
17973. For those who want to know where you can stand with one foot in North America and the other foot in Europe: Iceland. That's where the Mid-Atlantic Ridge, which separates the two tectonic plates comes to the surface and one can stand on the boundary without getting one's feet wet. We also saw the original geyser, which is located in the Haukadalur valley. The Great Geysir (from the Icelandic verb geysa, which means "gush") is the first geyser described in print, and it has been active for about 10,000 years and has given its name to all the others.

17975. "Looking for ice cream? Just call Furlock Holmes" was the slogan used last year by Blue Bunny ice cream, kindly reported by Eric Sveum <www.bluebunny.com/where-to-buy>. A Google search for [furlock holmes] reveals a company called Furlock Holmes Animal Care (in Whitchurch, Hants.), as well as some amusing videos and Cheezeburger images. Dog-lovers might want to do a search for [furlock bones].
17976. "The Reconstruction of the Crime" is a previously-unpublished play, written by J. M. Barrie and E. V. Lucas, and now in print for the first time in the latest issue of The Strand Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/y85uv7we>. The play is subtitled "a sensational scene in which the victim requests the audience to assist him in the detection of a criminal," and it has been described by some as "a hilarious send-up of a Sherlockian story." It's nice to recall that Barrie and Lucas each wrote Sherlockian or Doylean parodies.
17977. The modern Strand Magazine is an interesting successor to the original, and has occasional Sherlockian content; it's published quarterly, and managing editor Andrew Gulli has a knack for finding previously unpublished stories. Subscriptions cost $24.95 a year at their web-site <www.strandmag.com>.
17978. More news from the Stepping Stones School, which has carefully restored Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home: the school will participate in the Heritage Open Day program, opening to the public on Sept. 10, with tours led restoration architect Mark Goodchild, and a talk by Bonnie MacBird, author of the pastiches ART IN THE BLOOD and UNQUIET SPIRITS; there's more information at <www.tinyurl.com/y88pnzys>.
17979. Many readers will have enjoyed this month's eclipse of the Sun, either total or partial, depending on where you were. So: "I had a chat with him on eclipses. How the talk got that way I canna think; but he had out a reflector lantern and a globe, and made it all clear in a minute." Now: who said that? And with whom did he have a chat?
17980. The list of members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have written autobiographies isn't all that long, but it now includes Curtis Armstrong ("An Actor and a Rare One"). His REVENGE OF THE NERD (New York: Thomas Dunne/St. Martin's Press, 2017; 336 pp., $26.99) is subtitled "Or...the singular adventures of the man who would be Booger," and he notes that in 1964 "Mr. Sherlock Holmes, and his friend and associate John H. Watson burst into my consciousness like a couple of drunken uncles into a bar mitzvah, forever altering my reality." He has more to say about Sherlockians, and of course much more about his long career as an actor, and it's nicely done indeed. If you would like to hear Scott Monty and Burt Wolder in conversation with Curtis, visit "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/ycku4few>.

17983. The uncommon variant of the poster for The Basil Rathbone/Nigel Bruce film "Sherlock Holmes in Washington" (1943) offered at Heritage Auctions on July 29 (June 17 #6) sold for $2,509.50 (including the buyer's premium); the only other known copy sold for $2,151.00 on Nov. 21, 2015. A copy of the common variant sold for $4,780.00 on July 30, 2016.
17985. Groombridge Place is in the news, boasting it has the longest and highest treetop walkway in Britain <www.tinyurl.com/y98xglds>; a story in the Independent noted that Conan Doyle often visited Groombridge, and that it was the inspiration for Birlstone Manor in THE VALLEY OF FEAR. Groombridge has a lot more to offer: their web-site's at <www.groombridgeplace.com>. Visitors can tour the grounds, but view the house only from across the moat.
17986. Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian story "The Case of Lady Sannox" was adapted for television and broadcast in the series "Suspense" on CBS-TV on Dec. 27, 1949. And you can watch it at <www.tinyurl.com/yaq63km8>, in an entry in "The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia" (which, as always, has much of Sherlockian and Doylean interest).
17987. The Baker Street Journal always is interesting, but the summer 2017 issue is especially interesting. Mattias Boström's article "Ouida Before Rathbone" tells the colorful story of Eula Branch, who re-invented herself as Ouida Bergère, married Basil Rathbone, and wrote the ill-fated play "Sherlock Holmes". You can subscribe to the BSJ at www.bakerstreetjournal.com ($41.95 a year for four issues plus the Xmas Annual).

17989. The Swindon Advertiser has noted that John Blick, 45, charged with three counts of assault in March, will face trial before Chippenham magistrates on Sept. 20. This would not be all that important to readers of this newsletter, except that Mr. Blick lives on Conan Doyle Walk; it's one of the streets in a development that includes Conrad Close, Thackeray Court, Austen Crescent, and Carroll Close, and one can only assume that they were named by someone who liked to read.
17990. The inaugural Irene Adler Prize has been awarded to Kiley Bense for her essay "A History of One's Own". The prize offers a $1,000 scholarship to a woman pursuing a degree in journalism, creative writing, or literature, and was established by Lucas Aykroyd, an award-winning writer and public speaker in Vancouver, B.C.; it is indeed named for the heroine of "A Scandal in Bohemia", and you can learn more about the prize, and read the winning essay, at <www.lucasaykroyd.com/scholarships>.
17991. Daniil Doubshin hopes to learn more about the statuette of Professor George Edward Challenger that appeared in a photograph in the Jan. 1913 issue of The Strand Magazine, promoting the publication of "The Poison Belt" (which began in March); the statuette was displayed "at the largest bookshop and bookstalls" where the public could buy THE LOST WORLD. Daniel believes that statuette was owned by Conan Doyle; does anyone know the identity of the artist, or where the statuette is now? The statuette does bear a striking resemblance to a photograph of Challenger in THE LOST WORLD <www.tinyurl.com/y9he2j2w>.
17992. Reported: Otto Penzler has edited BIBLIOMYSTeries: STORIES OF CRIME IN THE WORLD OF BOOKS AND BOOKSTORES (New York: Pegasus, 2017; 144 pp., $26.95); it's an anthology of short mystery stories specially commissioned by Otto, and they include Lyndsay Faye's "The Gospel of Sheba"

- (May 14 #6), a tale that involves sublibrarian A. Davenport Lomax, a friend of Dr. Watson, who consults Sherlock Holmes about a rare (and dangerous) volume. You can read more about the bibliomysteries at <www.tinyurl.com/ycxr6ebp>.
17993. Les Klinger notes that Douglas P. Lyle has posted about "Holmes, Thorndyke, Locard, Gross, and the Modern CSI" at the Crime Writer's Forensics Blog at <www.tinyurl.com/yc4oaya2>. Lyle, the author of FORENSICS FOR DUMMIES, has written for "CSI: Miami", "Monk", "Law & Order", and many other programs.
17994. Charles Altamont Doyle's "The spirits of the prisoners" (which he painted at the Montrose Asylum) is on display in an exhibition of "Victorian Watercolors" at the Art Gallery of New South Wales in Sydney through Dec. 3; the painting, which is owned by the Gallery <www.tinyurl.com/y7w4wutp>, was purchased at auction at Christie's in New York in 2012 for $16,500.

17997. Clarendon Serviced Apartments, based in London, offers floor plans for the apartments of seven famous fictional characters, including (of course) Sherlock Holmes in the series "Sherlock" <www.tinyurl.com/ycx9cea6>.
17998. "A Leg to Stand On; the Law and the Sign of Four" is the title at E.J. Wagner's EJDissectingRoom blog for the brief filed by Senior Assistant Hennepin County Attorney Michael B. Miller, in which he quoted from the Canon <www.tinyurl.com/y7v6sg43>. The case was argued in 2008, and the defendants (including the county) won, both in federal district court and in the 8th circuit court of appeals.
17999. Steve Mason reports that The Beacon Society has formed a new Junior Sherlockian Society for children and youth "eager to develop an understanding of the great detective Sherlock Holmes." They have an interesting web-site <www.juniorsherlockian.com> and an imaginative program.
18001. Finally: something for Sherlockian fans of "Game of Thrones". Joanna Robinson, in a blog for Vanity Fair <www.tinyurl.com/ydg4cf5u>, draws an analogy, suggesting that Varys' network of Little Birds was inspired by Sherlock Holmes' Baker Street Irregulars.
18002. The Wireless Theatre Company <www.wirelesstheatrecompany.co.uk> was founded in 2007, and offers an interesting variety of audio drama as MP3 downloads (£1.49 each); they're now celebrating summer by offering one free download, and there are two Sherlockian dramas: "Sherlock Holmes Strikes Back!" and "The Trial of Sherlock Holmes" (use the code FREESUMMER2017).
18003. Sherlock Holmes fan Kaden Taylor tested his memory skills on July 24 on the one-hour Fox television series "SuperHuman" and received some publicity in the Phoenix New Times <www.tinyurl.com/y96q4vgj>; if any of my readers captured (and kept) this episode, please let me know.
18004. Father J. Michael Venitti's A READER'S COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (Pittsburgh: Dorrance, 2017; 137 pp., $22.00) is, he notes, intended as a "handy and simple guide" to help navigate the Canon, and the book offers a brief biography of Conan Doyle and commentary on each of the stories, presented in the order in which they were first published.

18005. Stephen Moffat, interviewed at Comic-Con San Diego, explained that one episode of "Sherlock" is "becoming a period piece before our eyes." The episode ("The Blind Banker") had a map being used to crack the code; "At that point [in 2010] it was absolutely true that everybody in London, including you, if you were visiting London, owned an A TO Z," he said. "A very small number of years later absolutely nobody owns an A TO Z, it's all on their iPhones--it doesn't work." Actually, the book is still print: a 2016 edition is available from Amazon.
18006. Ben Kingsley recorded seven stories for Dove Books on Tape some years ago (June 89 #8): A TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Scan, RedH, Twis, Croo, Card, Copp, and SixN) is now available for download as an unabridged audiobook at Audible <www.audible.com>.
18007. "I am a strong man with a J pen and a weakening with a Waverley," wrote Conan Doyle to Russell Goodwin-Smith, in one of three autograph letters that sold for £11,000 at auction in March 2015 <www.tinyurl.com/q8a3q5x>. It's a nice reminder of the distant days when people wrote with wooden pens and steel nibs. J pens are mentioned in the Canon (in "The Cardboard Box" and in "The Greek Interpreter"), and Conan Doyle later used (and endorsed) the Parker Duofold fountain pen. It's intriguing to note that the Waverley was made by Macniven and Cameron, an Edinburgh-based company, and that the pen was named in honor of the Waverley novels written by Conan Doyle's literary hero Sir Walter Scott.
18009. The first issue of The Newspapers (an "Irregular Journal of Sherlockiana" edited by Greg Ruby for The Sherlockians of Baltimore) has been published, with 120 pp. of toasts, poems, articles, and much more, many by members of the SOB's; $20.00 <www.fourthgarriedeb.com/shop>.
18010. Further to the item (January 17 #5) about plans to film Stephen King's pastiche "The Doctor's Case" in western Canada, there's now an interesting web-site for the film <www.thedoctorsmovie.com>.
18011. THE MAGICIAN AND THE SPIRITS, by Deborah Noyes (New York: Viking, 2017; 152 pp., $18.95) is the story of "Harry Houdini and the Curious Pastime of Communicating with the Dead" told for young readers (ages 10 and up), and told nicely, with discussion, of course, of Houdini's relationship with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
18012. Greg Ruby has reported the "Merrie Melodies" cartoon "Have You Got Any Castles?" (1938), nicely available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y9b5re94>; you get a brief glimpse (at 6:03 minutes) of books titled "The White Company" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles". It's an interesting challenge to try to identify all the people being parodied, but here's one: Alexander Woollcott, who had a radio program called "The Town Crier" (and was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars in the days before Investitures were awarded).

18013. Liu Zhen reports from China that Sherlock Holmes is very popular there, and that there are more than 500 translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories into Chinese, including THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES. The most popular of the translations is the complete Canon, from the Qunzhong Publishing House, with more than 1.8 million copies in print. There's also a Murder Pen project that publishes translations of golden-age detective fiction and non-fiction, and there are translations of three essays from Dorothy L. Sayers' SAYERS ON HOLMES (2001) at their web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/yc6qhf7s>. You can also ask Liu Zhen <ellry@163.com> for information about The Chinese Sherlock Holmes Society in Shanghai.
18014. The colorful edition of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (published by O'Mara in England and by the Mysterious Press in the U.S. in 1987) included all of Frederic Dorr Steele's illustrations for Collier's (including the covers in full color) and an insightful introduction by Andrew Malec, and is available in a Kindle edition at Amazon ($0.99) <www.tinyurl.com/ycy2pbft>.
18015. Simpson's-in-the-Strand, which has long been a destination for Sherlockians who want to visit (and dine at) establishments mentioned in the Canon, was closed for renovation on Apr. 17 (March 17 #3); it's now open again, with an enhanced-but-still-traditional menu, and you can read all about it at the Big Hospitality web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yahtexab>. Their web-site also has been renovated <www.simpsonsinthestrland.co.uk>, and (alas) now has no discussion of the restaurant's long and colorful history.
18016. Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese in London "once boasted Samuel Johnson and Arthur Conan Doyle as regulars," according to a story in the Independent on July 2 <www.tinyurl.com/y93tpjkm>, inspired by the decision of the Samuel Smith pub chain (which owns the Cheshire Cheese) to ban swearing at all its establishments. Devotees of Johnson have long cast doubt on his ever having frequented the Cheshire Cheese, and there's no evidence whatsoever that Conan Doyle ever visited.
18018. Jerry Lewis died on Aug. 20. He was a master slapstick comedian who began his career with Dean Martin at a nightclub in 1946, and starred with him on "The Colgate Comedy Hour" (which included a skit in 1952 with Lewis playing Sherlock Fink) <www.tinyurl.com/yd6tzo8d>. He also played Skylock Peyton (with Sebastian Cabot as Dr. Matson in the film "Family Jewels (1965).

18020. "Calling all Anglophiles to the third annual Britsburgh Festival" was the headline on an announcement of six days and twenty events scheduled on Sept. 5-10 in Pittsburgh <www.britsburgh.com>; at one of the events, on Sept. 9, people will have an opportunity to discuss "The Six Napoleons" with members of the Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers (the local Sherlockian society) and to hear a talk by historian Len Bacousky about Conan Doyle's visit to Pittsburgh in 1923.
18021. And there's theater: "A Scandal in the Weimar" (a new play by Claire Bowen and Jennifer Piper featuring "Lady Sherlock Holmes, Nazis, and cabaret") is on at the Bluestone Church Arts Space in Footscray, Vic., through Sept. 9 <www.witinc.com.au>.
18022. Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" is running at the DAPA Theatre on Beaumont in Hamilton, N.S.W, through Sept. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/ycp7upyb>.
18023. "The Return to Baker Street" (a new play from by Dan Bray and Jacob Sampson) is being performed at the Waiting Room in Halifax, N.S., through Sept. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/y8vz6m9h>.
18024. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" is being performed at the Ashley Stage in Berkeley, Calif., through Sept. 10; web-site at <www.shotgunplayers.org>.
18025. "Sherlock Holmes and the Crimson Cobbles" (a new play by Toby Hulse) will be performed at the Salisbury Playhouse in Salisbury, Wilts., Sept. 12-16 <www.tinyurl.com/yadzjl9>; click on "further information" to see a colorful Education Pack, and there is a trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/yaluurg9>. The play then will be performed at the Theatre Chipping Norton in Chipping Norton, Oxon., Sept. 19-24 <www.tinyurl.com/y8yzzk4a>, and after than tour in Britain.
18026. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the West Allis Central Auditorium in West Allis, Wis., from Oct. 6 to Oct. 15 <www.westallisplayers>.
18027. Ken Ludwig's comedy "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at The ZACK in St. Louis, Mo., on Oct. 12-19 <www.insighttheatrecompany.com>; and by the Fairbanks Drama Association at the Riverfront Theatre in Fairbanks, Alaska, Oct. 20-Nov. 5 <www.fairbanksdrama.org>.
18028. The play also will tour after its production by the Walnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia, Jan. 2-Feb. 4, and the full schedule for the tour's available at <www.baylinartists.com/walnut-street-theatre>.
18029. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is to be performed at the Orlando Shakespeare Theatre in Orlando, Fla., Oct. 11-Nov. 19 <www.orlandoshakes.org>; and at the Chesil Theatre in Winchester, Hants., Nov. 18-25 <www.chesiltheatre.org.uk>; and at the Little Theatre in Colne, Lancs., Mar. 5-9, 2018.

18030. "The Strange Case of the Megatherium Thefts" is an amusing pastiche written by S. C. Roberts, first published in 1945 and then included in his collection HOLMES AND WATSON: A MISCELLANY in 1953, involving thefts from the library of the Megatherium in London. And it turns out that there really was a Megatherium Club, in Washington rather than in London. Its members were scientists who lived in the Smithsonian Castle in its early years and their club was named in honor of a recently-discovered giant sloth. There's more about the Megatherium, and its four young naturalists, in a recent blog at the Smithsonian Institution's web-site <www.si.edu/megatherium>.
18031. "Ninety percent of intelligence comes from open sources. The other ten percent, the more clandestine work, is just more dramatic. The real intelligence hero is Sherlock Holmes, not James Bond." According to the late Lt. Gen. Sam Wilson, former Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, quoted by Van Hipp on Fox News <www.tinyurl.com/y9np5ygw>.
18032. Further to the item about Goyard of Paris and the "writing trunk" they made on commission from Conan Doyle in 1925 (November 16 #5), the company has opened a flagship store on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills; the company's impressive web-site is at <www.goyard.com>.

18033. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library newsletter) has an interesting article by Al Dawson ("Six Steps to Douglas Ainslie" that connects Ainslie, Seymour Hicks, Ellaline Terriss, William Terriss, Bert Coules, and Arthur Conan Doyle); and more news from and about the Library and the Collection. Copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
18034. Pierre Berloquin's SOLVING SHERLOCK HOLMES: PUZZLE YOUR WAY THROUGH THE CASES (New York: Wellfleet, 2017; 192 pp., $21.99) is an imaginative approach to the Canon; the author has written more than 50 books of puzzles, and in this attractively-illustrated volume uses six stories to present 144 puzzles of varying complexity.
18035. Pan Macmillan is celebrating its 70th anniversary of the first Pan paperback with a "Pan 70th Collection" of 20 of their "best-loved, best-selling" stories, with redesigned covers, and one of them is THE LOST WORLD; you can see the new cover designs at <pages.panmacmillan.com/pan-70>.
18036. Hazel Gaynor's THE COTTINGLEY SECRET (New York: William Morrow, 2017; 389 pp., $15.99) is a well-written novel that tells the stories of two women: Olivia Kavanagh in modern-day Ireland, and Frances Griffiths, whose diary Olivia finds, and it's a delightful and warm celebration of the centenary of the Cottingley Fairies.

18039. Mattias Boström's FROM HOLMES TILL SHERLOCK (April 17 #4) is receiving excellent and widespread reviews, and interesting podcast interviews, including his conversation with Jacke Wilson in "The History of Literature" series at <www.tinyurl.com/yalw4ebj> and his conversation with Burt Wolder and Scott Monty at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/y89egfls>.
18040. Catherine Cooke found an imaginative Sherlock Bones Pug figurine (about 10" tall) in a shop in London (£15.99); it benefits the British Heart Foundation <www.bhf.org.uk> but isn't available at their web-site. Their web-site does, it should be noted, have two Sherlockian birthday cards www.tinyurl.com/y9tbbkuy <www.tinyurl.com/ycy2t47o>.
18041. What was the "A.D.P. brier-root pipe" that was owned by John Straker (in "Silver Blaze")? Sherlockian scholars have long wondered, with many if not most suggesting an Alfred Dunhill Pipe, but now Dino Argyropoulos, editor of the Grimpen Mire Gazette (published by Hugo's Companions), has discovered an advertisement for a trademarked A.D.P. pipe in 1885 in the British Trade Journal. If you'd like to know more, you can request a PDF copy of the newsletter from Dino <dargy@sbcglobal.net>.
18042. Another Sherlockian cocktail, from the St. James Bar at The Balcon in London: the 221B (Metaxa Greek brandy, chai tea-infused crème de fig, liquorice bitters, lime juice, honey, and dark chocolate syrup, shaken with egg white), described as complex and velvety, dangerously easy to drink, in an article in The Telegraph (July 14) <www.tinyurl.com/yzof5gft>.
18043. The animated movie "Sherlock Gnomes" (formerly known as "Gnomeo and Juliet: Sherlock Gnomes" and scheduled for release on Jan. 12) will now be released on Mar. 23. Johnny Depp voices the title character: the world's greatest ornamental detective, who is called in to investigate why gnomes are vanishing from England's suburban gardens.
18044. Richard Masloski sculpted Holmes and Watson in the 1980s. Alexander Orlov has kindly reported Masloski's post at Facebook www.tinyurl.com/y8esf7rc about his sculpture "The Game is Afoot" (a model for a proposed life-size monument to Holmes and Watson). You also can see him with an older sculpture at <www.tinyurl.com/y9nnzhun>.
18045. Conan Doyle's WHY WE MUST FIGHT AN UNENDING WAR is a book that doesn't exist, except on p. 37 of Stephen Baxter's THE MASSACRE OF MANKIND (New York: Crown, 2017; 453 pp., $27.00). In Baxter's sequel to H. G Wells' THE WAR OF THE WORLDS, set in 1920, the Martians are back, and in Michael Dirda's Washington Post review of the book <www.tinyurl.com/y9e7594v>, he mentions Conan Doyle having written "a jingoist book" praising General Marvin, who managed to knock out one of the Martians' original fighting machines.

18046. "I hate reformers," Dorothy Parker once wrote, "They raise my blood pressure." And she hated the movie censors: "They insist that Sherlock Holmes is made to say, 'Quick, Watson, the crochet needle!'" That's just part of a poem ("Reformers: A Hymn of Hate") she wrote for NONSENSEORSHIP, an anthology published in 1922 and recently discovered by Ross Davies. Good luck finding a copy of the first edition: as this paragraph was written, only one copy was advertised on-line, for $350.00. But if you only want to read the poem, the book has been digitized, and you'll find it at <www.tinyurl.com/y96wwqv7>.
18047. The Research Society for Victorian Periodicals <www.rs4vp.org> has issued a call for papers for a special issue of Victorian Periodicals Review devoted to The Strand Magazine; they're seeking original essays on a wide variety of topics, with abstracts due by Dec. 1.
18048. Ehsan Ehsani presides over the on-line magazine "Mystery Tribune" and offers an interesting list of "six top apps for the ultimate Sherlock Holmes fan" <www.tinyurl.com/y7hufqgx>.
18049. Sharks are mentioned in two of the stories ("The Sign of the Four" and "The Valley of Fear"), and in a third story if you want to include Count Negretto Sylvius ("The Mazarin Stone"); eight sharks are shown on an attractive mini-sheet issued by the U.S. Postal Service earlier this year.
18050. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London offers a wide variety of Sherlockian merchandise at its web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/shop>, and has discounted the price of TO KEEP THE MEMORY GREEN, the tribute to Richard Lancelyn Green edited by Steven Rothman and Nicholas Utechin in 2007. A SINGULAR COUNTRYSIDE is the Society's just-published handbook for its expedition to Norfolk this year, and their Christmas card for 2017 is a handsomely-colored of Sidney Paget's wintry artwork for "The Abbey Grange".

18051. "If you want to do a cop's job, but you're not a cop, what are your options?" Anthony Lane asked in a review of (non-Sherlockian) films in The New Yorker (Sept. 11); he began his answer by noting that "Sherlock Holmes called himself a 'consulting detective,' on the strength of which he was repeatedly invited by members of the police force to demonstrate that they were dithering fools."
18052. I don't recall anyone reporting the really big news from Comic-Con in San Diego in 2016: Mark Gatiss announced that there will not be a fifth season of "Sherlock". You can watch the "Sherlock" panel at YouTube, and that's exactly what he said, adding that there will be a sixth season.

18053. RSI (radiotelevisione svizzera) broadcast some colorful coverage of the Sherlockians who toured Switzerland and Italy in August and September (January 17 #5): the coverage starts at 6:48 <www.tinyurl.com/ybzbv4uz>.
18054. The "Pop Sherlock" exhibition in the TD Gallery at the Toronto Public Library continues through Oct. 22, <www.tinyurl.com/grnc2q5>; it celebrates Sherlock Holmes as the "ultimate pop culture icon" with "an eclectic array" of items from the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection.
18055. Belanger Books (in association with Arkham House Publishing) has launched a Kickstarter campaign for David Marcum's THE PAPERS OF SOLAR PONS, a collection of new stories featuring Solar Pons, the delightful homage to Sherlock Holmes created by August Derleth; Vincent Starrett once called Solar Pons a "clever impersonator, with a twinkle in his eye." Kickstarter has more information about the book at <www.tinyurl.com/ybaywlu6>.
18056. Big Chief Studios is now at work on figures of Sherlock and John from "The Abominable Bride", but they're also offering a 30% discount on their "221B Baker Street Door Diorama" <www.tinyurl.com/y7dxmjpp>, ideal for displaying their upcoming 1:6 figures of Sherlock and John, or their current versions.
18058. "Quote Investigator: Dedicated to Tracing Quotations" is a useful web-site maintained by Garson O'Toole <www.quoteinvestigator.com>; a few years ago (May 13 #5) the web-site had imaginative Sherlockian artwork, but now there also are some interesting hits if you search for [sherlock holmes].
18059. Maria Konnikova has written MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES (2013) and THE CONFIDENCE GAME: WHY WE FALL FOR IT...EVERY TIME (2016), and her next book will explore the balance of luck and skill in our daily lives (using No-Limit Texas Hold 'Em as a metaphor for life); she has spent more than a year playing professional poker, and worked her way up to the World Series of Poker, and you can read all about it in the blog at her interesting web-site <www.mariakonnikova.com>. She also has ten interesting podcasts about con artists at The Grift www.thegriftpodcast.com>.

18060. Sherry Thomas' new A CONSPIRACY IN BELGRAVIA (New York: Berkley Books, 2017; 317 pp., $15.00) is a sequel to A STUDY IN SCARLET WOMEN (August 16 #1); she's an established writer of historical romances, and the series features Charlotte Holmes, who does her detecting pretending to be "Sherlock Holmes" and finds both mystery and romance in an imaginative tale that offers nice surprises, and interesting characters. The author's web-site is at <www.sherrythomas.com>.
18061. Alexander Orlov has noted that the German film "Sherlock Holmes: Die graue Dame" (1937) with Herman Speelmans as Jimmy Ward/Sherlock Holmes is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yb756v4f>. It's all in German, of course, and one can only hope that some day there will be English subtitles.
18062. Treasure is where you find it: builders renovating the home of a late cinema owner in Penarth (Wales) discovered 66 film posters that been used as carpet underlay after being displayed in local theaters from 1936 to 1940. One of them was a 12-sheet poster for "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) estimated at £600-£1,000 <www.tinyurl.com/y6vrw72>; it was sold for £13,000 (apparently because it is a variant so rare that it's not recorded at Google Images. It was the second-most expensive poster in the auction; first place went to a 12-sheet poster for "Stage Coach" (1939), which sold for £31,000. Ben Rogers Jones (the auctioneer) was quoted in the Antiques Trade Gazette as saying that the Texas-based buyer of the poster "told us that there is quite a good market in the U.S. for posters that suggest the British stiff upper lip."
18063. If you've wondered about Sherlock's fancy chair at 221B Baker Street in the BBC television series, a story in the Financial Times (sorry: there's a pay-wall) explains that it's a Le Corbusier 1959 Grand Confort LC3. The chair was designed by the Swiss-French architect in 1928, and you can buy the 1959 model from the Conran Shop <www.conranshop.co.uk> for £4,728 or find modern versions in other shops and on-line at lower prices. There's also a love-seat available, in case you want a mind palace built for two.
18065. The show runners of "Sherlock" (and the actors) continue to tantalize fans with confusing answers to questions about a continuation of the series, and Radio Times, noting that Jodie Whittaker has been cast as the next Doctor Who, asked Benedict Cumberbatch whether he thought there might be a female Sherlock. "Why not," Cumberbatch replied, "I don't care." And he offered a suggestion: "Sherlockina, it's coming to you soon."
18066. Jennie Paton has noted a video devoted to "Litigation and Literature in the N.Y. Courts: Shaw, Shakespeare, and Sherlock" <www.tinyurl.com/ydge9ndn>; the interesting program was presented by the Historical Society of the N.Y. Courts on February 17, 2016, with the Hon. Albert M. Rosenblatt (the society's president) presiding, and with readings by Paxton Whitehead.

18067. Anyone who wants to follow in the footsteps of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle can pay a visit to Rochester Square in London, where the inscription on the foundation stone of the Rochester Square Spiritual Temple notes that it was laid by Sir Arthur in 1926 (October 90 #5). But you need to visit soon: the Spiritualists' National Union, which owns the building, proposes to demolish the temple, to make way for flats and a basement gallery, according to a story in the Hampstead & Highgate Express on Sept. 9 that includes an image of the foundation stone <www.tinyurl.com/y8vc8zld>.
18068. Bill Barnes has reported from Australia that Sherlock Holmes, a six-year-old chestnut gelding, had his second race there on Sept. 23; he started at $18 and finished fourth in a field of thirteen, his best result since moving to Australia from his native Ireland.
18069. Conan Doyle lived briefly in Plymouth (in Devon) in 1882, when early in his medical career he joined the practice of George Turnavine Budd (there's a fictionalized account of his time in Plymouth in THE STARK MUNRO LETTERS, published in 1895); the house where they lived now has a blue plaque, unveiled at a ceremony this month <www.tinyurl.com/y7y7xaf7>.
18070. Pam Verrey has reported "Yukoko no Moriarty" (an on-line manga by Takeuchi Ryousuke and Miyoshi Hikaru) at <www.tinyurl.com/y82n2426>; that's "Moriarty the Patriot" and it's in English, exploring his motivation in becoming the greatest criminal Britain has ever seen.

18072. Acorn <www.acornonline.com> offers a nice variety of Sherlockiana, including a Mystery Lover T-shirt ($19.95) and sweatshirt ($29.95) with a colorful (mustached) Sherlockian caricature.
18073. An intriguing development in the bookstore business is Amazon's decision to sell books in bricks-and-mortar stores: their ninth and tenth stores opened in Bellevue, Wash., and San Jose, Calif., in August, and Bill Seil has forwarded a story in the Seattle Times <www.tinyurl.com/y8pkhebg> that offers a look at what customers can (and cannot) expect. Amazon stores stock only books that have received high ratings from Amazon reviewers, have room for about 3,700 titles, and are small enough to fit into city neighborhoods.
18074. I've noted in past issues that members of The Baker Street Irregulars have acted in films, and we can add Michael J. Quigley, who has appeared as an extra in two films. The rest of the list: Elmer Davis, H. C. Potter, and Evan Wilson (as themselves); Curtis Armstrong, Paul Singleton, and Richard Shull (as actors); Al Gregory, Jerry Margolin, John Pforr, Donald Pollock, Mary Ellen Rich, Philip Shreffler, and Bill Ward (as extras), and Jean Upton (as voices). If you'd like to include children of members of the BSI, add Peter Ashman's daughter Jenny (as an actor). Additions to the list are of course welcome.

18075. THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES: ELIMINATE THE IMPOSSIBLE (London: MX Publishing, 2017) is a welcome addition to the series of anthologies edited by David Marcum for those who believe that short stories are the best way to revisit Holmes and Watson; there are two volumes (459/566 pp., $44.95 each), with 48 stories (and poems and scripts) by old hands and new who have responded to the editor's request for "apparently supernatural investigations, but with rational solutions," and they are nicely done indeed. MX's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
18076. Also from MX: Dan Andriacco's QUEEN CITY CORPSE (2017; 233 pp., $14.95) is the latest in his series about Jeff Cody and Sebastian McCabe, who are in Cincinnati for a mystery convention and encounter mystery and murder, and a surprising solution; it's a lively story, and Andriacco maintains an (often-Sherlockian) blog at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>. Wendy Heyman-Marsaw's MEMOIRS FROM MRS. HUDSON'S KITCHEN (2017; 119 pp., $11.95) offers a collection of columns from Canadian Holmes, expanded and edited by JoAnn and Mark Alberstat; it's a nice cookbook, with commentary on life in Victorian times in London and the English countryside. Rob Nunn's THE CRIMINAL MASTERMIND OF BAKER STREET (2017; 336 pp., $18.95) answers the question "what if Sherlock Holmes had turned to crime instead of detection?" by retelling the Canonical cases from a new viewpoint; his "Interesting Though Elementary" blog is at <www.tinyurl.com/yd5hw4hn>.
18077. More from MX: Arthur Hall's THE DEMON OF THE DUSK (2017; 204 pp., $12.95); Holmes and Watson are in Warwickshire, investigating a curse, a ghost, and a series of vicious murders. And Hall's THE ONE HUNDRED PER CENT SOCIETY (2017; 141 pp., $10.95) pits Holmes and Watson against another vicious murderer, in a complicated and bizarre mystery. Mark Mower's THE BAKER STREET CASE-FILES (2017; 173 pp., $14.95) is a collection of short stories, some new and most reprinted from MX BOOK anthologies. John Sutton's IN UNHALLOWED REST (2017; 137 pp., $10.95) has Holmes and Watson in Suffolk in pursuit of vampires. And Richard K. Tobin's CANON OF THE NON-SACRED WRITINGS (2017; 120 pp., $9.95) is a collection of five new stories told in non-Watsonian style. John Sutton's IN UNHALLOWED REST (2017; 137 pp., $10.95) has Holmes and Watson in Suffolk in pursuit of vampires. Janina Woods' MYCROFT HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE DESERT WIND (2017; 303 pp., $16.95) sends Mycroft, his fellow Secret Service agent Victoria Trevor, and Dr. Watson in pursuit of the villains who have kidnapped Sherlock Holmes, in a case that involves supernatural forces.
18078. Hugh Hefner died on Sept. 27. When he founded Playboy magazine in 1953 he launched an empire that affected both the publishing world and a sexual revolution that reflected, and was reflected by, his own life-style. Those who bought the first issue of Playboy to see the photograph of a nude Marilyn Monroe were surprised to find that the lead fiction in the issue was an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four". "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Copper Beeches" followed in the next two issues, and Playboy continued with a variety of Sherlockiana, including delightful cartoons by Gahan Wilson and Nicholas Meyer's "The West End Horror", and Laura Lyons was Playmate of the Month in the Feb. 1976 issue. None of this was accidental: Hugh Hefner was an enthusiast, and once explained that his trademark pipe smoking was inspired by Holmes.

18080. F. Andrew Leslie's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is running at the Port Tobacco Playhouse in La Plata, Md., through Oct. 8 <www.ptplayers.com>.
18081. Ken Ludwig's comedy "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is running at A Local Barn in Durango, Colo., through Oct. 14 <www.merelyplayers.us>; and at the Oregon Cabaret Theater in Ashland, Ore., through Nov. 5; their web-site's at <www.oregoncabaret.com>. And it's due at the Live Theatre Workshop in Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 5-Nov. 11 <www.livetheatreworkshop.org>; and at the Jacklin Arts and Cultural Center in Post Falls, Idaho, Oct. 12 through 15 <www.cdsummertheatre.com>. Also at the Royal Off-the-Square Theatre in Brownstown, Ind., Oct. 13-21 <www.jcct.org>; the Fringe Club in Hong Kong, Oct. 18-26 <www.hkfringeclub.com>; and Murry's Dinner Playhouse in Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 31-Nov. 25 <www.murrysdp.com>.
18082. "The Hound of the Baskervilles: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure" (a new "hiking play" written by Lauren LaCasse) is being performed by Arts in the Open at the Chautauqua Picnic Shelter in Boulder, Colo., through Oct. 29; web-site at <www.chautauqua.com>.
18083. Ken Ludwig's "Postmortem" (an earlier version of "The Game's Afoot") will be performed at the Mundelein High School in Mundelein, Ill., Oct. 6-8; the web-site's at <www.kirkplayers.org>.
18084. Christophe Delort's dramatization of "Sherlock Holmes et la mystère de la vallée de Boscombe" will be performed at the Théâtre du Gymnase Marie-Bell in Paris, Oct. 12-Jan. 27 <www.billetreduc.com/194998/evt.htm>.
18085. Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Xenia Area Community Theatre in Xenia, Ohio, Oct. 27-Nov. 5 <www.xeniaact.org>.
18086. Ken Ludwig's play "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Ivoryton Playhouse in Ivoryton, Conn., Nov. 1-19; the web-site is at <www.ivorytonplayhouse.org>. And at Cheriton Village Hall in Cheriton (near Alresford), Hants., Nov. 15-18 <www.thecheritonplayers.org.uk>; and at the Ajax Community Theatre in Ajax, Ont., Nov. 16-26; their web-site is at <www.ajaxcommunitytheatre.com>. Also at the Triple Locks Theater in Coshocton, Ohio, Dec. 1-16 <www.footlightplayers.com>; and at the AFD Theatre in Arlington, Mass., Dec. 8-17 <www.afdtheatre.org>.

18088. Transformative Works and Cultures is an international on-line journal that publishes articles about popular media, fan communities, and transformative works; v. 23 (2017) <www.tinyurl.com/y9hkz4ml> is titled "Sherlock Holmes, Fandom, Sherlockiana and the Great Game" and was edited by Betsy Rosenblatt and Roberta Pearson. There's cover artwork by Laurie Fraser Manifold, and an excellent mix of material by and about Sherlockians, and it's all available to read on-line or download without charge.
18089. Alexis Barquin notes a two-minute British Pathé clip of Eille Norwood putting on a disguise in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" at the Princes Theatre in London (1923) <www.tinyurl.com/y8xf9h7>; this seems to be the earliest known film/video from a Sherlockian play.
18090. Kazuo Ishiguro has been awarded the 2017 Nobel Prize in Literature. He is best known for his novels THE REMAINS OF THE DAY, NEVER LET ME GO, and THE BURIED GIANT, and Sara Danius, the permanent secretary of the Swedish Academy, said that "If you mix Jane Austen and Franz Kafka then you have Kazuo Ishiguro in a nutshell, but you have to add a little bit of Marcel Proust into the mix." In an interview published in the N.Y. Times Sunday Book Review in 2015 <www.tinyurl.com/y7ux8nlm>, Ishiguro said that he discovered the Sherlock Holmes stories as a young boy in the local library, and that "I not only read obsessively about Holmes and Watson, I started to behave like them. I'd go to school and say things like: 'Pray, be seated' or 'That is most singular.' People at the time just put this down to my being Japanese." Mattias Boström has posted about Ishiguro at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/y9mbuzd8>.
18092. A SINGULAR COUNTRYSIDE, edited by Nicholas Utechin, David Jones, and Heather Owen (London: Sherlock Holmes Society of London; 2017, 40 pp., £7.50), is the handbook for the Society's expedition to Norfolk; the Society's fortunate to have so many Canonical locales to visit on its expeditions, and to have so much scholarship available from its members. It's available at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.

18094. The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and the contents of the fall issue include Evelyn Herzog's "The Second Case of the Speckled Band" (originally published in Albertinum, spring 1966, when the ASH were founded at Albertus Magnus College in New Haven); the Muse is published quarterly and costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230), and a copy of the summer issue costs $5.00 postpaid.
18095. Don Hobbs, assisting the search for information about deceased members of The Baker Street Irregulars, is still seeking exact death dates for Irving M. Fenton, Robert G. Parker, and Frank F. Reilly. Nothing was found in The Baker Street Journal, the Social Security Death Index, and www.legacy.com; if any anyone knew, or has personal information about, any of the missing three, please get in touch with Don <221b@verizon.net>.
18096. There's always something new to be discovered, such as "Gli aristocratici e Sherlock Holmes" (published in Il Corriere del Ragazzi, Mar. 1975); it's an Italian comic strip that was written by Alfredo Castelli and drawn by Ferdinando Tacconi, and it's available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ybssps5z>.
18097. Copies of THE SHERLOCK HOLMES HEXALOGY have been shipped by the Thornwillow Press; it's a collection of Conan Doyle's six favorite stories, introduced by Randall Stock, letterpress-printed and hand-bound, and it's available in different bindings, ranging from paper ($85) to half-leather ($575), and a few individual stories still are available in even fancier bindings. More information at <www.thornwillow.com/sherlock-holmes-hexalogy-1275>.
18098. The Marco Navos Studio offers a colorful collection of paper dolls showing 12 characters from the Canon (plus Conan Doyle) <www.tinyurl.com/y93jvxe3>; they are available in two sizes. The company also offers a variety of miniature figurines <www.tinyurl.com/y9vlvmch>, Sherlockian and others.
18100. Flicker Alley promoted its restored (and most complete) Blu-ray edition of "The Lost World" (1925) with its first animated video contest, encouraging fans to submit short animated videos inspired by the company's titles; the winner was Shane Fleming, whose "The Tyrant Lizard" can be seen at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yalh587>.
18101. H. H. Holmes is definitely dead. That was the alias used by Herman Webster Mudgett, who murdered a series of young women in the World's Fair Hotel in Chicago, and by Anthony Boucher, who was an author, critic, and early member of The Baker Street Irregulars (June 17 #1). The History Channel series "American Ripper" pursued a rumor that Mudgett escaped from prison and execution and ended with the exhumation of Mudgett's grave; forensic tests determined that the body was indeed Mudgett's.

18102. Alexander Orlov has noted an interesting on-line archive: the National Center for Biotechnology Information, which has 16 data-bases with citations for ["sherlock holmes"] and 13 for ["conan doyle"] <www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov>. Anyone interested in Sherlockian and Doylean medicine will find much of interest: just one of the data-bases, PubMed Central <www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc> yields 623 hits for ["sherlock holmes"] and 461 for ["conan doyle"].
18103. "The most beautiful diamond in the world" is Christie's description of the 163.41-carat diamond that will go to auction in London on Nov. 14; it was cut from a 404-carat rough diamond found in Angola last year, and you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/yb4g7yjl>. There's nothing Sherlockian about the diamond, but it's certainly more spectacular than the Mazarin Stone (a 77-carat yellow diamond that's part of the Iranian crown jewels, and was never owned by Cardinal Mazarin).

18104. If you would like to know more about Mazarin, and the diamonds that actually were in his collection, you can consult the catalog for Christie's auction of "magnificent jewels" <www.tinyurl.com/ycwzntl8>; the auction will include the "Grand Mazarin" (a light-pink 19.07-carat brilliant-cut diamond) that's so magnificent that it's listed as "estimate on request."
18105. Breaking news: the Russians used Sherlock Holmes to try to interfere with the U.S. election. It was a CNN Exclusive this month, illustrated with an image of Vasilii LivaNovember and Vitali Solomin <www.tinyurl.com/yavs6mjr>.
18106. It was H. R. F. Keating, in SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MAN AND HIS WORLD (1979), who explained that the modern Belgian masters whose pictures entirely absorbed Sherlock Holmes (in THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES) were the members of the XX Group. James Ensor was one of them, and Christie's has on-line an interesting "5 minutes with... A book of poems illustrated by James Ensor" <www.tinyurl.com/y984kka8>.
18108. Steampunk, first mentioned in this newsletter in 1996, is a modern Victorian science-fiction genre generally set in alternative universes, but there is real science in its history. Brandy Schillace explores that history in her CLOCKWORK FUTURES (New York: Pegasus, 2017; 300 pp., $28.95); the subtitle is "the science of steampunk and the reinvention of the modern world" and (of course) she has a chapter on "The Science of Sherlock".
18109. The University of Chicago Press has announced the Great Chicago Book Sale, and one of the books is Conan Doyle's 'DANGEROUS WORK': DIARY OF AN ARCTIC ADVENTURE (July 12 #4); if you don't have this excellent book already, here is a chance to get it at a discount: $13.00 for the cloth edition (instead of $35.00) and $69.00 for the limited, numbered, and cloth slip-cased edition (instead of $289.00). Go to <www.bit.ly/UCPSale>, search for [dangerous work] and use the keycode AD1647 to get the discount.

18110. Bert Wolder spotted an interesting item scheduled for auction at Sotheby's in London on Sept. 26 in The Vivien Leigh Collection: a photograph of David Niven, with a deerstalker (and bow and arrow) jumping into a swimming pool; They were close friends, and she was godmother to his oldest son. Estimated at £300-£500, it sold for £4,000, and you still may be able to see the photograph at <www.tinyurl.com/yd42jma9>.
18111. The Folio Society and House of Illustration have announced the 2018 Book Illustration Competition to illustrate THE SELECTED ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; details at <www.tinyurl.com/yb5ss7ez>. The winner will receive a £5,000 commission to illustrate the book and design the binding, and the deadline for entries in the competition is Jan. 17. The selected long-list will be available at the House of Illustration web-site from Feb. 1, and members of the public will be able to vote for their favorite entry; the winner, however, will be chosen by a panel of six judges.
18114. The British Film Institute has launched a new Filmography data-base covering more than 100 years of feature films, starting in 1911, with details on more than 10,000 films and more than 250,000 cast and crew. Details available at <www.bfi.org.uk/archive-collections/bfi-filmography>, and there are answers to all sorts of questions, such as: who are the most featured characters in British feature films? Sherlock Holmes ranks third (24 films); James Bond and Queen Victoria are tied for first (25 films), and Miss Moneypenny ranks fourth (17 films). Old Mother Riley and the Prince of Wales are tied for seventh (13 films). And who was Old Mother Riley? Look her up at Wikipedia (I had to).
18115. Steve Duke died on Sept. 21. A co-founder of The Sherlock Holmes Society of Victoria (aka The Elementary Victorians), he produced occasional cryptic messages he called "The Dark Rumours of Moriarty"; his article on "ACD in Melbourne" appeared in the 2012 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual, and for many years he had great fun out there down under.
18116. Dennis Pearce was the runner-up in the "detective" category in the BulwerLytton Fiction Contest in 2010: "As Holmes, who had a nose for danger, quietly fingered the bloody knife and eyed the various body parts strewn along the dark, deserted highway, he placed his ear to the ground and, with his heart in his throat, silently mouthed to his companion, 'Arm yourself, Watson, there is an evil hand afoot ahead.'" This has been in this newsletter before, but incorrectly, and the full version is better. The motto of the contest is "Where www means 'Wretched Writers Welcome'" and their web-site is at <www.bulwer-lytton.com>.

18117. EVERY CLUE COUNTS: A CHILDREN'S SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY (2017; 210 pp., $9.99 at Amazon and elsewhere) was written and published by the 5th-grade class of Downes Elementary School in Newark, Del., and it is nicely done indeed; the 5th-graders know their audience, and obviously have had great fun creating an interesting book.
18118. Terry Downes died on Oct. 6. A British middle-weight boxing champion who was nicknamed the Paddington Express, he became wealthy outside the ring by investing in legal betting shops, and occasionally acted in films, including "A Study in Terror" (1965), in which he played Chunky.
18119. The next 221B Con will be held in Atlanta, Apr. 13-15, 2018; it's promoted as "a fan con for all things Sherlock Holmes" and (by all accounts) it is never boring <www.221bcon.com>.
18120. The Napoleon of Crime now has a grave marker. Jerry Klinger, in an article in the San Diego Jewish World (Oct. 8) <www.tinyurl.com/y9lmxvm6>, reports that he has installed a grave marker at Highgate Cemetery in honor of Adam Worth (the master criminal who was known as the Napoleon of Crime well before Prof. Moriarty).
18121. An addition to the list of members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films (September 17 #6): Sonia Fetherson (as an extra). And to the list of children of members of the BSI: James Utechin (as an actor).
18122. Joe Ide's IQ won an Anthony award (for best first novel) at Bouchercon this month. His protagonist is Isaiah Quintabe, "a street-smart Sherlock" (according to one reviewer) who lives in Long Beach, Calif., and the book has many Canonical echoes. Lenny Picker interviewed Ide for Publishers Weekly last year <www.tinyurl.com/ydhmsope>.
18123. Bouchercon was held in Toronto, and the schedule included a nice Sherlockian panel moderated by Angela Misri; there also were opportunities to visit the "Pop Sherlock!" exhibition and the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library. Congratulations to Peggy Perdue on her promotion; she now is senior department head of the special collections department.

18124. The next Bouchercons will be in Saint Petersburg ("Crime in the Sunshine") Sept. 13-16, 2018; in Dallas ("Denim, Diamonds and Death") on Oct. 31-Nov. 4, 2019; and in Sacramento ("Where Murder is a Capitol Crime"), Oct. 15-18, 2020. Bouchercon is the largest gathering of mystery authors and readers, and there's (almost) always a Sherlockian panel.
18125. David Marcum, author of the upcoming THE PAPERS OF SOLAR PONS (September 17 #4), blogs at "A Seventeen Step Problem...." and has a nicely illustrated post about August Derleth and Solar Pons <www.tinyurl.com/yczkxleq>.
18126. Donald A. Yates ("The Greek Interpreter") died on Oct. 17. He was a professor of Romance Languages at Michigan State University, where he resurrected The Greek Interpreters, and was an expert on the writings of Jorge Luis Borges. Don contributed to our literature with scholarship, poetry, and pastiche, and was the founding chair of The John H. Watson Society; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.

18127. Reedsy (which describes itself as "a full ecosystem for authors and publishing professionals") has celebrated the 125th anniversary of the publication of THE ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES by asking a dozen professional book designers to create new book covers for each of the stories in the collection. The designs are thoroughly attractive, and you can see them in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/ybzwvgw3>. Alas: there are no plans (at the moment) to publish books with the colorful covers.
18128. Arthur Conan Doyle, J. M. Barrie, and P. G. Wodehouse were members of the Authors XI Cricket Club, founded in 1892 and dissolved in 1912. The club was revived in 2012 and has an active schedule, a page at Facebook, and a web-site <www.authorscricketclub.com>.
18129. Anatoly Mikhailovich Eliseev has created some colorful and striking illustrations for Sherlock Holmes stories, apparently not published, but Howard Ostrom notes that you can see them on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/yajeztnu>.
18130. Harry Rountree's original artwork for one of his illustrations in "The Lost World" in The Strand Magazine was offered at Heritage Auctions this month, and you can see at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ydgbhzoc> how spectacular the artwork in inkwash and gouache is, compared to what readers saw in the Strand; it sold for $5,500 (including the buyer's premium)
18131. "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (1999-2001), a British animated television series that ran for two seasons on CITV and Fox Kids, still has its fans, including Patrick Morris, who posted The Arcanist web-site on Oct. 6 <www.tinyurl.com/y9rnyhnb> about "how a forgotten cartoon predicted the future." And he makes some interesting points.
18133. Mattias Boström didn't have room for all of his research in the 571 pages of his FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK (April 17 #4), and he's now posting all sorts of additional material at his Facebook page, which is well worth visiting <www.facebook.com/fromholmestosherslock>.
18134. Roy Dotrice died on Oct. 16. He had a long career as an actor, noted for appearing as John Aubrey on stage in the one-man show "Brief Lives" (which opened in 1967 and ran for 1,700 performances), and as Hallyne the Pyromancer in two episodes of the television series "Game of Thrones" in 2012. He also played Douglas Stone in the BBC-2 dramatization of Conan Doyle's "The Case of Lady Sannox" (1968), Simon Carne in "The Duchess of Wilshire's Diamonds" in the ITV television series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971), and Conan Doyle in the television film "Young Harry Houdini" (1987).
18135. The fall meeting of The Sons of the Copper Beeches in Philadelphia was enjoyed by all, including the toastmaster, who for the first time in the history of the society was able to call the meeting to order by saying "ladies and gentlemen" (all of the six traditional toasts were given by ladies, and all the ladies on hand, having attended their first meeting, are on their way to becoming full members of the Sons.

18136. The traditional forecast for the Sherlockian birthday festivities in New York in January is considerably shorter than usual, because details are not yet available. But they will be, on-line early in November, at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/bsiweekend.html>. The long weekend will begin on Wednesday, Jan. 10 with the ASH Wednesday dinner, and end on Sunday, Jan. 14 with the ASH brunch, and the schedule may or may not include some surprises.
18137. Paste magazine has reported <www.tinyurl.com/y7bw5l2y> that next year Dark Horse will publish a graphic-novel adaptation of Neil Gaiman's pastiche "A Study in Emerald"; visit the web-site to see the cover artwork.
18138. Conan Doyle sailed from Sydney to Auckland in 1920 on the SS Maheno while on his Spiritualist tour of Australia and New Zealand; in 1935 it was sold for scrap, caught in a cyclone, and beached on Fraser Island, off the coast of Queensland. It's still there, and Bill Barnes has reported that Google Maps has panoramic views of the wreck today <www.tinyurl.com/yd5wls57>.
18139. Pattie Tierney's "Mystery Jewelry and Gifts" www.pattietierney.etsy.com offers imaginative items, Sherlockian and otherwise, including a new "Sherlock Noir" charm bracelet.
18140. Ted Bergman ("The Honourable Philip Green") died on Oct. 22. He was one of the founders of The Solitary Cyclists of Sweden, and an energetic member of The Baskerville Hall Club of Sweden. Ted was a dedicated Sherlockian, an expert bibliographer, and proud of his miniature recreation of 221B Baker Street, and he was awarded his Investiture by The Baker Street Irregulars in 1978.
18141. Judge Richard A. Posner retired in September after more than three decades on the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago; you can read the Chicago Tribune's story at <www.tinyurl.com/y7g47vrj>, and Adam Liptak's "Exit Interview with Richard Posner, Judicial Provocateur" in the N.Y. Times at <www.tinyurl.com/y79aln54>. Posner wrote the Court of Appeals decision in Leslie S. Klinger v. Conan Doyle Estate, Ltd., in 2014, ruling that copyright protects only characters and story elements unique to the ten stories still under copyright, and awarded Les more than $30,000 to cover his legal fees; you can read the decisions at <www.free-sherlock.com>. Posner also reviewed THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES for The New Republic in 2004 and offered a decidedly unfavorable opinion of the scholarship and pseudo-scholarship detailed in Les' annotations.
18142. Bill Barnes has reported from Australia that Sherlock Holmes, a six-year-old chestnut gelding (September 17 #6), is continuing to race in Australia: he was the favorite in a field of 12 on Oct. 11, but finished fourth, and came in fourth again in a race on Oct. 18. His lifetime earnings are AU$42,296.
18143. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Elephant & Castle Pub and Restaurant in Seattle on Oct. 25, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America, welcomed by members of The Sound of the Baskervilles. Our next meetings will be on May 23 in Salt Lake City and on Nov. 7 in Indianapolis.

18144. Robert Guillaume died on Oct. 24. He earned a Tony nomination in a production of "Guys and Dolls" in 1977, and went on to win an Emmy for best supporting actor as the butler Benson DuBois in the television series "Soap"; he then won a second Emmy as best actor in the spinoff "Benson" and in an episode of the second series he was seen briefly in Sherlockian costume impersonating a Scotland Yard inspector.
18145. Denny Dobry has kindly reported a 3-minute Sherlockian segment in the History Channel's series "Pawn Stars": in the episode "Chum's Risky Business" (Cot. 23, 2017), Chuck Kovacic (founder of The Baker Street Builders) sold Rick Harrison a gasogene.
18146. Theatrics: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new play by Thomas Moore) is running at the King's Arms in Salford, Manchester, through Nov. 25; their web-site's at <www.thehoundofthebaskervilles.co.uk>.
18147. Christophe Delort's dramatization of "Sherlock Holmes et la mystère de la vallée de Boscombe" is running at the Théâtre du Gymnase Marie-Bell in Paris through Jan. 27 <www.billetreduc.com/194998/evt.htm>; there's a trailer trailer at <www.vimeo.com/233013768>.
18148. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is due at the Lion's Club in Key Largo, Fla., Nov. 1-11 <www.thekeyplayers.org>; and at the Frank Venables Theatre in Oliver, B.C., Nov. 2-4; their web-site is at <www.venablestheatre.ca>. It's also at the Otter Valley Playhouse in Tillsonburg, Ont., Nov. 2-12; <www.theatreiltsonburg.com>; and at the nTelos Theatre in Staunton, Va., Nov. 3-12 <www.shenanarts.org>.
18149. Katie Forgetting's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Reuben Cordova Theatre in Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 16-Dec. 17 <www.theatre40.org>; and the Ottawa Little Theatre in Ottawa, Ont., May 2-19 <www.ottawalittletheatre.com>.
18150. "Sherlock Holmes and the Christmas Goose" (by Duke Ernsberger and V. Cate) will be performed at the Greenville Little Theatre in Greenville, S.C., on Dec. 7-17 <www.greenvillelittletheatre.org>.
18151. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed in the script-in-hand play-reading series at the Westport Country Playhouse in Westport, Conn., on Dec. 11 <www.westportplayhouse.org>.
18153. David MacGregor's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Elusive Ear" is due at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, Mich., Mar. 29-May 6, 2018 <www.purplerosetheatre.org>.

18154. Sherlock Holmes' 164th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 12, with the traditional festivities in New York. The (very) long weekend runs from Wednesday through Sunday, and information about registering for events and making hotel reservations is available on-line at the Baker Street Irregulars' web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/bsiweekend.html>; space is limited at some events, so don't delay registering. There's more information at Scott Monty's excellent web-site <www.bsiweekend.com>; Scott also has a "Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips" at <www.ihose.co/bsi2017tips>.
18155. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address. The Watson Fund benefits from the auction at the Saturday reception during the birthday festivities; if you would like to see what a truly spectacular auction looks like, watch the video at <www.tinyurl.com/ybh7xtlz>.
18157. Another addition to the list of members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films (September 17 #6 18158. and October 17 #5): Michael W. McClure. And his children (Michael W. McClure II, Jennifer McClure, Christine McClure, and Elizabeth McClure) as extras.
18159. Fans of the musical "Baker Street" (1964) will enjoy Stephen Bowie's story in Broadway World, Oct. 31 <www.tinyurl.com/y9bntawt> about the N.Y. Public Library's acquisition of the scripts of Jerome Coopersmith; there's a long interview with Coopersmith about the musical in the story, with some interesting background on how the musical was created and staged.
18160. Some of Conan Doyle's correspondence was written and signed by secretaries, and the secretaries put their initials after the signature; an example of this went to auction at Bubba Kuyper in the Netherlands on Nov. 22, estimated at €150-€250 <www.tinyurl.com/y7rm9d8h>. It sold for €200.
18161. Mary Cameron Shore's collection of Sherlockiana was donated to the University of North Carolina in 1978, and items from the collection were exhibited there in 1980 (January 80 #1). Its existence is not well-known, but the collection is interesting indeed, and Mattias Boström has reported Christy Edina Richards' comprehensive assessment of the collection, submitted for her M.S. degree in Library Science in 2003 <www.tinyurl.com/yae7ovhw>.

18162. Willmer A. Hoerr's "The Case of the Archetypical Agent" (published in The Baker Street Journal in Mar. 1968) discussed Ignatius Paul Pollaky, widely known as "Paddington Pollaky" (and mentioned in Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience"). Pollaky was a private detective active in London well before Sherlock Holmes, and Hoerr concluded that "because he was very close-mouthed and lacked a literary friend, we shall probably never know just what his exploits were." Bryan Kesselman's 'PADDINGTON' POLLAKY: PRIVATE DETECTIVE (Stroud: History Press, 2015; 239 pp., $19.95) corrects that oversight; sub-titled "the mysterious life and times of the real Sherlock Holmes," the book is a full-scale biography of Pollaky, who was no Holmes, but nevertheless a colorful character indeed.
18163. More kidvid: Lenny Picker's daughter has reported a (brief) appearance of a wax figure of Sherlock Holmes in the "Headhunters" episode of the Disney Channel's animated series "Gravity Falls" <www.tinyurl.com/ycd2r8kl>.
18164. Nancy Friday died on Nov. 5. Famous as the author of MY SECRET GARDEN (a survey of women's sexual fantasies that was published in 1973 and sold more than two million copies), she went on to write FORBIDDEN FLOWERS: MORE WOMEN'S SEXUAL FANTASIES (1975) in which she said that "Another fantasy is one where I seduce Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes at 22B [sic] Baker Street. In it, I am his twenty-year-old niece. Dr. Watson (Nigel Bruce) is amazed his aloof pal Holmes finally fell for someone."

18165. There's a Sherlock Holmes Walking Tour of Edinburgh, led by Toby Virgo (in Sherlockian costume); you can also book a private tour, and there's a colorful web-site at <www.realsherlockholmes.com>.
18166. John Hillerman died on Nov. 9. He had a long career as an actor on stage and screen and television, and is best known for his role as Higgins in the long-running television series "Magnum, P.I."; he also played Dr. Watson in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" on CBS-TV in 1990.
18167. Howard Ostrom has discovered a spectacular one-of-a-kind portrait doll that the Russian artist Natalia Zatova created of Borislav Brondokov as Inspector Lestrade in the Russian television series that starred Vasilii LivaNovember as Sherlock Holmes. You can see the doll in full color at her web-site at <www.natalydolls.com/lestrade.php#>, and more of her dolls are on display at her web-site. Inspector Lestrade is in a private collection and not for sale, but she accepts commissions (costing 200,000 rubles and up, depending on the complexity of the costume).
18168. There's now an official trailer for "Sherlock Gnomes" (the animated movie featuring the world's greatest ornamental detective), scheduled for release on Mar. 23 <www.tinyurl.com/ybnvawee>.
18169. Further to the report (September 03 #2) on Britain's endangered bitterns (it was in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that Stapleton suggested that "I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns"), a story in The Guardian (Nov. 8) www.tinyurl.com/ymdalksx (kindly noted by Phil Attwell) reports that there now is a record high of bitterns in Britain: the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds recently counted 164 bitterns at 71 wetlands sites in Britain.

18171. Brian Pugh spotted an interesting painting at auction at Bonhams in London on Nov. 21, estimated at £1,000-£1,500: the painting, by Edward George Handel Lucas, shows Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's writing shed and grave at Crowborough in August 1930 <www.tinyurl.com/y7oq5okt>; it sold for £1,750.
18172. Dudley Simpson died on Nov. 4. He learned to play the piano in his childhood in Australia and went on to become an accomplished conductor in Australia and Britain; he then moved into composing for television, including "Doctor Who" and is credited for the incidental music in that series' Victorian (and almost Sherlockian) episode "The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (1977).
18173. Sherlock Holmes has been wrapped. Again. Charity Hands On London wrapped the statue of Sherlock Holmes outside the Baker Street underground station in a bright red coat on Nov. 5, as part of a campaign asking people to donate their old coats, which go to those in need <www.wrapuplondon.org.uk>; there's a brief glimpse of the Sherlock Holmes statue in a "Wrap Up London" video at www.tinyurl.com/y7wrnfvw
18174. Vicki Delany's BODY ON BAKER STREET (New York: Crooked Lane, 2017; 297 pp., $26.99) is the second in her pleasantly-cozy "Sherlock Holmes bookshop mystery" series that stars Gemma Doyle (the proprietor of the Sherlock Holmes Bookshop) and her friend Jayne Wilson (the proprietor of the next-door Mrs. Hudson's Tea Room) investigating the murder (in the bookshop) of an author of Sherlockian pastiches. The next title in the series will be THE CAT OF THE BASKERVILLES.
18175. The oldest surviving Sherlockian television broadcast is "The Adventure of the Speckled Band" (broadcast by NBC-TV in 1949; Holmes); you can watch it at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ydabnb3w> and see Alan Napier as Holmes, years before he became famous as Alfred the butler in the long-running "Batman" series in the 1960s. "The Adventure of the Three Garridebs" was broadcast by NBC on its experimental station in New York in 1937; with Louis Hector as Holmes, and it would be nice indeed if someone discovers a recording of the show.
18176. Sherlock Holmes needs to move. Again. The Edinburgh City Council is considering remodelling Picardy Place, and is asking for suggestions from the public about a new site for the statue of Sherlock Holmes erected in 1991 as a memorial to Arthur Conan Doyle <www.tinyurl.com/y865v36c>.
18177. Massimo Polidaro's "Notes on a Strange World" column in November /December issue of the Skeptical Inquirer is devoted to "The Conspiracy of Fairies" and the possibility, suggested by Fiona Maher in the August issue of Fortean Times, that the Cottingley photographs actually were faked by Elsie Wright's father Arthur.

18178. Michael Ross, who some years ago reported the PLAYMOBIL figurine of Sherlock Holmes (May 94 #2) has now reported Richard Unglik's SHERLOCK HOLMES ET LE CHIEN DES BASKERVILLES (Bruxelles: Casterman, 2013; 96 pp., €18.50 at the publisher's web-site) <tinyurl.com/y9jnluhg>; une interprétation playmobilesque du roman de Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The book's also available in Spanish as EL PERRO DE LOS BASKERVILLE (2015) and in English as THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, 2016).
18179. The second title in Elizabeth Eulberg's "Shelby Holmes" series is THE GREAT SHELBY HOLMES MEETS HER MATCH (New York: Bloomsbury, 2017; 230 pp., $16.99) and it is an excellent sequel to THE GREAT SHELBY HOLMES (June 17 #2). The series is written for young readers and is nicely Sherlockian, and the new story's told well. The author's web-site is at <www.elizabetheulberg.com>.
18180. THE LOST PRINCESS OF OZ was the eleventh of Frank L. Baum's books about Oz, and the autumn issue of The Baum Bugle (the quarterly journal of the International Wizard of Oz Club) has Scott Cummings' discussion of some of the early reviews of the book, offering a nice example or two of how one hears of Sherlock everywhere: the Chicago Post (Dec. 7, 1913) noted that "There are few characters in fiction that one could wish to go on forever--Sherlock Holmes is one," adding that "certainly the inhabitants of Oz are among that few elect," and the Louisville Courier Journal (Dec. 13, 1917) reviewer said that, "it is the wonderful wizard, who like Sherlock Holmes, never made a mistake, who finds Ozma in a most surprising situation." The Club's colorful web-site is at <www.ozclub.org>.
18181. Keith Barron died on Nov. 15. A British actor, he appeared in many television series, and he was best known for his role as David Pearce in "Duty Free" in the 1980s. Barron also played Rob Ferguson in Granada's "The Last Vampyre" (1993).
18182. It's often said, by people who believe that "The Blue Carbuncle" could not have involved a garnet, that there are no blue garnets. That certainly was true when Sherlock Holmes solved that mystery, but no longer: in 1998 there was a discovery of a blue garnet in the Bekily mines in Madagascar. But it is only sometimes blue: it's a color-change garnet, a mixture of pyrope and spessartine that's grayish or greenish blue in daylight, changing to purple in incandescent light, and brilliant blue in LED light.
18183. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Early LSD Guru" was the headline on a story on Oct. 27 <www.tinyurl.com/ybk2p3vb> at the Reason Foundation's Hit & Run blog about the late Gerald Heard, described as a mystic whose syncretic spiritual path eventually led him to mescaline and LSD." You can read more about at a web-site <www.geraldheard.com>, including the books that he wrote (as H. F. Heard) about Mr. Mycroft. The "Hit & Run" blog includes a link to Boris Karloff's "The Sting of Death" (1955), which was adapted from Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY.

18184. Laurie R. King's web-site <www.laurierking.com> now has a new and helpful chronology of her books and stories about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes; click on [Books] and then on [Russell and Holmes] to read what she has to say about what her fans call the Kanon, and scroll down to find the "Internal chronology" for the series.

November 2017 #5

18185. Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Speckled Band") that "Palmer and Pritchard were among the heads of their profession." Stephen Bates' THE POISONER: LIFE AND CRIMES OF VICTORIAN ENGLAND'S MOST NOTORIOUS DOCTOR (New York: Overlook Press, 2014; 342 pp., $17.95) is a detailed biography of William Palmer; Bates notes that Holmes was flattering to Palmer, "since he lost his nerve and was never at the head of his profession, even as a poisoner."
18186. Rosemary Herbert's interview with Jeremy Brett, published in The Armchair Detective (fall 1985) has been excerpted as "Jeremy Brett: The Real Sherlock Holmes" in the "Murder & Mayhem" blog, and it's a nice reminder of the Granada series <www.tinyurl.com/y8dz8vbe>.
18188. THE USUAL SANTAS, edited by Peter Lovesey (New York: Soho Crime, 2017; 400 pp., $19.95) is subtitled "a Collection of Soho Crime Christmas Capers" and is a nicely seasonal anthology of stories by interesting authors, including Cara Black's "Cabaret aux Assassins" about Irene Adler's daughter Neige and Irene's exploits in Paris).
18189. David Small died on July 21. He had a long career in England and Australia as an actor, director, and radio presenter, and played Conan Doyle in Australia in Cenarth Fox's "The Real Sherlock Holmes" in 2004 and 2005.
18190. "Fake News" is the title of an exhibition at the National Science and Media Museum in Bradford, W. Yorks. <www.scienceandmediamuseum.org.uk>, running through Jan. 28; the Bradford Telegraph & Argus noted (Nov. 16) that "Fake News" is nothing new, and that the exhibits range from the existence of bat creatures living on the Moon in 1835 to modern-day politics (both British and American), and the historic material on display includes the Cottingley Fairies hoax <www.tinyurl.com/ybgktedew>.
18191. Plan well ahead: the Wessex Press' "From Gillette to Brett V" conference is scheduled for Oct. 5-7 in Bloomington, Ind. <www.wessexpress.com>.
18192. Ross K. Foad (who maintains the web-site "No Place Like Holmes") has begun a new web-series "The History of Spirituality" (adapted from Conan Doyle's THE HISTORY OF SPIRITUALISM); the first episode ("The Story of Swedenborg") is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ybfo8xtg>, with more episodes to follow.
18193. Aaron Cowan was in the news in Britain in October: he was jailed for five years after admitting six charges of fraud, five of them while posing as a police officer. He used the persona of Insp. Greg Lestrade at mobile phone shops and bookmakers across Kent, purporting to investigate stolen iPhones and fake bank notes, and was reported to the police when a business manager became suspicious of the name. At his trial he claimed he was the victim of a vicious gang who made him pose as an Inspector Lestrade, but was the judge declared him the most "unconvincing witness he had ever heard, with crocodile tears, a self-pitying confidence trickster."

18195. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" is running at the Milwaukee Repertory Theater in Milwaukee, Wis., through Dec. 17 <www.milwaukeeep.com>. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is running at the Ross Valley Players in Ross, Calif., through Dec. 10; their web-site's at <www.rossvalleyplayers.com>. It's also due at the Love Street Playhouse in Woodland, Wash., Dec. 1-17 <www.lovestreetplayhouse.com>. Also at the Glendale Center Theatre in Glendale, Calif., Oct. 11-Nov. 17, 2018 <www.glendalecentertheatre.com>.
18196. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is to be performed at the Jermyn Street Theatre in London, Dec. 6 through Jan. 13 <www.jermynstreettheatre.co.uk>.
18197. Admirers of Charles Dickens know that his last novel THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD was left unfinished when Dickens died in 1870, and that a minor industry sprang up as people offered their solutions to the mystery. One of those people was T. P. James of Brattleboro, Vt., author of PART SECOND OF THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD BY THE SPIRIT-PEN OF CHARLES DICKENS THROUGH A MEDIUM, published in 1873. The Rutland Herald had a long story about James on Nov. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/yalfya95>, noting that Conan Doyle, in the December 1927 issue of The Bookman, discussed the book and concluded that it read like "Dickens gone flat." But there's bit more to the story, not reported in the Rutland Herald: when Conan Doyle reprinted the article in THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN in 1930, he added an account of his later conversation with Dickens about the book. Conan Doyle asked Dickens, "was that American who finished EDWIN DROOD inspired?" And Dickens answered, "Not by me." The conversation, needless to say, was through a medium, at a sitting with Florizel von Reuter and his mother; Dickens had more to say about the book, of course, and THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN is well worth pursuing (Conan Doyle also discusses Harry Houdini, and ghosts, and much more); the full text is not available on-line, but reprints are available at reasonable prices at eBay and Amazon and elsewhere.

18199. There's still time to plan for (at least some of) the Sherlockian birthday festivities in New York, but: alas, the reception at the Yale Club on Saturday is sold out, so: no additional reservations are available, by mail or e-mail or at the door. Go to www.bakerstreetjournal.com/bsiweekend.html for information on other events. Scott Monty has an excellent web-site at <www.bsiweekend.com>, and weekend tips at <www.ihose.co/bsi2017tips>.
18200. Congratulations to Helen Dorey, who was included in the Queen's New Year's honours list; Helen was appointed MBE (Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for her services to national heritage, and will receive her award at Buckingham Palace on Feb. 8.
18201. The conference of The Reichenbach Irregulars ("Reichenbach and Beyond: The Final Problem Revisited") held in Switzerland last year was followed by an excursion to Florence (since that's where Holmes traveled after the battle at the Reichenbach), and you can read colorful accounts of what went on at <www.221b.ch/Past_Events_Beyond_e.html>. And there will be another chance to enjoy a Sherlockian visit to Switzerland: another conference is planned for spring/early summer 2019 in the Bernese Oberland, celebrating the society's 30th anniversary, followed by an excursion to the Splügen Pass (where Baron von Gruner murdered his wife).

18202. The Sherlock Holmes Collection of Daniel Posnansky went to auction on Dec. 19 at Profiles in History, and the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog has a delightful podcast by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder about Dan and his collection <www.tinyurl.com/yba35wfs>. The fully-illustrated auction catalog is available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y9gtlr3u>. There were some real treasures, as well as some great bargains, at the auction, and Sherlockian collectors bidding on the floor and by phone and Internet.
18204. CBS has not announced a date for the start of the sixth season of "Elementary" (likely early next year), but the network has commissioned eight more episodes, bringing the count to 21 (previous seasons had 24 episodes). According to the Hollywood Reporter <www.tinyurl.com/ycpl43eq>, "Elementary" is CBS' lowest-performing returning scripted series, averaging a 1.2 rating among adults 18-49, and 7.7 million viewers last season; lucrative syndication and international appeal have kept the series in production.
18205. The Stepping Stones School has issued "An Invitation to Undershaw" for anyone who wants to attend their celebration of Arthur Conan Doyle, whose former home now is part of the school. "Enjoy a tour of Undershaw," they suggest, "visit our exhibition at the local museum, enjoy a round of golf on the course he played, hear from experts about his life, retrace his local walks, and enjoy a performance of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'." Their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/ya2h67zb>; details will be available soon.

18206. An interesting Conan Doyle letter went to auction on Dec. 8, at Lawrences Auctioneers in Britain <www.tinyurl.com/yc9xvnsx>; it is well worth your attention: written to Miss Ruby Paulson in 1893, it offers a splendid demonstration of his sense of humor, as well as a hint at what the readers of The Strand Magazine would discover in the December issue. Estimated at £700-£900, the letter sold for £7,400 (not including the buyer's premium and value-added tax); you can read Scott Monty's discussion of the letter at <www.tinyurl.com/ycbzl9c>.
18207. One of the added features on the Blu-ray version of "The Lost World" (1925) is images of the sheet music that accompanied the film (with words by Harry B. Smith and music by Rudolf Friml); Flicker Alley kindly has made images available <www.tinyurl.com/y9ha79mt>, and happily will sell you the Blu-ray for $34.95 <www.tinyurl.com/ycy4wd5s>.
18208. Robert A. Moss ("The Case of Fairdale Hobbs") died on Nov. 27. Bob was a professor of chemistry at Rutgers University, and wrote several books and more than 400 scientific articles, including a discussion of Holmes' knowledge of chemistry. He also was a member of The Scandalous Bohemians and The Red-Headed League of Jersey, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1980.
18209. Howard Ostrom reports an imaginative and attractive "interactive annotated" Russian edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES from Labyrinth; there is a nice video about the book at <www.tinyurl.com/y8uhzyzb>.
18210. "The most beautiful diamond in the world" was sold at auction at Christie's in November (October 17 #3), for CHF 33,500,000 (including the buyer's premium) [that's about $34,194,141]; not bad for a 163.41-carat diamond. The "Grand Mazarin" light-pink 19.07-carat brilliant-cut diamond sold for a mere CHF 14,375,000 [that's about $14,671,362].
18211. Daedalus Books offers serious discounts, such as the miniature replica of HOW WATSON LEARNED THE TRICK (September 14 #3), published at $25.00 and now discounted to $3.98 <www.tinyurl.com/ycroq3sf>; the story was handwritten by Conan Doyle in 1922 in the miniature book now found in the Queen's Dolls' House Library at Windsor Castle.
18212. Reported: Hans Zimmer has a new album "Live in Prague" (available in DVD/ Blu-ray/2CD/4LP formats) recorded during this year's world-wide tour with a band, orchestra, and choir; there are 15 tracks from his film scores, one of them "Discombobulate" from "Sherlock Holmes" (the 2009 Robert Downey Jr. film).
18213. "Asian-American Actresses Describe Struggle of Constantly Being Typecast as Sherlock Holmes" is the title of an amusing video spotted by Jennie Paton; it was posted by The Onion to YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y854f79n>.
18214. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star, in Dallas, is preparing to celebrate its 50th anniversary, and members of the society have created A GRIMM HOLMES, an anthology of imaginative fairy-tale pastiches; it's a 265-page e-book, nicely available without charge at <www.tinyurl.com/y9oqdroc>, offering 11 pastiches and the fairy tales on which they're based.

18215. Donald B. Izban's SELECTED RHYMING CANONICAL TOASTS presents a nice tour of the alphabet, with 49 poetic toasts, all inspired by the Canon or by eminent Sherlockians. The 81-page book was illustrated by Edward Letwekno and published this year by George A. Vanderburgh; $16.00 postpaid, and you can ask George <gav@markdalecable.com> for information on how you can order and pay for it.
18216. Tania Henzell has designed a new Sherlock Holmes Tartan that's available in a wide variety of clothing and other merchandise from Tattimole in Edinburgh <www.tinyurl.com/ybu9xx9c>. She's the step-great-great-granddaughter of Arthur Conan Doyle (and the great-granddaughter of Dame Jean's husband Lord Geoffrey Bromet).
18217. The October/November issue of the electronic journal Ripperologist offers detailed reviews of Sinclair McKay's THE MILE END MURDER: THE CASE THAT CONAN DOYLE COULDN'T SOLVE and Christopher Sandford's THE MAN WHO WOULD BE SHERLOCK: THE REAL LIFE ADVENTURES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, and much more about Jack the Ripper; you should contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editor@yahooc.co.uk> for information on how you can subscribe.
18219. Jack Goldstein and Jimmy Russell's 101 AMAZING FACTS ABOUT SHERLOCK HOLMES (Andrew UK, 2013) is available as a Kindle e-book, and as an audiobook, at Amazon and elsewhere. And Jack Goldstein and Isabella Reese's 101 AMAZING FACTS ABOUT ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (2014), available as a Kindle e-book. Both from Andrews UK, and while they may not be of real interest for knowledgeable fans, they could be fun for beginners. Amazon's "look inside" feature gives you a chance to sample these and many other books.

18221. Collectors of Sherlockian games may have "Cluedo? The Great Detective Game" (1949), which had a caricature of Holmes and a bloodhound on the cover but was otherwise non-Sherlockian. There's now a new edition of the board game tied to the BBC's "Sherlock" series, available in the U.S. and the U.K. (at about $50.00 and up), and there appear to be two variants, with or without the "U" on the cover in red.
18222. Robert Serman, the president of the Haslemere Society, has retired after 21 years of service to the society; founded as the Haslemere Commons and Footpath Preservation Society in 1884, the society's present goal is to "protect and enhance" the town, and it was involved in the campaign to restore Undershaw as the Stepping Stones School.

18223. John Niemiński's THE HOUNDS OF THE BASKERVILLE (SIC): A HISTORY OF CHICAGO'S SENIOR SHERLOCKIAN SCION SOCIETY 1943-1983 offered a delightful look at what the world of scion societies was like in the early days, and at how much fun the early Sherlockians had. Donald J. Terras has expanded the history and brought it up to date in a second edition; the 130-page book's available ($40.00 postpaid) from Don (2535 Sheridan Road, Evanston, IL 60201).
18225. There were, in olden times, all sorts of Sherlockian tobaccos and smoking accessories, for the delight of the many Sherlockians who smoked; there are far fewer Sherlockians who smoke now, but it's likely that there are some who vape, and while it seems to have taken a while, there now is a Sherlock Ohms e-liquid that comes in three flavors (Bohemian Scandal, Yellow Face, and Noble Bachelor) available from a company in England that claims it is "serious about juice" <www.sherlockohms.biz>. You can find a number of reviews at YouTube, including this one <www.tinyurl.com/yanfgvtb>.
18226. The modern Strand Magazine is an interesting successor to the original, and has issued a colorful calendar for 2018 <www.tinyurl.com/y9md42sp>. I've seen only one other Sherlockian calendar for 2018: Sherlock (tied in to the BBC series), available at Amazon and elsewhere.
18228. Anthony Harvey died on Nov. 23. He was a highly regarded director, winning a Directors Guild of America award for "The Lion in Winter" (1968); he also directed the George C. Scott film "They Might Be Giants" (1971). A place to stay when you're in or near Highland, Ill.: The Tibbett's House <www.thetibbetthouse.com>, the "bed, breakfast, and books" establishment that boasts a 221B Baker Street room; there was an article about the establishment, and its owners, in the RiverBender <www.tinyurl.com/y76d8g4h> on Dec. 11.
18229. Norman Wilkinson, an artist and a patient of Arthur Conan Doyle when he was in practice in Southsea, was recommended by Conan Doyle to Jerome K. Jerome (the editor of the Idler and To-Day: A Weekly Magazine) and produced illustrations for those magazines and for the Illustrated London News, going on to become a celebrated maritime painter. James Taylor's DAZZLE: DISGUISE AND DISRUPTION IN WAR AND ART (Annapolis: Naval Institute Press, 2016; 128 pp., $36.00) is the colorfully illustrated story of Wilkinson's invention of a camouflage scheme for ships during World War One that was intended to confuse the submarine officers who needed to know a target's location and course before firing torpedoes; it was an ingenious creation, echoed today in modern art and clothing.

18230. The BBC reported on Dec. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/yb9vovl8> that the New Forest National Park Authority has rejected a proposal to demolish the Lyndhurst Park Hotel (October 17 #1). The campaign to protect the hotel cited evidence that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle helped design the redevelopment of the building as a hotel in 1912, and NPA planners said the Conan Doyle link "raised its heritage value." The planners also said that there was "no guarantee the development would help cater for local needs." There is a video at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y7asjd8z> that shows the sad condition of the hotel earlier this year.
18232. Reported: discussion of Conan Doyle and the Cottingley Fairy Hoax in Kevin Young's BUNK: THE RISE OF HOAXES, HUMBUG, PLAGIARISTS, PHONIES, POST-FACTS, AND FAKE NEWS (Graywolf, 2017; 560 pp., $30.00); favorably reviewed by Michael Dirda in the Washington Post <www.tinyurl.com/y74renq2>.
18233. Baker Street Burgers has just opened in Rockford, Ill.; the restaurant gets its name from owners Randy and Betsy Baker, and from the address of Sherlock Holmes, and it has a page at Facebook.
18234. Jennie Paton has reported that "Sherlock Gnomes" (due in theaters on Mar. 23) already has action toys available to Burger King; there's a commercial at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yadshjyf>. You can collect Holmes and Watson and four others, and they're also available at eBay.
18235. Reported: Andreas Jacke's MIND GAMES: ÜBER LITERARISCHE, PSYCHOANALYTISCHE UND GENDERTHEORETISCHE SENDEINHALTE BY A. C. DOYLE UND DER BBC-SERIE SHERLOCK (Wiesbaden: Springer, 2017; 228 pp., €24.99. All in German, but there is a video in English in English at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yavc3jhb>.
18236. It's an old question, asked in this newsletter in 1981: what was the first in-flight movie? The answer, noted by Patrick Robertson (MOVIE FACTS AND FEATS, 1980, p. 219), is "The Lost World"; the film was shown during an Imperial Airways flight from London to the Continent in April 1925. There's much more about the event on the Internet now, needless to say; Alexis Barquin has an excellent entry on "The Lost World Above the World" at The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia <www.tinyurl.com/y7loorlb>.
18237. But (as so often is the case) there's more to the story: the first film to be shown in-flight appears to have been "Howdy Chicago!" (screened aloft in 1921 during Chicago's Pageant of Progress); you can read about that at the Smithsonian's Air & Space Magazine web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y7w4yeev>.
18238. Reported: Juli Berwald's SPINELESS: THE SCIENCE OF JELLYFISH AND THE ART OF GROWING A BACKBONE (New York: Riverhead, 2017; 352 pp., $27.00); "a thoroughly delightful and entertaining new book," according to Brian Castner's review at WAMU-FM on Nov. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/yd8dxstc>; you can listen to Ari Shapiro's interview with her at <www.tinyurl.com/y7835763>. The book has a passing mention of "The Lion's Mane" as perhaps the greatest testimony to the celebrity of jellyfish.

18239. Howard Ostrom has reported that Riga (in Latvia) will hold its seventh annual celebration of the birthday of Sherlock Holmes on Jan. 6, with a new mini-museum that honors the two most popular actors who have played Holmes (Vasily Livanov and Benedict Cumberbatch), a costume

- parade, and many other events. There's a page at Facebook [Sherlock holmes birthday riga], a web-site <www.holmes.lv> (in Latvian, Russian, and English), and a City Council press release <www.tinyurl.com/ych86l7x> (in Latvian and Russian); Google Translate can be of assistance. It's not surprising that the city honors Sherlock Holmes: Riga's Jauniela Street doubled for Baker Street in the LivaNovember television series.
18240. There's a persistent (although unconfirmed) story that in 1925, when Conan Doyle traveled to Paris to preside over the International Spiritualist Congress, he also went to Lyon to visit Edmond Locard's forensic laboratory, which included a display of photographs of criminals. Conan Doyle looked at one of them and said "That's Jules, my old chauffeur." And Locard replied that the photograph showed the notorious criminal Jules Bonnot. It is true that Bonnot did work as a chauffeur in London for a few months in 1910, and then returned to France to lead the notorious Bonnot Gang. There is much more about Bonnot in John Merriman's interesting BALLAD OF THE ANARCHIST BANDITS (New York: Nation Books, 2017; 326 pp., $28.00).
18241. Reported: WATSON & HOLMES: DIARIOS DEL 221B, a Spanish board game designed by Jesús Torres Castro for Ludanova and issued in 2015; there's a video (in Spanish) at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yakevzbz>. There appears to be a version in English (WATSON & HOLMES: FROM THE DIARIES OF 221B) from Asmodee in 2016.
18242. "221b in 360" is the title of the impressive photographic tour of the full-scale recreation of the sitting-room in Chuck Kovacik's home in Los Angeles <www.221bbakerstreetla.com>.
18243. The Hollywood Reporter has noted <www.tinyurl.com/yaafnos> that HBO Asia, celebrating its 25th anniversary, has partnered with Hulu Japan to produce "Miss Sherlock" (its first Japanese-language drama); it will be an eight-part one-hour series that will air next April, and there's a trailer online at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y89ljd8p>.
18244. Out of Print <www.outofprintclothing.com> offers a wide variety of literary clothing in various genres, including Sherlock Holmes T-shirts and socks.
18245. The China Daily reported (Dec. 19) on Amazon China's ranking of the best-selling books in China this year: the most popular paid e-books on Kindle were THE THREE-BODY trilogy (by science-fiction writer Liu Cixin), MIRACLES OF THE NAMIYA GENERAL STORE (by Keigo Higashina), and THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES <www.tinyurl.com/y8mdfco9>.
18246. David Marcum's THE PAPERS OF SOLAR PONS (Manchester: Belanger Books, 2017; 249 pp., $29.95) is a welcome collection of new stories that feature Solar Pons (the delightful homage to Sherlock Holmes created by August Derleth). The opening story has an artful premise: Solar Pons and Dr. Parker are in pursuit of a culprit who has stolen the late Dr. Watson's tin box from a vault at Cox & Co., and the collection is a fine tribute to Solar Pons.

18248. John Walton's THE LEGENDARY DETECTIVE: THE PRIVATE EYE IN FACT AND FICTION (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2015; 232 pp., $25.00) focuses much more on fact than fiction, with an interesting examination of the history of the profession, including the Pinkertons and with more attention paid to William J. Burns and his agency. Burns and Pinkerton were bitter rivals, and Burns went on to serve as J. Edgar Hoover's predecessor as Director of the Justice Department's Bureau of Investigation, and then became enmeshed in the Teapot Dome Scandal.
18249. Sherlockians will recall that a Pinkerton agent, James McParland, was the inspiration for Birdy Edwards in "The Valley of Fear" (which is mentioned in Walton's book). Burns visited Conan Doyle at Windlesham in 1913 and was at the pier to welcome Conan Doyle and his family to New York in 1914. It should be noted that the Pinkerton and Burns agencies are now both part of the international company Securitas AB.
18250. New and decorative: Espionage Cosmetics <www.espionagecosmetics.com> offers "nerd makeup" that includes "Baker Street" glow-in-the-dark nail wraps (22 nail wraps and a mini nail file for $11.00).
18251. Sony Pictures has announced Nov. 9, 2018, as the release date for their new film "Holmes & Watson" (the comedy starring Will Ferrell as Holmes and John C. Reilly as Watson); the cast also includes Ralph Fiennes, Rebecca Hall, Hugh Laurie, and Kelly Macdonald. Even farther ahead (and of course quite likely to change) is the release of the live-action film "Detective Pikachu" (starring Ryan Reynolds) on May 10, 2019.
18252. How many actors have played the role of Sherlock Holmes? More than 3,700. That is the current count in Howard Ostrom's "A-Z List of Sherlock Holmes Performers" <www.nphl.co.uk/a-z-index.html>, and of course the count will continue to increase with new productions, and new discoveries of old productions. Howard has compiled many other interesting data-bases, which can be found at <www.nphl.co.uk/original-essays.html>.
18253. The Deutsche-Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft holds a convention in Germany every two years, and next year's SherloCON will be in Saarbrücken on May 11-13 <www.sherlocon.info>.
18255. Howard Ostrom's "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson Tour Spain, or Two Knights-Errant to the Rescue" (discussing the many aspects of Sherlockiana found in Spain), and much more <www.tinyurl.com/yqcjbf7d>.

18258. "'Detective Conan' will be on hiatus for the foreseeable future so that I can recover from illness and rest up," Gosho Aoyama announced this month. The comic features a genius teenage detective who shrinks into a young boy after being forced to ingest an experimental toxin, takes on the alias Conan Edogawa (in tribute to Conan Doyle) and continues to solve mysteries. The comic has been running weekly in a Japanese magazine since 1984 and has been translated into more than two dozen languages (the English version is titled "Case Closed") and has been adapted into an animated series that began in 1996, feature films, video games, and live-action specials.

18259. Theatrics: the British Comedy Company will perform Peter Wear's parody of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the St. Michael and All Angels Church in Chiswick, London, Jan. 5 <www.britishcomedycompany.co.uk>.
18260. Hive and Tall Tales will present "Sherlock--A Play" at the Junction Theatre in Dubai (in the United Arab Emirates), Jan. 18-20 (apparently a new play) <www.thejunctiondubai.com>. If you go to Dubai, you can also pay a visit to the Sherlock Holmes English Pub at the Arabian Courtyard Hotel and Spa <www.sherlockholmespub.net>.
18261. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled at Theatre Baton Rouge in Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 19-Feb. 4 <www.theatrebr.com>. Also at the 710 Theatre in Buffalo, N.Y., May 10-13 <www.sheas.org>; and at the Pride Art Center in Phoenix, Ariz., on May 11-12 <www.mptheatrec.com>; and at the Little Theatre of Walla Walla in Walla Walla, Wash., June 1-17 <www.lttw.org>; and the Bard to Broadway Theatre in Qualicum Beach, B.C., July 3-Aug. 19 <www.b2btheatre.com>; and the Timber Lake Playhouse in Mount Carroll, Ill., July 19-26 <www.timberlakeplayhouse.org>. And the Taproot Theatre in Seattle, Wash., Sept. 12-Oct. 13 <www.taproottheatre.org>.
18262. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" will be performed at the Greater Boston Stage Company in Stoneham, Mass., Apr. 5-22, and their web-site is at <www.greaterbostonstage.org>. And at the Peninsula Players Theater in Fish Creek, Wis., July 4-22 <www.peninsulaplayers.com>, and at the Crede Repertory Theatre in Creede, Colo., July 27-Sept. 15 <www.creederep.org> [it's totally coincidental, but Creede features in the first episode of the new Netflix western series "Godless"].

18263. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 164th birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 10 to Jan. 14. The festivities began with the traditional ASH Wednesday dinner sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at Annie Moore's, and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (followed by the usual lunch at McSorley's).
18264. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker on Thursday evening was Martin Edwards, the award-winning mystery author and commentator on mysteries, and The Babes of Baker Street's "Daintiest Scream on the Moor Charity Ball" featured the unveiling of a "Cake Boss" cake in the shape of a bust of Sherlock Holmes (to be featured on an upcoming episode of the TV series. Friday's William Gillette Luncheon included a performance by the Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street, plus Al Gregory's presentation of the annual January WHIMSEY Award (named in memory of his wife January Stauber), which honors the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year, to M.E. Rich. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
18265. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where Roy Pilot proposed the traditional preprandial first toast to Patricia Izbán as The Woman. The annual-dinner agenda included toasts, rituals, and papers, and Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") presented this year's Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) to Shannon Carlisle ("Beacons of the Future!"), Dean Clark ("Watson's Journal"), Denny Dobry ("A Single Large Airy Sitting-Room"), Jeffrey Hatcher ("The Five Orange Pips"), Maria Fleischhack ("Rache"), Anastasia Klimchynskaya ("The Old Russian Woman"), Rebecca Romney ("That Gap on That Second Shelf"), Candace Lewis ("A Little Art Jargon"), Nick Martorelli ("Seventeen Steps"), and Al Shaw ("Sir Hugo Baskerville"). Mike also made a Two-Shilling Award to John Linsenmeyer.
18266. An enthusiastic crowd attended this year's Gaslight Gala at the Social Bar & Grill, and some of the more fervent (or perhaps hard core) Sherlockians gathered after the dinners at O'Lunney's Irish Pub to honor long-standing traditions such as staying until at least 2:21.
18268. The BSI's afternoon reception at the Yale Club offered entertainment, conversation, wining, and dining, and Susan Bailey was honored as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (a check and an attractive certificate) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal in 2017. And the John H. Watson Fund's raffle prize was (jewelry from "Charles Augustus Milverton") created by Maggie Schpak, and the auction attracted enthusiastic bidders.

18269. The main Saturday-evening event was the annual "Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub (arranged by Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street) and on Sunday morning a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Long Room.
18270. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 11, 2019.
18272. "Far from Baker Street, Ardent Holmes Fans Celebrate His Birthday" was the headline on Corey Kilgannon's story about the birthday festivities in the N.Y. Times on Jan. 15; the story ran on-line a day earlier as "It's Elementary: Sherlockians Take Manhattan" <www.tinyurl.com/yamqwwa3>. Kilgannon, with John McDonough and Malachy McCourt, host "Talk Back--New York, We and Thee Edition" (a two-hour weekly series broadcast by WBAI-FM), and on Jan. 17 they discussed the celebration and interviewed Lyndsay Faye; the program is available on-line at <www.wbai.org/program.php?program=186>, and the 23-minute segment begins at 01:00.
18273. There also is Scott Monty's well-illustrated account of some of the events at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/y9nlqo9n>; remarkable for having been posted, as Scott notes, by someone who missed his first BSI annual dinner since 1995.
18274. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> offers (via e-mail) his 2017 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
18275. TRENCHES: THE WAR SERVICE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, the latest volume in the Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series (2017; 274 pp., $39.95), is edited by Robert Katz and Andrew Solberg, offers a facsimile of the fourteen surviving pages of the manuscript of "His Last Bow", an annotated transcript, interesting commentary on the manuscript, the story, and the world in which Sherlock Holmes lived when he was involved in the case. More information about the book, including the table of contents and one of the essays, can be found at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.

18278. "221b in 360" (an impressive photographic slide-show tour of the full-scale recreation of the sitting-room Chuck Kovacic has created in his home in Los Angeles) <www.221bbakerstreetla.com>, was reported last month, and Alexander Orlov has now noted a truly spectacular 3D interactive tour that's also engineered for those who use virtual reality <www.tinyurl.com/y8hrzt7t>.
18279. The sixth issue of the resurrected Saturday Review of Literature was published this month, edited by George Fletcher, Jon Lellenberg, Don Pollock, and Phil Shreffler, and with articles that include Phillip G. Bergem's discussion of "221B: What and Where?", Peter Calamai's "Conan Doyle's Neologisms: A Debate", and much more. The issue costs $5.00 postpaid from Donald Pollock (521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305).
18280. Paramount has collaborated with Variety: The Children's Charity to create a new pin featuring Sherlock Gnomes for its current Gold Heart Campaign; the pins will be available at movie theaters in return for a $3.00 donation, and there's a list of participating theaters at <www.usvariety.org/gold-hearts>.
18281. Randall Stock has kindly forwarded a report from The Bookseller (Jan. 4) on plans by John Murray to celebrate the publisher's 250th anniversary with a new book DEAR MR. MURRAY: LETTERS TO A GENTLEMEN PUBLISHER, due in October. One of the letters, from Adrian Conan Doyle, discusses challenging Harold Nicolson to a duel for insulting Adrian's father; it is likely that Adrian was angry about Nicolson's review of John Dickson Carr's biography THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE in the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post (Feb. 4, 1949). "It is an irksome task," Nicolson wrote, "to write the biography of a man whose children are loyal and alive. It is not easy to depict with sincerity the career of someone whose fame was wholly out of proportion to his intrinsic merits." Nicolson's review has much more to say about Conan Doyle, and Adrian would not have been pleased by any of it.
18282. The next "Sherlocked USA" convention will be held in Los Angeles on May 25-27; it is organized in association with Hartswood Films (the company that produces the BBC series "Sherlock") <www.sherlockedusa.com>, and many series stars attend the Sherlocked conventions. Tickets cost from $145 (standard) to $2995 (VIP Package).
18283. The Baker Street Journal's Christmas Annual for 2017 was written by Sonia Fetherston and Julie McKuras, who tell grand stories about "Helene Yuhasova: The Poetess Laureate of the Baker Street Irregulars"; the Christmas Annuals are available only as part of subscriptions to the BSJ, but they can be found at eBay. You can also hear an excellent podcast about "Helene Yuhasova: Woman of Mystery" at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/ya5frbbo>, where they share some of those stories.

18284. "Mystery as Pub Named after Sherlock Holmes writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is magically rebranded the 'JK Rowling'" read the headline in the Daily Mail on Jan. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/y77g56cz>. Nicholson Pubs (the owner of the establishment in Edinburgh) declined comment on the change, but the Daily Mail suggested that the renaming was an elaborate stunt for Hogmanay (that's the Scottish celebration of the New Year). The Edinburgh Evening News <www.tinyurl.com/y8xndd77> had more information: the change is merely temporary, and is tied to Message from the Skies, a visual art installation that was designed to showcase streets and buildings that have inspired some of the city's finest authors, and included an app that allowed residents and visitors to explore the city while they read a story written by Val McDermid. The event ended on Jan. 25.
18285. The Unemployed Philosophers Guild <www.philosophersguild.com> continues to offer imaginative Sherlockiana, including an attractive Sherlock Holmes Mug that comes with instructions <www.tinyurl.com/ycmrqspr>.
18286. One of the more imaginative celebrations of the holiday season is "The Bloo Sparkly" (The Blue Carbuncle, as Told by Animated GIF), created by someone nommed "whorl" and posted at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog in 2011 <www.tinyurl.com/ydd2oks3> and again in 2017.
18287. Samantha Wolov notes Elvis Costello's "Dr. Watson, I Presume" (released in 2010 on his album "National Ransom"), which may or may not be Sherlockian; you can sample the song (and read the lyrics) at www.tinyurl.com/y8h9vuy7 and decide for yourselves.
18288. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere," including on the label of Whodunnit? Popcorn (Specially Blended for Mystery Lovers), available from Acorn <www.acornonline.com/XB3412.html> ($14.95 for 30 oz.). "The sound of crunchy popcorn adds to the suspense!" they explain. Acorn also offers a Star Wars Popcorn Maker and Rogue One Darth Vader Lightsaber Handheld Immersion Blenders for fans of that other series.
18289. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes have issued a CD that contains a complete run of The Serpentine Muse from April 1975 through winter 2015; it's indexed and text-searchable, and costs $15.00 postpaid <www.ash-nyc.com>.
18290. Roger Heyworth has designed SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CARD GAME for Gibson and Sons Ltd.; there was a first edition in 1991, a second edition in 2014, and (apparently) a third edition (in a black box) in 2017, available at Amazon in the U.K. and the U.S.
18291. Paul Annett died on Dec. 11. He was writer, producer, and director in film and television; his directing credits include work on series that include "Poldark" (1975-1976) and "EastEnders" (1998-2009), and three of the early stories in Granada's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes": "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Solitary Cyclist" (1984), and "The Copper Beeches" (1985).
18292. When in Dallas: Daniel J. Darrouzet will appear in an "author talk" about his STORIES FROM THE TIN BOX: UNTOLD ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2015) at 6:30 pm on Feb. 8 at the Preston Royal Branch Library in Dallas; directions at <www.tinyurl.com/y88cf6j3>.

18293. More and more Sherlockian societies are taking advantage of digitization to create on-line archives of their newsletters and other publications. The Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark is the latest to do this, and all issues of their "Sherlockiana" from 1956 through 2016 are available at their website <www.sherlockholmesklubben.dk>; there's a link at the top of their opening page.
18294. The February issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine continues a long annual tradition of honoring Sherlock Holmes' birthday, with Sherlockian artwork on the cover, an amusing pastiche by Terence Faherty, a nice homage to Sherlockians by John Morgan Wilson, and reviews by Steve Steinbock of new Sherlockian books.
18295. "Pop star Rita Ora was channeling detective Sherlock Holmes when she wore a bizarre Burberry shorts combo to the BBC Radio 1 Teen Awards in October. The only mystery to solve is why anyone let her leave the house like this." She provided one of the "worst fashion frights" in 2017, according to the Daily Mail (Dec. 29. You can see all of their picks at <www.tinyurl.com/y9t6ep8c>.
18296. The Sherlockian Calendar, maintained by Ron Fish and Sue and Ben Vizoskie, is at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>; it's a helpful list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when and where, and it offers an interesting look at how many society events are being held hither and yon. You should contact Ron at <ronf404@aol.com> to have a meeting or conference listed. The calendar also is available on Twitter as @SianCalendar.

18297. Terence Marsh died on Jan. 9. He began his film career as a draughtsman at Pinewood Studios, and went on to become a highly-regarded art director and production designer who won Oscars as art director on "Dr. Zhivago" (1968) and "Oliver!" (1968); his many credits included his work as production designer on Gene Wilder's "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
18298. Congratulations to Jessie Amaolo on her promotion to curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library; her formal title is services specialist for the collection, and she succeeds Peggy Perdue, who has been promoted to senior department head of the special collections department.
18300. Gasogene has also published 70 YEARS BY GAS LAMP, edited by Mary Ann Bradley, Louise Haskett, and Melanie Hoffman (2018; 245 pp., $21.95); it's the latest (sixth) casebook from The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis, offering a wide variety of writings by its members and guest speakers. And Dan Andriacco's imaginative and well-written pastiche HOUSE OF THE DOOMED (2018; 117 pp., $19.95).

18301. The Long Beach Shakespeare Company continued their annual celebration of Sherlock Holmes' birthday last month offering an Old Time Radio adaptation of "Sherlock Holmes and the Scandal in Bohemia" dramatized by Ken Knight and featuring Joe LoCicero as Holmes; you'll be able to listen to a podcast of the show at <www.lbshakespeare.org/audio.php> in late February.
18302. CBS has announced that the sixth season of "Elementary" (starring Jonny Lee Miller and Lucy Liu) will premiere on Apr. 30; there will be 21 episodes in the season, which thus will run through the summer (some of us remember the long-ago age when series ran from fall through spring, and summer when one watched re-runs). If you want to know what Sherlock Holmes has on his book shelves (in "Elementary"), Gabby Barone has reported a list posted at Goodreads <www.tinyurl.com/ycfb8xur>.
18303. Some important news from the birthday festivities: a print of the 1929 German silent film "Der Hund von Baskerville" (directed by Richard Oswald and with Carlyle Blackwood as Holmes), discovered in Poland and now restored by the San Francisco Silent Film Festival, will have its world premiere at the Festival on June 2 <www.tinyurl.com/y6w6cy4a>. The Festival's blog also is interesting: one of the items there is Kyle Westphal's "The Un-Lost World: A Conversation with Serge Bromberg of Lobster Films" about the latest restoration of "The Lost World" (1925) <www.tinyurl.com/yc7h5kvb>.
18304. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for this year's Edgar awards, and they include Mattias Boström's FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK: THE STORY OF THE MEN AND WOMEN WHO CREATED AN ICON, and Michael Sims' ARTHUR AND SHERLOCK: CONAN DOYLE AND THE CREATION OF HOLMES (best critical/biographical), and Brad Ricca's MRS. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRUE STORY OF NEW YORK'S GREATEST FEMALE DETECTIVE AND THE 1917 MISSING GIRL CASE THAT CAPTIVATED A NATION (best fact crime) [not really Sherlockian]; the winners will be announced at the MWA Gala Banquet in New York on Apr. 26.
18305. Canterbury Classics offers a long series of "Word Cloud Classics" reprints in attractive "flexibound" bindings, one of the titles being THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2012; $14.99), available at Amazon and elsewhere.
18306. Ken Ludwig, the author of the Sherlockian plays "Postmortem", "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" and "Baskerville: Sherlock Holmes Mystery" has a new (and non-Sherlockian) play: a dramatization of "Murder on the Orient Express". "It's glamorous, it's romantic, and just the title itself is magic," he has explained, adding that "It is a bigger play than I usually write for the stage, but I've been able to cut the number of suspects down." The play had its premiere at the McCarter Theatre in Princeton, N.J., last year, and is due at the Hartford Stage in Hartford, Conn., in February; the play has a web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/y9dz2kw9>, and one can be sure it will be produced elsewhere.
18307. Nick Utechin still is pursuing his search for the plates that were used to produce Helan Halbach's 1974 edition of Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" (September 13 #5) (and in the 2016 Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal) and would greatly appreciate hearing from anyone who has not already been in contact with him <highfieldfarmhouse@gmail.com>.

18308. DEATH AT THE DIOGENES CLUB, by Anna Elliott and Charles Veley (Wilton Press, 2017; 355 pp., $13.98), the sixth title in their "Sherlock Holmes and Lucy James" series, has Lucy (Sherlock Holmes' daughter) and Holmes in pursuit of a vicious killer in a novel that offers both thrills and romance, together with some interesting characters. The series has a web-site at <www.sherlockandlucy.com>.
18309. Material from the Daniel Posnansky Collection already is turning up at eBay from people who bought large lots at the auction, among them Lewis Durbin, whose shop is at lewidurbi0.
18310. THE HISTORY OF THE LIMITED EDITIONS CLUB, by Carol Porter Grossman (Newcastle: Oak Knoll Press, 2017; 268 pp., $125.00), is a splendid book, printed and bound in the high-quality tradition of the Club, offering the story of George Macy, and the many delightful books the Club produced for its subscribers; there are three pages about the Club's spectacular edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES and how much work was involved earning George Macy a well-deserved Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars. There's more information about the book, with colorful images, at <www.oakknoll.com>.
18311. BAKER STREET ELEMENTARY: A SCANDAL IN CASSEROLE is the latest in the series of amusing comic books created by Joe Fay, Steve Mason, and Rusty Mason; it is available (along with their BAKER STREET ELEMENTARY comic strips) at The Crew of the Barque Lone Star's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/j29mukf>.
18312. Peter Wyngarde died on Jan. 15. He began his acting career with the Nottingham Repertory Company, and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television; he played Baron Gruner with Peter Cushing in "The Illustrious Client" (1965), and Langdale Pike with Jeremy Brett in Granada's "The Three Gables" (1984). According to the obituary in the Guardian (Jan. 23) <www.tinyurl.com/yctcmdfw>, he had enough clout in 1965 that the producers of "The Illustrious Client" acceded to his agent's stipulation that on foreign prints he was credited alongside the leads in the opening titles, and was paid considerably more than Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock.
18313. David Harnois continues to add to his dramatized readings of the Canon, and he now offers "The Blue Carbuncle" and six other stories at his "I Am Lost Without My Boswell" web-site <www.iamlostwithoutmyboswell.com>, where you can listen to or download the readings, which are nicely done.

18314. HAMPSHIRE THROUGH WRITERS' EYES (London: Eland, 2017; 373 pp., £12.99) is edited by Alastair Langlands and offers an interesting anthology of commentary about the county by writers who range from Austen to Wodehouse; Conan Doyle is included, of course: he lived in Southsea when he created Sherlock Holmes, and wrote about the county in the Canon, and in THE WHITE COMPANY and MICAH CLARKE. Eland has been described as offering "guidebooks for the enquiring mind," and their web-site <www.travelbooks.co.uk> shows how wide their coverage of the world is.
18315. The Beacon Society offers annual January Stauber grants of up to $500 to fund development of programs that introduce young people to Sherlock Holmes in the U.S. and Canada; the deadline for grant applications is May 1, and details are available at the society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/h7acxds>.

18316. Fraser McAlpine has noted at Anglophenia some Sherlockian allusions in the "Doctor Who" episode "The Angels Take Manhattan" (broadcast on BBC One on Sept. 29, 2012): the first chapter in Melody Malone's pulp novel is titled "The Dying Detective", and the TARDIS lands in China in the year 221 BC; it is not a surprise that the script was written by Steven Moffat.
18317. "Sherlock Holmes is retired and in a foul mood. It's 1922, and Dr. Watson's granddaughter, Dot, has been trying to edit the old detective's long-awaited memoirs." That's the premise of the latest play by Craig Sodaro, just published by the Pioneer Drama Service <www.pioneerdrama.com> ($7.00). Pioneer specializes in plays for schools and other organizations.
18318. The International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition is heading back to the United States, and will open at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., on Nov. 3, running through May 27, 2019; their web-site's at <www.isc.org>, and while there's nothing about the exhibition up yet, stay tuned.
18319. Will Thomas' ANATOMY OF EVIL (New York: Minotaur, 2015; 336 pp., $25.99) is the seventh in his series that features private enquiry agent Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewelyn, who in this novel have been enlisted to aid Scotland Yard in pursuit of Jack the Ripper, and are (eventually) successful at the end of a story that's told well and with imagination.
18320. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is running at the Barnstable Comedy Club in Barnstable, Mass., through Feb. 4 <www.barnstablecomedyclub.org>.
18321. Dennis Rosa's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" is on at the Providence Playhouse in Scranton, Pa., through Feb. 4; web-site at <www.actorscircle.com>.
18323. R. Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the American Problem" is due at the Whidby Island Center for the Arts in Langley, Wash., Feb. 9-24; their web-site's at <www.wicaonline.org>.
18324. Max Gee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Speckled Band" is due at the Genesian Theatre in Sydney, N.S.W., Apr. 7-May 12 <www.genesiantheatre.com.au>.
18325. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" has been scheduled at the Silver Spring Stage in Silver Spring, Md., on Apr. 13-May 5 <www.sstage.org>.

18326. Malice Domestic has announced the nominees for this year's Agatha awards, which include Mattias Boström's FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK (best nonfiction). The winners will be announced at Malice in Bethesda on Apr. 29.
18327. Sorry about that: in the last issue (January 18 #7) I noted that material from the Daniel Posnansky Collection already is turning up at eBay from people who bought large lots at the auction, among them Lewis Durbin, whose shop actually is at lewidurbi0.
18328. "Worzel Gummidge" was a well-received British children's television series broadcast by ITV (1979-1981) that was continued in New Zealand as "Worzel Gummidge Down Under" (1987-1989). The series starred Jon Pertwee, and Howard Ostrom has discovered "Elementary My Dear Worthy" from the second series at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ybrkb378>. It's interesting to see Jon Pertwee as someone other than Doctor Who; Una Stubbs starred in the series as Aunt Sally, but doesn't appear in the Sherlockian episode.
18329. Chris Redmond created <www.sherlockian.net> in 1994, and it's now managed by Michigan State University's WIDE Research Center; the web-site has been revised, and it's well worth visiting and exploring as a valuable resource for the ever-growing population of Internet-savvy Sherlockians.
18330. J. M. W. Turner's iconic 1804 painting of the Reichenbach Falls seen twice in the BBC's "Sherlock" television series, at the end of the second season, and in the recent Christmas special, can be viewed on-line in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/hptv8q5>. If you like to know more about Turner and his work, Christie's has two excellent articles (one with an instructive video) on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ydgxenh4> and <www.tinyurl.com/y7syojua>.
18331. Mike Vagnetti has reported a new stamp issued by the Solomon Islands, in a set of four stamps that honor the 300th anniversary of the Grand Lodge of England (founded in 1717, it was the first Masonic Grand Lodge); the stamp shows both Conan Doyle and Holmes, and the others stamps show Ernest Shackleton, Winston Churchill, and Rudyard Kipling. Mike also reports that the American Topical Association has a checklist of Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes stamps, available only to members, with 63 entries. You can see the Solomon Island stamps in full color at Steve Trussel's excellent web-site "The Philatelic Sherlock Holmes" <www.trussel.com/detfic/sholmes.htm>. And Mike <mjvagnetti@gmail.com> would be happy to hear from anyone who has Sherlockian items (stamps and poster stamps) to offer.
18332. BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH READS SHERLOCK HOLMES' REDISCOVERED RAILWAY MYSTERIES is a two-CD set from BBC Worldwide (2015, £11.78), offering four pastiches written by John Taylor.
18333. "Yuukoku no Moriarty" ["Moriarty the Patriot"] is a Japanese manga written by Ryounosuke Takeuchi and drawn by Hikaru Mihoshi, reimagining the Canon "with Moriarty as the protagonist and exploring his motivation in becoming the greatest criminal Britain has ever seen." It has not been published as a book in English, but 16 episodes are available in English on-line at the Manga Rock web-site <www.mangarock.com/manga/mrs/serie-100056011>.

18334. The Bookseller has reported that "Sherlock Holmes: The Definitive Collection" (read by Stephen Fry) was Audible's best selling title in 2017; the set spent four month at the top of the Audible chart and was in the top 20 for 11 months since it was released in February 2016. If you don't have it yet, it is available at <www.audible.com> for $85.26 (or free as a join-now premium).
18335. In the last issue of this newsletter (January 18 #4) I wrote about someone who was nommed "whorl" (based on a belief that aliases used on the Internet are "noms" as in "noms de plume"). A query from a reader (actually, my sharpeyed proof-reader) led to some on-line research that revealed that my belief was unfounded, and then to a query to people who are far more Internet-savvy. Thanks to Lyndsay Faye, I can now report that an Internet alias is called a "pseud" (as in "pseudonym").

18336. Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog offers two interesting items: one of them "Holmes & Watson 1916-2016" (an imaginative montage of film and television clips set to the song 'Something Good (Will Come from That)') <www.tinyurl.com/y8uyqgmng> and the other an interview with Ross Davies about "Boxes from Royalty" <www.tinyurl.com/y9y52p94>.
18337. I've reported before (August 16 #2) on APOPO <www.apopo.org>, a company that trains giant African pouched rats to detect unexploded landmines in countries in Africa and Asia (the rats don't weigh enough to set off the mines, which can then be disarmed); the rats can also be trained to detect tuberculosis in mucous samples, and now they are in pursuit of smugglers who are shipping endangered pangolins from Africa to Asia, as noted in a recent report in the Washington Post <www.tinyurl.com/y724dwol>. Needless to say, APOPO welcomes donations from people who want to adopt giant rats.
18338. Has anyone seen the new play "The Play That Goes Wrong" (2012) in London or New York or elsewhere? The Tampa Bay Observer, reporting that the play is due there in October, describes it as "a carefully chaotic comedy that has tickled audiences with farcical disaster visited upon the erstwhile production of a Sherlock Holmes-style mystery."
18339. Mort Walker died on Jan. 27. A legendary comic strip writer, he was best known for creating "Beetle Bailey" in 1950 and "Hi and Lois" in 1954, and drew "Beetle Bailey" for 68 years, making him the longest-running artist in comic-strip history. His colorful web-site is at <www.mortwalker.com>, and this strip was published on Jan. 7, 2008:

18341. Leslie Katz continues to make his Sherlockian scholarship available at the Social Science Research Network; his latest article is "Each Picture Told a Story: Photography in the Sherlock Holmes Adventures" and you can read or download it (and his other articles) at <www.ssrn.com/author=1164057>.
18342. The Holmes Financial Solutions web-site features a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes in the logo, and the company was in the news recently when it was fined £300,000 by the British government for making 8.8 million nuisance robo-calls in 2015 and 2016 <www.tinyurl.com/y8c4o35v>. The company's solicitors are at work on an appeal. If you're bothered by robo-calls in the U.S., there is a solution: <www.nomorobo.com>. The company won a challenge set by the Federal Trade Commission, and its service is available without charge for landlines (if your service provider's compatible) and for a modest monthly fee for cell phones. The N.Y. Times ran an interesting article last year <www.tinyurl.com/m4v8mkv> on how you can reduce the number of robo-calls you receive.
18343. Les Klinger has an interesting web-site, which offers a helpful list of errata in all three volumes of THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, with a link at the end that allows you to download a PDF that shows which errata have been corrected in various editions <www.tinyurl.com/ycztyf48>.
18344. I've long described this newsletter as six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean, and anyone who wants to run a word-search on two large files with all of the text since March 1985 can now do just that, thanks to Steve Mason, who updates the compilation and makes it available for download from the Crew of the Barque Lone Star's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ybxh2y2m>.
18345. John Mahoney died on Feb. 4. He had a long acting career on stage, screen, and television, and was best known as Frasier Crane's father Martin Crane on the NBC-TV sitcom "Frasier"; he wore Sherlockian costume in the "Halloween" episode broadcast in 1993.
18346. There have been occasional reviews of the new animated film "Batman: Gotham by Gaslight" that have mentioned its Sherlockian echoes. According to Den of Geek! <www.tinyurl.com/ydeuvmgs>, there is good reason: Jim Krieg, who adapted the film, said in an interview that he grew up as a Holmes fan and "didn't want to leave any Sherlockian stone unturned," citing "A Study in Terror" (1965) as a favorite Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper film, and executive producer Bruce Timm said that he watched "Gilligan's Island" all the time as a kid, and recalled the episode that had the Professor as Sherlock Holmes and the Skipper as Dr. Watson. If you've not seen that episode of "Gilligan's Island" series it's "Up at Bat" (1966), and there's a Sherlockian clip at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y8lp7qkc>, from the dream sequence that features Inspector Sherlock and Colonel Watney).

18347. Janet Hutchings, the editor of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, presides over a blog ("Something Is Going to Happen") that offers interesting contributions about "suspense, short stories, and the mystery-fiction scene," such as an interesting post last year on "The Last of the Kingdom of Romance: 90 Years Since the Publication of The Case-Book of Sherlock Holmes" by R. T. Raichev <www.tinyurl.com/y9qoe374> and a "Report from Baker Street" by Steve Steinbock <www.tinyurl.com/y9bppzeh> about the 2016 annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars.
18348. John Morris died on Jan. 25. He began his musical career as a concert pianist ("I didn't like practicing," he once admitted) and went on to composing and arranging for Broadway shows, and then for films, and his credits included the orchestration for "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
18349. "Rugger, Romance, and Sherlock Holmes!" is the title of an illustrated talk delivered by Roger Johnson this month during the Portsmouth Bookfest last month; if you're wondering how those three topics were combined in the same talk, it was subtitled "You Should Go to Blackheath First" and Roger suggests that "the importance of Blackheath in the life of Arthur Conan Doyle and in the career of Sherlock Holmes should not be overlooked."
18350. Lakin & Marley Rare Books in Mill Valley, Calif., are offering the original Universal Studios script archives for the Rathbone/Bruce series, most heavily annotated; go to <www.tinyurl.com/y86rhapq> for detailed descriptions and commentary.
18351. Further to the item (December 17 #3) on Tania Henzell's new Sherlock Holmes Tartan: the tartan will have an official launch party at the Physicians Hall in Edinburgh on Mar. 22; details at <www.tinyurl.com/yawvtmxr>. Karen Ellery notes that you can inspect the official registration for the tartan at <www.tinyurl.com/y7twgdsq>. Lee Crow reports that there is an older Holmes tartan (from 1830); you can search the Register's web-site to find tartans for Watson and Moriarty and (likely) other Canonical characters.
18352. For anyone who misses "Sherlock": "The Sherlock You Didn't See: Scenes—and Entire Episodes--That Never Aired" was the headline on a story at Digital Spy <www.tinyurl.com/yd99rmmh>.

18353. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library newsletter) celebrates the 150th anniversary of Canada as a nation, and offers Donny Zaldin's article "Arthur Conan Doyle and Canada: 1914 and One Hundred Years Hence" along with news from and about the Library and the Collection. Copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>, and you can join the Friends at <www.acdfriends.org>.
18354. "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound" was a delightful Japanese animated television series broadcast in 1984-1985, with 26 episodes (the first six directed by Hayao Miyazaki). Holmes is a red fox, Watson a Scottish terrier, and Moriarty a gray wolf, and it's nice indeed that all 26 episodes now are available at YouTube; search for [sherlock hound].

18355. George MacDonald Fraser noted in his introduction to a new edition of THE WHITE COMPANY and SIR NIGEL (February 00 #7) that John Ford was said to have had THE WHITE COMPANY in his sights at the end of his career, with John Wayne and Alec Guinness in mind. According to Wikipedia, the two novels were among Wayne's favorite books.
18357. It should be noted that the book is only one of the many items available at <www.rossdavies.org>; click on "Maps and misc." and "Sherlockian toasts" to find links to interesting Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) material. You can also click on "Green Bag" and then on "Almanac & Reader" to be able to read the 2012 edition (which honored Rex Stout and Nero Wolfe); the 2015, 2016, and 2017 editions were thoroughly Sherlockian and Doylean.
18358. DOUBLE TROUBLE IN BUGLAND, by William Kotzwinkle (Boston: David R. Govine, 2016; 244 pp., $14.95) is a colorful sequel to his TROUBLE IN BUGLAND (June 83 #2), again illustrated by Joe Servello, and offering further adventures of Inspector Mantis and his companion Dr. Hopper.
18359. Holmes and Watson appear to be taking over the MCU . . . that's the Marvel Cinematic Universe, which was launched with "Iron Man" in 2008 with Robert Downey Jr. as Tony Stark, and included "Doctor Strange" in 2016 with Benedict Cumberbatch as Stephen Strange, and now there's "Black Panther" with Martin Freeman as Everett K. Ross (kindly reported by Samantha Wolov).
18360. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y76whnjf> has much to offer, including a new web-only column "Stranger Than Fiction" by Dean Jobb; his February column ("We Hear of Sherlock Everywhere") calls attention to four recent Sherlockian and Doylean titles.
18361. Congratulations to Maggie Schpak, who received the 2018 Distinguished Service Award from the Costume Designers Guild. Maggie handcrafts the colorful raffle prizes for the Dr. John H. Watson Fund at each year's birthday festivities in New York, and at her Metal Arts Studio in Los Angeles makes items for major films and television series <www.tinyurl.com/y8m7zwze>; you can see her in the photo gallery at the web-site.
18362. Reported by Howard Ostrom: Ernie Kovacs and Hans Conried in deerstalkers in "Private Eye, Private Eye" (an episode of "The U.S. Steel Hour" broadcast by CBS-TV on Mar. 8, 1961); the spoof of detective stories is included as a bonus disk with the first 1,000 copies of "Ernie Kovacs: Take a Good Look: The Definitive Collection" (available from Shout! Factory for $64.97). One hopes that the episode will be available eventually at YouTube; but in the meantime you can see them with Edie Adams at <www.youtube.com/y842v4cq>.

18363. IN THE SHADOW OF AGATHA CHRISTIE: CLASSIC CRIME FICTION BY FORGOTTEN FEMALE WRITERS: 1850-1917, edited by Leslie S. Klinger (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2018; 356 pp., $26.95) was reviewed in Publishers Weekly as a "stellar" anthology and a "must-have volume for classic crime fans," and includes Carolyn Wells' "The Adventure of the Clothes-Line" (a 1915 burlesque that features Sherlock Holmes as the president of the Society of Infallible Detectives) and Baroness Orczy's "The Regent's Park Murder" (about the baffling murder of a man who had won at cards, published in 1901, two years before "The Empty House").
18364. Paul D. Herbert ("Mr. Leverton, of Pinkerton's") died on Feb. 16. He was excellent high-school history teacher, an energetic and wide-ranging collector, the founder of the Tankerville Club of Cincinnati and its only official secretary, and a delightful Sherlockian who was awarded his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1977 and their Two-Shilling Award in 2004; he also for twenty years was the BSI's Dr. Watson, presiding over the Dr. John H. Watson Fund, which offers financial assistance to Sherlockians who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities in New York.
18365. THE SECRET OF THE COTTINGLEY FAIRIES, by F. R. Maher (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2017; 96 pp., $20.53), offers a speculative explanation for the famous hoax. The author also presides over the annual Legendary Llangollen Faery Festival in Wales <www.northwalesfaeryfestival.com>.
18366. Further to the report (October 17 #4) on the competition set by the Folio Society and House of Illustration for artwork for THE SELECTED ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, there were 450 entries and 24 finalists. Samples of the finalists' imaginative submissions were published in full color at the web-site of the Guardian on Feb. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/ydgobmfz>, and the winners were chosen by a panel of six judges that included Helen Dorey as their Sherlockian expert. The $5,000 commission to illustrate the book and design the binding was won by Max Löffler <www.tinyurl.com/y7r8d93k>.
18367. Bill Crider died on Feb. 18. He was an author, a critic, a columnist, and a reviewer, all in the mystery field; Janet Hutchings, the editor of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, described him as a superfan and a perfect fit for the magazine's Blog Bytes department. His stories included three Sherlockian pastiches, and his web-site <www.billcrider.com> nicely shows how wide his interests were.
18368. "Blossom Detective Holmes" (an animated mini-series that's seeking funding at Kickstarter) features two teen-age girls: Skylar Holmes and Jamie Watson; details (and video) at <www.tinyurl.com/ya46os5a>.
18369. IMAGINATION THEATRE'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by David Marcum (London: MX Publishing, 2017; 388 pp., $34.95), is a collection of 15 scripts from "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (the long-running radio series produced by the late Jim French from 1998 to 2017). The scripts for the pastiches were written by Jim French and other authors, and provide a welcome opportunity for those who enjoy radio drama to see what goes into creating entertaining programs. The MX web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.

18383. "If we could have ordered nature to construct a spot for us, it could not have hit upon anything more perfect," Conan Doyle wrote after visiting the site of Undershaw, and the Stepping Stones School has invited everyone to a celebration of his life and times on May 25-27; you can sit in the study in which he brought Sherlock Holmes back to life, and enjoy a variety of activities. Details are available at <www.tinyurl.com/ya2h67zb>.
18384. Greg Darak has reported a nice discovery in Abel Green's THE SPICE OF VARIETY (published by Henry Holt in 1952); it's an anthology of articles that appeared in Variety, and one of them is drama critic Ashton Steven's "Night Letter Biographies"; he had asked actors to write autobiographies "confined to dimensions of a Western Union night letter, which at that time ran to 50 words before the extras began to count up." The first (with slightly more than 50 words) was written by William Gillette: AT AGE OF 18 COULD READ AND WRITE. AND HAD GRADUATED FROM EVERY CIRCUS THAT CAME TO TOWN. DID NOT RUN AWAY AND GO ON THE STAGE BECAUSE THERE WAS NOTHING TO RUN AWAY FROM. EVERYBODY HELPED ME TO LEAVE - AND THAT HAS BEEN GOING ON EVER SINCE. IT IS NOW 1930 AND I DO NOT FEEL VERY WELL - WILLIAM GILLETTE.
18385. You can see Benedict Cumberbatch perform "I'm a Little Teapot" at the Nerd Reactor web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y7tw34ok>. You can also see his audition for Smaug in "The Hobbit" at <www.tinyurl.com/mftxbvq>, and then how he was filmed as Smaug at <www.tinyurl.com/ydhmyvr8>.
18386. Jim Webb kindly reported on Nick Allen's article in the Daily Telegraph on Mar. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/y98uwjpu> on comments by Vasily Nebenzya, Russia's permanent representative to the United Nations, on the nerve gas poisoning of Sergei and Yulia Skripal in England; Nebenzya compared the intelligence of Sherlock Holmes with that of Inspector Lestrade, and suggested that "we could all benefit from having a Sherlock Holmes with us today," adding that "the collective Inspector Lestrades today are high-level members of the UK government who are coming up with egregious, superficial, and unsupported accusations." This may be the first official mention of Sherlock Holmes at the United Nations, and you can watch Nebenzya's speech (with English subtitles) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=94I54nQnaCl> at [14:38 minutes].
18387. Bakerstreet Coffee, a Sherlock Holmes-themed cafe that will offer a fireplace, bookcases, and cozy furniture, is scheduled to open in mid-April in Livingston, Mont. "I love Sherlock Holmes," co-owner Cassandra Weisgerber told the Livingston Enterprise, "and I obviously love themes."

18389. Rachel McMillan's THE BACHELOR GIRL'S GUIDE TO MURDER (Eugene: Harvest House, 2016; 222 pp., $9.99) is set in Toronto in 1910 and features Merinda Herringford and Jem Watts, two young women who would like to become detectives in the tradition of Holmes and Watson; the series includes two more novels, A LESSON IN LOVE AND MURDER (2016) and THE WHITE FEATHER MURDERS (2017), and there are two e-book novellas and a (free) e-story available at Amazon.
18390. The manuscript of "The Dancing Men" will be up for bids on Apr. 18 at Heritage Auctions in Dallas <www.tinyurl.com/ycreu8gc> (877-437-4824), with an opening bid of $250,000. Randall Stock has an excellent illustrated discussion of the manuscript, including its history, at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/dancing-men-2018.htm>.
18391. "Sherlock Holmes contre Conan Doyle" is the title of a French documentary broadcast by France 5 on Feb. 18; the program included interviews with Roger Johnson, Anthony Horowitz, Vincent Delay, Pierre Bayard, and others, and it's available in English ("Sherlock Holmes Against Conan Doyle") at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yb8gnqkf>.
18392. Peter Miles died on Feb. 26. He began his acting career on stage and went on to perform with the Royal Shakespeare Company, and then moved on to supporting roles in television, including three appearances in "Doctor Who"; he also played Sam Brewer in "Shoscombe Old Place" and Williamson in "The Solitary Cyclist" in Peter Cushing's BBC-1 television series (1968) and Sir William Gull in Brian Clemens' play "Holmes and the Ripper" (1988).

18394. There have been past discussions of actors who have played both Holmes and Watson, and Moriarty, and Conan Doyle, and it turns out that there actors who have played both Holmes and Lestrade; Howard Ostrom has discovered that Peter Bromilow toured the streets of Toronto dressed as Sherlock Holmes to publicize the try-out there of the musical "Baker Street" in 1965 (he also played Lestrade in Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" in Los Angeles in 1984).
18395. Roger Johnson reports that Roger Llewellyn also has played Holmes and Lestrade, and Howard notes that John Colicos has played Holmes, Lestrade, and Moriarty, and that Tim Pigott-Smith has played Holmes, Lestrade, and Watson. Any others to add to the list?
18396. Jeff Falkingham's MURDER IN MINNESOTA! (Murrieta: AuthorCentrix, 2018; 259 pp., $10.99) offers reprints of his earlier SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE COUNTY COURTHOUSE CAPER (2007) and SHERLOCK HOLMES IN SEARCH OF THE SOURCE (2009); Holmes is in Browns Valley in 1886 to solve a series of murders, and in St. Paul in 1896 to solve another mystery (both stories involve a lot of local history); the author's web-site is at <www.cccaper.com>.

March 2018 #3

18397. John Nicholson, who collaborated with Steve Canny to dramatize "The Hound of the Baskervilles" as a three-man comedy for Peepolykus in 2007, went on to parody "Dracula: The Bloody Truth" as a four-man comedy for Le Navet Bete last year; it's not Sherlockian, but there are some interesting (and amusing) trailers available at YouTube. There is a web-site for the play at <www.lenavetbete.com/shows/dracula>.
18398. Lewis Neisner died on Mar. 1. He worked in retail as an officer of the national chain Neisner Bros., and then as a professor retailing and marketing at universities in New York and Maryland, and was the founder of the Sherlockian society Rochester Row in Rochester, N.Y.
18399. The Redbeard Brewing Co. makes "small batches of big beers" and has a craft brewery and taproom in Staunton, Va., where you can imbibe their 221B Baker Brown Ale <www.tinyurl.com/y9xxlym2>.
18402. They're off and running: The Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Race Course in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., is set for Aug. 11. Lou Lewis <llewis@lewisgreer.com> is the contact, if you want to enroll on their mailing list.
18403. Alexander Orlov has noted a Dr. Watson Restaurant in Moscow; the web-site's at <www.drwatson-restaurant.ru> (where they advertise "traditional English cuisine" and "British-loved beers").
18404. Chris Redmond will deliver this year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture on Apr. 21 at the Toronto Reference Library, speaking on "Sherlock Holmes and the Holy Grail" <www.acdfriends.org>; admission is free, and the public is welcome to attend.
18405. Alexa, according to Wikipedia, is an "intelligent personal assistant" developed by Amazon for use in its Amazon Echo. If you have Alexa, you can play "Baker Street Experience" (an interactive audio Sherlock Holmes adventure developed by Schell Games); their web-site www.tinyurl.com/ycoagvm4 includes a link to a review that allows everyone to sample the game.
18406. The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State will hold this year's Christopher Morley Birthday Lunch in Hoboken, N.J., on Apr. 29; more information is available from Terry Hunt <18goldini95@gmail.com>.
18407. The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Centre in Edinburgh, home of the Edinburgh Association of Spiritualists, has interesting events scheduled in August: Ann Treherne will talk about "Arthur Conan Doyle: Spiritualist", Bob Stek about "The Strange Friendship of Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini", and Peter Barratt about his great-grandmother "Alice Hawkins: Suffragette"; details at <www.tinyurl.com/y7owl3dj>. The Centre's an interesting venue for Peter Barratt's lecture, considering Conan Doyle's negative comments about suffragettes.

March 2018 #4

18408. SYFY Wire reported on Mar. 12 <www.tinyurl.com/yc7ekeyj> that Stephen King and Bev Vincent have edited FLIGHT OR FRIGHT (due in September from Cemetery Dance Books); the book's an anthology of flight-based horror stories (including Conan Doyle's "The Horror of the Heights"), and it will be published in three formats: a standard hardcover ($29.95), a slip-cased numbered edition ($85.00), and a leather-bound limited edition signed by King ($1500.00) that's already sold out.
18409. Further to the item (August 17 #6) about plans to film Stephen King's pastiche "The Doctor's Case" in western Canada, the completed film premiered at the College of New Caledonia's "Cinema CNC Film Festival" on Mar. 9. There is an excellent trailer for the film at <www.thedoctorscasemovie.com>.
18410. Karen Kruse Anderson ("Emilia Lucca") died on Mar. 18. Karen was a teenager in Washington, D.C., in 1949, when she found three fellow-enthusiasts and founded The Red Circle in 1950. After moving to California she met and married Poul Anderson and went on to write delightful science-fiction and fantasy, both with her husband and on her own. She was noted as the first person to use the term "filk music" in print (1955), and was the author of the first published "scifaiku" (1962). Karen also wrote a draft version of "Hatty, or St. Simon's Bride (A Filbert and Sullivan Chamber Operetta)" for performance in 1994; the work was completed as "A Filk Opera" and presented by the "Doyle a la Carte Opera Company" in 1995 (with Karen performing as Sherlock Holmes). She received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 2000.
18411. The Christopher Morley Knothole Association reports in the February issue of their newsletter on a workshop reading last year of a new musical comedy "I'll Take It" based on Morley's book PARNASSUS ON WHEELS; book and lyrics by Eli Pasic, music by Henry Krieger, and there was a story about the event in Broadway World Off-Broadway <www.tinyurl.com/ya6v3gw1>.
18412. "Holmes in the Heartland" is the title of the conference planned for Aug. 10-11 by The Parallel Case of St. Louis; details on the gathering will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/yd5elmpj>.
18413. Sherlock Holmes' parents' home is on the market for £950,000. The six-bedroom house, called Trewalter Fawr, is located in the Vale of Glamorgan and was featured in the episode "His Last Vow" in the BBC's "Sherlock" series; details (with images) at <www.tinyurl.com/y9pyk7k5>.
18414. "People love the monster but do not always honor the book," Scott Van Wynsberghe wrote in the National Post on Mar. 9, in a long article about FRANKENSTEIN <www.tinyurl.com/yabl4pb5>, kindly reported by Cliff Goldfarb; one might believe that the quote might apply also to Sherlock Holmes.
18415. A collection of 21 letters from Dorothy L. Sayers to various correspondents is up for bids at RR Auction on Apr. 11; in 1937 she wrote to Walter Klinefelter: "I am afraid I am not really very learned in the higher criticism of Sherlock Holmes, but the man who can, I am sure, give you the information...would be Mr. H. W. Bell...who wrote 'Sherlock Holmes & Dr. Watson,' and who is engaged on an elaborate and careful research into Conan Doyle's sources." <www.tinyurl.com/y99aj72v>.

18416. There may someday be an annotated edition of Conan Doyle's 1896 novel RODNEY STONE about the early days of bare-knuckle boxing, but in the meantime you can read about the real boxer John Jackson, who appears in the novel, at Wikipedia; he is buried at Brompton Cemetery in London, as reported by Alexander Orlov, and the Wikipedia entry has an image of Jackson's elaborate funerary monument.
18417. Brooks Arthur Wachtel's LADY SHERLOCK: CIRCLE OF THE SMILING DEAD (Colorado Springs: WordFire, 2016; 232 pp., $15.99) is set in 1906 and features Lady Natasha Dorrington ("an emancipated and brilliant detective") in a battle with a pagan cult that wants to launch a world-wide war; Mycroft Holmes is involved on behalf of the government, with Sherlock Holmes making a brief appearance.
18418. "You don't know Sherlock Holmes yet: the story begins in Portsmouth" is the title of an exhibition that will open at the Portsmouth City Museum on May 22, offering an exploration of the time Conan Doyle spent in the city and how it shaped Sherlock Holmes.
18419. Further to the item (February 18 #4) on Tania Henzell's new Sherlock Holmes Tartan: according to a story in the Daily Telegraph (Mar. 25), Richard Pooley, director of the Conan Doyle Estate, has said that the Estate is working on getting stars of the upcoming comedy "Holmes and Watson" to wear the tartan on the red carpet when the film opens in November. Pooley has more to say about the tartan at the Estate's web-site <www.conandoyleestate.com> (see "Weaving Family and Holmes Together").
18420. "Family Guy: V Is for Mystery" (broadcast on Fox on Mar. 25) had Stewie and Brian as Holmes and Watson in London in 1896; it's available (for a while) at <www.tinyurl.com/y96md2nc> and <www.tinyurl.com/y7vmc375>.
18422. "Sherlock Gnomes" (the animated sequel to "Gnomeo and Juliet") will delight people who look for easter eggs in films, and it will interesting to see if someone puts up a web-site devoted to them. They're not only Sherlockian (watch for a tip of the hat to Ray Harryhausen), but there are plenty that will please the faithful: to start you off, the shop called Curly Fu's is a substitute for the Lucky Cat shop in the BBC's "Sherlock" series, and Curly Fu is the Chinese nickname for Benedict Cumberbatch's Sherlock Holmes.
18423. An art group calling itself the Philosoraptors has released a video showing the face of Russian president Vladimir Putin being projected onto the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office on Mar. 18 (the day he was re-elected after a landslide victory) with the words "Miss Me?" in an apparent reference to the BBC's "Sherlock" series <www.tinyurl.com/y7h4e5hn>. A Foreign Office spokeswoman denied that the event happened.

18424. Ken Ludwig's comedy "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed at Scripps Ranch Theatre in San Diego, Calif., through Apr. 9 <www.scrippsranchtheatre.org>. The play also is scheduled at the Coaster Theatre Playhouse in Cannon Beach, Ore., June 22 to Sept. 2 <www.coastertheatre.com>.
18425. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" is running at the Maverick Theatre in Fullerton, Calif., through Apr. 22 <www.mavericktheatre.com>.
18426. Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" has been scheduled by the English Speaking Society of the Université Bretagne Sud at the Paquebot in Lorient, France on Apr. 3 <www.tinyurl.com/y9q8xsjt>.
18427. Callum Hale's parody "The Adventure of Isaac Saddlesore and the Witches of Drenn" will be performed at the Hen & Chicks Theatre in London on Apr. 8-9 <www.tinyurl.com/yaodd82b>.
18428. Tim Kelly's adaptation of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Northwest Cabarrus High School in Concord, N.C., Apr. 13-14; web-site at <www.riseandshineplayers.com>.
18429. "No Sh*t Sherlock!" (a program of four one-act plays that will include Tim Kelly's "The Last of Sherlock Holmes") will be performed at the Northminster Community Hall in San Diego, Calif., Apr. 13-21 <www.clairmontactone.org>.
18430. Tommy Kelley's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Crime of the Century" is scheduled at the Central School Project in Bisbee, Ariz., Apr. 20-29; their Facebook page is at <www.tinyurl.com/yavnkag9>.
18431. "A Scandal in Nova Alba" (a new one-act play by Orlando Pearson) is scheduled at the cornerHOUSE Community Arts Centre in Surbiton, London, Apr. 24-28 <www.thech.org>; "a mix of Bard and Baker Street".
18432. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Curtain" (a new play by Simon Reade) will debut at the Theatre Royal in Bath, Apr. 25-May 5, and then go on tour in Britain; the tour schedule is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y9gkkaj9>.
18433. The Baker Street Players will present Beth Barnard's new play "A Study in Sherlock: The Bitter Nemesis" at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., on Apr. 28 and May 5 <www.bakerstreetwest.com>; her "A Study in Sherlock: 'You Sea But You Do Not Observe'" is scheduled for Sept. 8 and 15.
18434. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" will be performed at the Reno Little Theater in Reno, Nev., on May 4-20; web-site at <renolittletheater.org>.
18435. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Stepping Stone School at Undershaw (Conan Doyle's former home) on May 25-26 <www.tinyurl.com/y7e5fpyk>.

18436. The manuscript of "The Dancing Men" offered at Heritage Auctions in Dallas on Apr. 18 (March 18 #2) sold for $312,500 (the opening bid of $250,000 plus the buyer's premium); Randall Stock has provided an excellent illustrated discussion of the manuscript, including its history, at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/dancing-men-2018.htm>. There's also an interesting post about the manuscript, and the Baker Street Irregulars' manuscript-series volume DANCING TO DEATH (January 17 #2), at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/yahwcxj9>. DANCING TO DEATH is still available for purchase at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. And it is a pleasure to report that the manuscript now is part of the collection of Glen A. Miranker.
18437. Further to the item about the pterosaur "Arthurdactylus conan-doylei" and the tetrapod "Irritator challengeri" (described by David M. Martill and his co-authors from the Lower Cretaceous formations of Brazil (February 96 #1), both fossils are included in a database at <www.dinosaurpictures.org>; billed as the world's largest dinosaur database, it also offers a link to an interactive globe of ancient earth that allows you to see how the Earth's surface has changed from the Ediacarian Period (600 million years ago) to the present.

18438. "Moffat and Gatiss Confirm New Sherlock Series" was the headline on James C. O'Leary's post to Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9xtukv> earlier this month; the new series is scheduled to air on CBS-TV in the network's next season.
18439. Further to the item (March 18 #1) on Vasily Nebenzya's speech at the United Nations, the Daily Telegraph has (alas) a pay-wall for archived articles, and YouTube presents moving targets: try <www.tinyurl.com/yaoumnuu>; the Sherlockian segment starts at 14:05 minutes.
18440. It should be noted that in a later speech Nebenzya read from "Alice in Wonderland" ("sentence first and verdict afterwards") in discussing the nerve-gas poisoning of Sergei and Yulia Skirpal in England. Alexander Orlov has noted that Nebenzya's father was deputy chairman of the USSR Committee for Publishing, and chairman of the Council for Children's Literature.
18441. And the saga continues: Karen Peirce, the U.K. ambassador to the U.N., responded to a request from Russia that its scientists be allowed to investigate the poisoning by saying that permitting them to join "an investigation when they are the most likely perpetrators of the crime ... would be like Scotland Yard inviting in Professor Moriarty."
18442. When you're in India: Sherlock's Pub is now open in Chennai [formerly known as Madras, with a video spotted by Jennie Paton <www.tinyurl.com/y97jgwem>.
18443. Jean Upton reports in the latest issue of the District Messenger (the newsletter of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London) that the National Portrait Gallery's portrait of Conan Doyle, by Henry Gates, is on display again (in room 31) and appears to have been cleaned and restored. Current and past issues of the newsletter are archived at <www.tinyurl.com/yd5et39e>.

18444. Laurie R. King's ISLAND OF THE MAD (New York: Bantam, 2018; 306 pp., $28.00) has Mary Russell (and her husband Sherlock Holmes) first in England and then in Venice, in 1925, when Americans (including Elsa Maxwell and Cole Porter) are enjoying themselves, and Mussolini's Black Shirts are on the rise; the mystery's imaginative, the politics compelling, and Venice, as always, is intriguing.

18446. "Dark Places, Wicked Companions, and Strange Experiences" is the title of The Norwegian Explorers' next conference in Minneapolis, scheduled for Aug. 9-11, 2019, at the Graduate Hotel (the new name of the Commons Hotel), and there will be an evening reception on Apr. 8; you can enroll on their mailing list by contacting Julie McKuras <mike9750@aol.com>.
18447. How many of Sherlock Holmes' books have you read? Not the Sherlock Holmes in the Canon, but rather the Sherlock Holmes played by Jonny Lee Miller in "Elementary". Listopia (a feature of Goodreads) has a list of 27 books in Holmes' brownstone, and if you can identify more you're welcome to add to the list <www.tinyurl.com/ycfb8xur>.
18448. Here a Baskerville, there a Baskerville, everywhere a Baskerville: further to the item (October 95 #1) on Crowsley Park House in Henley-on-Thames, owned by the Baskerville family, one of whose members, Sir Henry Baskerville, was High Sheriff of Oxfordshire in 1847: it's one of the many house alleged to have inspired the Sherlock Holmes story, and it has stone gatepost statues of "hell hounds" with spears through their mouths; you can see one of the hounds in a story in the Henley Standard <www.tinyurl.com/y9muagr5>, with mention of the Baskerville Arms, a pub in nearby Lower Shiplake (not to be confused with The Baskerville Arms in Hay-on-Wye, near Clyro in Wales).
18449. Further to the item (March 18 #4) on the Dorothy L. Sayers letter to Walter Klinefelter in which she recommended he contact H. W. Bell for information about the higher criticism of Sherlock Holmes, it was one of 21 letters in the lot at RR Auction that had an opening bid of $300 and sold for $4,500 (plus 22.5% buyer's premium).
18450. A reminder of the days when there were smoking and non-smoking sections in restaurant: a (briefly) Sherlockian commercial in favor of proposition 10 in California, on "The David Letterman Show" on Oct. 24, 1980, spotted by Greg Ruby <www.tinyurl.com/ya9crje8> (at 28:24 minutes).
18451. Andrew Ive has noted an interesting possibility for the origin of Sherlock Holmes' names: Conan Doyle married Louise Hawkins in 1885 in Lonsdale, near St. Mary's Church in Ingleton, where the Rev. Thomas Dod Sherlock had been vicar, and where a nearby area was called the Holmes. The church in Ingleton has launched a campaign to raise money for repairs, and there are plans to have a statue of Sherlock Holmes placed in the grounds once the building work has been completed, and contributions will be most welcome; there is more information at <www.ingleton.co.uk/sherlock_holmes.asp>, and you can reach Andrew Ive at <andyive69@gmail.com>.

18452. The Brigadier Gerard is now shut and empty. That's the pub in York, which was originally a private house, then the Gasworks Social Club, and in 1984 expanded as The Brigadier Gerard; it was named not in honor of the hero of Conan Doyle's stories, but rather for a famous race horse. York Mix reported on Mar. 28, that the pub suddenly closed, with no explanation from the brewery that managed it. racing fans are aware that the horse was named for Conan Doyle's swashbuckling hero, and it is worth noting that there is another pub called The Brigadier Gerard, in Eastleigh.
18453. Pokémon's new Nintendo game "Detective Pikachu" has been released, and the company has kindly made a comic book "Detective Pikachu: Episode 0--Eevee's Case" available as a free Kindle download at <www.amazon.com>.
18454. Adolph Treidler's atmospherically-Sherlockian ink-and-brush painting of a hansom cab and its driver is available from Taraba Illustration Art for $350 (plus $50 domestic shipping); the image size is 8 x 10 in.). Treidler (1886-1961) was well-known for his magazine covers, posters, and illustrations for advertising; first come, first served, and you can contact Fred Taraba by e-mail <fred@tarabaillustrationart.com> to purchase the artwork. Fred advertises a wide variety of attractive original artwork at his web-site, including an illustration by Robert Fawcett for a non-Sherlockian story by Noel Langley (Fawcett also illustrated Sherlockian pastiches written by Arthur Whitaker, and by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr.
18455. "Secret Agent Selection: WW2" is the title of a five-episode weekly television series launched by BBC Two on Apr. 9, about the beginning of the Special Operations Executive, whose members were known as the Baker Street Irregulars (because their original offices in 1940 were in Baker Street); the series may (or may not) air in other countries, eventually.
18456. Further to the report (December 17 #8) that his long-running "Detective Conan" manga series would be on hiatus while he recovered from illness, Gosho Aoyama announced that the comic would return to stores in April. The manga features a genius teenage detective who shrank into a young boy after being forced to ingest an experimental toxin and takes on the alias Conan Edogawa (in tribute to Conan Doyle) and continues to solve mysteries. The series has been translated into more than two dozen languages (the English version is titled "Case Closed") and has been adapted into an animated series, feature films, video games, and live-action specials.
18457. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE VANISHING MAN is a new comic-book series due from Dynamite Entertainment in May, written by Leah Moore and John Reppion, with cover artist John Cassaday and interior artist Julius Ohta. Dan Wickline had a preview at Bleeding Cool on Mar. 29 <www.tinyurl.com/ycmbczxo>.

18458. "We Are The Mighty" describes itself as a "military media brand run by veterans, military family members, and civilians to bring relevant, engaging entertainment to the military community," and they recently posted a video of a taste test of a British field ration from the Second Boer War, something Arthur Conan Doyle might have eaten in South Africa almost 120 years ago <www.tinyurl.com/y745s83c>.

18459. Carol Nelson Douglas reports that Midnight Louis, P.I., who's featured in a 28-book alphabetical mystery series, will return in October in ABSINTHE WITHOUT LEAVE; the book will also have a cameo appearance by Irene Adler (the heroine of an eight-book series about the only woman who outwitted Sherlock Holmes). There is more information about Carol, and her books, at her web-site <www.carolnelsondouglas.com>.
18460. Further to the item (July 15 #2) on "Sherlock Holmes' Fictional Baker Street Home in London Subject to Ownership Mystery" about just who owns the block of property at 215-237 Baker Street, which includes the site of the former Abbey National, where mail addressed to Sherlock Holmes was for many years answered by Holmes' secretary: it's still a mystery, although it seems to be tied to Kazakh oligarch Nurali Aliyev, according to a report at Microsoft's MSN web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y82jxwoe>, kindly noted by Oscar Ross.
18461. BBC Radio 4 has a Friday-night comedy podcast that includes "The News Quiz" (a satiric look at the week's news) and uses a nicely Sherlockian image at its web-site; there have been no reports (so far) of anything Sherlockian on the podcast, but you can listen on-line at www.tinyurl.com/ya9hqmk.
18462. The on-line A.V. Club (which bills itself as "pop culture obsessives writing for the pop culture") has some interesting "Watch This" reviews of older Sherlockian films <www.avclub.com>; search for [sherlock holmes].
18464. Sherlock Holmes "looked in at Mecca" during the Great Hiatus, he told Watson (in "The Empty House"). Undoubtedly Mecca looked much the same then as it did in 1885, when it was photographed by Al-Sayyid Abd Al-Ghaffar; fifteen of his photographs will be offered at Sotheby's in London on May 15, and you can see an article about them at <www.tinyurl.com/y9w2cb4t>.
18465. "The Real Sherlock of Baker Street" was the headline on a Londonist report <www.tinyurl.com/y8oh42yb> on a City of Westminster plaque on York Terrace East, a five minute walk from Baker Street; it honors Dame Sheila Sherlock, a professor of medicine and a world authority on the liver and its diseases (she published hundreds of papers in scientific journals, and in 1951 was made the youngest female Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians). She was appointed a Dame in 1978, and then a Fellow of the Royal Society.
18466. Julian D. Corrington wrote about "Baker Street Weather" in The Saint Detective Magazine (Nov. 1957), but he was best known for his pioneering work in amateur microscopy and for founding the American Society of Amateur Microscopists in 1939. He also wrote about Sherlock Holmes and his use of the microscope in Nature Magazine (Oct. 1953) and in books published by Bausch & Lomb (1934) and McGraw-Hill (1957); Burt Wolder has discovered an interesting article by John Gustav Dally in Modern Microscopy (Aug. 14, 2013) on Corrington, his career, and his microscopes <www.tinyurl.com/ybdgwyho>.

18467. Roger Llewellyn died on Apr. 17. He had a long theatrical career that included appearances as Inspector Lestrade (with Ron Moody as Sherlock Holmes) in Leslie Bricusse's "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988) and Sherlock Holmes in Christopher Martin's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1997). Roger also played Holmes (and many others parts) in David Stuart Davies' one-man shows "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!" (1999) and "Sherlock Holmes: The Death and Life" (2008) in world-wide tours. Excerpts from "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!" are available at YouTube, and audio recordings of both one-man shows from Big Finish <www.bigfinish.com>.
18468. The International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition will be at the Houston Museum of Natural Science through Sept. 30 <www.tinyurl.com/ya7r7rlw>, and then on display at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., Nov. 3 through May 27, 2019 <www.lsc.org>; it's a splendid exhibition, well worth a visit.
18469. Reported: MYCROFT AND SHERLOCK, by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse, is due from Titan Books in October; a sequel to their MYCROFT HOLMES (June 15 #2), it's set in 1872, when the brothers unintentionally investigating the same mystery as they pursue the reason behind the growing opium trade. There's a third book in the series scheduled for 2019.
18470. Mystery Scene, edited by Kate Stine <www.mysteryscenemag.com>, frequently offers Sherlockian content: issue 153 (winter 2018) has Michael Mallory's report on "The Remarkable Lives of Anthony Boucher" (he was an avid Sherlockian and an early member of The Baker Street Irregulars), Cathy Pickens' article about "Writers Turned Sleuths" (Arthur Conan Doyle and Erle Stanley Gardner), and reviews of Sherlockian books.
18471. "Sherlock Gnomes" had an opening weekend gross of $10.6 million, according to the Box Office Mojo web-site, far behind the $25.4-million opening weekend gross of "Gnomeo and Juliet" in 2011. As of Apr. 26, the film's total worldwide gross was $58.6 million; the web-site estimates the film's production budget at $59 million (the industry rule of thumb is that the studio gets half of the gross receipts). It should be noted that it isn't the only gnomish film you can see this year: there also is "Gnome Alone" (which premiered in Europe in 2017 but hasn't yet been released in the U.S.), with an official trailer available at YouTube www.tinyurl.com/ycycpnvf
18472. Vicki Delany's THE CAT OF THE BASKERVILLES (New York: Crooked Lane, 2018; 291 pp., $26.99) is the third in her series of "Sherlock Holmes Bookshop" mysteries that star Gemma Doyle (the proprietor of the Sherlock bookshop) and her friend Jayne Wilson (the proprietor of the next-door Mrs. Hudson's Tea Room), this time investigating the death of an actor scheduled to perform as Holmes in a local presentation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (and there are twists and turns, and a bit of romance, in the story). And there's a fourth book in the series coming up: "A Scandal in Scarlet".
18473. And there's late-breaking news: Mattias Boström won the Agatha Award (for best nonfiction) for his FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK (April 17 #4); the award was announced at the Malice Domestic awards dinner in Bethesda on Apr. 28, and Mattias was there to accept the traditional appropriately-decorated ceramic teapot and deliver an artful and gracious acceptance speech. You can see him with his award at his Facebook page <www.tinyurl.com/ya6y945x>.

18474. Benedict Cumberbatch and Jonny Lee Miller alternated as Frankenstein and the Creature in the National Theatre's production of "Frankenstein" in 2011, and the show was recorded and will be screened again in theaters in October. It was the first time they played the same character (they went on to perform as Sherlock Holmes on television), and it's well worth seeing the play twice, so that you can decide which actor is better in which role.

18475. Michael Kuhn's "Sherlock Holmes und die Schnecken von Eastwick" [Schnecken are snails] is being performed at the Boulevardtheater in Dresden through May 12 <www.boulevardtheater.de>.
18476. "The Sherlock Project" (a new "immersive theatrical experience") is being presented by the PaperHouse Theatre at the FROCK Shop in Charlotte, N.C., through May 12 <www.paperhousetheatre.com>.
18477. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being done at the Waldon Arts Center in Fayetteville, Ark., through May 27 <www.theatre2.org>.
18478. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is due at the Stagehouse Theatre in El Cajon, Calif., May 10-19 <www.tinyurl.com/yab57n4b>.
18479. Tim Kelly's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Stafford Gatehouse Theatre in Stafford, May 15-19 <www.staffordplayers.co.uk>.
18480. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at Chevalier College in Burradoo, N.S.W., May 23-26 <www.tinyurl.com/yao2azs7>.
18481. Ken Ludwig's "Postmortem" (an earlier version of "The Game's Afoot") will be performed at the Theatre in the Round in Minneapolis, Minn., June 1-24 <www.theatreintheround.org>.
18482. "Sherlock Holmes" (a new "comedy musical") will be performed at the Sörby Rundloge in Mjölby, Sweden, June 2-17 <www.soffteater.se>.
18483. Tal Aviezer's new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Musgrave Ritual" will be performed at the Barton-Pell Mansion Museum in Pelham Bay Park, N.Y., June 2-10 <www.bartowpellmuseummansion.org>.
18484. The Chapterhouse Theatre Company will continue touring its "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on tour in England this summer, June 14 through Aug. 30 <www.chapterhouse.org>.
18485. The East Haddam Stage Company, based at Gillette Castle in Connecticut, has held auditions for this year's season, which will include an adaptation of "The Professor" (William Gillette's first comedy) July 7-Aug. 12, an original one-man presentation of "Yukitaka Osaki, William Gillette's Gentleman Valet" in September, and Ara Barlieb's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Christmas Goose" for the holidays.

18486. "Dark Deeds in the Canon" is the title of the next Reichenbach Irregulars' conference in Switzerland, scheduled for May 31-June 4, 2019; their focus will be on Professor James Moriarty and Baron Adelbert Gruner. Details are available at their web-site <www.221b.ch>.
18487. "Elementary" has been renewed for a seventh season. Its ratings continue to decline (it's the least-watched of all of the CBS-TV dramas, according to a story in the Wall Street Journal), but it's profitable nevertheless, thanks to revenue from overseas, syndication, and a deal with Hulu.
18488. Sorry about that: the correct version of last month's newsletter report is: "Dark Places, Wicked Companions, and Strange Experiences" is the title of The Norwegian Explorers' next conference in Minneapolis, scheduled for Aug. 9-11, 2019, at the Graduate Hotel (the new name of the Commons Hotel), and there will be an evening reception on Aug. 8; you can enroll on their mailing list by contacting Julie McKuras <mike9750@aol.com>.
18489. Watson's Tin Box is hosting this year's "Scintillation of Scions" on June 8-9, at the Sheraton Baltimore-Washington Airport. It is an entertaining gathering of both local and far-flung Sherlockians, and registration is now open <www.scintillation.org>.
18490. "Sherlock Gnomes" was released in Great Britain and Ireland on May 11, and Odeon Cinemas promoted the opening with an offer to give every child "the chance to grow their very own mini garden with our flowering seed paper!" <www.tinyurl.com/yd4rjl69>. The children, of course, will need to provide their own garden gnomes.
18491. And there's more promotion in Great Britain: Hovis has launched a "221b Bakery Street" campaign <www.tinyurl.com/y6uxacnz> www.tinyurl.com/y8atl66j that promotes their "Best of Both" bread loaves; prizes range from a family adventure in London to Sherlock Gnomes toast stamps.
18492. The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars will gather on June 24 in New Orleans, during the annual meeting of the American Library Association; Monica Schmidt will be their guest speaker (on "You Have Been on eBay, I Perceive: The Pathology of Sherlockian Collecting"), and more information is available from Marsha Pollak <mlpollak@icloud.com>.
18493. Etchings by James Ensor, a member of the XX Group, the "modern Belgian masters" whose pictures "entirely absorbed" Sherlock Holmes (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles") were at auction this month at Christie's, and there's an interesting article about him at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yd6mlr28>.
18494. Congratulations to Russell Merritt, who has received the Denver Silent Film Festival's David Shepard Career Achievement Award. Russell is a member of the board of the San Francisco Silent Film Festival, an adjunct professor in the Department of Film & Media at the University of California Berkeley, and a leader in the restoration of two important silent films: William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) and Carlyle Blackwell's "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929).

18495. MYSTERY MOST GEOGRAPHICAL (Cabin John: Wildside Press, 2018; 349 pp., $35.00) is the 13th Malice Domestic anthology, offering nice assortment of short stories and a foreword by Nancy Pickard (who received the Lifetime Achievement award at this year's Malice); one of the stories is Michael Robertson's "The Barrister's Clerk" an imaginative addition to his "Baker Street Letters" series about the London barristers who have their offices at Sherlock Holmes' address and are tasked with answering his mail. Wildside's web-site is at <www.wildsidepress.com>.
18496. Also from Wildside: Christopher Redmond's ABOUT BEING A SHERLOCKIAN (2017; 250 pp., $14.99) is a sequel of sorts to his ABOUT SIXTY (December 16 #5): Chris has edited an anthology of sixty essays "celebrating the Sherlockian community" and in his introduction he explains just how easy (or difficult) it can be to define just what a Sherlockian is; the essays are by a delightful mix of authors, old hands and newcomers, who describe with great enthusiasm the many paths they followed in becoming Sherlockians.
18497. "He made the country down in Illinois," Lucy Ferrier said (in "A Study in Scarlet"); our postal service has issued a stamp honoring the 200th anniversary of statehood for Illinois.
18498. Karen Murdock has noted Matthew Walther's "The Man Who Knew Everything" in The Week (Apr. 25) <www.theweek.com/articles/763465>; it is a review of Rebecca Tope's new SABINE BARING-GOULD: THE MAN WHO TOLD A THOUSAND STORIES. The many things he wrote about included the folktales of Dartmoor, and he's a very important character in Laurie R. King's THE MOOR (1998), in which he's visited by Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes. Baring-Gould's grandson (William S. Baring-Gould), when he wrote his biography of Sherlock Holmes, used details from his grandfather's life in describing Holmes' early years. Sabine Baring-Gould lived at Lewtrenchard, near Dartmoor; his house now is a luxury hotel <www.lewtrenchard.co.uk> and you can visit his grave at the nearby Lewtrenchard Cemetery.

18499. Alexander Orlov has reported a new adaptation of a Canonical story in which Holmes and Watson do not appear; an 18-minute video ("Violet") is available at Vimeo <www.vimeo.com/22871372>. There's also a Russian video "Seldon" <www.tinyurl.com/n4narya>, and the Indian film "Bees Saal Bad" inspired by "The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.tinyurl.com/y894fae7>.
18500. They're off and running: The Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Race Course in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., is set for Aug. 11. More information about the two-day excursion is available online at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/silverblaze2018.html>.
18501. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE LOST RADIO SCRIPTS (Little Falls: Purview Press, 2017; 396 pp., $25.98), edited by Ian Dickerson, offers twelve scripts written by Denis Green and Leslie Charteris [as Bruce Taylor] from the Rathbone/Bruce 1944 radio series "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (all of them from programs for which audio recordings are not known to exist); Dickerson discovered the scripts in Charteris' papers, and it's nice to have a chance to revisit the radio series. You can listen to Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's interview with Dickerson at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" archive <www.tinyurl.com/y82pbko9>.

18502. Martin Edwards' THE STORY OF CLASSIC CRIME IN 100 BOOKS (London: British Library, 2017; 353 pp., £25.00) (Scottsdale: Poisoned Pen Press, $26.95) is a delightful companion to the "British Library Crime Classics" series that offers reprints of excellent novels and short stories; some of the anthologies include stories by Conan Doyle, and this book explores the history of crime fiction in novels published in the first half of the twentieth century (one of them, of course, is "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). The book also is available in a trade-paperback edition to match the crime-classics series. And Edwards, recently asked what he would have added as the 101st title, confessed that there already are 102 novels in his book.
18503. Cub Scouting, part of the Scouting Program of the Boy Scouts of America, offers Cubs belt loops (instead of merit badges), and Kate Karlson has reported an interesting Code of the Wolf elective adventure loop. They're available for $1.49 at your neighborhood Scout Shop, and on-line at <www.scoutshop.org>; search for [619939]. And yes, in February the Boy Scouts of America announced their new name: Scouts BSA, recognizing the decision to admit young women as full-fledged Scouts. The Cub Scouts program already admits girls; now older girls will be able to join Scouts BSA and have an opportunity to advance to become Eagle Scouts. One hopes that eventually the Scouts BSA will offer a Sherlockian merit badge.
18504. Mattias Boström, who last month won the Agatha Award (best nonfiction) for FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK at Malice Domestic, has been nominated for an Anthony Award (best critical/non-fiction book) at Bouchercon; winners will be announced at Bouchercon in St. Petersburg, Fla., on Sept. 8. Mattias also has received Der blaue Karfunkel from the Deutsche Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft at SherloCON in Saarbrücken, and the Tony & Freda Howlett Literary Award from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London.
18505. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: ILLUSTRATED AND ENHANCED BY N. R. REEKIE (2017) offers an imaginative approach to the Canon: there are more than 300 illustrations, including his own Rapidograph technical-pen artwork, and the 352-page book is available at eBay for £24.99 <www.tinyurl.com/y79ollmr>.
18506. The International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes, now at the Houston Museum of Natural Science <www.hmns.org>, has some added material. According to the Houston Chronicle <www.tinyurl.com/y7k2vs47>, the exhibits now include the curved pipe Robert Downey Jr. smoked and the pocket watch worn by Jude Law, the pink suitcase from Benedict Cumberbatch's "A Study in Pink", and a costume worn by Lucy Liu.
18507. Conan Doyle wrote about the bare-knuckle boxer John Jackson, who appears in RODNEY STONE (March 18 #5), and there are other boxers in Conan Doyle's writings; one of them is William Abednego Thompson, known as Bendigo, who was honored in Conan Doyle's poem "Bendy's Sermon". According to the Nottingham Post <www.tinyurl.com/y8e6yydo>, a fund-raising campaign is underway to pay for a statue of Bendigo, who is buried in Nottingham. Alan Dance and David Field's novel BENDIGO: THE RIGHT FIST OF GOD (2016) is based on the life of "the most famous son of Nottingham since Robin Hood first ventured from the leafy glades of Sherwood Forest to taunt the Sheriff."

18508. Maria Konnikova, author of MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES (2013), and then THE CONFIDENCE GAME: WHY WE FALL FOR IT...EVERY TIME (2016), began playing poker in late 2016 while working on a new book THE BIGGEST BLUFF, but she's earning so much in poker tournaments that the book likely won't be published until next year, according to a report in the N.Y. Post on May 3 <www.tinyurl.com/ya9m9wqn>; Maria's web-site is at <www.mariakonnikova.com>.
18509. "A Strange Change Toy Featuring The Lost World" was made and sold by Mattel in the late 1960s, likely inspired by the film that starred Claude Rains as Professor Challenger (1960). There's a Wikipedia entry for the "Strange Change Machine" that describes the toy in detail: it offered pressed "shape memory" plastic figures of prehistoric animals, an "Expansion Chamber" with a heating element, and a "Compressor" (Wikipedia provides links to web-sites that have images and more information); it cost only $1.50 in those good old days and seems to have been discontinued quickly because the toy was so dangerous to children who played with it. You can find it at eBay (for a lot more than $1.50) and play with it now (carefully, of course).
18510. The seventh running of the No Frills Silver Blaze will take place on Aug. 18 at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J., and it's truly no frills: entrance fee $5.00 (or $3.00 for seniors), and bring your own food and drinks. The event is arranged by The Turf Builders of Baker Street, and more information is available from Peter McIntyre <pslpete@optonline.net>.
18511. The Japanese eight-episode series "Miss Sherlock" (produced by HBO Asia and Hulu Japan) (December 17 #6) began its run on Apr. 27, and the series has a web-site at <www.hboasia.com/HBO/en-ph/shows/miss-sherlock>. You can watch the series (with English subtitles) at <www.dailymotion.com>.
18512. Raymond C. Murray died on Apr. 8. He was a leader in the field of forensic geology (the use of soil and mineral evidence in law enforcement) and wrote two of the field's standard textbooks, FORENSIC GEOLOGY (1975 and 1992) and EVIDENCE FROM THE EARTH: FORENSIC GEOLOGY AND CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION (2004 and 2011), with due credit to Sherlock Holmes for his geological expertise; you can learn more about Ray's work at <www.forensicgeology.net>.
18513. C. J. Carter-Stephenson's "Back of the Bookshelf" is a monthly podcast offering his narration of classic short fiction, and it was launched with Conan Doyle's "The Disintegration Machine" available in both video and audio <www.carter-stephenson.co.uk/botb.html>.
18514. Congratulations to Andrew Jay Peck, who began his legal career in 1978 and was appointed U.S. magistrate judge for the Southern District of New York in 1995; he retired from the bench in February and has joined the law firm DLA Piper as a senior counsel, and you can read about his career in an American Bar Association article at <www.tinyurl.com/yck3l98q> (there's also a podcast interview). Andy was the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article in The Baker Street Journal in 1972, joined the Baker Street Irregulars in 1973 (as "Inspector Baynes, Surrey Constabulary"), and plans to continue his pursuit of Sherlock Holmes (and the N.Y. Yankees).

18515. Ashley Polasek has edited A PLUM ASSIGNMENT: DISCOURSE ON P. G. WODEHOUSE AND HIS WORLD (Winch and Clutterbuck, 2018), the discourse being by Curtis Armstrong and Elliott Milstein; the book isn't Sherlockian but you can listen to the three of them talk about Wodehouse, and his enthusiasm for Conan Doyle and Holmes, with Scott Monty and Burt Wolder in a podcast at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/yau22ldl>.
18516. There's a race horse named Sherlock Holmes, and the [Melbourne] Herald Sun had a picture of him <www.tinyurl.com/y7gn68v8> winning a race at Flemington; the chestnut gelding, born in Ireland, is doing well in Australia, and you can see video of him winning the race at <www.tinyurl.com/y82nl5og>.
18517. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Carnegie's, in the Peery Hotel, in Salt Lake City on May 23, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, welcomed by members of The PsiKeys of Sherlock and The Avenging Angels. Our next meetings will be on Nov. 7 in Indianapolis, and on May 22, 2019, in San Antonio.
18518. There is a definitely-firm and reliable rumor that there's a third Robert Downey Jr. "Sherlock Holmes" film in the works. According to the Hollywood Reporter (May 7), Warner Bros. and Village Roadshow Pictures have announced that "Sherlock Holmes 3" will open in theaters Christmas Day in 2020. All that's needed now is a script and a director and a start of production.
18519. Further to the item about Grace Humiston, a lawyer-turned-investigator in 1917 who was known as "Mrs. Sherlock Holmes" and was featured in a recent episode of the NBC-TV series "Timeless" (March 18 #3), Rachel Kaufman wrote about the episode at the Smithsonian blog <www.tinyurl.com/y9pys2oa>.
18520. Sundance TV plans an eight-episode international drama series based on Umberto Eco's THE NAME OF THE ROSE, starring John Turturro as the Franciscan monk William of Baskerville, Damian Hardung as Adso of Melk, and Rupert Everett as inquisitor Bernard Gui; the book, set in Italy in 1327, nevertheless was nicely Sherlockian.
18521. It's a bit late for this year, but in plenty of time for next year: Sherlock Holmes Day is celebrated on May 22. It's an event established in 2013 by the forum and games site Gaia Online, and there's much more information available on-line at <www.daysoftheyear.com/days/sherlock-holmes-day>.
18522. Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss and Benedict Cumberbatch celebrated Sherlock Holmes Day on-line with video and audio teasers for their "Sherlock" series at the BBC America web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y92csyc3>.
18523. Margalit Fox's CONAN DOYLE FOR THE DEFENSE (New York: Random House, 2018; 352 pp., $27.00) has the subtitle "the true story of a sensational British murder, a quest for justice, and the world's most famous detective writer," and it's a carefully-researched and well-written account of the Oscar Slater case; the author has discovered new and interesting information about the case, and she offers a convincing explanation of why the police and the government were so determined to convict an innocent man.

18524. English Heritage has announced that Peter Cushing will be honored with a blue plaque at his childhood home in Croydon; the announcement was made on May 4 (Star Wars Day) and the plaque will be unveiled in July. Roger Johnson has noted that May 4 also is Reichenbach Day (when Holmes and Moriarty fought to the death in Switzerland); Cushing was Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), a BBC television series (1968), and "The Masks of Death" (1984). He also played Conan Doyle in a television film "The Great Houdinis" (1976).
18525. For those who may be wondering why May 4 is Star Wars Day (May 18 #1): the celebration was created by fans of the series, who happily say "May the 4th be with you." The announcement was made on Star Wars Day in recognition of Cushing's memorable performance at the Grand Moff Tarkin in the first "Star Wars" film in 1977.
18526. Reported: Leslie S. Klinger's IN THE SHADOW OF AGATHA CHRISTIE (New York: Pegasus, 2018; 356 pp., $25.95) is subtitled "classic crime fiction by forgotten female writers: 1850-1917" and offers 16 stories that include Carolyn Wells' 1915 Sherlockian burlesque "The Adventure of the Clothes-Line".
18527. Fans of Scooby-Doo will welcome the news that "Scooby-Doo and Guess Who?" is being developed for a 2019 launch on Boomerang's digital-streaming service; episodes of the animated series will feature characters such as Batman, the Flash, Wonder Woman, and Sherlock Holmes.
18528. When in Middlesbrough (in North Yorkshire): the Orange Pip Market, a monthly artisan food market is on Baker Street <www.orangepipmarket.com>; it was founded in 2014 and named for the Sherlock Holmes story. You can also stop in at the local pub The Twisted Lip <www.thetwistedlip.co.uk>.
18529. Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE GYPSY GOOD-BYE (New York: Philomel, 2010; 176 pp., $14.99) is the sixth and last in her pleasant series about Enola Holmes, the 14-year-old younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock; she's hiding from them in London and solving mysteries on her own. All of the books are available in trade paperbacks from Puffin ($6.99), and the series has been in the news because Legendary Entertainment has signed the British actor-model Millie Bobby Brown to star in and produce feature films based on the series. There's more information about Enola Holmes, and Nancy Springer, at the author's web-site <www.nancyspringer.com>, and about Millie Bobby Brown at Wikipedia and elsewhere on the Internet.
18530. Overwatch, a team-based multiplayer first-person shooter video game developed and published by Blizzard Entertainment <www.playoverwatch.com/en-us>, allows players to purchase "skins" that change the outfit or color scheme of the players' heroes, and one of the anniversary skins offers McCree the opportunity to dress in a Sherlockian costume that also fits support hero Ana; you can see Ana wearing the skin, and explore Overwatch, at the DBLTAP web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ydbeqats>.
18531. BRAIN GAMES is a series of puzzle books, and their SHERLOCK HOLMES PUZZLES (Morton Grove: Publications International, 2017; 198 pp. $12.98) has more than "100 cerebral challenges inspired by the world's greatest detective" (standard puzzles, with many tied to the Canon).

18532. Patricia Morison died on May 20. She had a long career both as a singer (she starred in "Kiss Me Kate" on Broadway in 1948 and then in "The King and I" on Broadway and on tour) and as an actor (in films and on television) and is best-known to Sherlockians as the evil Mrs. Hilda Courtney in Basil Rathbone's "Dressed to Kill" (1946).
18533. The new block-buster film "Avengers: Infinity War" stars Robert Downey Jr. (Iron Man) and Benedict Cumberbatch (Doctor Strange), who have both played Sherlock Holmes, but there are no allusions to that in the movie. According to Comic Book Resources <www.tinyurl.com/y97dbj44>, directors Joe and Anthony Russo believed that jokes about the character connection would have been "too obvious."
18534. The East Haddam Stage Company, which is based at Gillette Castle in Connecticut, will be on tour with its radio drama "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Speckled Band" in the fall <www.ehsco.org>.

18535. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is due at the Morris-Jumel Mansion in New York, N.Y., June 8-24 <www.morrisjumel.org>.
18536. Ray Crew's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Avenging Angels" is scheduled at the Elementary Theatre in Cape May, N.J., June 21-Sept. 29, during the Sherlock & Shakespeare Festival <www.capemaymac.org>.
18538. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new dramatization by Tim Churchill and Catherine O'Reilly) is scheduled at the Stoke Repertory Theatre in Stokeon-Trent, Staffs., July 31-Aug. 4 <www.stokerep.info>.
18540. Richard Lavin's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Impaled Whaler" is due at Tudor House in Lake Arrowhead, Calif., Aug. 10-25; web-site at <www.tudorhouseentertainment.villas>.
18541. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled at the Krevsky Center in Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 7-16 <www.theatreharrisburg.com>.
18542. Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" is due at the Huntington Avenue Theatre in Boston, Mass., Sept. 28-Oct. 28 <www.huntingtontheatre.org>.
18543. "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" (dramatized from Nicholas Meyer's novel by Anthony and Marcia Milgrom Dodge) will be performed at the Little Lake Theatre in Canonsburg, Pa., Oct. 11-27 <www.littlelake.org>.

18545. There also was news of the next BSI conference, set for 2020, will have as its theme "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" (details to be announced later), Next year's birthday festivities in New York will be held on Jan. 9-13, and the Distinguished Speaker Lecture on Jan. 10 will feature director and playwright Ken Ludwig, author of "Postmortem", "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays", and "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery".
18546. Russian war correspondent Arkady Babchenko, who fled Russia for Ukraine in 2017, turned up at a press conference in Kiev last month, one day after he had been reported killed; he explained that the announcement that his wife had found his body after he had been shot several times at the entrance to his apartment in Kiev was intended to help Ukraine's security services foil a real plot against his life. All this is of possible interest to readers of this newsletter because Anton Geraschenko, a member of Ukraine's parliament, then said that "Sherlock Holmes successfully used the method of staging his own death for the effective investigation on complex and intricate crimes, no matter how painful it was for his family and Dr. Watson."
18547. Benoit Guilielmo has launched an on-line collection of Sherlockian articles from the 1930s (many of them reprinted for the first time), accompanied by some modern commentary on what he calls the Golden Age of Sherlockian scholarship (1927-1934), at <www.earlysherlockiana.blogspot.fr>. It's nicely done, and an opportunity to see what the Sherlockian world once was like.
18548. The manuscript of "The Story of Spedegue's Dropper" will be at auction at Sotheby's in London on July 10, estimated at £10,000-£15,000. There is a nice entry about the manuscript at Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" web-site at <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/spedegues-dropper-2018.htm>.
18549. Howard Ostrom has found another example of the wonders of digitization: the Nov. 1906 supplement to the Urban Films catalog, with a three-page synopsis of Vitagraph's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1905); it's on-line at <www.lukemckernan.com/2018/02/15/the-world-in-1906> [pages 61-63]. Leslie S. Klinger wrote about the film in The Baker Street Journal, June 1998.
18551. "Hooray for Meghan Markle, a Very Modern Adventuress" was the headline on a story by Julie Burchill in the Spectator on Apr. 28, reported by Evy Herzog (who presides over The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes). The word "adventuress" is rarely encountered today, other than in the Canon and at Sherlockian gatherings; you can read the article at <www.tinyurl.com/yd7d9ot4>.

18552. Erik Ofgang's GILLETTE CASTLE: A HISTORY (Charleston: History Press, 2017; 139 pp., $21.99) is a nicely readable and attractively illustrated guide to William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn., with discussion of Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and Gillette himself, but the main focus is on the Castle and its history.
18553. A "Sherlock Holmes" electric locomotive was used on the Metropolitan Line in London from the early 1920s until it was withdrawn from service in 1962, but now there's a new one, christened at a naming ceremony at the Quanton Road Station on Apr. 29, and video of the ceremony is available at YouTube; search for [quanton sherlock holmes].
18554. All that remains of the first locomotive are the nameplates, which are fortunately preserved in Sherlockian collections, but a battery-powered scale model (in 7¼-inch gauge, which means it will run on rails 7¼ inches apart) was at auction at Dreweatts in England in 2013, with an estimate of £1,000-£1,500. It sold for £2,728 (including the buyer's premium). Of course there is a 7¼-inch Gauge Society, with a web-site <www.sevenandaquarter.org> for those who enjoy riding on (rather than in) these attractive trains, and you can do exactly that in Great Britain, Europe, and North America, as noted in the Club Directory at the web-site.
18555. The winners of this year's Audie Awards (from the Audio Publishers Association) included Stephen Fry's recording of the Sherlock Holmes stories (for excellence in production); the recording is available from Audio Studios at <www.audible.com>.
18556. THE CROWN JEWEL MYSTERY, by Anna Elliott and Charles Veley (Wilton Press, 2017; 109 pp., $5.98), a prequel to their "Sherlock Holmes and Lucy James" series, brings Lucy to London for the first time, hoping to determine the identity of her mysterious benefactor and winding up on the scene of a bank robbery; the novella is both imaginative and fast-paced, and the series has a web-site at <www.sherlockandlucy.com>.
18557. Earlier novels in the series include REMEMBER, REMEMBER (2017; 346 pp.) and THE JUBILEE PROBLEM (2017; 407 pp.) (each $12.99); Lucy discovers who her mysterious father and mother are, and is involved in investigating two interesting mysteries, as well as some romance.

18558. The restored version of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929) received a warm reception at the San Francisco Silent Film Festival this month, and there are reports that a commercial DVD will be available sooner rather than later; in the meantime, Danill Dubshin has reported, you can watch clips from the film uploaded by Rob Byrne to Vimeo: go to <www.vimeo.com> and search for [der hund von baskerville] to see how splendid the restoration is.
18559. "Sherlock: The Game Is Now" <www.sherlockgame.com> is billed as "the only official Sherlock Holmes Escape Game, a 90-minute immersive experience for teams of 4-6 people," and it will open in London on Oct. 23 and run through Feb. 24, with tickets costing £54 per person. It's organized by Time Run and "Sherlock" creators Steve Moffat and Mark Gatiss, and you can see some of Time Run's other escape games at <www.time-run.com>.

18560. Martyn Sutton is the proprietor of Uncle Jeremy's Household, a gift shop in Ingleton <www.unclejeremy.com> that celebrates the connections of Sherlock Holmes to the Yorkshire Dales; he believes that the name of Sherlock Holmes was inspired by Conan Doyle's visits to the region (he married his first wife Louise Hawkins there in 1885, the same year his short story "Uncle Jeremy's Household" was published). One of their Sherlock Holmes Teddy Bears will be the prize in the "This is Ingleton" competition in July at <www.facebook.com/VisitIngleton>; the contest is open to anyone, anywhere, who answers a simple question to qualify for the end-of-the-month drawing.
18561. The Royal Mail has issued a set of eight stamps honoring the 50th anniversary of the BBC's long-running television series "Dad's Army" that was broadcast from 1968 to 1977. Two of the stamps show Arthur Lowe as Capt. George Mainwaring and John Le Mesurier as Sgt. Arthur Wilson; if the actors look familiar, it's because Arthur Lowe played Dr. William Watson in "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" (1977), while John Le Mesurier was Eduardo Lucas in "The Second Stain" in the Alan Wheatley television series (1951), Barrymore in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), and Lord Redcliff in "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
18562. Rob Nunn has been posting to his "Interesting Though Elementary" blog since June 2017 <www.interestingthoughelementary.blogspot.com>. It's imaginative as well as interesting, with a mix of essays and interviews.
18563. Bill Peschel's "223B Casebook Series" continues, offering his survey of the many parodies and pastiches published in newspapers, magazines, and books, reprinted with footnotes and brief accounts of what Conan Doyle was doing each year. The latest volumes are SHERLOCK HOLMES: GREAT WAR PARODIES AND PASTICHES I: 1910-1914 (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2017; 365 pp.) and SHERLOCK HOLMES: JAZZ AGE PARODIES AND PASTICHES I: 1920-1924 (2018; 352 pp.) (each $15.99), and both volumes include one of his own pastiches, in which Mark Twain reports on his encounters with Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes. Bill's web-site is at <www.peschelpress.com>.
18564. It's likely far too late for souvenir-hunting, but Del Taco kindly offered free Sherlock Holmes lunch bags with the purchase of any Kid Loco Meal (a kid's quesadilla, fries, drink and a treat); their web-site allows you to find your nearest Del Taco <www.tinyurl.com/y873mnm>.
18565. The latest catalog from the BBC Shop has as always a page of Sherlockiana, including a Sherlock Holmes Pewter Pocket Watch, just the thing for those who, like Holmes, don't wear a wristwatch <www.tinyurl.com/y9p7td5b>.
18566. Ray Betzner continues to find new and interesting material for his "Studies in Starrett" blog <www.vincentstarrett.com>, which now includes entries on "Where are the missing pages of Starrett's autobiography?" and a new translation of his classic sonnet "221B"; the new translation, handsomely printed and bound, is available the Atelier Typographique de la Cité in Switzerland for CHF40.00 <www.ateliertypo.tictail.com/product/221b>.

18567. "With Landmark UK Embassy Planned for East London, China Rides the River of History Full Circle" was the headline on a story in the South China Morning Post on June 05 <www.tinyurl.com/y98b82hs> about a new Chinese embassy that will be on the site of the old Royal Mint. The article noted that the East End was home to London's first Chinatown, and that the area's opium dens were legendary: "It was in one such establishment in Limehouse that Sherlock Holmes found Dr. Watson" in "The Man with the Twisted Lip". The Royal Mint moved to Wales in 1975, and (yes indeed) the South China Morning Post was quite careless about who found whom in the Bar of Gold.
18568. Jennie Paton found a video demonstration <www.tinyurl.com/yadndn8p> of how easy it is to use the Mr. Sherlock lock-picking tool set, which comes with a full set of lock picks and a transparent padlock that helps you see what you're doing.
18569. YOUNG PUFFIN'S WONDERFULLY GRAND MYSTERY is a delightful children's carousel-bound pop-up book created by Yekaterina Komarovskaya and Mike Ficarra: Young Puffins wears Sherlockian costume while investigating a mystery that unfolds (literally) as one turns the pages to read a story that's both imaginative and amusing. It was a successful Kickstarter project and now is available to everyone ($31.00); just go to <www.youngpuffin.com> to see a demonstration of how the books works. Young Puffin himself also is available as a plushie ($20.00), along with other merchandise.
18570. RiffTrax offers a download of the colorized version of "Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green" (1945) with commentary by Mystery Science Theater 3000 stars Bridget Nelson and Mary Jo Pehl ($9.99) at <www.rifftrax.com>; needless to say, they don't take the movie seriously.
18571. Holmes Fest is now an annual event in Portsmouth: this year's celebration began on June 27 and runs through July 14, with a wide variety of goings-on <www.lifeisamazing.co.uk/holmesfest>.
18572. They're off and running at Laurel Park in Maryland, where Greg Ruby has arranged for The Silver Blaze (Southern Division) on July 22. You can read all about it at the Facebook page for the event, and there's more information available from Greg at <greg@fourthgarrideb.com>.
18573. Royal Books is offering an early treatment of the script for "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929) for $4,500 <www.tinyurl.com/y9shlpb4>; written by F. Hugh Herbert, it differs substantially from the finished film, and does not contain the now-classic statement "Elementary, my dear Watson" (spoken by Clive Brook in the film when it was released). It was the first talking Sherlock Holmes film, and the first known instance of Holmes actually saying the line (William Gillette often is credited as the first, but the line does not appear in any known script of his play, and no one has reported a contemporary newspaper or magazine that mentions Gillette saying it).
18574. "Anything Goes--on ISLAND OF THE MAD" is an amusing book trailer promoting the latest volume in Laurie R. King's series about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (April 18 #2) <www.tinyurl.com/ydxlcqwb>. That's not Cole Porter singing, but Michael Meketa III does well with his cover of the song.

18575. "To review the books, monographs, films, and other, more ad-hoc projects inspired by Holmes today is not to note a revival of interest, but simply to let down a bucket into a bottomless well." That's according to Christopher Sandford in HOUDINI AND CONAN DOYLE (London: Duckworth Overlook, 2011; 282 pp.).

18576. Excerpts from Jeffrey Hatcher's imaginative play were read during the Baker Street Irregulars' "The Mind and Art of Sherlock Holmes" conference in 2016 in Chautauqua, and the play premiered in 2017 in Tucson, Ariz., and has had other productions since then; the script has now been published by the Dramatists Play Service ($9.00) <www.tinyurl.com/yaxbwm7y>, and you can read a sample at their web-site.
18577. It would have pleased the late Herman Beerman and other members of the Sir James Saunders Society: "Had Sherlock Holmes Gone into Medicine, He'd Have Been a Dermatologist" is the headline on Phil Whitaker's article in the New Statesman on Mar. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/y94b8vcc>.
18578. Records by Mail <www.recordsbymail.com>, launched in 1974, now has an 8000-square-foot warehouse with more than 2 million vinyl LPs and 45s; searching for [sherlock holmes] turns up a few interesting items, and of course there is a lot more material for anyone interested in old records.
18579. Cynthia Ward's THE ADVENTURE OF THE INCOGNITA COUNTESS (Seattle: Aqueduct, 2017; 110 pp., $12.00), is part of a "conversation pieces" series of feminist science fiction; Lucy Harker is Dracula's dhampir daughter and a British intelligence agent who encounters dangerous foes on board the Titanic; the book's Sherlockian only for occasional mentions of Mycroft as head of Britain's secret service.
18581. "Comedy Playhouse" was a long-running British 30-minute television series broadcast by BBC-1 from 1961 to 1975; many episodes graduated to their own series, but among those that didn't was "Elementary, My Dear Watson" (1973) with John Cleese as Sherlock Holmes and Willie Rushton as Dr. Watson. As with so much long-lost television, a YouTube user has come to the rescue: you can watch the program at <www.tinyurl.com/ycgb59ux>.
18582. Leslie Katz continues to make his Sherlockian scholarship available at the Social Science Research Network; his latest article is "The Game Is a Hand: Traditional Tabletop Games in the Sherlock Holmes Adventures" and you can read or download all of his articles) at <www.ssrn.com/author=1164057>.
18583. Mattias Boström, whose FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK has already been nominated for an Anthony Award (best critical/non-fiction book) at Bouchercon; also has been nominated for a Macavity Award (best mystery-related nonfiction) from Mystery Readers International; the winners of both awards will be announced at Bouchercon in St. Petersburg, Fla., on Sept. 8.

18584. The second issue of The Newspapers (it's an "Irregular Journal of Sherlockiana" that Greg Ruby edits for The Sherlockians of Baltimore) has been published, with 136 pp. of toasts, poems, articles, and much more, many by members of the SOB's www.tinyurl.com/SOB2018Newspapers ($20.00). It focuses on material from Baltimore newspapers, and about Baltimore, but Greg casts his net widely to include Evelyn Herzog's account of the history of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, plus Ross E. Davies' investigation of the history of the first Sherlock Holmes game (the Parker Brothers card game that was launched in 1904).
18585. Further to the earlier report (August 14 #2) about the Mars 2020 Rover and its Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman and Luminescence for Organics and Chemicals, Jeff Dow notes that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has a new and colorful web-site about SHERLOC and its Wide Angle Topographic Sensor for Operations and eNginEering (yes, that's WATSON) at <www.tinyurl.com/ybvkgoqj>.
18586. "Save the date," says Susan Diamond: the 59th annual running of the Silver Blaze in Chicago will be on Oct. 20 at the Hawthorne Race Course. You can enroll on her mailing list at <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
18587. Another early Sherlockian film has turned up at YouTube, reported by Jennie Paton. "Sherlock Holmes i Bondefangerklør" (1910) features Otto Lagoni as Holmes, and is one of the Danish silent films made by Nordisk (and the only one known to have survived) <www.tinyurl.com/ybocm6w8>; the title is "Sherock Holmes in the Claws of the Confidence Men" in English.
18588. Wikipedia has a web-page for "Hat" <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/hat> with illustrated entries for hats that range from the Ascot cap to the Zuchetto; one of the hats is the Deerstalker, with a mention of Sherlock Holmes.
18589. Claire O'Dell's A STUDY IN HONOR (New York: Harper Voyager, 2018; 294 pp., $15.99) reimagines Holmes and Watson in a feminist thriller set in a near-future Washington during the next Civil War; the protagonists are Dr. Janet Watson and covert agent Sara Holmes, both black LGBT+ women, engaged in a battle against both villainy and bureaucracy.
18590. Greg Ruby discovered two amusing television commercials from 1970 and 1971 for Esso Home Comfort; available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y7lpcnut> and <www.tinyurl.com/ycgyecbh>.
18591. EL GOS DEL BASKERVILLES is Catalan translation published by Vicens-Vives in Barcelona in 2013, with striking artwork by Bulgarian artist Iassen Ghiuselev; you can view the artwork at his web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y7d2mbxs>, and order the book from the publisher or (possibly) at www.abebooks.com>. Some of the original artwork is available from the artist.
18592. In case you've wondered about how important Sherlock Holmes truly is, Sidney Paget's original watercolor of "Fishing Boats on the Shoreline" sold at auction this month for £160 <www.tinyurl.com/y7r2rqag>. In 2004 his original pen and ink and wash drawing of "The death of Sherlock Holmes" was sold at auction for $220,000. Randall Stock has a nice (and nicely illustrated) census of Sidney Paget paintings at <www.tinyurl.com/y8hd6fxo>.

18593. "Revision, My Dear Watson" (episode 146 on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog) <www.tinyurl.com/y9765sbh> offers Nick Martorelli, interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder; Nick suggests that Irene Adler was the Boba Fett of the Sherlock Holmes stories (and explains this for those who are fans of "Star Wars" and those who aren't), and has much more to say about the four long stories in the Canon. Scott and Burt have started providing a transcript of each of the podcasts; a few of them are available now, and they're asking for assistance in keeping the worthy project going.
18594. Deadline Hollywood reports that the release date for "Holmes & Watson" (the new comedy that stars Will Ferrell as Holmes and John C. Reilly as Watson) has been postponed once more: it's now scheduled for Dec. 21.
18595. The Mount Nelson in Capetown is one of six "hotels with pasts as amazing as the amenities," Cator Sparks blogged on May 4 <www.tinyurl.com/yddwul3j>, noting that the Prince of Wales and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle both stayed at the hotel in 1925. According to Brian Pugh's A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (2012), Conan Doyle stayed at The Mount Nelson twice (in 1900 and 1928). There's no mention of Conan Doyle in Spark's entry for the Mena House in Egypt, but Conan Doyle did stay there, in 1895.
18596. David Marcum has edited SHERLOCK HOLMES: BEFORE BAKER STREET for Belanger Books (2017, 356 pp., $19.95); it's an anthology of stories from the years before Holmes met Watson and moved into quarters at 221B. The publisher's web-site is at www.belangerbooks.com>.

18597. David also continues to edit his series of annual anthologies of pastiches for MX Publishing, with two new volumes added this year: THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES: PART IX and PART X (406 pp. for 1875-1895 and 386 pp. for 1896-1919, $44.95 each); they are excellent anthologies, and offer poems and radio scripts, as well as traditional pastiches, written by authors old hands and newcomers, and good writers as well. The MX web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
18598. Also from MX: Carl Heifetz's SHERLOCK HOLMES THROUGH THE MICROSCOPE (2018; 214 pp., $14.95) is a collection of essays that reflect his expertise as a microbiologist and examine scientific aspects of the Canon; most have been published in journals with limited circulation, and it's nice to see them now more widely available. David Ruffle's WATSON: MY LIFE (2018; 148 pp., $12.95) takes a new approach to the Canon, offering Dr. Watson's reminiscences about his life, loves, and career, and his association with Sherlock Holmes, as recorded in 1936.
18599. And there's more from MX: Richard T. Ryan's THE DRUID OF DEATH (2018; 217 pp., $28.95) has Holmes and Watson and Lestrade investigating a series of bizarre murders at Druid sites in England; his previous pastiches were THE VATICAN CAMEOS (2016) and THE STONE OF DESTINY (2017), and his new book includes a chapter from his upcoming THE MERCHANT OF MENACE. Michael Druce's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ROSWELL INCIDENT (2018; 211 pp., $14.95) has Holmes and Watson alive and well in the 1940s and 1950s, involved with British and American and Russian intelligence and counter-intelligence in a plot that may or may not involve aliens and flying saucers.

18600. Last year the French company Black Box Boutique released a limited Blu-ray+DVD "Ultimate Collector's Edition" of the 1984 Japanese animated "Sherlock Hound" television series, in Japanese with French subtitles <www.blackbonesboutique.com/sherlockholmes.htm>, with a 200-page book of artwork. It cost €59.00, and is no longer available from the company, but completists may want to pursue it from other sources.
18601. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed at the English Theatre in Frankfurt, Germany, through July 8 <www.english-theatre.de>, and then tours to the Deutsches Theater in Munich, Germany, July 17-21 <www.deutsches-theater.de>.
18602. "A Scandal in Bohemia, Part One" (a radio play) is due at the Edge Theater in Chicago on July 22 <www.idlemuse.org>.
18603. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled at the Clove Creek Dinner Theater in Fishkill, N.Y., Aug. 2-19; their web-site's at <www.clovecreekdinnertheater.com>. Also at the Magenta Theatre in Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 7-22 <www.magentatheatre.com>; and at the Duluth Playhouse in Duluth, Minn., Oct. 4-14 <www.duluthplayhouse.org>; The Illyria Theatre Company will tour Oliver Grey's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Britain, Aug. 3-Sept. 7 <www.illyria.co.uk>.
18605. Timothy Evers' new play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" is due at the Chelsea Market Theatre in Houston, Oct. 3-21 <www.classicaltheatre.org>.
18606. "Legenda jménem Holmes" [A Legend Named Holmes] (a "cult musical" by Ondrej G. Brzobohaty) will premiere at the Musical Theater Karlín in Prague, Oct. 12-21 <www.vstupenky.ticket-art.cz>.
18607. C. P. Stancich's "Sherlock Holmes and the Masters of Crime" is scheduled at the Camino Real Playhouse in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., on Oct. 19-Nov. 4 <www.caminoplayhouse.org>.
18608. The East Lynne Theater Company will perform Craig Wichman's radio-style adaptation of "Sherlock Holmes' Adventure of the Speckled Band" at the First Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J., Oct. 26-Nov. 2, and Mar. 15-17, 2019 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
18609. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" has been scheduled by the St. Marys Community Players at the Town Hall Theatre in St. Marys, Ont., Nov. 1-11 <www.stmaryscommunityplayers.org>.
18610. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Rosebud Theatre in Rosebud, Alta, from Nov. 2 to Dec. 23 <www.rosebudtheatre.com>.

18612. Harlan Ellison died on June 28. He was a prolific and sometimes controversial author of science-fiction and fantasy whose work included short stories, novels, comics books, films, and television. In a 1987 lecture he explained that those in search of success must read and re-read only one essential book: the collected Sherlock Holmes stories. It's well worth reading his short story "He Who Grew Up Reading Sherlock Holmes" (dedicated to Ray Bradbury), published in the Subterranean Press magazine (summer 2014) and available on-line at the press's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc9zpp2o>.
18613. Further to the item (May 18 #5) about the race horse named Sherlock Holmes, racing in Australia, there's also Sherlock, winner of the Kodlipet Plate at Mysore, India, on June 27 <www.tinyurl.com/ybqqj8v4>.
18614. 221B Capital <www.221bcapital.com> describes itself as an "equity fund running long/short with a low net exposure." Jillian McIntyre, chief investment officer and portfolio manager, told TheStreet on May 3 that short sellers ought to be tasked with sniffing out fraud in any market, and that the firm is named after Sherlock Holmes' address <www.tinyurl.com/ybvjb8kv>.
18615. Big Chief Studios offers a wide range of (expensive) figures of Holmes and Watson and Moriarty (from the "Sherlock" television series); their web-site is at <www.bigchiefstudios.co.uk/e-mailer/sherlock-special-offers>.
18616. Allen Osborne has started work on compiling a data-base that will indicate which of the many Sherlockian societies have Investitures, and what the Investiture process involves, and he would appreciate hearing from anyone who has information to offer <ibish1854@mail.com>.
18617. Herb Moskowitz has written an interesting and nicely illustrated monograph on William Gillette's film "Sherlock Holmes" (1916); it's a 4.33-MB file, available by e-mail from Herb at <herbphilly@aol.com>.
18619. "To gnome is to love me" might be the slogan for Garden Fun, which offers a 14" Sherlock Gnomes ($59.99) <www.gardenfun.com> that will be just as happy in your home as in your garden. Alas: the company doesn't offer an accompanying Watson Gnome. Sammi Mankini Gnome, however, is available ($39.99).

18620. A Hollywood Reporter story <www.tinyurl.com/y7q9429q> about the new "Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom" discussed earlier dinosaur films, including "The Lost World" (1925), and mentioned "King Kong" (1933), noting that the paper had reported that Radio Pictures and the Los Angeles police department were trying to find two men who had worked as extras on the "Kong" set but had not shown up for their pay checks. "Studio and cops are not worried about the pay checks, but about a machine gun that disappeared."
18621. Henry T. Folsom ("The Golden Pince-Nez") died on May 8. He graduated from Yale University, was president of the Folsom Arms Company, attended Berkeley Divinity School, and in 1957 was ordained, serving as rector of Episcopal churches in New Jersey, Connecticut, and New Hampshire. Intrigued by Canonical chronology, Hank published THROUGH THE YEARS AT BAKER STREET in 1962 and became a Baker Street Irregular in 1965. He won the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best paper in The Baker Street Journal in 1965 (appropriately titled "My Knowledge of the Bible Is a Trifle Rusty..."), received the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1986, and for many years presided over The Cornish Horrors in Connecticut.
18622. A story in the Sunday Times (Jan. 17, 2016) began "It has been home to the Doctor Who actor Tom Baker and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but the East Sussex town of Crowborough is about to welcome its most glamorous resident yet," and went on to describe Highwell House, and its new owner Cate Blanchett; you can see a photograph of the house at <www.tinyurl.com/y9ydzjad>. That led to a lot of publicity, from people who didn't read the Sunday Times all that carefully, saying that Conan Doyle actually lived in the house; as Abraham Lincoln once said, "if it's on the Internet it must be true."
18624. Further to the report (December 17 #5) that the New Forest National Park Authority had rejected a proposal to demolish the Lyndhurst Park Hotel (the campaign to protect the hotel had cited evidence that Conan Doyle had helped design the redevelopment of the building as a hotel in 1912), the Southern Daily Echo reported on July 3 that the developers had filed an appeal, hoping that a government-appointed planning inspector would allow the proposed development <www.tinyurl.com/yb8gdzvz>.
18625. Javier Olivares' striking artwork for EL PERRO DO LOS BASKERVILLE (2011) is on display at his web-site <www.javierolivares.blogspot.com> [click on 2011 and scroll down].
18626. "Hounds of the Bakersfield" is a song originally written by Bill Kirchen as a tribute to Merle Haggard, and Kirchen now plays, tours, and records with a group of the same name. Guitar Player Magazine has said that he's a "titan of the Telecaster," and a Google search for [hounds of the bakersfield] will turn up links to some of his tracks, including "When the Cowboy Sings" (in which he mentions Sherlock Holmes).

18627. "Holmes, Sweet Holmes" (a 1968 episode of a Canadian 30-minute television series called "Telescope") presented "a visit with Adrian Conan Doyle" at the Château de Lucens, and it's now nicely available in three parts at YouTube; The first part is at <www.tinyurl.com/hllmqpj>, and links to the other two are at the right. There's a lot of Adrian, and a brief view of him driving his Ferrari 250 SWB. Sotheby's recently had an interesting article <www.tinyurl.com/yd8b8k2l> about a Ferrari 250 GTO that is coming up for auction in August, with an estimate of more than $45 million. Charles Foley, who lived for a time at the Château, notes that the SWB [short wheel base] wasn't as beautiful as the GTO, but nevertheless was fast enough, with a top speed of 168 mph; Adrian sold his Ferrari in 1967 and bought a Lamborghini Miura, the first mid-engined supercar.
18628. How many actors have played the role of Sherlock Holmes? Almost 4,000, according to the count in the latest version of Howard Ostrom's "A-Z List of Sherlock Holmes Performers" <www.nplh.co.uk/a-z-index.html>, which includes more than 8,000 images of the actors; the index also is available directly from Howard <howardostrom@gmail.com>, and he has compiled many other interesting data-bases, available at <www.nplh.co.uk/original-essays.html>.
18631. Jennie Paton notes that "Shivering Sherlocks" (1948) is available at Vimeo <www.tinyurl.com/ycg82c4t>; it's a "Three Stooges" comedy, not Sherlockian except for the title. However there are two films that do have the Three Stooges in Sherlockian costume: "Horses' Collars" (1935) and "We Want Our Mummy" (1939); all three films are available at YouTube.
18632. Ronald B. De Waal ("Lomax, the Sub-Librarian") died on July 3. His career as a humanities librarian and associate professor at Colorado State University led him to consider creating a bibliography, and, inspired by William S. Baring-Gould's article about The Baker Street Irregulars in Esquire in 1966, he chose "Sherlock Holmes" as his subject, launching a project that resulted in three volumes of a massive record of anything and everything related to the Great Detective: THE WORLD BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DR. WATSON (1974), celebrated at a "Sherlock Lives!" conference at CSU in 1975, THE INTERNATIONAL SHERLOCK HOLMES (1980), and THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES (1994). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1984.

18633. William Hobbs died on July 10. Born in Britain, he grew up in Australia, where he took up fencing and almost made the country's fencing squad for the Olympics in Melbourne; he also tried acting in repertory theater, and went on to a decades-long career as a fight director and stuntman. He was credited as fight arranger on Gene Wilder's "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975), and (according to his obituary in the Hollywood Reporter) once said that Wilder was his most promising actor pupil.
18634. Jack Benny had a long career on radio, and was heard as Sherlock Holmes on "The Chevrolet Show" on June 2, 1933 in the second of two episodes of "Who Killed Mr. X?"; you can listen to the show at <www.tinyurl.com/y9tpv7zs>.
18635. Designed by Geeks <www.designedbygeeks.com> offers a variety of Sherlockian SVGs and other merchandise (including an imaginative "Mind Palace Mug"); in case you're wondering about what an SVG is, it's an abbreviation for Scalable Vector Graphics, an image format that's used with computerized sewing machines, electronic cutters, and standard computer printers (their other merchandise doesn't require technology more advanced than credit cards).

18636. Greg Ruby reports that The Numismatic Friends of Sherlock Holmes will hold a dinner meeting during the World's Fair of Money in Philadelphia on Aug. 15, and local (and visiting) Sherlockians are welcome; details are available from Greg <221b@fourthgarrideb.com>, and reservations are requested by Aug. 13.
18637. Sam Hearn's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DISAPPEARING DIAMOND (New York: Scholastic, 2018; 176 pp., $12.99) is written for young readers (ages 8-12) and attractively illustrated by the author; young John Watson arrives at Baker Street Academy in London as a new student and finds new friends, including Sherlock Holmes, Mrs. Hudson, and a hound named Baskerville, and of course there's a mystery to be solved. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET CURSE will be the next in the series.
18638. Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud worked together in Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION (1974), and now Netflix has announced that it will make its first Austrian drama series "Freud" with the young neurologist in pursuit of a serial killer in Vienna, assisted by a medium named Fleur Salomé and a police detective named Kiss. The series will be made in German, but will be streamed in other countries, presumable dubbed or subtitled.
18639. The seventh season of the CBS-TV series "Elementary" officially began production on July 11, but there's no word so far of how many episodes there will be, or when the season will premiere.
18640. Joel Senter died on July 23. Joel and his wife Carolyn maintained Classic Specialties since the 1980s, selling (and sometimes publishing) a wide variety of Sherlockiana from their web-site, and in 2005 they launched their Sherlockian E-Times, a delightful electronic newsletter. Joel was an enthusiast in the world of old-time radio, and a stalwart member of the Tankerville Club of Cincinnati; in 2000 he was interviewed by Jim Hawkins for the web-site of the Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem, and it's on-line at <www.nashvillescholars.net/cjsenterbio.html>.

18641. The N.Y. Book Review has an interesting podcast, and a recent program ("True Crime Starring the Creator of Sherlock Holmes") presented Margalit Fox talking about her new book CONAN DOYLE FOR THE DEFENSE (May 18 #5) <www.tinyurl.com/yalmtwkd>. An earlier podcast ("From Brooklyn to the Gulag") included Michael Sims discussing his biography ARTHUR AND SHERLOCK: CONAN DOYLE AND THE CREATION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (March 17 #5) <www.tinyurl.com/y984ku48>.
18642. Kim Newman's PROFESSOR MORIARTY: THE HOUND OF THE D'URBERVILLES (December 11 #2) has been optioned for television by Playground Entertainment, Lenny Picker reports. According to Deadline Hollywood (July 23), Newman announced that the book is in development as a long-form (mini-series) TV project; Playground has produced series that include "Wolf Hall" (2015), "Howards End" (2017), and "Little Women" (2017). Newman's book offers seven stories told by Col. Moran about his association with Prof. Moriarty.
18643. Cliff Goldfarb has kindly reported Gray Basnight's article "A Brief History of Cryptography in Crime Fiction" <www.tinyurl.com/ybp3f34m>; it's an interesting discussion of "Biblical codes, Holmesian ciphers, and Poe's Encryptions." The article appeared on Crime Reads <www.crimereads.com>, an intriguing web-site that has many other posts of interest; you can search for [sherlock] and [conan doyle] to see much more.
18644. Alexander Orlov has noted a "Detective Sherlock Holmes: Hidden Object Game" from CrispApp <www.tinyurl.com/y9q4oqsu>, available (free) at the Microsoft store; you can download and play it in Russian and English. The artwork on the opening screen is Sherlockian; there may be more Sherlockian content to be discovered by those who are willing to play through it all. There are other Sherlock Holmes games available at the Microsoft store, as well as 40 apps; search for [sherlock holmes].
18645. Swinhay House (the home of Charles Augustus Magnussen in the finale of the third series of "Sherlock"), will be open to the public for the first time ever, for just one day, on Sept. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/yd7yrmve>. The home of Sir David McMurtry, who has made the house available as part of Heritage Open Days this year, is in North Nibley in Gloucestershire.
18646. John B. Koelle ("The Sussex Vampire") died on Apr. 25. Jack graduated from Swarthmore College and served in the U.S. Air Force; he retired in 1958 and worked as an electric engineer for many years. He enjoyed classical music, and diving and underwater photography, and was warm and welcoming to Sherlockians, Jack received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1965, and its Two-Shilling Award in 1986. He was a long-time member of the Sons of the Copper Beeches, serving as the society's Head Mastiff from 1971 to 1984, and always was glad to report that the Sons were alive and drinking in Philadelphia.
18647. Angela Misri's NO MATTER HOW IMPROBABLE (Fierce Ink, 2016; 243 pp., $16.99) is the third in a series about the adventures of Portia Adams, who has discovered that she's the granddaughter of both Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, and that her mysterious guardian and advisor is Irene Adler; Portia is pursuing her own career as a consulting detective in London. The author's web-site is at <www.aportiaadamsadventure.com>.

18648. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed at the Powerhouse in New Canaan, Conn., through Aug. 11 <www.tpnc.org>, the Peninsula Theatre in Woy Woy, N.S.W., until Aug. 12 <www.woywoylt.com>, and at the Kalamazoo Civic Theatre in Kalamazoo, Mich., through Aug. 20 <www.kazoocivic.com>. The play also is due at the Fallon House Theatre in Columbia, Calif., Aug. 31-Sept. 30 <www.sierrarep.org>; at the Bay Area Harbour Playhouse in Dickinson, Tex., Oct. 12 through Nov. 4 <www.harbourtheatre.com>; and the Seacoast Repertory Theatre in Portsmouth, N.H., Oct. 18-28 <www.seacoastrep.org>.
18651. Robert Brock's marionette production "The Death & Life of Sherlock Holmes" is running at Lancaster Marionette Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., through Nov. 17 <www.lancastermarionette.org>.
18652. "The Empty Glass: Sherlock Holmes Comes to Dover" will be performed at the Biggs Museum of American Art in Dover, Del., on Aug. 18; the web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/y7hyf434>.
18653. David Elendune's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of Moriarty!" will be performed at the Langham Court Theatre in Victoria, B.C., Aug. 23-Sept. 1, during the Victoria Fringe <www.tinyurl.com/y7yk2fnf>.
18654. The Blackeyed Theatre will be touring Nick Lane's new dramatization "Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of Four" in Britain, Sept. 10-Apr. 6; the schedule is at <www.blackeyedtheatre.co.uk>.
18655. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Lancaster Playhouse in White Stone, Va., Sept. 14-29; their web-site's at <www.lancasterplayers.org>.

18656. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is due at the Long Beach Playhouse in Long Beach, Calif., Sept. 22-Oct. 20 <www.lbplayhouse.org>.
18657. "Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars" (written by Eric Coble and based on the graphic novels by Tony Lee and Dan Boulton), has been scheduled at the Valley Center Stage in North Bend, Wash., Oct. 12-27; web-site at <www.valleycenterstage.org>.
18658. "Das Sherlock Musical" is a German/British production that will premiere at the Urania Theater in Cologne on Nov. 7 <www.thesherlockmusical.com>, and then tour in Germany and Britain.

18659. A hitherto unrecorded page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" has turned up, from Chapter XIII, where Holmes is giving instructions to Sir Henry. It's in the hands of a private owner, and is for sale; details are available at item H37 in Randall Stock's census at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9c5evqa>.
18660. Conan Doyle's Colt .38 semi-automatic pistol will be offered at auction on Sept. 20 at Holts Auctioneers in the U.K., estimated at £4,000-£6,000. It has an interesting provenance: first owned by Conan Doyle's brother Innes, it likely came to Conan Doyle from Innes' widow Clara, and was one of two pistols placed in his London solicitors' safe deposit box in 1921, when the Firearms Act first became law, and apparently forgo then after he died. Details will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/y9o9kkoy>.
18662. "The Great American Read" is an eight-part series launched by PBS-TV in May <www.tinyurl.com/yd6or5l3>, based on their list of America's 100 best-loved novels; viewers will be able to vote on their favorites (the grand finale is to air in October); THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES did not make the list, but Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME did.
18663. Howard Ostrom has noted an interesting article at the culturebox web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ycrcyq4p> about an exhibition at the Cheverny chateau in Loir-et-Cher in France, where you can see full-size figures of Scooby-Doo, Hercule Poirot, John Steed, Colombo, and Sherlock Holmes, all created with Legos; the article's in French, with a colorful image showing Holmes.
18664. Planning ahead: the Sherlockian birthday festivities in New York will be on Jan. 9-13, with The Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner on Jan. 11; the annual dinner of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will be on Jan. 19.
18665. "Harrods is celebrating rarity in all its guises via a curated list of Rare Finds," the store announced this month, one of the rare finds being an Arthur Conan Doyle Goyard Trunk <www.tinyurl.com/y7e875u4>, one of only seven ever made (one of which has been lost); two of the trunks are owned by Goyard, and one of those was exhibited in New York two years ago (November 16 #5). This one, from a private collection, seems to have been sold (the price was £96,000); no one seems to know which of the seven trunks was the one that was commissioned by Conan Doyle.

18667. "I'll play Sherlock Holmes the detective," George Robey sang in the second verse of "Bang Went the Chance of a Lifetime" (which he wrote with Sax Rohmer in 1908); Robey was known as one of the greatest music-hall performers, and Rohmer certainly is best known as the creator of Dr. Fu Manchu. Howard Ostrom has reported that you can hear Robey perform the song at <www.tinyurl.com/y7mfvtzp>; it will be helpful if you also have a print-out of the lyrics, available at <www.tinyurl.com/yaw2jy7c>. Robey earlier played Sherlock Holmes in a revue at the Tivoli in London in 1902.
18668. For the completists: there was a British movie tie-in edition of Mitch Cullin's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (April 05 #6) published by Canongate in 2015 as MR. HOLMES, with a movie-poster cover showing Ian McKellan as the Great Detective (£7.99).
18669. THE GRAND GAME: A CELEBRATION OF SHERLOCKIAN SCHOLARSHIP: VOLUME ONE: 1902- 1959, edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger, published in 2011 and long out-of-print, has been reissued the Baker Street Irregulars Press as a trade paperback <www.tinyurl.com/yavarbbp>. The late Bernard Davies once wrote, "How wonderful to discover that, even if you are slightly mad, you are not alone," and the book demonstrates well just how interesting it can be to play the Grand Game (the web-site offers a look at the table of contents). Recommended.
18670. Jim Hawkins has launched a Facebook page for the friends of the late John Bennett Shaw; it's intended to be an on-line gathering place where friends can share memories and tell stories about him <www.tinyurl.com/y9bzq38x>.
18671. Philip K. Jones died on June 13. He worked for many years in information technology, and when he retired he devoted his attention to a comprehensive data base of Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction, winding up with more than 11,000 entries; it is far more than merely a list of authors and titles: an excellent (some might say frightening) demonstration of how popular Sherlock Holmes is. An earlier version (with 9,531 entries) is available on-line at <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Sherlock.htm>, along with his 2012 paper "The Untold Tales--Analyzed".
18672. Dermot McEvoy's article on "How Two Literary Legends Tried to Save Sir Roger Casement from the Gallows" <www.tinyurl.com/yb8o48h3> is an interesting exploration of the unsuccessful efforts of George Bernard Shaw and Arthur Conan Doyle to win a reprieve for Casement.
18673. The Postal Service has issued a stamp honoring Scooby-Doo, who first appeared in a Hanna-Barbera television series on CBS-TV in 1969 and still is going strong, on stage and screen as well as on television. Greg Ruby posted a colorfully-illustrated discussion of "Sherlock Holmes and Scooby-Doo" at the Fourth Garrideb web-site in 2016 <www.tinyurl.com/y9fsnxv9>.
18674. Further to the item on the Google Books Ngram Viewer (July 18 #1) Scott Monty sent a reminder that Cory Howell reported in detail on "Sherlock Holmes vs. Tarzan--by the Numbers" at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site in 2016 <www.tinyurl.com/ybjttd6>.

18675. The 2018 Irene Adler Prize has been awarded to Lynette Curtis for her essay "Letters to Las Vegas". The prize is a $1,000 scholarship for a woman pursuing a degree in journalism, creative writing, or literature, established by Lucas Aykroyd, an award-winning public speaker and writer in Vancouver, B.C.; it is indeed named for the heroine of "A Scandal in Bohemia", and you can learn more about the prize, and read the winning essay at <www.lucasaykroyd.com/scholarships>.
18677. From 1978 to 1991 the U.S. Postal Service issued a series of stamps honoring the "Performing Arts" designed by Jim Sharpe; four of the stamps showed Will Rogers, W. C. Fields, Douglas Fairbanks, and the three Barrymores, all of whom had Sherlockian or Doylean connections. Sharpe's artwork for two of the (other) stamp designs, mounted with copies of the stamps in the series, is available from Taraba Illustration Art for a modest $275 shipping extra) and you can request an image from <fred@tarabaillustrationart.com>.

18679. "Arthur Conan Doyle was a doctor himself before becoming a writer. Talked about the lessons you learn as a doctor: discipline, confidence, and being able to be decisive. And all of that is indispensable. The last thing I got from him is a very deep understanding of science and also an appreciation of empirical evidence." Charles Krauthammer in "Charles Krauthammer: His Words" (a one-hour tribute on Fox News on June 22). You can watch the program at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=C8w50oISCK8>.
18680. Steve Mason has issued a call for nominations for the Beacon Award, given annually by The Beacon Society to someone who has "made a significant contribution to exposing young people to the stories of Sherlock Holmes." The deadline for nominations is Nov. 15, and details are available at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>.
18681. Penn & Teller are among the best magicians performing today, and they have a great television series ("Penn & Teller: Fool Us" on The CW); you can see Shawn Farquhar fool them for the second time with a Sherlockian magic trick at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=E64Z1jRn4E> (with thanks to Howard Ostrom for his report). Colin McLeod, who's often described as the Sherlock Holmes of mentalism also appeared on the show (but did not fool Penn & Teller); you can see him perform at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=OnMPnNav_WE>.

18683. Nero Wolfe was not the only son of Sherlock Holmes, according to Yuichi Hirayama, who has written THE REMINISCENCES OF KOGORO AKECHI, a biography of the detective created by Edogawa Rampo in 1925; Akechi was a brilliant but eccentric detective who consulted with the police and was a master of disguise and an expert at judo, and relied on a group of young boys to gather information.
18684. MYCROFT AND SHERLOCK is the second in the series written by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse, due from Titan Books in October; Bill Seil reports that there's publicity, a Sherlockian photograph of Abdul-Jabbar, and an extract from the book at <www.tinyurl.com/y7n3ddf>.
18685. Paramount's "Sherlock Gnomes" has a lifetime gross of more than $89 million worldwide (according to the Box Office Mojo web-site), far behind "Gnomeo and Juliet" (more than $193 million worldwide). The numbers don't include revenue from television, DVDs, and tie-in merchandise, which of course can be significant. And there's lots of tie-in merchandise, including a 141- page movie novelization by Mary Tillworth that seems to have been based on an early version of the script, and A. E. Dingee's SHERLOCK GNOMES ON THE CASE, which comes with a handy decoder ($5.99) (both from Simon Spotlight).
18686. The fifth season of "The Flash" will debut on the CW channel on Oct. 9 with Tom Cavanagh as a new character Sherloque Wells; Nick Venable suggested on Cinema Blend <www.tinyurl.com/yagnoxao> that the character may be a nod to Sherlock Holmes, or perhaps Sherlock Hemlock.
18687. John Allen's SHADOW WOMAN: THE CREATOR OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Long Beach: Allen & Allen Semiotics, 2017; 302 pp., $19.95) suggests that much of Conan Doyle's literary work was not in fact written by him, and that most of the Canon was written by Louise Conan Doyle and Jean Conan Doyle; Allen offers evidence from stylometric analysis, the Canon's literary allusions, and a detailed examination of the manuscript of "A Scandal in Bohemia", and does not neglect Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work. Allen's research involved scholarship by Sherlockians, and others, and he displays an ability to discover allusions, make connections and draw conclusions that rivals what Sam Rosenberg achieved in NAKED IS THE BEST DISGUISE more than 40 years ago.
18688. He also has written BRIMSTONE (Long Beach: Allen & Allen Semiotics, 2018; 223 pp., $9.99); it's billed as the first in a series of Louise Conan Doyle mysteries, but features Louise Hawkins and is set in 1879 (well before she met her future husband). The book's well plotted and well written, and has interesting supporting characters; careful readers will note foreshadowing of the Canon. The author has a "Louise Conan Doyle Cyclopedia" web-site at <www.louiseconandoyle.com>, where he has been blogging since June 2017.

18689. Joanna Blalock stars in A STUDY IN TREASON (New York: Minotaur, 2018; 299 pp., $26.99), the second in Leonard Goldberg's series about the daughter of Sherlock Holmes, who once again is working with Dr. John H. Watson and his son Dr. John H. Watson Jr. in 1914, searching for a missing document and encountering a vicious killer (Joanne has learned much from her father). The author has a web-site at <www.leonardgoldberg.com>. Sorry about that: the correct URL for Jim Hawkins' interview with the late Joel Senter (July 18 #4) is <www.nashvillescholars.net/jcsenterbio.html>.
18690. Much has been written about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's encounters with Harry Houdini, and while Conan Doyle is mentioned only in passing in Derek Tait's THE GREAT HOUDINI: HIS BRITISH TOURS (Barnsley: Pen & Sword History, 2017; 296 pp., $39.95), the book offers a carefully-researched and enjoyable look at Houdini's appearances in Britain, where he performed in vaudeville theaters at the top of bills that included many other entertainers (audiences definitely got their money's worth in those long-ago days).
18691. "How It Should Have Ended" is a 15-minute animated web-series streamed by Starz Digital Media; their 3-minute alternate ending for "Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows" premiered on Feb. 16, 2012, and it's available on-line at <www.howitshouldhaveended.com/?s=sherlock>, in case you don't want to wait until the third Robert Downey Jr. film arrives in theaters.
18692. The "Baker Street Sonata" will be a performance by the Mother Lode Friends of Music at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., on Nov. 10 and 11; more information at <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
18694. Alexander Orlov has reported that there's a "Baker Street" residential complex in the Dzerzhinsky district of Volgograd. There's a web-site (with an amusing video) at <www.bs34.ru/kompleks/o-komplekse>, and more information to be found at <www.bs34.ru/kompleks/novosti/novosti-17-09-

2014-07>; it's all in Russian, and (as always) Google Translate can be helpful. Buildings in the complex are named Sherlock, Watson, Big Ben, and Hudson House.

18695. Edward C. Rochette died on Jan. 18. He was a professional numismatist, as a cartoonist and editor and then an executive with the American Numismatic Association. Ed also was an energetic Sherlockian, and a member of three Sherlockian societies in Colorado, and for many years he presided over the mail-order company Sherlock, Stock & Barrel.
18696. Michael A. Ventrella and Jonathan Mabery have edited BAKER STREET IRREGULARS: THE GAME IS AFOOT (New York: Diversion Books, 2018; 257 pp., $15.99); it's a sequel to their BAKER STREET IRREGULARS: THIRTEEN AUTHORS WITH NEW TAKES ON SHERLOCK HOLMES (February 17 #5) and offers thirteen more versions of Holmes (among them a home security system, a rabbi, a female librarian in ancient Egypt, and Santa Claus).

18698. The No Frills Silver Blaze was run at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J. on Aug. 18, arranged by The Turf Builders of Baker Street, and Kate Karlson suggests that the winner had the most appropriate name in any runnings of The Silver Blaze anywhere, ever <www.tinyurl.com/y869pblr>. Sherlockians (and others) who were wise enough to bet on the winner made a bit of money: the payout was $4.80/$2.60/$2.20.
18700. Further to the report (May 17 #4) about Sherlockian.Net having found a new home at Michigan State University, there has been a formal (and nicely illustrated) announcement on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y87cvakj>.
18701. Les Moskowitz has noted a story in the Philadelphia Inquirer that reports that the historic Carbon County Jail in Jim Thorpe, Penn., is for sale; the asking price is $749,000 <www.tinyurl.com/yd8naz4v>. Sherlockians visited the jail in 2004 during the first of the Baker Street Irregulars' weekend excursions (it's where the Mollie Maguires were hanged), and if you buy it you also acquire the gallows and a ghost. Les also reports that there's an interesting podcast about the Mollies at <www.tinyurl.com/yb8g2xpd>.
18702. "Professor Quiz" (radio's first quiz show) launched on CBS on May 9, 1936, and "Uncle Jim's Question Bee" was the second, premiering on NBC on Sept. 26, 1936; both programs had the same sponsor, the company that in 1930 had begun a long running series that starred William Gillette, Richard Gordon, and Louis Hector, all of whom played Sherlock Holmes. That series ended on May 26, 1935; it's likely that G. Washington Coffee decided in 1935 that a quiz show would be more popular with listeners than Sherlock Holmes. So (spoiler alert): the appropriately-named winner of the No Frills Silver Blaze at Monmouth Park was named (in case you didn't bother to click on the link) Faster N Blazes.
18703. The summer issue of The Baker Street Journal at hand, with scholarship and news and artwork, some of the artwork being a nice reminder of the humor of the late Norman Schatell. Editor Steve Rothman reports on Les Klinger's recent (and successful) battle with the Conan Doyle Estate Limited over its application for a trademark on Sherlock Holmes for use in books, short stories, and magazines in the field of detective fiction; there's still time to purchase a subscription for this year's five issues of the BSJ, available at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>.

18704. Derrick Belanger's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE PRIMAL MAN (Manchester: Belanger Books, 2016; 167 pp., $9.95) involves Holmes and Watson, and Holmes' cousin Prof. Ellington Dynamo (who is a dead ringer for Prof. George Edward Challenger) investigating a possible yeti, bought to London from Tibet in a block of ice; there's also an account of the first case Holmes solved, as a young student. The publisher's web-site is at <www.belangerbooks.com>.
18705. Also from Belanger: David Marcum's HOLMES AWAY FROM HOME: ADVENTURES FROM THE GREAT HIATUS, VOLUME ONE (1891-1892) and VOLUME TWO (1893-1894) (2016; 279/305 pp., $19.95 each) are collections of pastiches recounting Holmes' adventures between "The Final Problem" and "The Empty House" (he had many adventures, in many countries).
18706. Barry S Brown's MRS. HUDSON'S OLYMPIC TRIUMPH (London: MX Publishing, 2017; 245 pp., $16.95 the fifth in his "Mrs. Hudson of Baker Street" series, and he continues his amusing approach to the Canon: Mrs. Hudson does the real detecting, with assistance from Holmes and Watson, this time in a case that takes them all to Greece for the 1896 Olympics (in which Holmes competes), and of course they solve a mystery on behalf of Her Majesty's government. The author's web-site is at <www.barrysbrown.com> and MX Publishing sells all of its books at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
18707. Also from MX: Marcia Wilson's THE PEACEFUL NIGHT POISONINGS, 2017; 270 pp., $14.95) is the second title in her "Test of the Professionals" series; the first was THE ADVENTURE OF THE FLYING BLUE PIGEON, with LEAP YEAR being the third). The books focus on the professionals (Lestrade, Gregson, and Bradstreet), and their work with Holmes and Watson, and the well-written story offers an interesting look at a world as seen by the Scotland Yarders.
18708. More from MX: Thos. Kent Miller's SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD was a 75-page booklet published in 1991 (October 91 #4); revised and expanded, it was published in three volumes in 2017 as HOLMES BEHIND THE VEIL: SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD (116 pp., $9.95); THE GREAT DETECTIVE AT THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE (414 pp., $18.95), and THE SUSSEX BEEKEEPER AT THE DAWN OF TIME (387 pp., $18.95). Miller focuses on books written by H. Rider Haggard and the characters he created (chiefly Leo Vincey about Tibet, and Alan Quatermain about East and West Africa), with many more from books written by Rudyard Kipling and Jules Verne and others, as well as from both legend and history, past and present.
18709. Still more from MX: Allan Mitchell's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GHOST OF GLASTONBURY (2017; 330 pp., $16.95) has Holmes and Watson in Somerset, a region that Holmes knew well as a youth, with a mystery that involves a detailed ancient history of the area. John Sutton's UPON A NATION'S HONOUR (2018; 204 pp., $16.95) has Holmes and Watson working hard to foil Germany's sinister plot to steal a top-secret weapon from the new HMS Dreadnaught (the weapon would provide Germany with a fearsome advantage in the coming World War).
18710. "Holmes and Watson" (starring Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly) is scheduled to open wide in theaters on Dec. 21, and there's an amusing poster, spotted by Herb Moskowitz, at <www.tinyurl.com/y7x7jbs3>.

18711. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is running at the Maplewood Barn Community Theatre in Columbia, Mo., until Sept. 9 <www.maplewoodbarn.com>. It will also be performed at the Long Beach Playhouse in Long Beach, Calif., Sept. 22-Oct. 20 <www.lbplayhouse.org>.
18712. Ray Crew's "Sherlock Holmes and the Avenging Angels" (not a dramatization of "A Study in Scarlet") is on at the Elementary Theater in Cape May, N.J., through Sept. 29 <www.centerforcommunityarts.org>.
18713. Robert Brock's two-act puppet play "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" is running at the Lancaster Puppet Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., through Nov. 17 <www.lmtyapsody.com>.
18714. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at the Century Church Theatre in Hillsburgh, Ont., Sept. 7-16 <www.tinyurl.com/ybbcm6c>; it also will be performed at the Riverbank Theatre in Marine City, Mich., Sept. 7-30 <www.riverbanktheatre.com>.
18715. John Goodrum's dramatization of "The Nightmare Room" will be performed at the Pomegranate Theatre in Chesterfield, Derbyshire, Sept. 13-15; web-site at <www.chesterfieldtheatres.co.uk>.
18716. Christopher Cutting's "The Accidental Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is due at the Lansdown Hall & Gallery in Stroud, Gloucestershire, Sept. 14-16; and at the Bread and Roses Theatre in Clapham, London, Oct. 6-7; the web-site's at <www.tobaccoteatrecompany.co.uk>.
18717. Hellan Salfas' "Sherlock Holmes i el Destripador" is scheduled (in Catalan) at the Teatre Apolo in Barcelona, Sept. 21-Oct. 7 <www.teatreapolo.com>.
18718. John de Lancie and Nat Segaloff's dramatization of "The Lost World" will be performed at the Winnepesaukee Playhouse in Meredith, N.H., Sept. 28-29, as part of a "Radio Drama Double Feature" <www.winnepesaukeeplayhouse.org>. Dennis Rosa's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" will be performed at the Crescent Theatre in Birmingham, West Midlands, Oct. 4-6 <www.crescenttheatre.co.uk>.
18719. "The Improvised Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled by the Synergy Theater at the Leshner Center for the Arts in Walnut Creek, Calif., Oct. 18-21 <www.lesherartsceter.com>.
18720. Andy Suess' "Sherlock Holmes und der Diebstahl der Quadriga" (a radio play performed by actors and puppets) will be performed at Das Weite Theater in Berlin, Oct. 12 and 13 <www.das-weite-theater.de>.
18721. Thomas Moore's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is due at the Lowry in Salford on Oct. 28, and at the Drayton Arms Theatre in London on Dec. 11-Jan. 12, 2019 <www.thehoundofthebaskervilles.co.uk>.

18722. Apologies for being a bit late with this issue, my excuse being a trip to the land of the "dubhgal" (which translates to "dark foreigner"). That's Ireland, and the presence of the name in the historical records of the 8th and 9th centuries, when the Vikings arrived in Ireland, suggests that the descendants of that dark foreigner are those known today as Doyle (one recalls, of course, that there's a photograph of Conan Doyle in costume as a Viking).
18723. Arthur Conan Doyle's visit to Berlin in 1890 to investigate Robert Koch's widely hailed cure for tuberculosis is briefly discussed in biographies of Conan Doyle (he concluded that Koch's treatment was not, in fact, a cure, and published an article explaining why). Thomas Goetz's THE REMEDY: ROBERT KOCH, ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, AND THE QUEST TO CURE TUBERCULOSIS (New York: Gotham Books, 2014; 298 pp., $27.00) offers a detailed account of how great a scourge the disease was at the time, and informative biographies of the two doctors.
18724. The McClelland Tobacco Company has closed, after 40 years of selling pipe tobaccos from high grade leaf and strip tobacco that's no longer available; "we might have limped along with lesser leaf," the owners said, "but nobody would have been happy with the resulting products, and we would have been ashamed of them." Larry Wagner wrote about the company's history in an article in Tobacconist in May <www.tinyurl.com/y9dt3aya>, but doesn't mention their "221B Series" that featured Black Shag, Arcadia, and Honeydew, prized by Sherlockian pipe-smokers (and others who were happy to collect the handsome tins).
18725. Alexander Orlov has noted a Sherlock Holmes Pub in Kharkov, in the Ukraine (without a web-site, but it's reviewed at TripAdvisor on-line). The fact that there are so many Sherlock Holmes Pubs around the world demonstrates his popularity.
18726. The late Raymond Smullyan, author of THE CHESS MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1979) and many other books, has been credited as having created "the hardest logic puzzle ever." If you would like to try your hand at it, you can find it at Wikipedia <www.tinyurl.com/prux6yo>. But (spoiler alert): don't scroll down too far, because Wikipedia also gives the solution (which you may find as difficult as the puzzle).
18727. "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" was a two-hour special broadcast by CBS-TV on Jan. 10, 1987, starring Michael Pennington (Sherlock Holmes) and Margaret Colin (Jane Watson); Jennie Paton has found it conveniently available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y8wcm94k>.
18728. Many will have seen at least one performance of Matthew Lang's one-act play "Sherlock's Last Case" or Charles Marowitz's two-act play "Sherlock's Last Case" (which was Marowitz's expanded version of the play he wrote as Matthew Lang). There's some interesting discussion of the play in his BURNT BRIDGES (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1990); the sub-title of the book is "a souvenir of the swinging sixties and beyond," and he tells grand stories about his early theatrical career in London and elsewhere.

18729. It's always fun to realize that my local library is housed in three buildings on Capitol Hill. The Library of Congress has all sorts of resources, including a well-staffed reference desk, where for more than 30 years you could find Thomas Mann, who knew just where all the bodies were buried. Tom is now retired, and has found time to write DOC AT THE REFERENCE DESK (Washington: Alexandrina Press, 2017; 77 pp., $7.00), a collection of "small stories in a large library" that gives one an idea of some of the strange things that can happen at a reference desk. Non-Sherlockian (but obviously written by a Sherlockian), and great fun for anyone who likes real libraries.
18731. Craig Sodaro is a prolific playwright for younger performers, and Pioneer Drama Service <www.pioneerdrama.com> has published many of his plays (and plays by other authors); you can search at their web-site for [sherlock holmes] and (for one additional play) [conan doyle].
18732. You can see a poster for "Detective Chimp and the Case of the Missing Mustache" (a film that exists only as a poster) in the trailer for "Teen Titans Go! to the Movies" (2018), and likely in the film itself. There's a brief glimpse of the poster (at 26 seconds) in the trailer <www.tinyurl.com/y8z428kj>.

18733. "If you could attenuate to every strand of quivering data, the future would be entirely calculable," is attributed to Sherlock Holmes in an article by Max Loh in Seeking Alpha on Aug. 20 <www.tinyurl.com/y9aspmol>. So: where and when did Sherlock Holmes say that? Not in the Canon, so don't bother searching there.
18735. George Mann's THE IMMORALITY ENGINE (New York: Tor/Tom Doherty, 2011; 347 pp., $33.87) is the third in his series about Sir Maurice Newbury and Victoria Hobbes; the first was THE AFFINITY BRIDGE (2009), the second THE OSIRIS RITUAL (2010), and the fourth THE EXECUTIONER'S HEART (2013). The series, set in a steampunk Victorian London, with interesting characters, is not Sherlockian, but nicely done. Mann has written some good Sherlockian pastiches, and has a web-site at <www.george-mann.com>.

18736. About those four actors: Richardson and Gielgud played Holmes and Watson in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on BBC Radio (1954); Olivier was Prof. Moriarty in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976); Dench was Sally in "A Study in Terror" (1965), and was heard as Mrs. Hudson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio (1998), and Gielgud played Lord Salisbury in "Murder by Decree" (1979).
18737. Why did Rex Stout decide that Nero Wolfe would live on West 35th Street in New York? John J. McAleer, who wrote a delightful and definitive biography of Stout, reported in 1979 that Stout explained that West 35th Street was where William Gillette's Holmes "received his first acclaim" at the Garrick Theatre.
18738. CLASSIC AMERICAN CRIME FICTION OF THE 1920S (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2018; 1,152 pp., $39.95), annotated by Leslie S. Klinger and with a Foreword by Otto Penzler, is an interesting addition to the wide variety of literature that Les has annotated; the book contains five novels by Earl Derr Biggers, S. S. Van Dine, Ellery Queen, Dashiell Hammett, and W. R. Burnett, from a decade in which American crime writing was reborn (and a decade that is far enough in the past that annotations are helpful indeed). Four of the authors likely will be familiar; Burnett wrote LITTLE CAESAR, today best known as the source of the 1931 movie that starred Edward G. Robinson, and it's a treat to see what Rico was like on the printed page.
18739. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a colorful set of four postage stamps showing dragons, one of them being a green dragon and thus Sherlockian; dragons are mentioned in three of the Sherlock Holmes stories, but only one of them is green.
18740. "If you could attenuate to every strand of quivering data, the future would be entirely calculable," was said by Sherlock Holmes in "The Six Thatchers" (an episode in the BBC's "Sherlock" series), and easily found, as it turns out, with a Google search. This is not the first time Holmes has been quoted in print from an unidentified non-Canonical source, and it's likely to happen more and more often.
18741. Karen Murdock spotted Robert Douglas-Fairhurst's interesting review in the Guardian on Aug. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/y7qrxp6g> of two books about mazes and labyrinths; he draws an interesting connection between "the scarlet thread of murder" in "A Study in Scarlet" and the ball of red thread that Ariadne gave to Theseus to help him find his way out of the Cretan labyrinth after he killed the Minotaur.
18742. The Baker Street Irregulars <www.tinyurl.com/yb57rklo> is one of the teams in the CSFBL [Computer Simulated Fantasy Football League]; you're welcome to click on the "How to Play" button to see how thing work in the League.
18743. Neil Simon died on Aug. 26. He wrote dozens of plays, more than 20 screenplays, and the scripts for five hit musicals, and was sometimes called the world's most popular playwright. Perhaps best-known for "The Odd Couple" (1965), he won the Pulitzer Prize for drama in 1991 for "Lost in Yonkers", and wrote the screenplay for "Murder By Death" (1976); one of the alternate endings for the film included an appearance by Holmes and Watson.

18745. When in Edinburgh: consider The Real Sherlock Holmes Walking Tour of Edinburgh <www.realsherlockholmes.com>; tours can be three hours or a full day (and of course focuses on Conan Doyle rather than Holmes).
18746. Further to the report (February 18 #6) on the competition set by the Folio Society and House of Illustration for Sherlockian artwork, one of the finalists was Nataša Ilinčić, and her three illustrations can be seen at her web-site <www.natasilincic.com/book-illustration-2>, and prints are available at her shop at Society6 <www.tinyurl.com/yafa4s9v>.
18747. Karen Murdock has reported an article about "Miraculous Mushrooms" in the August issue of Remedies, and the Lion's Mane Mushroom, which is believed by some to be quite healthful and helpful. Hericium erinaceus, according to Wikipedia, has other names, including the bearded hedgehog mushroom and the satyr's beard, and is undergoing basic research for potential biological properties.
18748. Canadian skater Stephen Gogolev landed a quad Lutz en route winning a gold medal in a competition in Slovakia last month; he skated to music from the film "Sherlock Holmes" and wore imaginative costume, which you can see in a story in the Toronto Star <www.tinyurl.com/y7dslt9e>.
18749. What's the strangest location for a Sherlockian lecture? A leading candidate would be the Mountain View Mausoleum in Altadena, Calif., where Leslie S. Klinger will be the guest speaker on Oct. 11 at an event that will include (in addition to his lecture) a happy hour, a book signing, and a dessert reception; the story at Pasadena Now <www.tinyurl.com/ya9ct3mm> has a nice image of the mausoleum.
18750. About that postage stamp: the Green Dragon was the inn, kept by old Barnes, three miles off at Crendall (in "Shoscombe Old Place").
18751. Greg Ruby continues to post interesting commentary at "The Fourth Garrideb" <www.fourthgarrideb.com>; devoted to the "Numismatics of Sherlock Holmes", it covers much more than money: "The Decorated Captain Tommy Gregson of the NYPD" explains the medals and ribbons one sees when he wears his dress uniform on the television series "Elementary".
18752. Further to the report (August 18 #7) about the amusing poster for "Holmes and Watson" (the film that stars Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly and is due for release on Dec. 21), the poster is now extremely difficult to find on the Internet: Torrent Freak noted (Aug. 29) <www.tinyurl.com/yczqgv9> that Columbia Pictures sent DMCA notices to scrub any and all copies from the web (the DMCA is the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, enacted in 1998). Not every web-site received a DMCA notice; the Red Circle of Washington still displays the poster in its Calendar <www.redcircledc.org>.

18753. The British Library has an interesting web-site, which offers articles such as Liza Picard's "Education in Victorian Britain" <www.tinyurl.com/yba2nyza> which includes a brief mention of board-schools (as in "The Naval Treaty"). And John Sutherland's "An Introduction to Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats" <www.tinyurl.com/y9cztloq> which includes a mention that Eliot was a great lover of the Sherlock Holmes stories.

18754. Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger have edited FOR THE SAKE OF THE GAME (New York: Pegasus, 2018; 284 pp., $25.95), the fourth in their series of anthologies of "stories inspired by the Sherlock Holmes Canon." Sherlockians often use the word "pastiche" to describe just about any sort of Sherlockian story, including parodies (such as Robert L. Fish's "Schlock Homes" stories) and homages (August Derleth's "Solar Pons" stories), and it may be that yet another word is needed to describe what happens after Laurie and Les ask good writers to do something (or anything) Sherlockian; the results can be interesting and enjoyable indeed.
18755. Further to the item (March 18 #5) on Tania Henzell's new Sherlock Holmes Tartan: she has a web-site at <www.sherlockholmestartan.com> where you can see a wide variety of merchandise; she will also have a table in the Merchants Room during the Birthday Festivities in January.
18756. FLIGHT OR FRIGHT, an anthology of flight-based horror stories that was edited by Stephen King and Bev Vincent (March 18 #4), has been issued as an audiobook, with Simon Jones reading Conan Doyle's "The Horror of the Heights" (Simon and Schuster Audio, $34.99); Jones played Sherlock Holmes on stage in the Gillette play in New York in 1998, and in the musical "Baker Street" in New York in 2001.
18758. Jennie Paton spotted an imaginative and jazzy video that advertises Sherlock Handcraft Gin <www.vimeo.com/287490989>; there's a nice image of the label at <www.markspirits.com>. The method of production is "bathtub with premium grain alcohol," and the name was "inspired by the best hound of all time."
18759. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library newsletter) focuses on Conan Doyle in Africa, with articles by James Reese, Hartley Nathan, and Brenda Rossini along with news from and about the Library and the Collection. Copies are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>, and you can easily join the Friends at <www.acdfriends.org>.
18760. Sorry about that: the amusing poster for "Holmes and Watson" (August 18 #7) is hard to find on the Internet, likely because the studio requested/demanded that it be taken down. If you would like to see it, go to the Red Circle of Washington's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>: it's in the Calendar at the right, at Dec. 21.

18761. Ray Betzner plans to devote his "Studies in Starrett" blog this fall to a detailed examination of the publishing history of THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, a true classic in our literature, and he'd like to hear from anyone who has information about the history of Mike Murphy's plans to reprint the 1933 first edition, which resulted in a limited edition of unbound signatures from the Autolycus Press in 1979. Ray can be reached at <rlbetzner@mac.com> and you can read the first of his weekly installments at <www.bit.ly/2wTxQOB>.
18762. Copies of William R. Cochran's THE EMPTY PROBLEM AND THE FINAL HOUSE (2017) are still available for $21.00 postpaid from Bill (614 South Terrace Drive, Carbondale, IL 62901); the 35-page pamphlet offers the results of his explorations of the two stories that bookend the battle at the Reichenbach.
18763. There's now an official trailer for the upcoming comedy "Holmes and Watson" (starring Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly) <www.tinyurl.com/y8kgh4at>; the film's due in theaters on Dec. 21.
18765. Mattias Boström's FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK will have a Japanese edition from Sakhin-sha, translated by Yuichi Hirayama; his book's already available in Swedish (2013), Danish (2014), German (2015), Norwegian (2016), and English (2017).
18767. John P. Crotty ("Dr. James Mortimer") died on Aug. 12. He worked for many years as a radiologist in St. Louis, and was a colleague of Dr. Gray Chandler Briggs, from whom John acquired the treasure trove of original Frederic Dorr Steele artwork that Briggs had received from the artist. John was an energetic member of the Sherlockian society in St. Louis, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.
18768. Those who enjoy the CBS-TV series "Elementary" will welcome the news that the two-part finale does not end the series. The seventh season is now in production, picking up a year later, and show-runner Rob Doherty has told a TV Line interviewer that "Sherlock, Joan, Gregson, and Bell form this very non-traditional family unit, and as the seventh season begins there's going to be a family crisis." Jonny Lee Miller and Lucy Liu now firmly hold the second-place record for having played Holmes and Watson in the most performances in the most shows (Rathbone and Bruce still lead, counting all their films and radio programs).

18769. S. C. Roberts' HOLMES AND WATSON: A MISCELLANY, first published in 1953, was a landmark in Sherlockian scholarship, offering a collection of his writings, including a play and a pastiche, and his comments on the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House in 1951, demonstrating well just how much fun there is in taking a serious look at the Canon. Roberts was an excellent writer, and the first president of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and his book has now been reissued by the British Library (160 pp., £10.00/$15.95), with an nicely insightful Introduction by Guy Marriott; it's grand to have Roberts' thoughts on the Canon available again.
18770. Conan Doyle's Colt .38 semi-automatic pistol, offered at auction on Sept. 20 in the U.K. (August 18 #1), sold for £4,000 <www.tinyurl.com/y9o9kkoy>.
18771. Further to the item (September 97 #1) about Abdul Hamid II, who was the last Sultan of the Ottoman Empire, the Daily Sabah had an interesting story on July 27 about the Sultan's passion for Sherlock Holmes, and his meeting with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle <www.tinyurl.com/yd57kftz>. Grey Ruby has an interesting post about the medals the Sultan awarded to Conan Doyle and his wife at the Fourth Garrideb web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y7f67nd4>.

18774. Further to the report (July 18 #2) on a proposal to demolish the Lyndhurst Park Hotel (the campaign to protect the hotel had cited evidence that Conan Doyle helped design the redevelopment of the building as a hotel in 1912), the National Park Authority has scheduled a five-day inquiry in January, at which the developer will continue its battle against local objections, according to a story in the Southern Daily Echo <www.tinyurl.com/y7t87ssw>.
18775. Conan Doyle and hockey? We know he was an athlete, but we don't know if he played hockey, although there is a connection: a letter he wrote (well, it actually was written and signed for him by his secretary) from Undershaw to Miss Williams, saying, "I am sorry to say that I have so much heavy work to hand at present that I fear I am quite unable to be of any use to the Hindhead Hockey Club." There seems to be nothing on the Internet about a Hindhead Hockey Club, but there is a Haslemere Hockey Club that was founded in 1946, with eight teams for men, five for ladies, and ten squads in a junior section. And their sport, of course, is field hockey. The letter was at auction this month at Duke's in Dorchester, estimated at £200-£300; it sold for £180 <www.tinyurl.com/ybgulfff>. You can identify letters written and signed by Conan Doyle's secretaries by the symbols written underneath the signatures; this is something to look for if you have any doubts about the handwriting.

18777. Timothy N. Evers' "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" ("The Greek Interpreter" and "Charles Augustus Milverton") will be performed at the Classical Theatre Company in Houston, Tex., Oct. 3-21 <www.classicaltheatre.org>.
18778. "The Twilight of the Gods" (a new "comedic thriller" written by Wes Driver and Gregg Greene) is due at the Williamson County Performing Arts Center at Academy Park in Franklin, Tenn., Oct. 4-14 <www.blackbirdtheater.com>; the play offers "Mark Twain, Edgar Allan Poe, Annie Oakley, Arthur Conan Doyle, and a number of other 19th century luminaries...locked in a battle of wits and ideologies, while a killer in their midst turns their dream for a modern Utopia into a Gothic nightmare."
18779. Patrick Derksen's "A Lighter Shade of Noir" (a parody whose characters include Shirley Holmes and Dr. Watson) is coming up at the Aledo High School in Weatherford, Tex., Oct. 4-7; the Aledo Players have a Facebook page.
18780. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Garvin Theatre in Santa Barbara, Calif., Oct. 10-27; their web-site is at <www.theatregroupsbcc.com>. It's also due at the Jewel Box Theatre in Oklahoma City, Okla., from Nov. 19 to Dec. 5 <www.jewelboxtheatre.org>.
18781. "Spontaneous Sherlock" (improvised by the Spontaneous Players) is performed at Monkey Barrel Comedy in Edinburgh <www.thespontaneousplayers.com>, next on Oct. 11 and 25, and Nov. 8 and 22. Their first performance was in Feb. 2015, and they have since appeared at the Edinburgh Fringe and on tour in the U.K.
18782. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's comedy "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is scheduled at the Barn Theatre in Cirencester, Glos., from Oct. 24 to Nov. 24 <www.barntheatre.org.uk>.
18783. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" will be performed at the Cape Fear Playhouse in Wilmington, N.C., Oct. 25-Nov. 11; web-site at <www.bigdawgproductions.org>.
18784. "Baker Street Irregulars" (by Flip Kobler and Cindy Marcus) is planned by the Owasso Community Theatre in Owasso, Okla., Nov. 1-3; their web-site's at <www.octok.org>.
18785. John Alvarez's new "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of a Siren's Call" will be performed during the Sherlock Holmes Weekend in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 2-4 <www.capemaymac.org>.
18786. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the W. D. Powell Theatre at Union University in Jackson, Tenn., Nov. 8-13 <www.uu.edu/theatre>.

18788. The (very) long weekend will begin on Wednesday, Jan. 9, and end on Sunday, Jan. 13, and the schedule may or may not include some surprises; space is limited at some events, so don't delay registering. There will be more information at Scott Monty's excellent web-site <www.bsiweekend.com>, and his "Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips" will be at <www.ihose.co/bsi2019tips> in December.
18789. Copies of two of the sepia gelatin prints of the Cottingley Fairies went to auction this month at Dominic Winter Auctioneers in Cirencester, estimated at £700-£1,000 each, and went for £15,000 (Frances Griffiths with the fairies) and £5,400 (Elsie Wright with the gnome) <www.tinyurl.com/y7edj26u>.
18790. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's 2018 Christmas Card features a period photograph of The Royal Exchange <www.tinyurl.com/yde36bvd> ($20.00 for a packet of ten). The Society's home-page has much of interest, including (under Publications) a link to an archive of all of the issues of The District Messenger, the newsletter launched by Roger Johnson as a "Grapevine Service" in 1982 and now (edited by Jean Upton) after 379 issues continues to offer the same mix of information and gossip in the U.K. (and elsewhere)
18791. that this newsletter does for the U.S. (and elsewhere).
18793. MC Black has noted the web-site of the Haslemere Society, which has placed a blue plaque at Undershaw (Conan Doyle's former home); their web-site's at <www.haslemeresociety.org/undershaw.html>, with a link to the booklet that the society issued when the plaque was unveiled in 2016.

18795. Peter Melonas has been creating interesting Sherlockian (and other) artwork since the 1980s, and his offers at eBay include six Sherlockian prints, one of them a (and colorful) tribute to "The Dancing Men" ($20.00) that you can see at <www.tinyurl.com/y7ovwujc>.
18796. Bill Seil discovered an intriguing Literary Hub blog by Emily Temple on "A Century of Reading: The 10 Books That Defined the 1900s". THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is one of the ten, and Temple noted that the book revived the Sherlock Holmes series, asking "was this an early precursor of Twitter fans bringing back every show on the planet?" <www.tinyurl.com/yc7ohr6u>.

18797. THE ADVENTURES OF TWO BRITISH GENTLEMEN IN GERMANY/DIE ABENTEUER ZWEIER BRITISCHER GENTLEMEN IN DEUTSCHLAND, edited by Nicole Glücklich, and published by the Deutsche Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft (286 pp. in English and 298 pp. in German), is a welcome companion to their earlier book about Switzerland (July 17 #1); the new book discusses the visits to Germany by Conan Doyle, the Great War, Sherlockian societies in Germany (including a detailed discussion of a society apparently founded in 1902), and Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, radio, and television in Germany, all carefully and colorfully illustrated. Available for $42.00 (€36.00) postpaid from the society via PayPal <info@sherlock-holmes-gesellschaft.de>.
18798. Birmingham is the youngest city in Europe, with nearly 40% of its population aged under 25, according to the "Student City Guide" published in The Sunday Times on Sept. 23. The Guide also notes that the city has made its mark as the birthplace of HP Sauce and Black Sabbath, "not to mention Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who bought a violin on Sherlock Street while he was a medical student." No author stated for the Guide, so there's no one to ask for evidence that Conan Doyle ever played the violin. And yes, he was born in Edinburgh.
18799. Howard Ostrom's SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREENS 1929-1939 is the first volume of his Sherlock Holmes Cyclopedia (Saint-Sauvier: Mycroft's Brother Editions, 2018; 88 pp., €30.00) <www.mycrofts.net>; it's a delightful exploration of the first decade of Sherlockian talking films, major and minor, from "The Ghost Talks" (1929) to "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939). Howard has spread his net widely, and includes actors in Sherlockian costume, and the entries are accompanied by contemporary reviews, photographs, posters, and commentary; those who have access to the Internet can (and surely will) find many of the major (and minor) films at YouTube or Vimeo. Copies (inscribed on request) are available for delivery in the U.S. for $35.00 postpaid, from Howard (5748 SW 60th Place, Ocala, FL 34474).
18800. James Mustich's 1,000 BOOKS TO READ BEFORE YOU DIE (from Workman, 2018) was warmly reviewed by Michael Dirda in the Washington Post, and it is reported that one of the 1,000 books is THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES ("it would be hard to name another modern literary character who has achieved such international celebrity").
18801. MYCROFT AND SHERLOCK, by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse (New York: Titan Books, 2018; 355 pp., $25.99) is set in 1872, two years after their MYCROFT HOLMES (June 15 #2); the brothers are unintentionally investigating the same mystery, and don't share information until the end of their case. The book's a thriller as well as a mystery, with interesting major and minor characters, and it offers an intriguing look at Victorian London.

18804. Samantha Wolov has reported <www.bookmarksreviews.com>, handy for those who want to see what reviewers have said about new books from major publishers; you can also search to see how older books (and authors) have been rated.
18805. Reported: the Folio Society's THE SELECTED ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (February 18 #6) has been published ($45.95), and you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/y85vw9br>; Helen Dorey was on the panel of six judges that chose the illustrator (Max Lüffler), and there's an introduction by Michael Dirda.
18806. Nils Clausson's ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S ART OF FICTION: A REVALUATION (Newcastle upon Tyne: Cambridge Scholars, 2018; 384 pp., £67.99) opens with a suggestion that "the fact that Conan Doyle is almost universally regarded as a popular writer has meant that his fiction, like most popular fiction, has been studied not as literature but as a manifestation of popular culture." Clausson offers an academic "close reading" that is intended to reveal the "neglected artistry" in Conan Doyle's fiction a decidedly different view of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian writings. The publisher offers a 40% discount if you purchase from their web-site by Nov. 15; use the special code ACD40 at their web-site <www.cambridgescholars.com>.
18807. Cinema Scandinavia reported on Oct. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/y7luok7w> that the television series "Sherlock North" (in development by Snapper Films in Finland) has been picked up by Viaplay for international distribution; Holmes travels to Scandinavia after the battle at the Reichenbach and "finds himself solving crimes in Finnish Lapland."
18808. "The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia" at <www.arthur-conan-doyle.com> is a spectacular web-site, maintained by Alexis Barquin in France. It has more than 5,000 pages, and is devoted to all aspects of the life and career of Conan Doyle. You can see the depth of the research with a text search for [les andelys]. It's a town in Normandy that is mentioned several times in Conan Doyle's fiction, and Alexis explains that two of Conan Doyle's sisters went to school there, and Conan Doyle visited the town, and there's a video of a 1959 television interview with the woman whose home he stayed in (the interview was filmed in her garden).
18809. The opening of "Holmes & Watson" (with Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly) has been delayed until Dec. 25, which will please those who want something to do after opening their Christmas presents; no reason was given, but likely it was competition (five other films were scheduled for Dec. 21). The official name for the film now has an ampersand (and no reason was given for that, either).

18810. Bill Mason's A HOLMES BY ANY OTHER NAME (Rockville: Wildside, 2018; 195 pp., $12.99) offers the results of his exploration of variations of the Great Detective's name that he found in parodies, films, comic books, and many other sources, from 1891 to the present; 578 names, from Airlock

- Holmes to Zoolock Holmes, annotated and indexed, and there are shorter lists for Watson and Moriarty (it's amusing to see the fun people have had with the name of Holmes, Watson, and Moriarty). The publisher's web-site is at <www.wildsidepress.com>.
18811. Also from Wildside: SHERLOCK HOLMES IS LIKE, edited by Christopher Redmond (2018; 275 pp., $14.99), offers what he describes as "sixty comparisons for an incomparable character," with essays by sixty Sherlockians whose suggestions range from traditional and expected to weird and wonderful (the latter including Lucy van Pelt, proposed by Steve Mason).
18812. The airport in Tottori in Japan has been renamed the Tottori Sand Dunes Conan Airport, according to a story in the Japan Times (July 28). The name of the airport honors the province's impressive sand dunes, and the manga and anime character created by Tottori native Gosho Aoyama; the comic has been running in a weekly magazine since 1994 and features a young detective named in honor of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (the English version of the manga is called "Case Closed"). You can see Detective Conan at the airport in an image at <www.tinyurl.com/y8rysge>.
18813. Jennie Paton spotted "Back of the Bookshelf" (a monthly podcast of classic short stories narrated by C. J. Carter-Stephenson); the first story is Conan Doyle's "The Disintegration Machine" <www.vimeo.com/293785106>.
18814. Brian W. Pugh continues to revise his A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (March 14 #7); the fourth edition (London: MX Publishing, 2018; 444 pp., $34.95) is a grand resource for information about the life and work of Conan Doyle. The chronology starts in 1755 (with the birth of James Doyle) and ends in 1998 (the memorial service for Dame Jean), and one of the truly useful aspects of the chronology is the citation of sources, so that one can sort through conflicts (and learn that in some cases, Conan Doyle himself was not the most reliable source). There's also information about aspects of his life and works, and maps and photographs, and a careful and useful index compiled by Geraldine Beare. Recommended. MX's books are available at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
18815. Also from MX: Daniel D. Victor's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SHADOWS OF ST. PETERSBURG (2018; 182 pp., $12.95) offers an interesting intersection of the Canon with CRIME AND PUNISHMENT; Holmes and Watson are in pursuit of a killer who seems to be recreating the murders in Dostoyevsky's book. Elizabeth Crowens' SILENT MERIDIAN (2016; 350 pp. $16.95) is a complicated time-shifting novel that involves Conan Doyle, Wells, Houdini, Freud, Jung, and a Japanese shogun in a set of parallel and sometimes supernatural universes. W. P. Lawler's TREACHERY IN TORQUAY (2018; 317 pp., $16.95) is set on the south coast of England in 1905, with Holmes and Watson investigating a series of brutal murders and aiding a client in protecting his family from dire peril. TALES FROM THE STRANGER'S ROOM, VOLUME 3, edited by David Ruffle (2017; 207 pp., $16.95), is an interesting anthology of pastiches, poetry, vignettes, and quizzes.

18816. The International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition will open at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., on Nov. 3, running through May 27, 2019, and their web-site's at <www.lsc.org>. It's a spectacular exhibition, and it has been welcomed with enthusiasm everywhere it has been in the U.S. and overseas; there are no future venues scheduled for the exhibition, and it's nice indeed (for travelers from afar) that it will 18817. be open during the Sherlockian birthday festivities in January.
18818. Congratulations to Russell Merritt, who received the David Shepard Career Achievement Award at the Denver Silent Film Festival; Russell was instrumental in the rescue and restoration of both "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) and "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929).
18819. Canadian Holmes, published quarterly by The Bootmakers of Toronto, always is interesting; the fall 2018 issue includes Peter Calamai's "Seeking the Conan Doyle 'Estate' in Portugal" (detailing the results of his investigation triggered by a report that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once had an estate in Sintra) (he didn't, but there was one), and much more in the 40-page issue; subscriptions to the quarterly cost $30.00 (US or CA) a year, by mail to the Bootmakers at 2045 Lakeshore Boulevard West #3303, Etobicoke, ON M9V 2Z6, Canada; or at their web-site <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
18821. The Japanese eight-episode series "Miss Sherlock" (produced by HBO Asia and Hulu Japan) (May 18 #4) is now available on HBO Go in the U.S., and it is well worth watching; it stars Y-ko Takeuchi as Sherlock, and Shihori Kanjiya as her friend Wato-san, and is full of Canonical echoes.
18822. It's sometimes tempting to suggest that everything has a Sherlockian connection. "King Kong" does, at least to the author of the Sherlock Holmes stories: Willis H. O'Brien, who created the stop-motion special effects for "The Lost World" (1925), did the same for "King Kong" (1933), and the late Forry Ackerman owned a pair of models of pterodactyls, one from each film. If you'd like to see what modern technology can do, there's a trailer for the musical "King Kong" (now in previews on Broadway) that shows their 20-foot version of the "gentle giant" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=y8YJwRUTK7Y>. See also the N.Y. Times <www.tinyurl.com/yb9losty>.
18823. EconoTimes reported on Oct. 23 that the CBS-TV series "Elementary" has celebrated production of its 150th episode <www.tinyurl.com/y7fywz4e>, and has links to images of the event at the Twitter account of writer and producer Jeffrey Paul King, who has worked on every episode.
18824. Bradley Harper's A KNIFE IN THE FOG (Amherst: Seventh Street Books, 2018; 288 pp., $15.95) has Arthur Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell in pursuit of Jack the Ripper, accompanied by Margaret Harkness (who also was a real person, quite familiar with the appalling conditions faced by the poor in London); Conan Doyle is an excellent detective, and the story's nicely told.

18825. And theatrical news: C. P. Stancich's "Sherlock Holmes and the Doom of Devilsmoor" is on at the Gillette Community Theatre in Gillette, Wyo., though Nov. 3 <www.gillettecommunitytheatre.weebly.com>.
18827. Jeffery Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders" is running at the Clear Creek Community Theatre in Nassau Bay, Tex., through Nov. 4 <www.clearcreekcommunitytheatre.com>.
18828. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is on at the Little Theatre in American Falls, Idaho, through Nov. 5; Facebook page at <www.tinyurl.com/y9p2a2ud>. It's also due at the Wade James Theatre in Edmonds, Wash., June 14-30; web-site at <www.edmondsdriftwoodplayers.org>.
18829. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed at the Monon Depot Theatre in Lafayette, Ind., through Nov. 10; the web-site's at <www.lafayetteticiv.org>. It also will be performed at the Andria Theatre in Alexandria, Minn., Jan. 11-20, 2019 <www.andriatheatre.org>; and the Des Moines Community Playhouse in Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 25-Feb. 10, 2019 <www.dmplayhouse.com>.
18830. Brian Guehring's "Sherlock Holmes and the First Baker Street Irregular" is due at the Lansing Hannah Community Center in East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 2-11 <www.allofuxexpress.org>.

18832. "Sherlock Holmes and the Missing Holly" is due at the Prairie Pines Playhouse in Maize, Kans., Nov. 16-Dec. 23 <www.prairiepinesplayhouse.com>.
18833. The Rain or Shine Theatre Company will perform their new comedy "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Case of Dr. Jekyll & Miss Hyde" at the Bradwell Village Hall in Bradwell, Oxon., on Nov. 17, and then take the show on tour in the U.K. <www.rainorshire.co.uk>.
18835. The Tehachapi Community Theater will perform John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Christmas Carol" at TCT Second Space In Tehachapi, Calif., Nov. 23-Dec. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/y9nt4zyn>.
18836. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is due at the Hanover Tavern in Hanover, Va., Nov. 30-Jan. 6 <www.virginiarep.org>. And at the Stage III Community Theatre in Casper, Wyo., Dec. 7-23; web-site at <www.stageiiitheatre.org>.

18837. Modern technology has made it possible to abbreviate the traditional forecast for the birthday festivities in New York in January; details available at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/2018/11/20/the-2019-bis-weekend>. Space is limited at some events, so don't delay registering.
18838. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity.
18840. Those who fondly remember the days when one could listen to "Bob and Ray" on the radio in the 1950s will welcome Jennie Paton's discovery that one of their "Sherlock Sage" segments (with Bob Elliott as Sherlock Sage and Ray Goulding as Dr. Clyde) is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y8xjs8w>; and yes, YouTube does audio as well as video.
18841. Thomas D. Utecht ("Arthur Charpentier") died on Nov. 9. He worked in marketing communications for Macy's and then for the U.S. Navy, and discovered the Sherlockian world at a John Bennett Shaw workshop in 1984. Thom was a founder of the Montague Street Lodgers and a stalwart member of the Three Garridebs, and (like Holmes) was an inveterate pipe-smoker; he was an enthusiastic attendee at Autumn in Baker Street, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
18842. The next 221B Con will be held in Atlanta on Apr. 5-7; registration is now open at <www.221bcon.com>, where you'll also find information on guests and performers and much more (it's bill as a "fan con for all things Sherlock Holmes"). Bob Stek's enthusiastic report on the 2014 event will be found on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog at <www.tinyurl.com/y8y3muv5>.
18843. A passing mention of George Charles Haité, reported by Karen Murdock from a newspaper in New Zealand, led to an interesting discovery: Haité was a designer, painter, illustrator and writer who illustrated an article on "The History of the Strand" in the first (Jan. 1891) issue of The Strand Magazine and (far more important to Sherlockians) created the iconic image that graced the cover of the magazine for decades; it also appeared on the covers of the first British editions of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES. There is an excellent entry about him at Wikipedia; his original artwork was on display at the "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" exhibition in London in 2014-2015, and is reproduced in the catalog of the exhibition (Quarterly Press) and in Alex Werner's book about the exhibition (Ebury).

18845. Further to the report (September 18 #4) on Canadian skater Stephen Gololev performing in an imaginative costume to music from the film "Sherlock Holmes" in a competition in Slovakia, Jennie Paton has found video of him competing at the Minto Summer Skate in Canada <www.tinyurl.com/ya9bsrhl>.
18846. Edward J. Van Liere was a prolific contributor to Sherlockian literature in the 1950s and 1960s, and a co-founder of The Scion of the Four in Morgantown, W. Va., and a new book provides much more about his life and career. William A. Neal's QUIET ADVOCATE (Morgantown: West Virginia University Libraries, 2017; 264 pp., $14.95) focuses on Van Liere's many contributions medical education in the state (where during the depression he was successful in establishing a four-year medical school). His Sherlockian writings were collected in A DOCTOR ENJOYS SHERLOCK HOLMES (1959), and he was a contributor to Michael Harrison's anthology BEYOND BAKER STREET (1976); Neal's biography has a fine chapter devoted to Van Liere as a Sherlockian.
18847. For those who are into Sherlockian games, MMORPG notes that Wizard101 has released a "Great Detective" bundle starring Sherlock Bones and Dr. Rolf; details (and images) are at <www.tinyurl.com/y83gnxds> and (with video) at <www.tinyurl.com/y7zo7r26>.
18848. "Can you solve the secret werewolf riddle?" is the riddle-of-the-month at TED-Ed, discovered and reported by Samantha Wolov; there's Sherlockian artwork, but otherwise it's not Sherlockian <www.tinyurl.com/yd4eg444>.
18849. "I sent down to Stanford's for the Ordnance map," Sherlock Holmes said to Watson (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). The iconic London bookshop, which was established by Edwin Stanford in 1853, is moving to a new location (just round the corner in Covent Garden); the Stanfords web-site has a section on the shop's history at <www.stanfords.co.uk/our-history>. If you don't recognize the name, that's because it's mis-spelled Stamford in many editions of the Canon.
18851. "A box of Watson's memorabilia of Sherlock Holmes has been stolen from his club in Piccadilly," is the premise of the first in the Sherlock geocache series set in London <www.tinyurl.com/y97oylfe>, reported by Jennie Paton. Geocaching is the modern version of a Victorian outdoor recreational activity called letterboxing, participants now use GPS technology, and there's an excellent article about geocaching at Wikipedia.

18852. Nicholas Utechin's THE COMPLETE PAGET PORTFOLIO (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2108; 274 pp., $46.95) is a delightful tribute to Sidney Paget, offering high-quality reproductions of all his Sherlockian illustrations from The Strand Magazine, and (for the first time) an opportunity to see 22

- (that's almost all) pieces of the original artwork known to have survived shown (in full color) side-by-side with the illustrations published in the magazine; the book also includes full-color portraits of Sherlock Holmes that weren't published in the Strand. Highly recommended. The publisher's web-site is at <www.gasogenebooks.com>, and you can listen to an interesting interview with Nick at <www.ihose.co/ihose156>.
18853. Gasogene also has published Terence Faherty's THE TRUE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ANNOTATED EDITION (2018; 153 pp., $19.95); it's a collection of his amusing "earlier drafts" of the stories, some of them reprinted from the annual Sherlockian issues of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, and others new, and all great fun. Faherty's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian bibliography can be found at his web-site <www.terencefaherty.com>.
18855. Stan Lee died on Nov. 12. He was a legend in the world of comic books, and famous for creating a new world of super-heroes for Marvel Comics. In 2008 he told an interviewer that "There have been millions of detective stories over the years. Many of them are forgettable. Somehow Sherlock Holmes has endured, mainly because no one could write a detective story as brilliantly as Conan Doyle and nobody could come up with a character as interesting and flawed as Sherlock Holmes." And two years later he explained that "I know what I loved about Conan Doyle's work was he made his characters so real. I mean not only me, but the people that read Sherlock Holmes felt that they knew him." The "Marvel Preview" series (billed as "Stan Lee Presents") had a two-part "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1976, and he had author credit for "Spidey Super Stories: Sherlock Spidey" in The Electric Company in 1977.
18856. The Strand Magazine (the modern version that's edited by Andrew Gulli) continues to offer a wide variety of Sherlockian merchandise at its web-site, including an attractive and artistic wall calendar for next year ($24.95); the URL is <www.strandmag.com/product/sherlockholmes-calendar-2019>.
18857. "Live from the Red Carpet" is the title of the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" report on this year's "From Gillette to Brett" conference in Bloomington, Ind., on Oct. 5-7 <www.tinyurl.com/y9lyjjh5>. There were 150 people on hand for the festivities, and you can hear all about it at the podcast.
18858. "I know perfectly well how unneptile you are about aunts," the late Ronald Knox wrote in his Miles Bredon novel DOUBLE CROSS PURPOSES (1937), Stu Nelan has noted (on p. 155 in his copy of the Dover edition), and he wonders just what "unneptile" means. Google is of no assistance, and it's possible that Knox, who enjoyed word-play, invented the word. Has anyone seen the word used anywhere else?

18859. "American Is Killed by Bow and Arrow on Remote Indian Island" was the headline on the N.Y. Times article (Nov. 21) about the death of John Allen Chau, who attempted to go ashore on North Sentinel (one of the Andaman Islands) apparently in hopes of converting the tribesmen to Christianity. The Indian government has banned all access to the islands, and the seven fishermen who brought Chau to the island have been arrested and charged with culpable homicide not amounting to murder; the government also has announced that although charges have been filed against "unknown persons" for killing Chau, it is virtually impossible to prosecute members of the protected tribes, or to recover his body.
18860. Thanks to YouTube, admirers of the Brigadier Gerard can see him in action in "The Fighting Eagle" (1927) <www.tinyurl.com/ybx8ap8t>, and in "How the Brigadier Won His Medal" (1954) <www.tinyurl.com/y74nymv3>.
18861. There's additional news for admirers of the Brigadier: the British Library has acquired the manuscripts for five of the first eight stories, and Randall Stock has a detailed report on the manuscripts, and their history, at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y8gmfu08>. The survival of the manuscripts was reported more than two years ago (March 16 #1), and it is nice indeed that they will now be readily available to scholars.
18862. Melvin Ragin ("Wah Wah Watson") died on Oct. 24. A guitarist and session musician, he was famous for his skills with the wah-wah pedal and in 1976 recorded an LP album "Elementary" that showed him on the cover with deerstalker and calabash; you can see the cover and listen to an extended release version of the album at <www.tinyurl.com/y8cgxfau>.
18863. Flicker Alley (the company that distributed the restored versions of William Gillette's 1916 "Sherlock Holmes" and Wallace Beery's 1925 "The Lost World") also offers "Douglas Fairbanks: A Modern Musketeer" (a 5-DVD set of digitally remastered versions of 11 films that include his 1916 "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish") (with Fairbanks as Coke Enneyday in Sherlockian costume) and a 22-page booklet with an essay about Fairbanks and his films by Jeffrey Vance and Tony Maietta ($69.95) <www.flickeralley.com>. The set offers a grand opportunity to see some of Fairbanks' classic films (as well as one of the truly weird Sherlockian films).
18866. "Cats on the Page" is an exhibition at the British Library, that will run from Nov. 27 to Mar. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/y7cjcvo>; you will have a chance to "renew your acquaintance with familiar favorites including Mog, Winnie and Wilbur, and T. S. Eliot's Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats (the last of which includes "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" and "Gus: The Theatre Cat", both of interest to Sherlockians).

18867. "Everyone needs a mother who keeps them grounded," according to Benedict Cumberbatch, who told GQ that he bounded home, full of excitement, after being told that he would be the next Sherlock Holmes, but he was soon put in his place. "The first thing my mother said when I mentioned I'd got the part was: 'You don't have the right nose.'" Noted by Karen Murdock in Patrick Kidd's "The Times Diary" in The Times on Nov. 2.
18868. Juris Jurjevics died on Nov. 7. He had a long career in the publishing industry, and in 1986 was one of the founders of the Soho Press, to publish "books that deserve to be published, but that the bigger houses can't afford to do." His obituary in the N.Y. Times noted that earlier, as editor in chief for E. P. Dutton, he "scooped up a manuscript that had crossed his desk on a hunch that readers would clamor for a Sherlock Holmes revival." The novel was Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION (1974).
18869. Hospitality & Catering News reported on Oct. 13 www.tinyurl.com/yakcegyz that Adrian Martin, newly appointed Master Cook at Simpson's-in-the-Strand (an establishment mentioned in the Canon), has delved into its archives to create a spectacular new Bill of Fare. And it's spectacular indeed.
18870. Basil Rathbone with two Hounds of the Baskervilles? Not quite, but there's an amusing signed photograph of Rathbone coming to auction at Written Word Autographs on Dec. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/y8kg4wnk>.

18871. Further to the item (April 16 #4) on the metal plates apparently created in 1940 to celebrate Macmillan's publication of Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES, Greg Ruby has continued his research on "Sherlock Holmes and the American Bank Note Mystery" and posted his latest findings at the Fourth Garrideb web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ycvgvpy7>.
18872. Greg also notes <www.tinyurl.com/y7a7hdfm> the appointment of Hugh Laurie as CBE (that's Companion of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for services to drama in the 2018 New Year Honours List. Laurie read "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio 2 (in 2002) and played the Holmes-inspired House in the long-running Fox television series, and will be seen as Mycroft in the film "Holmes & Watson" due in theaters in December.
18873. Peter Brace died on Oct. 29. He began his long acting career in 1947, and went on to being a stuntman and stunt coordinator, with more than a hundred credits; he played the hangman in the 1990 television film "Hands of a Murderer" (also known as "Sherlock Holmes and the Prince of Crime").
18874. Karen Murdock has noted an article in the Irish Times (Nov. 10) about how craft breweries are becoming creative with artwork on their cans. Yellowbelly Beer in Wexford offers an "It's Elementary" India Pale Ale that has Sherlockian artwork <www.yellowbellybeer.ie/beer-type/its-elementary>.

18876. George A. Cooper died on Nov. 16. He began his acting career on stage in Britain in the 1940s and then moved to television, performing for almost 50 years. He was Mr. Fawcett in "The Croxley Master" in the BBC series "The Stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (1967), Inspector Gregson in "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Greek Interpreter" in Peter Cushing's "Sherlock Holmes" series (1968), and Inspector Beedel in "The Missing Witness Sensation" in "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971).
18877. Theatrics: John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Christmas Carol" is being performed at the Company OnStage in Houston, Texas, through Dec. 22 <www.companionstage.org>.
18878. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" on at the Runway Theatre in Grapevine, Texas, through Dec. 17 <www.runwaytheatre.com>; and at the Richardson Theatre Centre in Richardson, Texas, through Dec. 23 <www.richardsontheatrecentre.net>. It's also scheduled at the Performing Arts Center in Tarpon Springs, Fla., Dec. 8-16 <www.tarponarts.org>.
18879. Tim Kelly's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Salterton Playhouse in Salterton, Devon, Dec. 3-8 <www.saltertondrama.co.uk>.
18880. Tim Kelly's adaptation of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Colonnade Theatre in Ringgold, Ga., Dec. 6-8 <www.colonnadecenter.org>.
18881. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" will be performed at Theatre Lawrence in Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 18-27 <www.wp.theatrelawrence.com>. Also at Stage West in Fort Worth, Texas, May 30-June 20 <www.sagewest.org>.
18883. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" will be performed at the Black Box Theatre in LaGrange, Ga., Jan. 24-Feb. 2 <www.lsparts.org>; at the Hill Country Community Theatre in Cottonwood Shore, Tex., Feb. 14-Mar. 3 <www.thehcct.org>; at the Studio Theatre in the Hong Kong Cultural Centre, Mar. 29-Apr. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/ybcw83r6>; at the Falcon Theatre in Newport, Ky., May 3-18 <www.falcontheatre.net>; and at the Bellevue Little Theatre in Bellevue, Neb., May 3-19 <www.bellevuelittletheatre.weebly.com>. Also at the Lowe Auditorium in Upper Ferntree Gully, Vic., Aug. 8-31; web-site at <www.1812theatre.com.au>.
18884. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Regis Centre in Bognor Regis, West Sussex, Feb. 7-9, 2019 <www.regiscentre.co.uk>.
18885. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Music" (performed by the Nashville Symphony) is scheduled at the Schermerhorn Symphony Center in Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/yc75uvxe>.

18886. There is still time to reserve for many of the events during the birthday festivities in New York (although the Saturday cocktail reception has sold out, and no tickets will be available at the door); details are available at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/2018/11/20/the-2019-bsi-weekend>.
18887. Flicker Alley has announced that its deluxe Blu-ray/DVD dual-format edition of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929) will be released on Feb. 5, and there is a pre-order sale price of $29.95 <www.tinyurl.com/y9qh6zjs>; this is the last Sherlockian silent film, directed by Richard Oswald, and the bonus materials will include Oswald's earlier "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1914), as well as original commentary on the story and on the restoration, and an illustrated booklet with an essay by film historian Russell Merritt.
18888. "There's a fundamental principle of law that derives from Sherlock Holmes, which is the dog that didn't bark," Supreme Court Justice Samuel Alito said during an argument on Nov. 26; the case involved jurisdiction on Native American land in Oklahoma, and you can read the details in an article in The Economist (Nov. 28) <www.tinyurl.com/ya8qyrkv>.
18889. "The Vampire of the Lyceum" (a short-story pastiche written by Charles Veley and Anna Elliott) is available (free) as text and read by Simon Prebble at their web-site <www.sherlockandlucy.com/the-vampire-of-the-lyceum>.
18890. Big Chief Studios reports that production has been completed on their licensed figures showing Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman in costume from "The Abominable Bride" are now on their way from China and should be available for Christmas shopping <www.tinyurl.com/ycgvdqaf>.
18891. Thomas Mann's A CHRISTMAS CAROL AT 221B (League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, 2018; 21 pp., $5.50 at Amazon) is a nicely seasonal (and Dickensian) pastiche.

18893. Howard Ostrom has now identified more than 4,300 actors who have appeared as Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, radio, television, the Internet, and elsewhere. His SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREENS 1929-1939 (the first volume of his Sherlock Holmes Cyclopedia) appeared earlier this year (October 18 #2), and you can hear him discuss the project in the latest "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcast <www.tinyurl.com/ybslndo3>.
18894. The Canon has many mentions of fog, and today's readers might not know just what a "London particular" really was like. The MiceTimes of Asia had an interesting illustrated article on Dec. 8 about the "great smog" that enveloped London for four days in December 1952, when 12,000 people died and more than 100,000 were injured <www.tinyurl.com/ybxecqcg>.

18895. Responding to the query about "unneptile" (Nov. 18 #3), Steve Rothman suggests a bit of word-play on "neptis" (in Latin). It should be noted that "neptis" can mean "niece" as well as "grand-daughter" and that a nephew is "nepote" or "nepos" (giving us the word "nepotism"). Stu Nelan reports that Miles Bredon is speaking to his wife Angela, about her aunt, so Angela would be the niece (and "unneptile" would be a coinage by Ronald Knox for "not niece-ish").
18896. SHERLOCK and SHERLOCK DELUXE are memory games designed by Reinhard Staupé, first issued in 2009 for ages 5 to adult. SHERLOCK ($10.00) has 49 cards, and SHERLOCK DELUXE ($15.00) has 60 cards and a small Sherlockian figurine. The games are made by PlayRoom Entertainment for Ultra-PRO Entertainment, and are available at Amazon and elsewhere.
18897. All sorts of things turn up on YouTube. Howard Ostrom has noted two videos produced by the Columbia University Libraries Preservation Committee: "Murder in the Stacks" (1987) and "Shedding Light on the Case" (1990), with David Chapman (Sherlock Holmes) showing David Bowman (Dr. Watson) the proper techniques of preservation. You can search for the videos by their titles at <www.youtube.com>.
18899. Denis Norden died on Sept. 19. Famous (sometimes notorious) for his often-ribald sense of humor, he had a long career on British radio and television and was a successful screenwriter as well; he wrote the screenplay for "The Best House in London" (1969), an X-rated film (because it was that sort of house) remarkable for a very short scene that included uncredited performances by Peter Jeffrey as Holmes and Thorley Walters as Watson.
18900. Michael Robertson's A BAKER STREET WEDDING (New York: Minotaur, 2018; 291 pp., $26.99) is the sixth in his series about Reggie and Nigel Heath, who have their offices in the building at 221B Baker Street, and a lease that requires them to answer Sherlock Holmes' mail; Reggie's marriage to Laura Rankin puts them both in unexpected and dire peril, and they are rescued by Reggie's law clerk Lois and a thoroughly intriguing character who has made a minor appearance in a previous book but now comes into his own (no spoiler here, but Sherlockians won't be fooled for very long).

18904. Vicki Delany's A SCANDAL IN SCARLET (New York: Crooked Lane, 2018; 293 pp., $26.99) is the fourth in her series of "Sherlock Holmes Bookshop" mysteries that star Gemma Doyle (proprietor of the Sherlock bookshop) and her friend Jayne Wilson (who manages the next-door Mrs. Hudson's Tea Room). The pastiche begins with a mysterious fire at the local house museum, and needless to say there are murders and a complicated plot. The author has more than one series going, and her web-site's at <www.vickidelany.com>.
18908. A bit more about T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS: there is a registered charity called Old Possum's Practical Trust, established by Valerie Eliot in 1990 <www.old-possums-practical-trust.org.uk>.
18909. Japanese animator Hayao Miyazaki's long and distinguished career includes his work on the 1984 Japanese-Italian television series "Meitantei Homuzu" ["Famous Detective Holmes"], widely available in English as "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes"; Miyazaki directed the first six episodes, and they're great fun. Jenne Paton reports an interesting video by Stevem at YouTube about "Miyazaki's Forgotten Gem" <www.tinyurl.com/yc6bwhpk>.

18910. From manga to the stage: the Anime News Network reports (Dec. 21) that Ryōsuke Takeuchi and Hikaru Miyoshi's "Yūkoku no Moriarty" ["Moriarty the Patriot"] manga has inspired a stage musical that will be performed in Tokyo and Osaka in May <www.tinyurl.com/y9ts25js>; the manga

- debuted in 2016 and stars James Moriarty, an orphan who is adopted into the Moriarty family. The musical will star Shōgo Suzuki (William James Moriarty) and Ryō Hirano (Sherlock Holmes). There's a brief trailer for the musical at <www.tinyurl.com/ybulsm4>.
18911. Further to the report (October 18 #3) that THE SELECTED ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES has now been published by the Folio Society, there was a post on Dec. 5 at the Flavorwire web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yazqhzzy> that offers a look at some of the artwork, and at Michael Dirda's introduction.
18912. Tim Dedopoulos' THE SHERLOCK HOLMES PUZZLE CARD CHALLENGE (Carlton, 2018; $14.95) is a colorful box of 60 decorative cards with logical puzzles that are only marginally Sherlockian.
18913. John Wulp died on Nov. 27. He was a playwright, producer, director, visual artist, designer, and educator, and in 1979 was nominated for a Tony Award as scenic designer for "The Crucifer of Blood" (which starred Paxton Whitehead and Glenn Close).
18914. The International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes debuted in Columbus, Ohio, in 2014, and after touring in the United States and in other countries, now is at the Library Science Center in Jersey City, N.J. through May 27, and well worth a visit. There are spectacular Sherlockian and Doylean items on display, and a murder mystery (written by Dan Stashower) to solve, and you can listen to Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's interview with exhibition creators Amy Noble Seitz and Geoffrey Curley at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcast at <www.tinyurl.com/y7bn6cjj>.
18915. Gyles Brandreth, author of seven murder mysteries that feature Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde, has written a new short story that them at a festive party at Buckingham Palace; the story was published, with colorful illustrations, in the Mail on Sunday on Dec. 23 <www.tinyurl.com/yddea86y>.
18917. The copyright clock continues to tick: at the end of this year "The Creeping Man" (published in 1923) will enter the public domain. Only the final nine Sherlock Holmes stories will be protected by copyright, and the last of them will enter the public domain at the end of 2022.
18918. Further to the report (September 18 #7) on a proposal to demolish the Lyndhurst Park Hotel (the campaign to protect the hotel had cited evidence that Conan Doyle helped design the redevelopment of the building as a hotel in 1912), the BBC reported on Dec. 21 <www.tinyurl.com/y9jrdk9w> that the developer has withdrawn its appeal against the National Park Authority's decision to reject the proposal to demolish the hotel. The NPA said it would seek to recover its costs of preparing for a public hearing scheduled in January.

18919. The two volumes of THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES: SOME UNTOLD CASES, edited by David Marcum, are the latest additions to his excellent series of anthologies, and they will be welcomed by those who believe that traditional short stories are the best way to visit Holmes and Watson again (London: MX Publishing, 2018; 405/415 pp., $44.95 each); there are new short stories, poems, and a radio script, all offering imaginative accounts of cases only mentioned in the Canon. MX's books are available at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
18920. Also from MX: Tim Symonds' A MOST DIABOLICAL PLOT (2018; 156 pp., $12.95) is a collection of six pastiches reprinted from volumes of David Marcum's THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES; his other Sherlockian work can be found at his web-site <www.tim-symonds.co.uk>.
18922. Too late for this year, but in plenty of time for next year: Stephanie Urban has found amusing artwork by David Price on a "Sherlock Holmes Christmas" card from Allport Editions <www.allport.com/products/1873>.
18923. The Chautauqua Institution, founded in 1874, offers a wide variety of summer educational programs, and Bob Coghill and Christopher Redmond discussed Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle at Chautauqua's Hall of Philosophy on Aug. 23, 2000; Jennie Paton has kindly reported a 35-minute video of the discussion at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=6psB3rmNoBE>.
18925. Deadline Hollywood reported on Dec. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/yaccj5fo> that the CBS-TV series "Elementary" will end its run after the seventh season, due to air in 2019. Created by Rob Doherty, the series stars Jonny Lee Miller as Holmes and Lucy Liu as Watson, and at the end of the seventh season will have set a record of 154 episodes for a Sherlockian television series; only Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce have played Holmes and Watson more often and for more hours, screen and on the radio.
18926. The District Messenger is the newsletter of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, now edited by Jean Upton and as always interesting and informative, has reported in its latest (382nd) issue on some news from the U.S.: Ceylan Yeginsu, on the N.Y. Times' ReaderCenter on Twitter, recently asked readers about their experiences with petty crime in London; according to Jean, "one person reported that a red-headed man hired him to copy out the Encyclopedia Britannica, but it turned out to be a scam." The newsletter (and much more) is available at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.

18927. The play's the thing (as Shakespeare wrote): Bart Lovins' "The Novel Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet" is a new production of a dramatization performed at Expanded Arts in New York in 1998, now being produced again at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., Jan. 17-27 <www.thepac.net>.
18928. Kevin O'Brien's "Sherlock Holmes and the Temple of Doom" will be performed by Upstage Productions <www.upstageproductions.com> at the Carterville Community Center in Carterville, Ill., on Jan. 18; the dinner theater mystery is billed as "Sherlock Holmes, Nancy Drew, Lt. Columbo, and the Scooby Doo Gang are on a wild and dangerous treasure hunt, but so is the amazing archeologist Louisiana Jones." The company has another play titled "No Schick, Sherlock" (Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson come through many a close shave as they investigate "The Case of the Slashing Razor").
18931. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Dying to Say I Do" is a new play scheduled at the Diamond Theatre in Ligonier, Pa., Mar. 1-3 <www.diamondtheatre.com>.

18932. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" will be performed at the Commonweal Theatre in Lanesboro, Minn., Apr. 5-July 6 <www.commonwealtheatre.org>.
18933. Rick Robinson's "Sherlock Holmes and the Sign of the Four" is scheduled at the Oregon Cabaret Theater in Ashland, Ore., Apr. 11-May 26; web-site is at <www.theoregoncabaret.com>.
18934. K. C. Brown's "Sherlock's Veiled Secret" will be performed at the F. Scott Fitzgerald Theatre in Rockville, Md., May 3-12 <www.rlt-online.org>.
18935. Margaret Raether's new play "Sherlock Holmes & the Precarious Position" is scheduled at the Cheek Theater at Rockford University in Rockford, Ill., on May 9-26 <www.artistsensemble.org>. "Whistling in the Dark" (her dramatization of "The Speckled Band"), performed in 2017, was broadcast by Northern Public Radio on July 15, 2017; podcast at <www.tinyurl.com/yctj3aou>.
18936. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at the Warner Theatre in Torrington, Conn., Mar. 23-31 <www.warnertheatre.org>. Also at the Ashland University Studio Theatre in Ashland, Ohio, Apr. 5-7; web-site at <www.ashland.edu>. And at the Firehouse Theater in Alliance, Ohio, May 10-19 <www.carnationcityplayers.com>.

18939. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker on Thursday evening was Ken Ludwig, award-winning author of three Sherlockian (and many more non-Sherlockian) plays; he reported that he has just completed work on his newest play "Moriarty" (in the five-actor format of "Baskerville") and hopes it will be produced in the near future.
18940. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where Evelyn Herzog proposed the traditional preprandial first toast to Nelda Richards as The Woman. This was followed by the presentation of a Festschrift to a thoroughly-surprised member of the BSI who was celebrating the 60th anniversary of his Investiture; immodestly, the editor of this newsletter says "let me recommend this book," which is available (80 pp., $19.95) from the BSI at <www.tinyurl.com/yb5z9frc>.
18941. The annual dinner's agenda included the usual toasts, rituals, and papers, and Mike Whelan (the "Wiggins" of the BSI) presented Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) to Alexander Katz ("Sarasate"), John Knud-Hansen ("This Lascar Scoundrel"), Brigitte Latella ("Holmes's Alpenstock"), Michele Lopez ("Attenta, Pericolo"), Ira B. Matetsky ("The Final Problem"), Terry McCammon ("Young Stamford"), Mike McSwiggin ("A Seven Percent Solution"), Greg D. Ruby ("Bulldog Pin with Ruby Eyes"), and Monica Schmidt ("Julia Stoner").
18942. Mike Whelan then announced that Mike Kean had been appointed to the office of "Commissionaire" to serve one year, and the end of which he will become the BSI's new "Wiggins". Mike Kean will be only the sixth person to lead the BSI since it was founded by Christopher Morley in 1934.
18943. The Baker Street Irregulars also have published a second title in the Professions Series that was launched with Nerve and Knowledge in 2015. The new book is Canon Law: Lawyers, Law, and the Sherlockian Canon, edited by William A. Walsh and Donny Zaldin (2018; 206 pp., $39.95), and it offers a wide-ranging look at many of the legal (and illegal) aspects of the world of Sherlock Holmes, including a transcript of what might have happened if he were to have been tried for some of his infringements of the law.
18944. The latest title in the BSI's Manuscript Series is Deadly Harpoon, edited by Glen Miranker (2018; 168 pp., $39.95), which offers a facsimile of the manuscript of "Black Peter", an annotated transcript, and interesting commentary on the manuscript, the story, and the world in which the Great Detective lived when he was involved in the case. It is of course thoroughly appropriate that the volume has been edited by the fortunate owner of the manuscript. More information about both books, including the tables of contents, can be found at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>.

18945. It should be noted that there is much more to see at the BSI's web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>, such as information about The Baker Street Journal, which now appears five times a year (there are four quarterly issues and a Christmas Annual that's available only to subscribers). The 2018 Christmas Annual reported on the colorful history of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibitions in London in 1951 and then in New York in 1952, and the 2019 Christmas Annual will be a tribute to the late William S. Baring-Gould.
18946. And, for those who want to plan ahead, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London will hold its annual dinner on Jan. 11, 2020, in London, and the BSI will hold their annual dinner on Jan. 17, 2020, in New York.
18947. With regard to Canon Law, those who recall that William Shakespeare wrote (in Henry VI), "the first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers," should also remember that those words were spoken by Dick the Butcher, who was in rebellion against the king, and that the rebels then managed only to kill a county clerk.
18949. Gasogene Books has published Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle in the Newspapers, Volume 4, January-June 1894, edited and annotated by Mattias Boström, Mark Alberstat, Leah Guinn, and Matt Laffey (2019; 202 pp., $34.95); there are more editors now, quite understandable considering the wealth of material about Holmes and Conan Doyle in the ever-expanding data-bases of digitized newspapers and magazines <www.gasogenebooks.com>.
18950. Those who have bought Nicholas Utechin's splendid The Complete Paget Portfolio (November 18 #3), still available from Gasogene and still highly recommended, will be interested in a recent message from Nick: some of his text did not make it into the final version of the book, and he will be happy to send the text by email so that you can print it out and insert it into your copy; you can reach Nick at <highfieldfarmhouse@gmail.com>.
18951. More news from the birthday festivities: Nicholas Meyer announced the discovery of another missing manuscript: The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols, which will be published later this year (the 45th anniversary of the publication of his The Seven-Per-Cent Solution).
18952. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star, in Dallas, has published a sequel to its A Grimm Sherlock Holmes (December 17 #2). A Grimmer Sherlock Holmes, edited by Steve Mason, is the society's second anthology of fairy-tale pastiches; it is a 179-page e-book, offering pastiches and the fairy tales on which they are based, nicely available without charge at <www.tinyurl.com/y9oqdroc>.
18953. "Literary Figures Who Can't Commit" in the N.Y. Times Book Review on Jan. 20 offered graphic artist Ali Fitzgerald's illustrations of Captain Ahab, Edward Rochester, Mary Poppins, the White Rabbit, and Sherlock Holmes; you can see them all at <www.tinyurl.com/y97b8lgp>.

18954. Plan ahead: the latest issue of The Bowling Green (the newsletter of The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State) announces an excursion to Oxford in May 2021, commemorating Christopher Morley's first year as a Rhodes Scholar at the University. Details will be available (eventually) from Terry Hunt <18goldini95@gmail.com>.
18955. The UCLA Film and Television Archive has announced a collaborative worldwide search for missing or deteriorating Sherlockian films that will lead to the films' restoration, and the project is being coordinated by Barbara Roisman Cooper, who is a member of The Baker Street Irregulars as well as the Archive's board; if you would like further information or to join the volunteer committee that's working on the project, you can contact Barbara at <peninc1@aol.com>. UCLA has the second-largest moving-image archive in the United States (after the Library of Congress), and has worked on Sherlockian films in the past: restoring from nitrate originals and preserving the classic Basil Rathbone/Nigel Bruce films, with funding from UCLA, Warner Bros., and Hugh Hefner.
18959. For those who came in late, "Holmes & Watson" has won negative (sometimes scathing) reviews from critics, audiences, and Sherlockians, and (so far), according to the Box Office Mojo web-site, has grossed less than its estimated production budget of $42 million. It has been reported that Netflix turned down the film, and that it likely will be available on DVD in March for those who want to find fault with it, or to enjoy watching Hugh Laurie overact as Mycroft.
18960. The National (based in the United Arab Emirates) ran an article on Jan. 8 <www.tinyurl.com/yaop68m2> about "How Do Film Studios React When They Know They've Made a Dud?" (there have been many other films that foundered; it is interesting that some major newspapers, including the Washington Post, never bothered to review the film).

18961. Netflix has announced plans for a new live-action Sherlockian Television series called "The Irregulars" (to be produced by the Canadian company Muse Entertainment); Tom Bidwell, who will be writing the series, has said, "what if Sherlock Holmes was a drug addict and a delinquent and the kids solve the whole case whilst he takes credit?" Bidwell's adaptation of "Watership Down" aired on BBC One last month, and he talked about that (and about "The Irregulars") in a BBC Writersroom interview on Dec. 18 <www.tinyurl.com/ydxgppqwh>. Muse produced four Sherlockian television films that starred Matt Frewer as Holmes: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2000), "The Sign of Four" (2001), "Royal Scandal" (2001), and The Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" (2002).
18962. The television series will be based on four graphic novels written by Tony Lee and illustrated by Dan Boulton that were published Franklin Watts in 2011; their graphic novels already have been dramatized by Eric Coble as a two-act play "Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars" that premiered in Milwaukee, Wis., in 2014; it has had regional productions elsewhere and the script is available from Dramatic Publishing.
18963. David L. Hammer ("Major-General Stoner") died on Dec. 27. He had a long career as a lawyer, and was launched as a Sherlockian author in 1983 with the publication of his splendid The Game Is Afoot: A Travel Guide to the England of Sherlock Holmes, the first of a long series of books about his world-wide travels in the footsteps of Holmes. He was the founder of the Gasogene Press, and presided over an interesting Sherlockian workshop in Dubuque. Scott Monty has a warm tribute to David at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/ya92lg7w>, with a link to Gael Stahl's interview with Dave for the Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1986.
18964. One of the interesting things about modern technology is that the Internet makes it possible to find productions of Sherlockian plays just about anywhere. Howard Ostrom notes Ken Ludwig's "Sherlok Holms dhe Langoi i Baskervillëve" at the Metropol Theater in Tirana, Albania, Dec. 13, 2018-Feb. 3, 2019 <www.tinyurl.com/y92nmucv>.
18966. Peter Calamai ("The Leeds Mercury") died on Jan. 22. A distinguished Canadian journalist, Peter was awarded membership in the Order of Canada in 2014, honoring his achievements as a science journalist and his contributions to the cause of literacy. He drew upon his expertise in journalism for many of his contributions to Canonical scholarship, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 2005, and was the winner of the BSI's Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article published in The Baker Street Journal in 2012.

18967. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for this year's Edgar awards, and they include Bradley Harper's A Knife in the Fog (for best first novel by an American author) and Leslie S. Klinger's Classic American Crime Fiction of the 1920s (for best critical/biographical). The winners will be announced at the MWA Gala Banquet in New York on Apr. 25.
18968. The Deutsche Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft and the Austrian town of Feldkirch will celebrate Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 160th birthday with an excursion to Feldkirch on May 23-26 (Conan Doyle studied at the Jesuit College of Stella Matutina from 1875 to 1876). More information on the event is available at <www.dshg.de/dshg-jahresreise-2019>, all in German (as the conference will be).
18969. The Fourth Garrideb will hold its "Numismatic Friends of Sherlock Holmes Dinner" in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Mar. 29, during the American Numismatic Association's National Money Show; there's more information about the event at <www.tinyurl.com/y9nhndby>.
18970. Russell Baker died on Jan. 21. He was a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who worked most of his career for the N.Y. Times, as a reporter and as a columnist. He also succeeded Alistair Cooke as host of "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS, introducing programs from 1993 to 2004; none of the programs were Sherlockian, but he often found reason to mention (and praise) Holmes and Conan Doyle.

18971. The British Royal Mint has announced that it will issue a 50p coin honoring Sherlock Holmes this year, and the coin already is available for purchase in an annual set that includes all of this year's coins, in various metals; details on the coin, the sets, and an illustration, will be found at the Fourth Garrideb web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc89akeo>. Of course the Royal Mint hopes that collectors (and speculators) will pursue the expensive annual sets, but it will be worthwhile waiting: Greg has learned that individual coins will be available later this year at more modest prices. It is unlikely, however, that the coins will turn up in pocket change.
18972. The Beacon Society offers annual January Stauber grants of up to $600 to fund development of programs that introduce young people to Sherlock Holmes in the U.S. and Canada; the deadline for grant applications is May 1, and details are available at the society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/h7acxds>.
18973. Windsor Davies died on Jan. 17. Born in Wales, he began his acting career on stage in 1961 and went on to work in film and television and as a voice actor in commercials. He played Inspector Illingworth in a dramatization of Max Pemberton's "The Ripening Rubies" (1971), with Bernard Sutton as Robert Lang, in the ITV television series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes".

18975. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" on at Cheney Hall in Manchester, Conn., through Feb. 17 <www.cheneyhall.org>. It also is due at the Granite Theatre in Westerly, R.I., Mar. 22-Apr. 7 <www.granitetheatre.com>.
18976. Richard Lavin's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Impaled Whaler" will be performed at the Tudor House in Lake Arrowhead, Calif., Feb. 15-23 <www.tudorhouseentertainment.villas>.
18977. David Stuart Davies' new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Reckoning" will debut at the Assembly Roxy in Edinburgh, Feb. 25-Mar. 2; there's more information at <www.tinyurl.com/y8dlfbp4>.
18979. If you haven't heard already, postage prices have gone up again: a firstclass letter now costs 55¢ (up from 50¢), so subscriptions to this newsletter will cost more, for those few remaining subscribers willing to pay for the privilege of opening envelopes rather reading the newsletter online (or printing it themselves). The second ounce of a first-class letter now costs 15¢ (down from 21¢), and delivery outside the U.S. does not cost more (yet).
18980. Finally: if you have noticed slight differences between this month's issue and past issues, that's because this month's issue was created on my newer computer, a change required by the hospitalization of my older MS-DOS computer, and the need to find an exorcist, a resurrectionist, and a wizard to bring me firmly into the 21st century. If you did not notice any differences, that is because I was easily able to find someone who combines all three skills, and has been able to show me how to use Microsoft Word instead of Volkswriter 3, and to write my newsletter on my newer Windows 10 computer. The font is slightly different (TrueType's Courier New isn't quite the same as dot-matrix Courier), but I'm delighted that I still can pretend that I'm using a typewriter (as I did when I started writing paragraphs to John Bennett Shaw in the now-distant 1970s). Some day you might see things such as proportional spacing and dingbats, but the world (this one, at least) is not quite prepared for that.
18981. A few things, including some very recent paragraphing, have vanished, but I expect to catch up sooner rather than later. My Wizard has told me that there's a way to run my older software on my newer computer, so it's possible (but not likely) that this slightly-more-modern look may vanish. If there's anything I've forgotten to remember, please let me know.

18982. The Baker Street Irregulars Press and the BSI Trust will hold a book fair on Apr. 27 at the Chatham-Summit Quaker Friends Meeting House in Chatham, N.J., from noon to 4:00 pm, offering books from the various BSI Press series, and used books and other Sherlockiana that have been donated to the Trust. More information is available from Denny Dobry <dendobry@ptd.net>; the nearest train station is NJ Transit's Chatham Station on the Morristown Line, from Penn Station in New York, and Denny will be happy to arrange shuttle transportation from the Chatham Station on request.
18983. If you can't make it to New Jersey, or just can't wait, you can send your want-list to Denny; the BSI Trust inventory includes a wide range of Sherlockian and Doylean material, offered at reasonable prices. Proceeds will be used to maintain the BSI Archives at the Lilly Library at the University of Indiana.
18984. Heritage Auctions is offering the Otto Penzler Collection of Mystery Fiction, beginning with Part One on Mar. 6 in New York; there are some spendid items in the auction, and their web-site includes a short video showing his magnificent library <www.tinyurl.com/y26mnss>.
18985. If you have been thinking about subscribing to the Baker Street Journal, now's the time to decide to do so, before the spring issue goes to press at the end of March. Subscribers will receive all five issues, including the Christmas Annual, which will be a tribute both to the late William S. Baring-Gould and to his The Annotated Sherlock Holmes. Strike while the iron's hot: go to <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com> to subscribe (and find much else of interest).
18986. Many Sherlockians have seen and enjoyed the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, and there's still time to see it at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., where it will run through May 27 <www.lsc.org>. The exhibition was created by the Exhibits Development Group, and Ross Davies notes that there's an impressive web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9b7yq83> where you can see how the company promotes the exhibition to museums that might want to put it on display.
18987. Greg Ruby discusses "Holmes & Watson in the Great War" (emphasizing Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce's military medals) in the Numismatist (Feb. 2019) <www.onlinedigitalpublishing.com/publication/?i=562102&vr=html5&p=50>.
18988. Pokémon's "Detective Pikachu" film is scheduled for release on May 10, but Warner Bros. is so enthusiastic about the film that work has started on a sequel, according to the Hollywood Reporter (Jan. 25); you can see Pikachu in Sherlockian costume in a trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/ybszxx68>.
18989. You can now register for the "Dark Places, Wicked Companions, and Strange Experiences" conference on Aug. 8-11 in Minneapolis; this is the triennial conference sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers, the University of Minnesota, and the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections. For more information (and a registration form), visit <www.norwegianexplorers.org>.

18990. Dame June Whitfield died on Dec. 28. She began her acting career on stage in 1944 and went on to work in films and on ra-dio and television; she was best known for her appearance in the television series "Absolutely Fabulous", and played Mrs. Hudson and other female parts in Roy Hudd's "The Newly Discovered Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" on BBC Radio 2 in 1999. She was appointed OBE in 1985, CBE in 1998, and then Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire in 2017, for services to drama and entertainment.
18991. John Linsenmeyer has relayed Michael Quigley's report on the Jezail Bullet, an interesting cocktail with a nicely Canonical name and a Sherlockian history Lyndsay Faye commissioned her husband Gabriel Lehner (who does this sort of thing professionally) to create a specialty cocktail for the Baker Street Babes' "Daintiest Bee Under Your Bonnet Ball" at The Players during the birthday festivities in 2015. Laurie Fraser Manifold provided attractive artwork, and the cocktail is reported to have met with universal approval; you can find a readable, downloadable, and printable version of artwork and recipe at the Red Circle's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>.
18993. Registration is now open for the "Holmes, Doyle, & Friends" gathering on Mar. 29-30 in Dayton, Ohio; details will be found at the web-site of the Agra Treasurers <www.agratreasurers.net/holmes--doyle---friends.html>.
18994. Stephen Fry's recording "Sherlock Holmes: The Definitive Collection" has been uploaded to YouTube in 17 parts, and may still be available for download at <www.youtube.com/channel/UC4pYq9_yvIV8vFZzzwFY8Nw>. This will be of interest to people in the U.S., where the version offered by Audible is not complete because of copyright restrictions. The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes is in parts 16 and 17.
18995. "It's Elemental, My Dear Watson," according to an advertisement spotted by Joe Coppola <www.tinyurl.com/yau8qlw2>; the advertisement is by a company called SparkFun, which explains that its "gator:bit v.2.0 is an all-in-one carrier board for your micro:bit that provides you with a fully functioning development and prototype platform."
18996. Joanna Blalock stars in The Disappearance of Alistair Ainsworth (New York: Minotaur, 2019; 306 pp., $26.99), the third in Leonard Goldberg's series about the daughter of Sherlock Holmes, who once again is working with Dr. John H. Watson and his son Dr. John H. Watson Jr.; her father taught her well, and she now (in 1915) she is trying to prevent disaster at the hands of German spies. It's all nicely done, and the author has a web-site at <www.leonardgoldberg.com>.

18998. Lynda Arco is offering a wide variety of Sherlockian and Doylean books at eBay; her seller ID is lyar_73 (you can use the advanced search function to find her items).
18999. Don Hobbs continues to update his "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes"; the January edition has now with 109 foreign languages (and 9 versions of English in non-Roman alphabets such as Braille and Pitman Shorthand), showing covers in color and with bibliographic details for more than 7,200 entries; a thumb drive costs $15.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $20.00 (elsewhere) from Don (2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028).
19000. When in Monschau: Karen Murdock has found on-line images of an imaginative metal statue of Sherlock Holmes located in Germany; the artist and history are unknown, but you can see the statue at <www.tinyurl.com/ybkdkjqk>.
19001. Sunny Evans has mentioned Gregory Dowling's essay on "G. K. Chesterton's Father Brown Stories: The Debt to Sherlock Holmes", which is available as a free download at <www.academia.edu>, a web-site that offers free access to more than 22 million research papers (including 300 "sherlock holmes" in the title).
19002. Malice Domestic has announced the nominees for this year's Agatha awards, which include Margalit Fox's Conan Doyle for the Defense (best non-fiction). The winners will be announced at Malice in Bethesda on May 4.
19003. William Morgan Sheppard died on Jan. 6. He began his acting career with the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1858, performed on screen and television, and voiced characters in video games. He played Jim Craig in the Royal Shakespeare Company's tour of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in Washington and New York in 1975, and appeared in two episodes of the Geoffrey Whitehead television series in 1979 (as the Man in the Morgue in "The Case of Harry Crocker" and as Mischkin in "Four Minus Four Is One").
19004. "Writers, new writers in particular, worry about giving the reader enough detail," Geri Schear wrote in an essay noted in a weekly e-mailing from MX Publishing <www.rycardus.wordpress.com/2019/01/16/the-final-frontier>; she has written three pastiches about Sherlock Holmes and Lady Beatrice for MX and contributed short stories to MX anthologies, and her advice should be heeded by anyone wanting to write a good pastiche (or a non-pastiche, for that matter).

19005. Thaddeus Holt Jr. died on Dec. 29. A lawyer, he also served as deputy undersecretary of the Army and as secretary to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and was a dedicated military historian and wrote The Deceivers: Allied Military Deception in the Second World War (2004). Thad's essay on "The Hornblower Saga" in the N.Y. Times Book Review (May 18, 1975) opened with a quote from Christopher Morley and was as much about Holmes as about Hornblower, and his article "You Have Been in Afghanistan, I Perceive" in MHQ: The Quarterly Journal of Military History (winter 1994) offered evidence that the fatal battle of Maiwand provided Conan Doyle with the names of both Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
19006. Sherlockians and Holmesians have their Canon (and fans of Laurie R. King's "Mary Russell" stories have their Kanon), and Thomas Ling had a long essay in Radio Times (Feb. 5) <www.tinyurl.com/yd5wtzwx> about the canon created by fans of Doctor Who, with discussion of the Watsonian and Doylean Perspectives, and the similar approaches that the Whovians take regarding the contradictions and complications in their "Whoniverse".

19007. Laurie R. King's The Art of Detection (November 05 #6) is a delightful cross-over combining the worlds of Kate Martinelli and Mary Russell, and it includes a short story written by Sherlock Holmes that Laurie now offers as a free download: "The Marriage of Billy Birdsong" will be available until Mar. 11 at <www.tinyurl.com/y2nloy4m>.
19008. Albert Finney died on Feb. 8. The British actor began his career on stage and appeared in his first film in 1956, achieving international stardom in the title role in "Tom Jones" (1963); he appeared in many other films and was nominated for five Oscars (and was sometimes called the greatest actor never to have won an Oscar), and had an uncredited cameo as a "man in the audience at opera" in "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
19009. Sidney and Walter Paget contributed illustrations to the Canon (and Walter is said to have been the model when his brother Sidney first drew Holmes), but there is another artist in the Paget family; Greg Ruby has three items at his Fourth Garrideb web-site on coins and medals that were designed by Walter Paget's son Thomas Paget. Just go to <www.fourthgarrideb.com> and search for [paget].
19010. Betty Ballantine died on Feb. 12. She and her late husband Ian Ballantine founded Bantam Books and the Ballantine Books, and helped invent the modern paperback. They published Sherlockian titles, of course, and were responsible for one of a delightful publishing hoax: Jean Shepherd, who had a night-time radio show in New York City, once asked his listeners to go to bookstores and ask for Frederick R. Ewing's I Libertine; neither the book nor the author existed, but the book made some best-seller lists, at a time when the lists were based on orders as well as sales, greatly frustrating booksellers. When the Ballantines heard about the hoax they asked science-fiction author Theodore Sturgeon to write the book as Ewing; Sturgeon did, and the Ballantines published it in 1956, with cover artwork by Frank Kelly Freas that shows a pub sign for the Fish & Staff; the sign has images of a sturgeon and shepherd's staff.

19012. "Sherlock Holmes 3" (that's the only title announced so far for the third Robert Downey Jr. film) has an official release date of Dec. 25, 2020, according to Warner Bros. There's reported to be script, and one can assume that at some point they'll start production. Or not.
19013. Further to an earlier mention of the CW television series "The Flash" (August 18 #4), the continuing character Harrison "Sherloque" Wells (played by Tom Cavanagh) is a distinct homage to Sherlock Holmes; in a recent episode he mentioned his former partner Watsune, who had an affair with Sherloque's fourth wife, and in the next episode we learned that she was Renee Adler (played by Kimberly Williams-Paisley).
19014. Jennie Paton spotted an attractive plaster sculpture of Sherlock Holmes on eBay <www.tinyurl.com/y9ttxzxc>, offered by Sam Safieh at BargainSales365 in England (£29.99); they also offer a plaster sculpture of the exterior of 221 Baker Street (£110.00) <www.tinyurl.com/yaocmp6u>.
19015. "Talk About Sherlock" is a new monthly audio blog by Mattias Bostrom; in the first episode ("The Walking Out Mystery") he discusses the impact of the Will Ferrell/John C. Reilly film "Holmes & Watson" and wonders whether the reported "mass walkouts" actually occurred. In the second episode ("The Micah Clarke Effect") he discusses the importance of Conan Doyle's historical fiction. You can listen to both of the episodes of his blog at <www.talkaboutsherlock.libsyn.com>.
19016. Josh Sorokach's discussion of the documentary "Game Changers" in the on-line newsletter Decider (Feb. 4) included a report that there was a Sherlockian inspiration for the game show "Jeopardy" in a conversation between Merv Griffin and his wife Julann; details at <www.tinyurl.com/ycc29xdh>.
19018. The Adventure of the Creeping Man (Winchester University Press, 2017; 132 pp., £35.00 postpaid in the U.K./£50.00 postpaid elsewhere) is a facsimile edition of the manuscript, accompanied by an introduction and an annotated transcript by Neil McCaw, and a facsimile of the story as published in The Strand Magazine; McCaw offers an excellent discussion of the story, and of the changes that Conan Doyle made as he wrote it. Of particular note is the book's epigraph: "Read at once if convenient—if inconvenient, read all the same," a delightful paraphrase of the Canon. The book can be ordered at <www.visitportsmouth.co.uk/conandoyle/thecreepingman>.

19021. There are of course very few people who own a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, and if you're not one of those very few you may want to purchase the new facsimile published by Matt Wingett; it's nicely done and available from <www.lifeisamazing.co.uk> for £15.00, offering you a chance to read the two original drawing room plays that accompanied the first appearance of "A Study in Scarlet" (and the advertisements that provide an interesting look at what life was like in 1887).
19022. Also available from the same publisher is Wingett's Portsmouth: A Literary and Pictorial Tour (2018; 93 pp, £12.50); it's a carefully-researched and nicely-illustrated history of the city's varied literary associations, including (needless to say) Arthur Conan Doyle, who was only one of the many authors who lived in or wrote about Portsmouth. And Conan Doyle and the Mysterious World of Light 1887-1920 (2016; 320 pp., £12.99), in which Wingett reprints (and comments on) articles by and about Conan Doyle that appeared in Light and other magazine and newspapers, and offers a detailed look at the development of Conan Doyle's religious approach to Spiritualism.
19023. "The Next Leader of the World's Oldest Sherlock Holmes Society Loves Mysteries—and the Great Game" is the headline on an article in the Monterey County Weekly (Feb. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/y6tld37z>, the next "benevolent dictator" of The Baker Street Irregulars.

19024. Samuel Feinberg ("The Prince of Colonna") died on Feb. 13. He had a long career in broadcasting in Philadelphia and New York, and was a member of the Broadcast Pioneers of Philadelphia. Sam was a devoted member of the Sons of the Copper Beeches, contributed articles to the Baker Street Journal and More Leaves from the Copper Beeches, and received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.

19026. The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State has announced a Raffle for a brick fragment from Christopher Morley's house in Roslyn Estates on Long Island, offering admirers of Morley a rare opportunity to own an artifact from his home, which was torn down in 2011. Tickets cost $5.00 each, and proceeds from the raffle will go to the Christopher Morley grave decoration fund; the drawing will be held at the society's annual dinner in Hoboken on Apr. 28, and tickets can be purchased via <hobokenfreestate@mbcable.com>.
19027. "Holmes & Watson" (with Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly) will be released on Apr. 9 in a Blu-ray/DVD set ($34.99) and DVD only ($30.99); the added features will include 20 deleted scenes <www.tinyurl.com/y3zzbaod>.
19028. Will Thomas' Hell Bay (New York: Minotaur, 2016; 290 pp., $25.99) contin-ues his series featuring private enquiry agent Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewelyn, taking them to one of the Scilly Isles and a desperate battle to solve a series of brutal murders. Old Scores (2017; 294 pp., $25.99), the next in the series, opens with Barker arrested for the murder of a Japanese ambassador, and reveals a lot about Barker's interesting life before he arrived in London; the characters and mysteries are nicely done, and Thomas has a web-site at <www.willthomasauthor.com>.
19029. Jennie Paton spotted Walmart's advertisement for an inexpensive Sherlock Holmes costume kit <www.tinyurl.com/y644wpn3>; for $3.99 it's likely only patterns, but they also offer a variety of Sherlockian costumes.
19030. The New Yorker, on-line as well as in print, offers "Daily Shouts: Humor, Satire, and Funny Observations" that included (on Jan. 9) Ellen Rosen and Colin Stokes' illustrated "Clues That You Are the Unorthodox Detective in a Murder Mystery"; go to <www.tinyurl.com/y9h5nx92> to see their take on Sherlock Holmes.
19031. "How Sherlock Changed the World" (a two-hour program broadcast in the U.K. and the U.S. in 2013) is now available at YouTube, Jennie Paton reports, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=BPYBxfvIUlU>.
19032. The Royal Mint's new 50p coin honoring Sherlock Holmes so far is available (still) only in annual sets, but you can see some imaginative artwork that promotes the coin, and an item about its designer Stephen Raw, on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y7xajv2s>.
19033. "'Clue House' in Peterborough Inspired Parker Brothers" is the headline on a story in the Monadnock Ledger-Transcript (Feb. 18), noted by Karen Murdock <www.tinyurl.com/yxgfecv9>; according to the article, the house, in New Hampshire, was owned by George and Grace Parker of the Parker Brothers family when the game Clue was invented, and the game echoes the layout of the house. The citation for the game in Ron De Waal's The Universal Sherlock Holmes reports that in 1949 (when the game was first issued) it was called Clue, The Great New Sherlock Holmes Game! But (and there's often a but) according to Wikipedia, the British game Cluedo was licensed to Parker Brothers and issued in the U.S. as Clue.

19034. "Spy's Skeleton Found in British Home" was the headline on an article in the N.Y. Times (June 27, 1974); it's a spectacular story, well worth reading <www.tinyurl.com/yxbvwlfj>, not really Sherlockian except that Holmes certainly would have nodded and said, "Well, that's Scotland Yard for you." It seems, from an Internet search, that the mystery's still unsolved.
19035. Deb E. Tenney's The Adventure of Black Peter: Hawaiian Style (El Cerrito: Glencannon Press, 2017; 16 pp., $20.00) is an imaginative addition to the universe of Canonical translations, presented in Hawaiian pidgin, complete with footnotes and an explanation of how Hawaiian pidgin is pronounced.
19036. I hear of Sherlock everywhere: Jennie Paton spotted an amusing advertisement created by Saatchi & Saatchi in the United Arab Emirates for Head & Shoulders shampoo <www.tinyurl.com/y8nxfwf4>.
19037. The "Seattle Squeeze" is what the locals call the closing of the Alaskan Way Viaduct that recently was closed, affecting 90,000 cars full of commuters and other drivers. Bill Seil has kindly forwarded an amusing (and Sherlockian) editorial cartoon by David Horsey from the Seattle Times (on Jan. 30) <www.tinyurl.com/ycartyxz>, and you can click on the "simply disappeared" link for more context
19038. Theatrics: Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" will be performed at the Coolidge Theatre in Wellsboro, Pa., Mar. 15-23 <www.tinyurl.com/yxkvvr9b>.
19039. Holmes and Watson are characters in the musical "Take Me Away" to be performed at the Hunterdon Hills Playhouse in Hampton, N.J., Mar. 20-Apr. 30 <www.hhplayhouse.com>.
19040. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled at the Cante V. Sutton Theatre in Raleigh, N.C., Apr. 12-28; their web-site's at <www.raleighlittletheatre.org>. Also at the Theater Barn in New Lebanon, N.Y., June 21-30 <www.theatheatheaterbarn.org>; at Cumston Hall in Monmouth, Maine, July 11-Aug. 15 <www.theateratmonmouth.org>. It's also due at the Pepsi-Cola Theatre for the Performing Arts in Mitchell, S.D., on Oct. 4-13 <www.mitchellact.org>.
19041. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at the Greenville Theatre in Greenville, S.C., on Oct. 25-Nov. 10 <www.greenvilleonline.org>.
19042. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" is due at the Park Square Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., June 12-July 26, 2020 <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
19043. Dan Blackley's new play "Sherlock Holmes: Here There Be Dragons" will be performed at the Camino Real Playhouse in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., on Oct. 18-Nov. 3 <www.caminorealplayhouse.org>; "in 1880s London, there are gruesome killings in Whitechapel."

19044. Maiwand is in the news again, many years after the battle in which Watson was wounded in 1880: according to the Sunday Times (Feb. 24), the Ministry of Defence has reported to the Pentagon that the battlefield was looted by American soldiers who were deployed there in 2009, and that personal possessions and military items that had been buried with victims of the battle were sent to America and sold to collectors. Any soldier who took the material "may have broken international law," an MoD official said.
19045. Peter C. Davidson's dramatization of Conan Doyle's "The Disintegration MaMachine" (brought up to date) is a 17-minute film that debuted at the University of Utah in 2017; it can be seen at <www.tinyurl.com/yc3sbbdj>.

19047. There seem to be Sherlockians who collect anything and everything, but are there any who collect Sherlockian knives? Alexander Orlov has reported an artistic Sherlockian knife made by Alexander Aredakov, you can see images of his knife at <www.vk.com/id167856065>.
19048. A reminder about the book fair due at the Chatham-Summit Meeting House in Chatham, N.J., from noon to 4:00 pm on Apr. 27, when publications of the Baker Street Irregulars Press and Sherlockian material donated to the BSI Trust will be offered for sale; details available from Denny Dobry, who's also happy to help fill want lists from those who can't get to the event <dendobry@ptd.net>.
19049. Jennie Paton has found "The Shackles of Sherlock Holmes" available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=DVNhZXNPD9w>; broadcast by ITV3 in 2007, the documentary features David Burke (who played Watson in the Granada series) and commentary by Owen Dudley Edwards, David Stuart Davies, Andrew Lycett, Jon Lellenberg, and Gyles Brandreth.
19050. The latest "Sherlock" is a light-weight fingerprint scanner that's marketed by Integrated Biometrics <www.integratedbiometrics.com>; they also offer a Mini Watson.
19051. The web-site HN Entertainment has "learned from a source" that "Sherlock Holmes 3" (the next in the Robert Downey Jr. franchise) will take place in the Old West, especially San Francisco <www.tinyurl.com/y5klcu4>; one can assume that this is the first possibly unreliable rumor about the film.

19053. Alexander Orlov has reported Mikhail Molyukov's Biology with Sherlock Holmes (Moscow: ACT, 2019; 242 pp., R239); it's all in Russian, with a detailed discussion of "how animals and plants helped the famous detective Sherlock Holmes unravel dozens of crimes!" The publisher's web-site is at <www.labirint.ru/books/674416>.
19054. Frank Cho (the award-winning artist who created the comic strip "Liberty Meadows") contributed the elegant Sherlockian artwork on the cover of the program for this year's annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars, you can see the artwork at <www.tinyurl.com/yvzpxas>.
19055. "Scooby-Doo and Guess Who?" is an animated television series scheduled to premiere on the Boomerang streaming service and app this year. The gang will solve mysteries while meeting celebrities, including Sherlock Holmes.
19056. Fun Cases is a British company that offers a wide range of merchandise (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian), including an imaginative case for a cell phone (£7.99) <www.funcases.com>.
19058. "Catholic Royal Opens New Centre for Christian Renewal at Stonyhurst College" was the headline on a story in the Catholic Universe (Feb. 27); the Catholic royal was Lord Nicholas Windsor, great-grandson of King George V, and the article <www.tinyurl.com/y273zf8s> is interesting for its mention of Conan Doyle having carved his name on a desk at the school, very close to the engraving of a contemporary called Moriarty; the desk is one of the historical artifacts that went on display at the school in 2002, according to the Lancashire Telegraph <www.tinyurl.com/yylflmwy>, and you can see an image of the desk at <www.tinyurl.com/y2qtqg68>.
19059. Martin Edwards will deliver this year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture at 2:00 pm on Apr. 6 at the Toronto Reference Library, speaking on "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" <www.acdfriends.org>; admission is free, and the public is welcome to attend.
19060. Carol Channing died on Jan. 15. The award-winning actress made her stage debut in 1941 and went on to stardom in leading roles in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (1949) and "Hello Dolly" (1964). Jean Upton noted in the District Messenger that Channing also played Mehitabel the cat (with Eddie Bracken as Archy the cockroach) in the Broadway musical "Archy & Mehitabel" in 1954 (based on the writings of Don Marquis, who was a close friend of Christopher Morley and an early member of The Baker Street Irregulars; she also voiced Mehitabel in the animated film "Shinbone Alley" in 1970).

19061. Carolyn Senter has established the R. Joel Senter Sr. Prize in honor of her late husband (they published the Sherlockian E-Times for many years). The prize will reward young people from grades four through twelve for excellence in writing and critical thinking, based on an essay about one of the Sherlock Holmes stories; the reward will be administered by the Beacon Society <www.beaconsociety.com>, and you're invited to contribute at their web-site (please mark your contribution for the Senter Prize).
19062. Arthur Thomas Walker died on Feb. 9. He was a cornerstone member of the Florida Bibliophile Society, and an avid collector of both Sherlock Holmes and Ernest Stratemeyer material. His collection eventually will be available; contact Maureen E. Mulvihill <maureenemulvihill@gmail.com> for more information.
19063. Jaimee Leigh's handcrafted "Well-Read Birdhouses" are sold at the Barrow Bookstore in Concord, Mass. Each one "aims to summarize the essence of a book or story," and of course she has not neglected Sherlock Holmes; his birdhouse can be seen at <www.barrowbookstore.com/literarygifts.html>.
19064. Big Chief Studios offers a wide range of authorized (and expensive) figures and dioramas from the "Sherlock" television series, and they're now having a clearance sale <www.tinyurl.com/y62cjco6> on some of their merchandise.
19065. The release of "Sherlock Holmes 3" (the next film in the franchise starring Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law), previously scheduled for Christmas in 2020, has been postponed to the end of 2021 (according to a story in the Hollywood Reporter, which noted that the first film has grossed $524 million world-wide, and the second film $545.4 million).

19067. Further to the item (September 18 #1) about the origin of the name Doyle, there is a web-site <www.irishcentral.com> that offers information about Irish family names, with a short video that explains that the Dubhghaill (dark strangers) were the darker-haired Danish Vikings (rather than the lighter-haired Norwegian Vikings).
19068. Frederic H. Mende ("Lord Holdhurst") died on Mar. 15. An expert musician, he played with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and after moving to Charlotte, N.C., he taught music in the public schools and played first trumpet with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra. A life-long student of military history, he identified a military surgeon who might have been the inspiration for Dr. Watson and he was an energetic member of his local Sherlockian society, the Saxe-Coburg Squares of Mecklenburg County. Fred received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.

19069. James Mustich's 1,000 Books to Read Before You Die (New York: Workman, 2018; 948 pp., $35.00) is a delightful exploration of both Literature and literature, full of insightful commentary, and plenty of surprises. Conan Doyle's The Complete Sherlock Holmes is included ("it would be hard to name another modern literary character who has achieved such international celebrity"), and so are Christopher Morley's Parnassus on Wheels and The Haunted Bookshop (described as "two charming novels that celebrate the company of books").
19070. Some Sherlockian societies are exclusive, some not so much, and a few are totally inclusive, including Doyle's Rotary Coffin, founded by Paul Thomas Miller (with the motto "All Holmes Is Good Holmes"). The society's so inclusive that you're invited to print your own membership card at its web-site <www.sites.google.com/site/doylesrotarycoffin>. The society's purpose is "wholeheartedly and contrarily enjoying stupid Holmesiana regardless of how canonical others consider it to be," and its goal is "resisting the urge to be a Sherlock Snob and instead embracing every last daft bit of Holmes available."
19071. Australia has issued a stamp honoring the 150th anniversary of the discovery of the "Welcome Stranger" in the Bulldog Gully goldfields in 1869; it is still the largest alluvial gold nugget ever found, and it yielded 71kg of gold, worth (then) £9,583 or (now) about AU$4 million. The second largest, the Welcome Nugget, found in Ballarat in 1859, yielded 69kg of gold (Ballarat is mentioned in "The Sign of the Four" and in "The Boscombe Valley Mystery"). They melted nuggets down in those days; the world's largest surviving nugget is the "Pepita Canaã found in Brazil in 1983 with 52.33kg of gold, now on display in the Museu de Valores do Banco Central in Brasilia (the source nugget was larger, but split into pieces while being removed from the ground).
19073. The battle over the Lyndhurst Park Hotel continues. The developer withdrew its appeal against the National Park Authority's decision to reject a proposal to demolish the hotel (the campaign to protect the hotel included evidence that Conan Doyle helped design the redevelopment of the building as a hotel in 1912) (December 18 #4), but the Southern Daily Echo reported on Mar. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/y57jpjw6> that PegasusLife plans to submit fresh proposals to replace the hotel with apartments and holiday homes.
19074. Ross E. Davies has edited (and published) the Baker Street Almanac: An Annual Capsule of a Timeless Past & Future 2019, which he imaginatively describes as "a formidable scrap-book of 2018, including treasures created or uncovered then, with a few other odds and ends tossed in, and a glance ahead at 2019." It's that and more, in 301 pages, with a wide variety of articles written by Sherlockians from all corners of the globe, and it is available both ink-on-paper (for $30.00) and as a free 659-MB download at <www.greenbag.org>.

19075. The fall 2018 issue of The Magic Door (that's the newsletter of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) includes a report by Dayna Nuhn on letters Conan Doyle wrote to the publisher Grant Richards (purchased at the auction of Daniel Posnansky's collection), and other news from and about the Library and the Collection; copies are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb, Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
19076. Barbara Rusch's one-act play "The Crossing" was performed at the Toronto Reference Library in 2011, during the "A Study in Scandal" conference; it has been expanded into a three-act play "The Crossing, or Three Authors in Search of a Character" that has been published for members of the Friends (the three authors being Oscar Wilde, Edgar Allan Poe, and Harry Houdini, with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle involved). There are a limited number of copies available to people who decide to join the Friends now; their web-site <www.acdfriends.org> is credit card and PayPal friendly, and you can send a check (in US or Canadian dollars) to Cliff Goldfarb (addresses above). The minimum donation of $35.00 brings you three issues of their newsletter and a copy of the play. You can also purchase just the play, for $20.00 postpaid, from Donny Zaldin; contact him at <donaldzaldin@rogers.com>.
19077. BBC Radio 4 broadcast a series of twelve 30-minute programs in a "Sherlock Holmes" series in 1978, with Barry Foster as Holmes and David Buck as Watson, and Jennie Paton reports that many of them are available on-line at YouTube; search for [barry foster sherlock].
19078. George Morfogen died on Mar. 8. He began his Broadway career as a stage manager in 1962, and went to appear on stage, screen, and television. He was perhaps best known for playing Bob Rebadow on the HBO series "Oz", and performed as Professor Moriarty (with Frank Langella as Holmes) in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" on stage in 1977, and again for a production broadcast by HBO in 1981.
19079. Jennie Paton has found a new (and imaginative) Sherlockian artist: Domino Erdmann, a young woman in Germany who spent six months creating something that has to be seen to be believed <www.tinyurl.com/y5Sjmhe8>.
19080. Michael Halm's Sherlock Holmes and the Mad Doctor (Hierogamous Enterprises, 2015; 109 pp. $8.00) has Holmes and Watson in pursuit of a doctor who has invented a time machine; they travel into a great number of pasts and futures described by other authors of pastiches.

19084. An attention-getting opening paragraph for a book, as noted by Kate Stine in Mystery Scene's monthly on-line newsletter: "On the third day of their honeymoon, infamous environmental activist Stewie Woods and his new bride, Annabel Bellotti, were spiking trees in the forest when a cow exploded and blew them up. Until then, their marriage had been happy." In Savage Run, by C. J. Box (2003).
19085. Sherlockians who have 3D printers may want to purchase (for $15) a program that prints a bust of Benedict Cumberbatch as Sherlock Holmes, reported by Jennie Paton; it's available from CGTrader <www.tinyurl.com/y4rauesw>, and there's a matching bust of Martin Freeman as Dr. Watson.
19086. It's not at all surprising that anyone who knew the late John Bennett Shaw has stories to tell about him, and if you would like to read some of those stories you can find them at <www.johnbennettshaw.com>, a delightful web-site just launched by Jim Hawkins, who has done a fine job of collecting and illustrating tributes to John.
19087. The late Bill Rabe was a thoroughly imaginative publicist, and many of the traditions he started are still observed, one of them the annual snowman burning that welcomes the arrival of spring at Lake Superior State University; Bill's son John has kindly forwarded the press release for the event <www.lssu.edu/snowman-burning>. Note the link to another of his inspired creations, the Unicorn Hunters. He also was an enthusiastic Sherlockian, and the two editions of his Sherlockian Who's Who and What's What in 1961 and 1962 offer a wonderful look at what our world was like in those distant days.
19088. Marjorie Weinman Sharmat died on Mar. 12. She launched her career as an author of books for young readers in 1967, and wrote or co-wrote more than 130 books, including a long series of books that featured young detective Nate the Great, who often appeared in Sherlockian costume in illustrations by Marc Simont; the series debuted in 1972 and eventually sold more than 15 million copies, according to her publisher.
19089. Rob Nunn and Dan Andriacco have created an e-mail exchange for Sherlockian societies, so that they can share news and announcements; if you would like to publicize your society's activities, and hear about what other societies are doing, contact Rob at <parallelcasestl@gmail.com>.

19092. Ghost Stories: Classic Tales of Horror and Suspense, edited by Lisa Morton and Leslie S. Klinger (New York: Pegasus, 2019; 272 pp., $25.95) has nothing by Conan Doyle (although he's mentioned in the introduction), but it's a treat for anyone who enjoys the genre.
19093. Basil Rathbone's former home in Henley-on-Thames in Oxfordshire was burned down this month in a fire that experts believe "was started deliberately as an unlawful act," the Daily Mail reported <www.tinyurl.com/y4h7jdsp> on Mar. 20; according to the paper, the current owner is a Russian oligarch who lives abroad, and the property has been the subject of numerous planning applications, including a proposal to build 47 homes on the six-acre site. All of the applications have been turned down.
19094. Bill Seil has forwarded a story in Publishers Weekly (Mar. 11) about plans to publish Mark Twain's Literary Resources: A Reconstruction of His Library and Reading <www.tinyurl.com/y3o9c4l8>. According to Alan Gribben, he began the project in 1969, and the resulting three volumes will include an annotated bibliography of all the books Twain cited in interviews and in his writings, and the 3,500 titles he owned in his personal library. Perhaps someone will someday do that for Conan Doyle.
19096. Further to the report that Great Scotland Yard had been sold for £370 million and would be converted to "mixed-use residential development" (December 14 #6), Nick Utechin notes a report in The Times on Mar. 23 that it soon will be the Great Scotland Yard Hotel. The newspaper's web-site is (alas) protected by a pay-wall, but there's a similar story in the Hindustan Times <www.tinyurl.com/yyaqb3zc>. Now owned by an Indian billionaire, the hotel will open later this year, and it will be both fancy and expensive.

19097. The New Adventures of Solar Pons, edited by David Marcum (Manchester: Belanger Books, 2018; 423 pp., $29.95), offers twenty "tales of the Sherlock Holmes of Praed Street," all written by authors who wanted to extend the Pontine Canon that was launched by August Derleth in 1929, when he created Solar Pons as an homage to Sherlock Holmes; the anthology has been authorized by Derleth's estate, and the new stories follow nicely in the path set by Derleth.
19098. Lynne Stephens has reported "Discovering Literature" (an on-line resource launched by the British Library in 2014); the (well-illustrated) articles include John Sutherland's "Sherlock Holmes Holmes, the World's Most Famous Literary Detective" <www.tinyurl.com/yylzjh8t> and Greg Buzwell's "An Introduction to The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.tinyurl.com/yxsd64ff>.
19099. "Sherlock's Other Brother by a Southern Mother" is being performed at the Black Fedora Comedy Mystery Theatre in Charleston, S.C., through Aug. 29 ("it was the Holmes family secret") <www.tinyurl.com/yyyberxr>.
19100. "Sherlock Holmes Cirque-o-Rama: The Murder Under the Big Topless" will be performed at the Minnsky Theatre in Minneapolis, Minn., on Apr. 18-20; an adult comedy ("join our award-winning Wicked Wenches"), and their web-site is at <www.minniskystheatre.tix.com>.
19101. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled at the Gungahlin Theater in Gungahlin, Australia, Apr. 19-27; the theater's web-site's at <www.stagecenta.com>.
19102. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Maestro" is due at the Performance Hall at Hochstein in Rochester, N.Y., on Apr. 28 (it's presented by the Rochester Symphony Orchestra in their OrKIDStra series); the web-site is at <www.rpo.org>.

19103. "The Game Is Afoot!" (an improvised Sherlock Holmes mystery) will be performed at the Factory Theatre in Marrickville, N.S.W., Australia, May 4-5, during the Sydney Comedy Festival <www.sydneycomedyfest.com.au>; it's advertised as "like 'Holmes & Watson' but funny").
19105. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" is due at the Otto M. Budig Theater in Cincinnati, Ohio., July 17-Aug. 4 <www.cincyshakes.com>.
19106. January Yates Vogt and Mark Friedman's musical "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Crown Jewel" is scheduled at the Tabard Theatre in San Jose, Calif., Sep. 13-Oct. 6 <www.tabardtheatre.org>.

19107. Save the dates: The Baker Street Irregulars will hold a BSI Archive Conference on Nov. 8-10 at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., the new home of the BSI Archive. Ross Davies and Glen Miranker have assembled an outstanding list of speakers from the worlds of collecting, book-selling, and publishing, and registration information will be available later this year for anyone who wishes to attend the festivities.
19108. There's now web-site information about Michael Mitnick's new play "Mysterious Circumstances" (due at the Geffen Playhouse in Los Angeles, June 11-July 14 <www.geffenplayhouse.org/mysterious-circumstances>; the play's inspired by David Grann's article in the New Yorker about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green.
19109. A Juno Knitting Pattern Download for a "Conan Doyle Vest" is available for $6.00 from Interweave <www.interweave.com/store/conan-doyle-vest-in-juno>. It's a cabled vest accented by a wide collar and with big shoulders, and it's not at all clear what the connection to Sir Arthur might be.
19111. The latest news about the gene-editing technology CRISPR is the invention of the Specific High sensitivity Enzymatic Reporter unLOCKing device (yes, it's called SHERLOCK) by Sherlock Biosciences; you can read all about it in Ellie Kincaid's article in Forbes (Mar. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/y67adjyp>.
19112. "Desert Island Discs" has been broadcast by the BBC since 1942: each week distinguished guests are asked to choose eight pieces of music they'd take if they were castaways on a desert island, and Martin Freeman was the program's guest on Apr. 5, when he talked about his life and career, and (of course) playing Dr. Watson in the BBC's "Sherlock" series. You can hear the program at <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m0003rlf>.
19114. Margalit Fox's CONAN DOYLE FOR THE DEFENSE (May 18 #5) has been optioned by Gold Circle Films, according to the Hollywood Reporter (Mar. 21); the book offers an up-to-date report on Conan Doyle's defense of Oscar Slater, so we may get to see Conan Doyle on the big screen.
19115. Variety reported on Feb. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/yypwvyz5> that a new eight-episode television series based on Umberto Eco's The Name of the Rose was due for release on RAI on Italy in March; it will debut on SundanceTV in the U.S. on May 1, and on the BBC in Britain later in the year. The series stars John Turturro as William of Baskerville, Damien Hardung as Adso of Melk, and Rupert Everett as inquisitor Bernard Gui; the book is set in Italy in 1327, but nevertheless was nicely Sherlockian.

19117. Shane Rimmer died on Mar. 29. He began his acting career in television in 1957, and is credited as a supporting actor in a long list of television series and films; he also wrote scripts and was a voice actor, and played Lysander Stark with Michael Pennington in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1987) and Jefferson Hope on BBC Radio 4 in "A Study in Scarlet" (1989).
19118. "Kabukicho Sherlock" (a new anime due on television in Japan in October) is set in modern-day Kabukicho in Shinjuku, Tokyo, and "follows the comedic, mysterious, and dramatic adventures of a ragtag band of detectives as they live together in a tenement above Mrs. Hudson's bar in the red-light district and attempt to solve an unusual string of killings." You can see some of the artwork at <www.tinyurl.com/y4wwtb6v>.
19119. One hears of Sherlock everywhere, Karen Murdock spotted a letter, written by David Doyle and published in the Irish Times (Mar. 30): "We appear to be heading for a Sherlock Holmes Brexit. Once you eliminate the impossible Brexits, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the true Brexit."
19120. And according to an editorial in The Times on Mar. 31, "we have reached the point in which, to paraphrase Arthur Conan Doyle, once you have eliminated the sensible, you are left with a series of unpalatable choices."
19122. There seems to be no end to puzzle books that feature Sherlock Holmes, but Ian Stewart's Professor Stewart's Casebook of Mathematical Mysteries (New York: Basic Books, 2014; 320 pp., $16.99) offers "mathematical curios and conundrums" that feature Hemlock Soames and Dr. John Watsup; real mathematics are involved, and the solutions are far from trivial.
19123. Georgiana Cavendish, 5th Duchess of Devonshire, gave her name to the style of hat worn by Mary Sutherland (in "A Case of Identity"), and her portrait by Gainsborough was stolen by Adam Worth (who was described as the Napol on of crime long before that title was given to the evil Prof. Moriarty). You can see the portrait, and learn much more about the Duchess, in an interesting article by Amanda Foreman <www.tinyurl.com/yy8phllk>.

19124. It's a remote connection between Sherlock Holmes and an American president, and one can only wish that there were a photograph of President John F. Kennedy with "a big Sherlock-Holmes style magnifying glass," but there's a reference to this in Don Moser's article on "The Time of the Angel" in American Heritage (Oct. 1977), reported by Alexpander Orlov in the on-line library of the Central Intelligence Agency. The "Angel" was the nickname of the U-2, and the article is about the Cuban missile crisis. You can read the text of the article at the American Heritage web-site <www.americanheritage.com/time-angel>, and find a scan of the actual article (with illustrations) at <www.tinyurl.com/y2oxehl3>.

19125. Ralph Hall and Mike McSwiggin are helping Barbara Herbert sell Paul Herbert's collection; he cast his net widely, and had interesting Sherlockiana as well as books, and if you have a want-list you're welcome to get in touch with Ralph at <bugmanhall@aol.com>.
19126. "How did Sherlock hire Watson?" Using Google, according to an amusing advertisement <www.vimeo.com/328543356> spotted by Jennie Paton.
19127. "Comedy Playhouse" was a 30-minutes series broadcast by BBC-1; on Jan. 18, 1973, the program included a skit titled "Elementary, My Dear Watson" with John Cleese as Holmes and William Rushton as Watson, and Jennie Paton has found the skit at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=FpjztufGwhI>.
19128. Gyles Brandreth's Oscar Wilde and the Return of Jack the Ripper (New York: Pegasus, 2019; 356 pp., $25.95), is the seventh of his series of mysteries featuring Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle; published in Britain in 2017 as Jack the Ripper: Case Closed, the novel's set in 1894 and presents an imaginative, well-written, and colorful solution to the identity of Jack the Ripper.
19129. The 1979 Russian television series that starred Vasilii LivaNovember and Vitaliy Solomin was filmed in Riga, and Alexander Orlov reports that the city began formal celebrations of Sherlock Holmes' birthday in 2012; there's a nice assortment of photographs at <www.tinyurl.com/yxf76hqa>, and video at <www.tinyurl.com/y3geu5mn>.
19131. Ross E. Davies' excellent article about "The Bimetallic Question in The Valley of Fear" (published in the summer 2018 issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal) now is available on-line at the web-site of the Fourth Garrideb <www.tinyurl.com/y47mdmev>.

19133. Uttiyo Bhattacharya's Ba'az of the Bengal Lancers (New Delhi: Juggernaut, 2019; 353 pp., INR-350) begins in 1857, the year of the Indian Mutiny (which will be familiar to anyone who has read "The Sign of the Four") and a stolen treasure, and the book is the story of a modern-day search for that treasure; Conan Doyle's story is one of the inspirations for the book (Captain Morstan, Major Sholto, and Jonathan Small make appearances, but aren't quite Conan Doyle's characters), and the story's nicely told. There's also an e-book version available for INR-80 at the publisher's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y3yvoew>.
19134. CBS-TV has announced that the final season of "Elementary" will begin airing on May 23.
19135. Harold Wayne Billings died on Nov. 29, 2017. Born in Texas in 1931, he was for twenty-five years the director of general libraries at the University of Texas in Austin, and was the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article published in The Baker Street Journal in 2006 ("The Materia Medica of Sherlock Holmes").
19136. Bill Amos' three-act play Sherlock Holmes and the Scarlet Avenger was published by Amazon's CreateSpace in 2015 (71 pp., $10.50) and performed at the Performance Works Factory Theatre in Nuremberg, Pa., this year (it's an interesting dramatization of "A Study in Scarlet").
19137. Arthur Conan Doyle lived and worked in Plymouth in 1882, in practice with George Turnavine Budd, before moving on to Southsea; Plymouth boasts not only a commemorative blue plaque at 1 Durnford Street, but also a series of quotations from his writings that have been set in stone in the sidewalks of the street <www.tinyurl.com/y4jmu3cn>.
19138. Slot machines have come a long way since the days of the one-armed bandit: Tom Horn Gaming has just released "Sherlock: A Scandal in Bohemia" and you can visit www.tinyurl.com/y3antw5b to learn more about the game (and watch a trailer); thanks to Alexander Orlov for reporting this new development.
19139. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the winners of this year's Edgar awards, and they include Leslie S. Klinger's Classic American Crime Fiction of the 1920s (for best critical/biographical); the book was edited by Les, with a Foreword by Otto Penzler (Sept 18 #3).
19140. Jennie Paton found a nice tribute to the late Roger Llewellyn, who was interviewed and recorded by Steve and Pat Tanenbaum after a performance of "Sherlock Holmes – The Last Act!" <www.tinyurl.com/y4vcsrte>.
19141. When in New Zealand: "Cut! Costume and the Cinema" (an exhibition at the Waikato Museum in Hamilton though July 21) features 43 outfits from 25 films (including Robert Downey Jr.'s suit from "Sherlock Holmes"); their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/y3vh8pvu>. The exhibition is mounted by EDG <www.tinyurl.com/y3tsmy4q>, and will appear next at the Reading Public Museum in Reading, Pa., Sept. 21-Jan. 5. EDG also is responsible for the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition that's now at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., through May 27 <www.lsc.org>.

19142. Greg Ruby has reported that The Numismatic Friends of Sherlock Holmes will hold a dinner meeting during the World's Fair of Money in Rosemont, Ill., on Aug. 15; all Sherlockians in the Chicago area will be welcome at the festivities, and details are available at the web-site of The Fourth Garrideb <www.tinyurl.com/y3a9djfc>.
19143. Lucy Liu's star will be installed on the Hollywood Walk of Fame on May 1, at Hollywood and Vine, next to the star of Anna May Wong. Lucy Liu plays Joan Watson in the "Elementary" television series, and Anna May Wong was Mrs. Pyke in Reginald Owens' "A Study in Scarlet" (1933), a few years after she was burlesqued in the British marionette film "Herlock Sholmes in Be-a-Live Crook, or Anna Went Wrong" (1930). You can see if your favorite actor has a star using the search engine at <www.walkoffame.com>.
19144. Bill Peschel blogs on behalf of his Peschel Press, and on Apr. 24 posted an amusing discussion of a "chaste salute" <www.tinyurl.com/y38apdsq>.
19145. Susan B. Diamond ("The Great Mogul") died on Apr. 25. She was a member of the Beacon Society since it was founded in 2003, serving on its board of directors and as chair of its grants committee, and for many years helped organize the STUD-Watsonian Weekends and runnings of the Silver Blaze in Chicago. Susan also was an editor of The Serpentine Muse and for a time presided over the Prince Albert League (a society for consorts of members of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes). Susan received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1998.
19146. Jennie Paton discovered the Global Gourmet Games, sponsored by the Milkin Institute; they were Sherlockian this year, in Los Angeles on Apr. 27; you can see Michael Milkin (as Sherlock Holmes) explaining the game's rules at their web-site <www.globalgourmetgames.org>.
19147. It's always nice to see the work of artists who have illustrated Sherlockian and Doylean stories, and Fred Taraba (at Taraba Illustration Art) is offering (non-Sherlockian and non-Doylean) original artwork by Arthur I. Keller and Joseph Clement Coll, first come, first served; his e-mail address is <fredappraisals@gmail.com>.

19148. Another (more noted) artist who had Doylean credentials was N. C. Wyeth, who provided illustrations for The Last Galley (1911) and The White Company (1922); four of his originals will be offered at Heritage Auctions on May 4, including an illustration for The Boy's King Arthur (1917) with a reserve of $500,000 <www.tinyurl.com/y5yfbtv>.
19149. A nice result of the recent five-week government shut-down that curtailed all but essential agency activities was a reprieve for the troubled Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman and Luminescence for Organics and Chemicals instrument scheduled for the Mars rover due to land on the planet next year. The shut-down gave NASA time to plan minor modifications to SHERLOC (yes, that's the instrument's acronym) and avoid cancelling SHERLOC to mitigate continuing cost overruns on the mission, according to an announcement <www.tinyurl.com/y2fdpqfh> noted by Bill Anselm in Space News (Mar. 31). See the earlier report (April 14 #2) for more about SHERLOC.

19150. Is anyone watching the CBS All Access web-series "Star Trek: Discovery"? A discussion of the episode "Such Sweet Sorrow" (broadcast on Apr. 11) reported that when Amanda referred to Sarek as "impossible," he replied "I will accept improbable," with a reminder to viewers that that Spock quoted the Canonical axiom, attributing it to "an ancestor of mine" in the 1991 film "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country".
19151. Theatrics: Brian Clemens' "Holmes and the Ripper" is running at the Caxton Little Theatre in Grimsby through May 4 <www.caxtontheatre.com>. And (as "Sherlock Holmes and the Ripper Murders") at the Genesian Theatre in Sydney, N.S.W., until June 15 <www.genesiantheatre.com>.
19152. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" is running at the B Street Theatre in Sacramento, Calif., through May 26 <www.bstreettheatre.org>.
19153. Todd Wallinger's "The Enchanted Bookshop" is scheduled at the DCP Theatre in Telford, Pa., May 3-12 <www.dcptheatre.com>.
19154. C.P. Stancich's "Sherlock Holmes and the Spinsters of Blackmead" will be performed at the Dunedin Community Center in Dunedin, Fla., May 3-11; web-site at <www.dunidenshowcasetheater.net>.
19155. Ondrej G. Brzobohaty's "Legenda jménem Holmes" [A Legend Named Holmes] is scheduled at Musical Theater Karlín in Prague, May 8-Sept. 29; their web-site's at <www.hdk.cz/en/repertoire/57-holmes-the-legend>.
19156. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Crown Jewel" (a musical written by Janet Yates Vogt and Mark Friedman) will be performed at the Coast Capital Playhouse in White Rock, B.C., on May 11 <www.whiterockplayers.ca>.
19157. Roger Utting's new play "The Trial of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Milestone Centre in Caversham, Berks., May 16-18; their web-site's at <www.cavparktheatre.org.uk>.
19158. Tal Avizer's "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Dancing Men" is due at the Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum in the Bronx, N.Y., June 1-9; web-site's at <www.bartowpellmansionmuseum.org>.
19159. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at the Very Little Theatre in Eugene, Ore., June 7-22; web-site at <www.thevlt.com>; and at the Vault Theater in Hillsboro, Ore., Dec. 5-23 <www.bag&baggage.org>.

19162. The Royal Mint has now made their 50p Sherlock Holmes coin available, in cupro-nickel in a presentation folder (£10.00) and in various other metals at higher prices. Greg Ruby offers helpful information at his Fourth Garrideb web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yy7q9a7d>. The Royal Mint also has confirmed that the coin will go into circulation, but hasn't said when; so at some point you'll be able to get the coin for 50p.
19163. Denny Dobry reports that the Baker Street Irregulars' book fair attracted a nice crowd of people interested in Sherlockiana that had been donated to the BSI Trust to be sold in support of the BSI Archives. Denny welcomes your want lists, and has sales lists available for all those in pursuit of reasonably-priced additions to their collections <dendobry@pdt.net>.
19164. The spring issue of the Serpentine Muse, published quarterly by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, has an interesting history of the Muse, which was launched in 1975 and is still going strong, plus other news about the society. Subscriptions cost $20.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230), and a copy of the spring issue is available for $5.00 postpaid.
19165. Conan Doyle's short story "A Shadow Before" was published in the Windsor Magazine (Dec. 1898) and then in The Green Flag and Other Stories (1900); the 14-page manuscript will be at offered at auction at Christie's in New York on June 12, estimated at $8,000-$10,000. Randall Stock has an informative page on the manuscript (and its history) at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/shadow-before-2019.htm>.
19166. According to an article about cricket by Pathikrit Sen Gupta at FirstPost (Apr. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/y39f2ntx>, on Apr. 11, 1913, militant suffragettes set fire to the pavilion at the Tunbridge Wells Cricket Club, and Conan Doyle, who was a keen cricket enthusiast, reacted indignantly at a meeting of the National League for Opposing Women's Suffrage, calling the arsonists "female hooligans" and comparing their attack to "blowing up a blind man and his dog." No one is certain why the club was targeted, but it's said that some time prior to the attack a Kent official had commented: "It is not true that women are banned from the pavilion. Who do you think makes the teas?"
19167. Tim Conway died on May 14. He was a delightful comic actor, and won four Emmy awards while starring for more than a decade on the television series "The Carol Burnett Show". He also played Sherlock Holmes in a skit on the "Tim Conway Show" (1981).
19168. The television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" ran for three seasons (1999-2002) and ended with a "to be continued" cliffhanger for the next season, but New Line Television ran into financial difficulties and there was no fourth season. If you would like to know what was planned for the fourth season, Rich Heldenfels recently made available at <www.reeves-stevens.com/TLWSUMMARY1.pdf> the writers' detailed discussion of what they had in mind.

19169. William S. Major's delightful Elementary Art: 100 Years Sherlock Holmes (Hawthorne: Silver Screen Collectibles, 2017; 167 pp., $24.99) offers full-color reproductions of posters, lobby cards, and programs, in English and other languages, for a wide range of Sherlockian films and plays, and Sherlockian artwork used in advertising for non-Sherlockian films; it's nicely done, and the publisher's interesting web-site is at <www.silverscreencollectibles.com>.
19170. Fodor's Travel' "How to Vacation at One of the Oldest Places on Earth" at <www.tinyurl.com/y2fpxhh5> discusses Mount Roraima, which is considered to be an inspiration for Conan Doyle's The Lost World; but: Fodor's also suggests that "given the current unrest in Venezuela, hold off on any travel plans until the situation in the country has stabilized."
19171. There's more information about Michael Mitnick's new play "Mysterious Circumstances" (which is due at the Geffen Playhouse in Los Angeles June 11-July 14 <www.geffenplayhouse.org/mysterious-circumstances>; the play's inspired by David Grann's article in the New Yorker about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green, and the cast will feature Alan Tudyk (Richard Lancelyn Green and Sherlock Holmes) Hugo Armstrong (The American and others), Austin Durant (Conan Doyle and others), Leo Marks (Smith and others), Ramiz Monsef (Watson and others), and Helen Sadler (Touie and others).

19172. Randall Stock continues to update various pages at his “Best of Sherlock” web-site; his helpful discussion of facsimile editions of Beeton’s Christmas Annual for 1887 is at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/rfbeet.htm>.
19174. Charles Veley and Anna Elliott have written eight pastiches about Sherlock Holmes and his daughter Lucy James <www.sherlockandlucy.com>, and you can download The Crown Jewel Mystery free at their web-site; you can also sample the audiobooks, nicely read by Simon Prebble and Wendy Tremont King.
19175. The Official Sherlock Puzzle Book, by Chris Maslanka and Steve Tribe (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 2018; 259 pp., $17.95), first published by BBC Books in 2017 as a tie-in to the “Sherlock” series, presents more than 165 challenging puzzles featuring characters from the Canon.
19176. Howard Ostrom reported on “Sherlok” (a musical group in Montpellier whose songs are written and composed by Katia Plachez, Alain Cahuac, and Christophe Dubois. You can view two of their (non-Sherlockian) music videos at <www.tinyurl.com/y47pqa36> and <www.tinyurl.com/yyp54x2c>. 19177. Andrew Glazzard’s The Case of Sherlock Holmes (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2018; 252 pp., £75.00) discusses the “secrets and lies in Conan Doyle’s detective fiction,” using a scholarly close reading to explore seven themes (finance, class, family, sex, race, war, and secrecy) he found in the Canon, placing the stories in historical context and drawing intriguing inferences such as the possibility that the Hon. Ronald Adair actually was Colonel Moran’s willing accomplice.
19178. Turn your computer into a typewriter! With a Querkywriter keyboard! More information is available at <www.querkywriter.com>.
19179. Martin Fido died on Apr. 2. He was a professor, teaching writing at Boston University, and an author who wrote about true crime in Murder Guide to London (1986) and went on to become an expert in the crimes and world of Jack the Ripper. He also wrote The World of Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective and His Era (March 99 #1), which was updated for a second edition as Sherlock: The Facts and Fiction Behind the World’s Greatest Detective (March 16 #3).
19180. N. C. Wyeth’s original artwork for an illustration for The Boy’s King Arthur (April 19 #5) <www.tinyurl.com/y5yfbtv1> sold for $615,000 (including the buyer’s premium).
19181. Arwel Jones, the production designer for the BBC’s “Sherlock” television series, had advice in the Hollywood Reporter on May 22 for those who would like to find and use five signature wallpapers that were used in the series, at 221B Baker Street and elsewhere <www.tinyurl.com/y5q7s7am>.
19182. The Royal Mail has issued a set of stamps honoring the bicentenary of the birth of Queen Victoria; one of them shows a portrait of the “certain gracious lady” (as Watson wrote in “The Bruce-Partington Plans”) painted by Heinrich von Angeli in 1890. There’s more information about the stamps (and a new £5 coin) at <www.tinyurl.com/y2rmth44>.
19183. This year’s San Diego Comic-Con, to be held in San Diego, Calif., July 18-21, will include the Great SherlockDCC Scavenger Hunt, sponsored by the Baker Street Babes <www.sherlockedccparty.tumblr.com>. More than 130,000 people are expected at the convention, which includes a multitude of fandoms.
19184. Rob Nunn has announced a new professional Sherlockian society, the Priory Teacher’s Association, for current and past educators; you can contact him at <www.robentanunn@gmail.com> or at 13 West Pickett’s Crossing, Edwardsville, IL 62025.
19185. Millie Bobby Brown told the World of Entertainment News Network this month that she plans to start filming this summer on a feature film based on the series of books written by Nancy Springer about Enola Holmes, the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock (May 18 #6); she’s the producer as well as the star, and you can see her now in the Netflix series “Stranger Things” and (this summer) in the film “Godzilla: King of the Monsters”.

19186. The seventh and final season of “Elementary” has begun on CBS-TV, to the delight of the series’ fans. No spoilers here, but Entertainment Tonight Online had an interesting interview with Rob Doherty on May 23 <www.tinyurl.com/y6yq8xxw>. Doherty is the creator and showrunner of the series, and has some nice stories to tell, including an explanation (well, just one spoiler) of why Joan Watson has gone blonde.
19187. Garrison Keillor’s “The Writer’s Almanac” was launched in 1993 and syndicated by Minnesota Public Radio until 2017. It is now a podcast, and he paid tribute to Conan Doyle on his birthday <www.tinyurl.com/y3lrmaxd>.
19188. The Affair of the Mysterious Letter, by Alexis Hall (New York: Ace, 2019; 338 pp., $16.00), is a delightful fantasy that features a consulting sorceress named Shaharazad Haas and her sometimes-bewildered housemate Capt. John Wyndham; the initials are not just a coincidence: they live at 221B Martyrs Walk and the novel has many allusions to the Canon.
19189. One sees Sherlockian icons everywhere: Jim Toomey’s “Sherman’s Lagoon” is a widely syndicated comic strip that began a weekday thread on May 18 featuring the brainy fish Ernest detecting in a deerstalker. Comics Kingdom has a paywall that requires that you pay to see all but the most recent dates (unless you sign up for a free trial), or you can wait until the annual collection for 2019 is published in 2021.
19191. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world’s first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the Spaghetti Warehouse in San Antonio on May 22 during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, made welcome by The Strange Old Book Collectors and other Texans. We were glad to toast Conan Doyle on his 160th birthday, and we will meet next in Phoenix on Sept. 25, and in Houston on June 10, 2020.
19192. Denise Varner called our attention to Toni Dwiggin’s series (now with five titles) of mysteries starring forensic geologists Cassie Oldfield and Walter Shaws; the author’s web-site’s at <www.tonidwiggin.com>. Two other authors of forensic-geology mysteries are Sarah Andrews, whose detective is Em Hansen <www.sarahandrews.net> and Susan Cummins Miller, whose series features Frankie McFarlane <www.susancumminsmiller.com>.

19194. Edinburgh Live honored Conan Doyle's birthday on May 22 with a story about the letter he wrote in 1882 when he submitted his story "An Actor's Duel" to Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine; it was the second story he submitted to the magazine, which rejected both of them. The letter is owned by the National Library of Scotland, and you can read the article online at <www.tinyurl.com/yxkm6gzn>.
19196. 70 Years by Gas Lamp: The Illustrious Clients' Sixth Casebook, edited by Mary Ann Bradley, Louise Haskett, and Melanie Hoffman (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2018; 257 pp., $21.95), celebrates the 70th anniversary of the society's first casebook <www.wessexpress.com/html/70years.html>.
19197. The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club has launched a new web-site ("The Writings about the Writings in Japan") that offers abstracts (in English) of monographs that have been published in their annual journal The World of Sherlock Holmes <www.holmesjapan.jp/english/writings.index.html>. The journal was launched in 1978, and abstracts now are available for issues from 2002 to 2010, offering an excellent look at the sort of scholarship written by Sherlockians in Japan.
19198. Margaret H. Laing honored Conan Doyle's birthday with an amusing post to the Chicago Tribune's "Chicago Now" blog on "Birthday Time in the Imaginary Writers' Room" <www.tinyurl.com/y2ghke8s>; you can search her archive to find earlier posts about Conan Doyle, and Holmes.
19199. Victor R. Lahti died on May 15. Vic was a petroleum geologist, worked and lived in Texas and Oklahoma, and was an enthusiastic member of the Practical, But Limited, Geologists. He also presided for many years over the Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa, and edited their newsletter the Afghanistan Perceivers Dispatch.
19200. "Sherlock ist zurück und will bleiben," the Jungfrau Zeitung announced on May 1, in a story about what's new at the Sherlock Holmes Museum; it's all in German <www.jungfrauzeitung.ch/artikel/173263>, with pictures in full color, and Google Translate will be of assistance to those who need help in reading the story in English. And "Der Glücksfall fürs Haslital" was the headline on a story on May 4 <www.jungfrauzeitung.ch/artikel/173428> with more news and more pictures. For the benefit of those who aren't up to speed with Schweizerdeutsch, the headlines on the stories translate as "Sherlock is Back and Wants to Remain" and "The Stroke of Luck for Haslital" (that's the area where Meiringen is located).

19201. Nick Utechin kindly forwarded a BBC News video from the opening of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition in London in 1951. And you have a chance to see Arthur Wontner rather older than when he played Holmes on screen in the 1930s <www.tinyurl.com/yy4mb54q>. Howard Ostrom has identified the man who impersonated Holmes: Michael Weight, who presided over the Exhibition's reconstruction of the sitting-room at 221b.
19202. Theatrical news: Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Innisfail Middle School in Innisfail, Alta., June 5-7 <www.innisfailmiddle.ca>.
19204. Kenneth Brown and John D. Huston's "2 Sherlock Holmes Adventures" will be performed at the Arts Court Theatre in Ottawa, Ont., June 14-22, during the Ottawa Fringe <www.tinyurl.com/y22omxuy>.
19205. Greg Freeman and Ken McClymont's "Sherlock Holmes and the Invisible Thing" (first produced in 2016 and now revised and restaged by Freeman) will be performed at the Rudolf Steiner Theatre in London, from July 17 to Aug. 18 www.thesherlockplay.co.uk
19206. Thomas Moore's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is touring in Britain and will be performed during the Ventnor Fringe at the Magpie in Ventnor, Isle of Wight, July 24-27 <www.thehoundofthebaskervilles.co.uk>; the two-actor play features Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Jane Watson.
19207. Douglas Maxwell's new dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is scheduled at the Northern Stage in Newcastle upon Tyne, Sept. 11-23; web-site at <www.northernstage.co.uk>.
19208. Brian Guehring's "Sherlock Holmes and the 1st Baker Street Irregular" will be performed at the Parkview Physicians Group ArtsLab in Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 20-29 <www.tinyurl.com/yydfrvh9>.
19209. Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" will be performed at the All an Act Theatre in Erie, Pa., Sept. 27-Oct. 20 <www.allanact.net>; and at the First Folio Theatre in Oakbrook, Ill., Oct. 2-Nov. 3 <www.firstfolio.org>.
19210. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be produced at the McAninch Arts Center in Glen Ellyn, Ill., Sept. 5-Oct. 6 <www.atthemac.org>; at the Derby Dinner Playhouse in Clarksville, Ind., Oct. 2-Nov. 10 <www.derbydinner.com>; and at the Cumberland County Theatre in Crossville, Tenn., Oct. 11 to Nov. 7 <www.ccplayhouse.com>.
19211. R. Hamilton Wright's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Raven's Curse" will be performed at the Vertigo Theatre in Calgary, Alta., from Nov. 9 to Dec. 8 www.vertigotheatre.com

19212. If you would like to receive news from the Baker Street Irregulars about events and books and such, you can sign up for occasional messages at the BSI web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-news-via-email>; that will also put you on the mailing list for the announcement of registration for the BSI's Archive Conference on Nov. 8-10 at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., the new home of the BSI Archive. The conference is open to everyone; Ross Davies and Glen Miranker have assembled a splendid list of speakers from the worlds of collecting, bookselling, and publishing, and you'll have a chance to see other interesting collections at the Lilly.
19213. Nick Utechin was watching the BBC Two "Newsnight" program on May 29, and heard British Defence Secretary Malcolm Rifkind, discussing Brexit, say: "You know, it is Sherlock Holmes who once said, when you rule out everything else, whatever's left, however disagreeable, may be the only question of how you get there."

19214. July 17 is World Emoji Day <www.worldemojiday.com>. There seems to be no Sherlock Holmes emoji, nor even a Detective emoji, but they do have a Foot (for those who believe the game is afoot). Has anyone campaigned to have a Sherlock Holmes emoji created?
19215. The Boomerang streaming service has launched a new 13-episode weekly animated series “Scooby Doo and Guess Who?” and the official trailer has She lock Holmes (voiced by Ian James Corlett) as one of the celebrities the gang encounters. The series also will air on the Cartoon network starting in July. Here’s the trailer: <www.tinyurl.com/y6s2xr82>.
19216. Conan Doyle’s 14-page manuscript for his short story “A Shadow Before” at auction at Christie’s in New York this month (May 19 #1) was estimated at $8,000-$10,000 and sold for $13,750 (including the buyer’s premium). The same sale included an autograph letter from Edgar Allan Poe, estimated at $20,000-$30,000 (sold for $52,500), and Poe’s pocket watch, estimated at $80,000-$120,000 (sold for $250,000). Randall Stock offers an informative page on “A Shadow Before” (and its history) at his “Best of Sherlock” web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/shadow-before-2019.htm>.
19217. Randall also offers information about a page from the manuscript of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” that’s up for auction at Profiles in History on July 11 <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/hound-baskervilles-h31-2019.htm> estimated at $120,000-$150,000 (it was advertised by Pepper & Stern in 1994 at $22,500).
19218. The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State held their annual Christopher Morley Birthday Luncheon in Hoboken on Apr. 28, when Terry Hunt unveiled some delightful newsreel footage showing Morley and Cleon Throckmorton hosting the first Hoboken Free State Dachshund Contest, which was held in 1929.

19221. Samantha Wolov spotted Dustin Hoffman in Sherlockian costume, on the cover of the DVD case for “Madigan’s Millions”; it’s an Italian comedy (“Un dollar per 7 vigliacchi”), released in Italy in 1968 and then in the U.S. in 1969). Hoffman plays Jason Fister, a bumbling U.S. Treasury agent who is sent to Italy to find money taken there from the U.S. by a deported gangster. There’s nothing Sherlockian in or about the film itself (it’s available at YouTube and elsewhere).
19222. Proceedings of the Pondicherry Lodge is the semi-annual electronic newsletter edited by Jayantika Ganguly for the Sherlock Holmes Society of India <www.sherlockholmessociety.in>, now in its seventh year, and the current issue (with 100 colorful pages) offers Sherlockian news from India, and a nice mix of scholarship and pastiche; all issues of the Proceedings can be found at the society’s web-site.
19223. Howard Ostrom and Thierry Saint-Joanis’ SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREENS 1940-1959 is the second volume of their Sherlock Holmes Cyclopedia (Saint-Sauvier: Mycroft’s Brother Editions, 2019; 168 pp., €30.00), and it’s a grand extension of their research into films and television <www.mycrofts.net>; the entries feature contemporary reviews, posters, press books, and photographs, and include actors seen in Sherlockian costume only in advertising, with some interesting surprises. Copies (inscribed on request) are available for delivery in the U.S. for $35.00 postpaid, from Howard (5748 SW 60th Place, Ocala, FL 34474).
19224. “The Great Detective Sherlock Holmes: The Greatest Jail Breaker” is a new animated film that’s due for release in Hong Kong on Aug. 1; it’s based on a five-book series written by Lia Ho and illustrated by Yu Yuen Wong that is available in English as e-books at Amazon and elsewhere ($4.99 each), and there’s more information about the film at <www.tinyurl.com/29ycxvz>.
19226. “Queen Victoria, Smiling and in Sunglasses, Found Anew on Film” reads the headline on a story in the N.Y. Times on May 30 <www.tinyurl.com/y6qxxyfts> (kindly reported by Al Rosenblatt); don’t neglect the article’s link to a longer MoMA video. The Smithsonian also reported on the find at its web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y4dmcmmam>.

19227. Brian W. Pugh is the winner of this year’s Tony and Freda Howlett Literary Award (recognizing the outstanding contribution to the literature of Sherlock Holmes) from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London for his revised and expanded fourth edition of A Chronology of the Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (October 18 #4). It’s a grand resource for information about the life and work of Conan Doyle, and it’s available from <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
19228. Lucy Liu’s Joan Watson is “the best-dressed detective on TV,” according to Emma Foster, who interviewed Rebecca Hoffher (the costume designer for the “Elementary” series) for Vulture on May 31 <www.tinyurl.com/yxocuxdq>.
19229. The new television mini-series “The Name of the Rose” likely led at least some of its viewers to wonder about the significance of the rose. Umberto Eco, the book’s author, offered his explanation in a letter that went to auction this month. He wrote to Philip Sterling, a New York bibliophile, that, “As for the title, the rose is so overwhelmed with symbolic meanings that everyone can fill it up with every possible interpretation. As a matter of fact I was thinking of the last line of my book: ‘the rose of yore remains only through its name and we hold only bare names.’ It seemed to me that such a line was a good epitome for a book dominated by ‘nominalistic’ feelings and based upon other books.”
19231. The German musical “Sherlock Holmes—Next Generation” now offers its music on an MP3 album (£9.99) <www.tinyurl.com/y5tf3nyt>. The musical premiered last January in Hamburg, and there’s more information at The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia <www.tinyurl.com/yxetpwt8>.
19232. The Langham Hotel, site of the fateful dinner where Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde were asked to write stories for Lippincott’s Monthly Magazine, also is mentioned in three of the Canonical stories; it’s one of the many properties owned by The Langham Hotels & Resorts, and the company has unveiled a new logo and brand campaign <www.tinyurl.com/y5vanah9> inspired by “the brand’s distinctively British heritage,” explaining that the Langham was known as Europe’s first grand hotel when it was opened in 1865 by the Prince of Wales.

19233. Further to the previous report (October 18 #2) on “Sherlock: The Game Is Now” (billed as “the only official Sherlock Holmes Escape Game”), it is still going strong and now includes a private cocktail club that’s called “The Mind Palace” <www.thegameisnow.com/mind-palace> and offers private screenings and pop-up Sherlockian events.
19234. “London Detective Mysteries” is an otome visual novel that appeared on the PlayStation Portable in 2013 (otome is a Japanese story-based visual game that’s targeted toward women); you can see video about the first episode “Meeting Sherlock Holmes & Watson” at <www.tinyurl.com/y2xxy78n>. There now is a physical copy of the game available from Limited Run Editions for the PlayStation Vita <www.limitedrungames.com>.

19235. Douglas G. Greene’s JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES (April 95 #7), long out of print, is now available as an e-book from Crippen & Landru ($8.99) <www.tinyurl.com/yy9cy2oo>. It’s a splendid biography about a man who was a mastery of the “impossible mystery” genre, wrote an excellent biography of Conan Doyle, adaptations of “The Lost World” and “The Speckled Band” for BBC Radio, amusing Sherlockian parody-playlets performed at the annual dinners of the Mystery Writers of America, and (with Adrian Conan Doyle) a series of pastiches. Carr also from time to time disposed of all his personal papers, presenting problems for any biographer, but Greene persevered, and the results are well worth reading.
19236. Philip Purser-Hallard’s Sherlock Holmes: The Vanishing Man (New York: Titan, 2019; 279 pp., $14.95) involves Holmes and Watson with an intricate locked-room mystery, a rich London business man, and murder.
19237. If you don’t already have enough Sherlockian neckties, there’s a new design offered in four colors by Edutxwstore ($17.52), spotted by Jennie Paton <www.tinyurl.com/y5lltv8m>.
19238. AcornTV <www.acorn.tv> is a subscription streaming service that has added the first season of the ITV series “The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes” (1971) to its schedule, with fine actors in good stories.
19239. Sleep tight with Sherlock Gnomes: Jennie Paton spotted a colorful Sherlock Gnomes Bedding Set ($70.99) <www.tinyurl.com/y3ykgys4>.
19240. Ray Betzner launched his “Studies in Starrett” blog five years ago, pursuing all aspects of Vincent Starrett, and reminisces about it in an interview with Scott Monty and Burt Wolder at <www.tinyurl.com/y5wh7zpy>.
19241. “Seeing a murder on television . . . can help work off one’s antagonisms. And if you haven’t any antagonisms, the commercials will give you some.” Alfred Hitchcock, quoted by Kate Stine in her on-line Mystery Scene newsletter <www.mysteryscenemag.com>.
19242. Further to the item (May 19 #2) on Denis Conan Doyle’s bookplate, it was used: Doug Wrigglesworth reports that he has it in his copy of the George Newnes first British edition of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (1892).
19243. Mick Finlay’s The Murder Pit (Toronto: MIRA, 2019; 426 pp., $15.99) continues the adventures of William Arrowood, who calls himself an “emotional agent” rather than the “detective agent” Holmes (Arrowood has rather harsh things to say about how Holmes has, or hasn’t, managed to solve some of his cases); the story is set in a working-class world that’s far from the setting of the Canon, with interesting characters and a good mystery. The author’s web-site is at <www.mickfinlay.com>, with a blog that offers posts such as “the bloody origins of the modern bowler hat.”
19244. It’s neither Sherlockian nor Doylean, but: “if you remember tape recorders and cassettes” <www.tinyurl.com/y6g4bdof>, Bas Bleu suggests, advertising something that will surely puzzle younger generations who don’t.

19245. Robert Dobson’s The Library of the Lost: In Search of Forgotten Authors (2015) is a delightful collection of articles and essays by a writer who was interested in the weird and the wonderful, and it includes his “Sherlock Holmes: The Last Mystery” (reprinted from Antiquarian Book Monthly Review, Feb. 1988). The first edition cost $60.00, but it’s now out of print; fortunately there are less expensive reprints available at <www.abebooks.com>, and the magazine’s offered by Oak Knoll Books <www.oakknoll.com> for $5.00.
19246. “Q.E.D.: Murder on the Bluebell Line” was a British program broadcast by BBC-1 in 1987, based on Charles Blinderman’s The Piltdown Inquest (1986). The program has Holmes and Watson on the Bluebell Line to Piltdown, and on the way they “review the evidence and the ‘criminal records’ of the people involved.” Hugh Fraser played Sherlock Holmes, and Ronald Fraser was Watson, and Jennie Paton has found it at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yyfdwjcd>.
19247. NBC San Diego reported on July 10 from Comic Con San Diego that “Sherlock” show-runner Steven Moffatt revealed that he actually already had crafted a Sherlock Holmes/Doctor Who crossover: in his youth he cast his sister to play both characters in a home movie (“I made it years ago,” he said, “I’m over it.”)
19248. Another quote from Moffat: four years ago he told Entertainment Weekly he thought fan fiction is “creative and exciting,” and that while there is a tendency to disparage it, “I don’t agree . . . I refuse to mock it—because I’m a man who writes Sherlock Holmes fan fiction for a living.”
19249. Richard A. Lupoff’s The Universal Holmes (Vancleave: Ramble House, 2007; 148 pp., $30.00 cloth/$18.00 paper) is a collection of his pastiches, including an amusing recipe for Giant Rat of Sumatra Stew. It is still in print from the publisher <www.ramblehouse.com>, along with other Sherlockian books by Lupoff, John Kendrick Bangs, Derham Groves, and Gary Lovisi.
19250. Variety reported on June 9 <www.tinyurl.com/y4yqohqn> on plans for a new French animated series “The Baker Street Four” based on six French comic books written by Jean-Blaise Dijan and Olivier Legrand and illustrated by David Etien; the comic books also are available in English, and they feature ragamuffins Billy, Charlie, and Tom, and their cat Watson, who all assist Sherlock Holmes.
19251. Gretchen McCulloch suggested in Wired (June 11) that “Fans Are Better Than Tech at Organizing Information Online” <www.tinyurl.com/y4nu862w>; the article is about Archive of Our Own (AO3), a fan-fiction archive that offers almost five million fan-works and uses “tag wranglers” to help users find things in the archive, and explains how the system works for Sherlockian fan-fiction.
19252. Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Undead Client, by M. J. Downing (Louisville: Burns and Lea, 2018; 264 pp., $10.99), involves Holmes and Watson in a murder mystery featuring horrific experiments, voodoo, and zombies, and a new solution to the identification of Jack the Ripper. The author’s web-site is at <www.downingplace.com>.

19253. Further to the item (March 14 #6) about the sale of the former Cedars Spiritualist Church in Ipswich, where Conan Doyle attended seances in the 1920s, the building was purchased by a developer for £500,000 and was converted into two spacious four-story town houses that are now being offered for £1.25 million to £1.35 million, according to a nicely-illustrated article in the Ipswich Star <www.tinyurl.com/y6cmjs4e>.
19254. Hugh Ashton’s The Darlington Substitution (published by Inkbeans in 2012) now is available from J-Views Publishing (222 pp., $9.99); it’s a new version of one of the unrecorded cases. The author’s web-site has links to all of his pastiches <www.hughashtonbooks.com>.

19255. The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes: The Greatest Detective Stories, 1837-1914, edited by Graeme Davis (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2019; 379 pp., $25.95), ranges from William Evans Burton to Ernest Bramah, offering a chance to read authors who preceded Holmes, or were published in the years he was absent from The Strand Magazine, or competed head to head after Holmes returned.
19256. Also from Pegasus: Kaite Welsh's The Unquiet Heart (2019, 281 pp., $25.95) features Sarah Gilchrist, a young woman who is studying medicine in Edinburgh in 1893, mentored by Dr. Gregory Merchiston, who (with Conan Doyle) studied under Dr. Joseph Bell (and doesn't like to be reminded of it); the story includes murders, and romance, and a good look at society (high and Low) in those days. Her web-site is at <www.katiewelsh.wordpress.com>.
19257. The Park Plaza Sherlock Holmes Hotel on Baker Street has been renovated, and now is the boutique Holmes Hotel London on Chiltern Street (only the entrance has been moved); details at <www.tinyurl.com/y2ohbodu>.
19258. Gene Wolfe died on Apr. 14. As an industrial engineer with Procter & Gamble he helped create the frying process used for Pringles stackable potato chips, and he then turned to writing and became an award-winning author of science-fiction and fantasy; his short story "The Rubber Bend" (a pastiche of both Nero Wolfe and Sherlock Holmes) was published in Universe Science Fiction (May 1974) and collected in Storeys from the Old Hotel (1988).
19259. Further to the item (March 19 #7) about plans to convert Great Scotland Yard into a hotel, Hospitality reported on June 11 <www.tinyurl.com/y32johx8> that the Great Scotland Yard Hotel will be a luxury hotel in Hyatt's Unbound Collection, and will open in late summer. The report offers details and images that show just how luxurious the hotel will be.
19260. Another addition to Hyatt's Unbound Collection is the Hôtel du Louvre in Paris, opened in 1855 as Paris' first grand hotel. It is mentioned in the Canon ("The Bruce-Partington Plans"), and you can see how grand it is now at its web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ydew5bxg> (standard room rate is €490.00).
19261. Stephen Thorne died on May 26. He had a long acting career, beginning on stage in the 1950s, but his magnificent voice made him a natural for radio (usually for the BBC); he recorded more than 350 books, and played Inspector Lestrade in the Clive Merrison's BBC Radio series.

19262. If you are, or know someone who is, a woman book collector in the United States, aged 30 or under, the Honey & Wax Book Collecting Prize is worth investigating <www.honeyandwaxbooks.com/prize.php>. The deadline for the 2019 prize is past, but there's plenty of time to apply for 2020. Honey & Wax is an interesting book-selling partnership between Heather O'Donnell and Rebecca Romney; they have an attractive web-site where they offer some fascinating books.
19263. "The Long-Lasting Fascination with Sherlock Holmes: It's Elementary" was the headline on Michael Dirda's "Book World" review in the Washington Post (June 20) <www.tinyurl.com/yxwleq39>, with mentions of Sherlockian societies as well a review of recent books.
19265. Jennie Paton has found some programs from the 30-minute "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" series (1980) at YouTube; this was the series produced by Sheldon Reynolds with Geoffrey Whitehead as Holmes and Donald Pickering as Watson. Search YouTube for [geoffrey whitehead].
19268. KCAL-TV (Los Angeles) reported on June 22 that the latest case of measles in the city had been tracked to one known person who exposed other people at the Geffen Playhouse on June 7. "Hopefully, they disinfected the theater," said Marsha Niles, who had come to enjoy Sherlock Holmes. "We'll hope for the best." She had come to enjoy Michel Mitnick's new play "Mysterious Circumstances" (which is inspired by David Grann's article in the New Yorker about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green). The play has been favorably reviewed in the local press, but no reviews are at hand yet from any local Sherlockians.

19270. Mark Kilmurray's new play "Murder on the Wireless: The Solitary Cyclist" is being performed at the Ensemble Theatre in Kirribilli, N.S.W., through July 13 <www.ensemble.com.au>.
19271. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" is running at the Alley Theatre in Houston, Tex., through July 22 <www.alleytheatre.org>. It's also due at the Austin Playhouse in Austin, Texas, Sept. 6-29 <www.austinplayhouse.com>.
19272. Jules Tasca's "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Limelight Theatre in Perth, W.A., July 4-13 <www.limelighttheatre.com.au>.
19273. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at Upstairs at the Gatehouse in London, July 4-7; their web-site is at <www.upstairsatthegatehouse.com>. Also at Theatre Horizon in Norristown, Pa., Nov. 10 to Dec. 8 <www.theatrehorizon.org>.
19274. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (newly dramatized by Marc Camoletti, Beverley Cross, and Francis Evans) is coming to the Spire Center for the Performing Arts in Plymouth, Mass., July 20-28 <www.americanatheatre.org>.
19276. Scott McDowell's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Candy Murder" is due at the Overtime Theater in San Antonio, Tex., August 9-31; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/yye4obdm>.

19277. "Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes" (by Jamie Robledo will be performed at the Little Theatre in New London, Minn., Aug. 1-11 <www.newlondonlittletheatre.com>.
19278. "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Fallen Soufflé" (by David MacGregor) is due at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, Mich., Sept. 19-Dec. 21 <www.purplerosetheatre.org>.
19279. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" is scheduled at the Rochester Repertory Theatre in Rochester, Minn., Oct. 4-20 <www.rochesterrep.org>.
19280. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Basketcases" (a British pantomime) will be performed at the Highbury Theatre Centre in Sutton Coldfield, West Midlands, Nov. 26-30 <www.fromthetop.org.uk>.

19281. An interesting autograph postcard was offered at Forum Auctions in London this month, estimated at £1,200-£1,800: Conan Doyle wrote from Windlesham (about 1920) that "It is a fact that Holmes has some traits of Dr. Bell of Edinburgh. To say that he is entirely based on him would be an exaggeration. My first book (I have written stories since 1878) was 'A Study in Scarlet', a Sherlock Holmes booklet published as Beeton's Annual in 1888."
19282. And yes, Conan Doyle likely didn't remember dates, all those years later: "The Mystery of Sasassa Valley" was published in Sept. 1879, and "A Study in Scarlet" in 1887. The bidders didn't care: the hammer price was £14,000 (add 30% for the buyer's premium). Randall Stock has an excellent discussion of the postcard at <www.tinyurl.com/yxqgo6ls>.
19283. Two Conan Doyle manuscripts went to auction at Christie's on July 10: an unpublished chapter from "The Land of Mist" was estimated at £3,000-£5,000 and sold for £13,750 (including the buyer's premium); and a poem "Shakespeare's Expostulation" was estimated at £1,000-£1,500 and sold for £2,125. Visit <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/land-mist-2019.htm> to see Randall's detailed (and nicely illustrated) descriptions of the two items.
19286. "Sherlock Holmes" is a 7-minute track on The Ascension, a new album from the power-metal band WOODLARK; it's nice that you can listen to the track at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JUVEEYSSqU>.
19287. "Are you named after Conan the Barbarian?" an interviewer asked Conan Osborne, captain of the Jamaica National Rugby Sevens team. "My dad likes to think so," he replied, "but my mum claims it's a little more sophisticated as I'm named after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." You can read the interview at <www.tinyurl.com/y5ye7nx7>.
19288. Bill Peschel launched his "223B Casebook Series" in 2014, offering the results of his survey of the many parodies and pastiches published in newspapers, magazines, and books while Conan Doyle lived, reprinting them with footnotes and brief accounts of what Conan Doyle was doing each year, and there are nine volumes, concluding with SHERLOCK HOLMES: JAZZ AGE PARODIES AND PASTICHES II: 1925-1930 (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2019; 341 pp.), and (selected from the first eight volumes) THE BEST SHERLOCK HOLMES PARODIES & PASTICHES: 1888-1930 (2019; 373 pp.) (each $15.95). Bill's web-site is at <www.peschelpress.com>.

19289. The Exhibits Development Group's "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" (now at the Liberty Science Center in Jersey City, N.J., through May 27) has no bookings beyond that, and the standard rental fee has been reduced to $300,000 from $450,000 (in case you know of a museum that might be a venue for the exhibition). Details on the exhibition are available at <www.tinyurl.com/y2aa7gwc>; museums should contact them at <info@exhibitsdevelopment.com>. It is well worth seeing (if you have not already seen it), and well worth a suggestion if you have a local museum that welcomes touring exhibitions.
19290. "The Magic Bookseller That Changed Everything" was the headline on a newspaper article about Cadabra Inc., kindly forwarded by Bill Seil. If you have never heard of the company, that's because its name was changed. You don't need to know anything about magic, or be a Sherlockian or Doylean, to have purchased something from the company <www.tinyurl.com/y2842d9j>.
19291. Kenneth Cameron, who featured Louisa Conan Doyle as a detective when she and her husband visited New York in 1894 in Winter at Death's Hotel (February 13 #2), has written a series of books about Denton, an American veteran of the Civil War and now an expatriate author living in turn of the century London, who finds himself investigating murders. They're not Sherlockian (except for passing mentions of Holmes), but they're written with excellent style and well-drawn characters. The first two in the series now are available as trade-paperback reprints: The Frightened Man (New York: Felolony & Mayhem, 2018; 278 pp.) and The Bohemian Girl (2018, 344 pp.) (each $14.95).
19292. Fans of "Sesame Street" have many reasons to admire the series, Sherlock Hemlock being only one of them. Greg Ruby found video of a tribute to the series during the Emmy Awards in 1982 <www.tinyurl.com/y3qwgzyk>; Sherlock Hemlock appears at 3:30-3:42 and at 5:06 in the 7-minute video.
19293. "There are a handful of names in the pantheon of Sherlockians that are legendary," Scott Monty writes at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog, "Morley. Bell. Smith. Starrett. Baring-Gould. And Shaw." Scott and Burt Wolder offer an interesting interview with Jim Hawkins, who maintains an excellent web-site devoted to John Bennett Shaw, and you can listen to his stories at <www.tinyurl.com/yxupjpj3>.
19294. Jeeves and the King of Clubs (2018) is Ben Schott's "homage to P. G. Wodehouse" <www.tinyurl.com/y3qwgzyk>; it turns out that the Junior Ganyemede Club (like the Diogenes Club is so many modern Sherlockian pastiches) is an arm of the British intelligence service.
19295. Arte Johnson died on July 3. He was actor on stage and television, and in 1968 joined the cast of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" eventually winning an Emmy for his performances as a German soldier Wolfgang ("verrrrry interesting") and as the dirty old man Tyrone F. Horneigh. He also played Fabian Holme ("a master private detective who solves crimes with the aid of elaborate disguises") on "Call Holme" (broadcast by NBC-TV in 1972 as a 30-minute pilot for a projected series that never was produced; the pilot is available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zvz88mRmY84>).

19296. David Harnois continues to add to the list of dramatized readings of the Canon at his "I Am Lost Without My Boswell" web-site <www.iamlostwithoutmyboswell.com>, where you can listen to (or download) readings of the first nine stories, all nicely done. He also offers Alison Carter's remastered two-part audio recording of Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (which starred Jeremy Brett as Holmes and Edward Hardwicke as Watson) made by Lisa Woods and Linda Pritchard on Mar. 20, 1989.

19297. Jennie Paton reported (but isn't going to purchase) a semi-permanent Holmes tattoo offered by inkbox <www.inkbox.com> at $16.00. It would appear that "semi-permanent" means that it difficult to remove the tattoo, but there are ways to accelerate fading, explained at the web-site.
19298. "The Unseen World of Charles Altamont Doyle" is the title of an exhibition at the Huntington Art Gallery in San Marino, Calif., running through Sept. 23 <www.huntington.org/unseen-doyle>. The exhibition offers sixteen drawings from the Huntington's collection, displaying the fantastical water-colors painted by Conan Doyle's father.
19299. It's a generational thing: President Trump, asked about Democratic presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg, said that "Alfred E. Newman can't become president of the United States," and Buttigieg had to use Google to learn who MAD magazine's "What, me worry?" mascot was. Now MAD magazine has announced that it is ending its 67-year run of offering a satirical look at just about everything. Cartoonist Harvey Kurtzman edited the magazine in the 1950s, and as one of MAD's "usual gang of idiots" was responsible for Sherlock Holmes' first appearance in MAD, in a panel in the fourth issue, and as "Shermlock Shomes" in the seventh issue, both in 1953, and he has appeared many more times since then.
19300. The second part of the Otto Penzler Collection of Mystery Fiction will be offered at Heritage Auctions <www.ha.com> on September 5, in sale #6212; there's some nice Sherlockian and Doylean material among the treasures.
19301. The fourth issue of Shadows of the Gnomon (2019) offers a nice (and nicely illustrated) history of the Knights of the Gnomon; it's a 56-page booklet celebrating the 40th anniversary of the society, and is available by mail ($13.00 postpaid) or as a PDF by e-mail, from amanuensis Marsha Pollak at <mpollak@icloud.com>.
19302. "Twelve-Object Pictures" (published in The Strand Magazine in Aug. 1912) showed the results of a challenge to "eminent black-and-white artists" to draw pictures incorporating a dozen objects chosen by the magazine; one of the objects was Sherlock Holmes, and you can see the drawings in the summer issue of Canadian Holmes (which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto). The issue also offers Cliff Goldfarb's "The Brigadier in Switzerland: Travels with Arthur and Napoleon" (with Cliff's amusing pastiche of Gerard); Canadian Holmes is a quarterly that costs $30.00 a year (US or CA) by mail to the Bootmakers, 2045 Lakeshore Boulevard West #3303, Etobicoke, ON M8V 2Z6, Canada, or at <www.torontobootmakers.com>.

19304. Freddie Jones died on July 9. He began his acting career on stage in the early 1960s, and went on to a long list of roles in films and on television; he appeared as Chester Cragwitch in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985), Inspector Baynes in Granada's "Wisteria Lodge" (1988) and as the Pedlar in "The Last Vampyre" (1993). His son continues the Sherlockian tradition, Roger Johnson notes: Toby Jones played Culverton Smith in the BBC's "The Lying Detective" (2017).
19306. "Heretic of the Week: Arthur Conan Doyle" was the attention-getting headline on a story in the Catholic Herald on June 20; you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/y22mk2fq>; it's part of a continuing series.
19307. "Tell Me More" was a British 30-minute series broadcast by BBC-1; on July 9, 1977, the program had Nanette Newman's interviewing Sherlock Holmes Society of London president Lord Gore-Booth (as Sherlock Holmes) and Chris Bazlinton (as Sherlock Holmes' secretary); Nick Utechin spotted the 2-minute segment at <www.tinyurl.com/yxggobf7>.

19308. Dexter Fletcher has been reported in talks to direct the third film in the Robert Downey Jr. "Sherlock Holmes" franchise, according to the Hollywood Reporter (July 11). Guy Richie was the director of the first two films, which grossed $524 million and $545 million. Dec. 22, 2021, still is the scheduled release date for the third film. Fletcher most recently directed the Elton John film "Rocketman" (2019).
19309. John Kendrick Bangs was an American humorist whose books included A House-Boat on the Styx: Being Some Account of the Divers Doings of the Associated Shades (1895) and its sequel The Pursuit of the House-Boat: Being Some Further Account of the Divers Doings of the Associated Shades, Under the Leadership of Sherlock Holmes, Esq. (1897) in which the Associated Shades hire the world's greatest detective (at the time indeed deceased, according to Dr. Watson's literary agent) to assist them in recovering their hijacked house-boat. The novels have been reprinted as The Singular Problem of the Stygian House-Boat (Vancleave: Ramble House, 2007; 167 pp., $30.00 cloth/$14.00 paper) <www.ramblehouse.com>.
19312. St. Hilda's College at Oxford University launched its "Crime Fiction Week-end" in 1994, and this year's weekend on Aug. 16-18 will include Nicholas Utechin speaking about Sherlock Holmes. The booking deadline is Aug. 5, and details can be found at <www.sthildas.ox.ac.uk/hildas-crime-2019>.
19314. Bob Dorian died on June 15. He was an actor, a magician, and a musician, and in 1984 he went to work on the American Movie Classics channel, where he became famous as the genial and enthusiast host for AMC's film broadcasts. He was born Robert Paul Vierengel (Bob Dorian was his professional name as an actor) and as Bob Vierengel he played Sherlock Holmes on nine Sherlockian radio broadcasts produced by Chris Steinbrunner and presented by the Priory Scholars of Fordham on WFUV-FM.

19315. Laurie R. King happily reports that she has finished the first draft of the next Mary Russell mystery, which has the working title Riviera Gold and is tentatively scheduled for publication next June. Laurie has also reminded her readers that “all first drafts are crap,” and is waiting for comments from her editor.
19316. You may recall seeing that description of first drafts before. According to the Quote Investigator <www.quoteinvestigator.com/2015/09/20/draft>, it is Ernest Hemingway who’s credited for saying “the first draft of anything is *.” Asterisked here to get this issue of my newsletter through the net nannies, but the Quote Investigator spells it out.
19317. Save the date: The Parallel Case of Saint Louis has scheduled their next “Holmes in the Heartland” conference for July 24-26, 2020. More information will be available soon.
19318. Undershaw is in the news again. Boris Johnson defeated Jeremy Hunt in the race to lead the Conservative party and become the next prime minister of Great Britain, but during the battle Surrey Live reported on June 26 that Hunt had lobbied on behalf of a businessman who later donated £10,000 to Hunt’s leadership campaign. Hunt, the member of Parliament for South West Surrey, had supported upgrading Conan Doyle’s former home from Grade II to Grade I during the long-running argument over redevelopment of Undershaw, but changed his mind and instead supported David Forbes-Nixon’s plans to make the house part of the Stepping Stones School, and the DFN Charitable Trust then donated £10,000 to Hunt’s campaign for the party leadership. A source “close to” Hunt told the paper that donations had no bearing on his decisions, while John Michael Gibson, one of the leaders of the campaign to upgrade protection of Undershaw, said that “It would appear with regard to Jeremy Hunt, to paraphrase George Orwell, all constituents are equal, but some are more equal than others.”
19319. There must be Sherlockians who have 3D printers, and there certainly are people who have 3D printers who print Sherlockiana, as Jennie Paton found on-line <www.yeggi.com/q/sherlock+holmes>.
19320. Howard Ostrom has learned that plans are afoot for the next season of the BBC’s “Sherlock” and apparently it will be set quite a few years after the recent season ended. They have already tested makeup for members of the cast, including Benedict Cumberbatch (shown here).
19321. Well, not really, the image can be found, along with images of others in the cast, at a Facebook page <www.tinyurl.com/y59as4mb> created by Sherlock Shippers; scroll down to “+5” to see all of the images.
19322. “Elementary, my dear Watson,” is a world-famous phrase that is discussed in detail at the Quote Investigator web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yjee9zej>. What’s interesting is that “Elementary, my dear Watson” has been found in print (1901) before the first appearance of “Elementary, my dear Watson” (1909). But Sherlock Holmes is first known to have spoken the phrase in the film “The Return of Sherlock Holmes” (1929).

19323. Just in time for Christmas: the new film “Cats” is scheduled for release on Dec. 20, starring Judi Dench (Old Deuteronomy) and Taylor Swift (Bombalurina), and (far more important for Sherlockians) Idris Elba (Macavity: The Mystery Cat) and Ian McKellen (Gus: The Theatre Cat). The film based on the Andrew Lloyd Webber 1981 musical, which was based on T. S. Eliot’s poetic Old Possum’s Book of Practical Cats (1939). For those who are not familiar with the poems or the musical, Macavity is Eliot’s tribute to Moriarty. Eliot also included an amusing Canonical allusion in the poem about Gus, but it was omitted from the musical and is unlikely to be in the film. The official trailer for the film can be seen at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=gq50F-IDXDc>.
19324. Intrada <www.intrada.com> has issued a newly remastered 3-CD set with the music from the film “Young Sherlock Holmes” (1985), with some interesting added features ($29.95).
19326. One does hear of Sherlock everywhere: Nick Utechin has forwarded British comic Andy Zaltsman’s comment on the Cricket World Cup Final at Lord’s on July 14: “As Sherlock Holmes famously said, ‘When you have eliminated the logical, whatever remains, however inexplicable, must be the laws and regulations of cricket, and/or the last hour of the 2019 World Cup Final.’ If you want to read all about it, go to <www.bbc.com/sport/cricket/4007967>.
19327. Production has started in London on the new film “Enola Holmes” (based on the six-book series written by Nancy Springer (2006-2010) about the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock; Millie Bobby Brown stars as Enola, with Henry Cavill as Sherlock and Helena Bonham Carter as their mother. Cavill has played Superman in the DC Extended Universe franchise (2013-2017) and Napoleon Solo in “The Man from U.N.C.L.E.” (2015).
19328. “America Unearthed” (a one-hour series hosted by Scott Wolter and broadcast by the Travel channel): “The Ripper Unmasked” (June 18) was inspired by Daniel and Eugene Friedman’s The Strange Case of Dr. Doyle (April 15 #2); Wolter interviews the Friedmans, and reaches a highly circumstantial conclusion that Conan Doyle was Jack the Ripper. Watch for a repeat on the Travel channel and at the channel’s web-site.

19330. “Look Alive!” is the title of this year’s production by the Cambridge University Footlights Dramatic Club; the Footlights were founded in 1883, and launched the careers of Stephen Fry, Hugh Laurie, Emma Thompson, John Cleese, and many others. According to a review in the (Cambridge) Varsity (June 12) <www.varsity.co.uk/theatre/17675>, one of the sketches includes an “inquisitive Sherlock Holmes.” The Footlights will be on tour in the U.S. in September, in San Francisco, Sacramento, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston; dates and times are available at <www.tinyurl.com/yqqes2f3>.
19331. Steven Canny and John Nicholson’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” is on at the Lake George Dinner Theatre in Lake George, N.Y. through Aug. 31; their web-site’s at <www.laketheatreproductions.com>. It also will be performed at the Delaware Theatre Company in Wilmington, Del., Sept. 11-29; web-site at <www.delawaretheatre.org>.
19332. “Sherlock and Cinders” (a musical by Tom Kirkham and Matthew Crossey) will be performed at Selby Abbey in Selby, Yorks., Aug. 5-9; their website’s at <www.selbyabbey.org.uk>.
19333. Steven Dietz’s “Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure” will be performed at the Historic Zodiac Playhouse in Florence, Ala., Aug. 9-18; their web-site is at <www.historiczodiacplayhouse.com>.

19334. Alexander Park's new play "Haslop & Holmes: Art of the Steal" will be performed at the Ti-Ahwaga Performing Arts Center in Owego, N.Y., Aug. 16-18 <www.tiahwaga.com>; Conan Watson Haslop and Irene Holmes vs. the famous thief Lupin.
19335. "Sherlock Holmes: The Strange Case of Alice Faulkner" will be performed as a staged reading at the CoRK Arts District in Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 22-24 <www.tinyurl.com/yxb8r8dm>; it's the Mercury Theatre on the Air version from 1938.
19336. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Angelo Civic Theater in San Angelo, Texas, Sept. 27-Oct. 6 <www.angelotheater.com>.
19337. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at the Canyon Theatre in Newhall, Calif., Sept. 27-Nov. 3 <www.canyontheatre.org>. Also at the Little Theatre of Tuscarawas County in New Philadelphia, Ohio, Oct. 4-20 <www.thenewlittletheatreonline.org>; the Topeka Civic Theatre in Topeka, Kans., Jan. 17-Feb. 9, 2020; and the Matsqui Centennial Theatre in Abbotsford, B.C., May 15-23 <www.gallery7theatre.com>.
19338. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at the Art Center Theatre in Hernando, Fla., Nov. 1-17; web-site at <www.artcenterofcitruscounty.org>. Also at the Kirkwood Community Center in Kirkwood, Mo., Nov. 1-10 <www.ktg-onstage.org>; and at the Manoa Valley Theatre in Honolulu, Hawaii, May 14-31 <www.manoavalleytheatre.com>.

19339. Registration is now open for the Baker Street Irregulars' BSI Archive Conference on Nov. 8-10 in Bloomington, Ind.; everyone is welcome to attend, and the formal announcement and registration information are available on-line at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/event>. The next BSI conference will be on "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" at the Bear Mountain Inn near West Point, N.Y., on July 17-19, 2020.
19340. Maggie Schpak has kindly hand-crafted spectacular Sherlockian jewelry for many years for the raffle that benefits the Dr. John H. Watson Fund during the birthday festivities in New York, has a day job designing prop jewelry for movie and television studios. Maggie keeps a very low public profile, but she will be making a rare appearance to speak about "Alien Adornment: 50 Years of Star Trek Jewelry" at an "Arts at the Armory" event in Somerville, Mass., near Boston, on Sept. 22 <www.startrek.artisansasylum.com>.
19341. When and where was the first computer-to-computer message sent? What was the message? Hint: it was not "Mr. Watson -- come here -- I want to see you."
19342. Lola Montez is on stage once again, in a one-woman entertainment written by Richard Byrne that premiered in Washington last month, with Mary Murphy as the notorious performer who has been suggested (by some Sherlockians, at any rate) as one of the possible inspirations for Irene Adler. Details on the play can be found at <www.richardbyrneplays.com/lola-montez>, and a review of the premiere is available at <www.tinyurl.com/y3t4x2lu>.
19343. "Gillette Castle Needs Your Help," was a recent post by Scott Monty at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/y3czco2z>.
19344. A Novel Journal: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (San Diego: Canterbury Classics, 2015; 160 pp., $10.94) is an imaginative concept, part of a series that offers a chance to "write between the lines of your favorite authors." The lines of the journal are what Conan Doyle wrote ("in teeny, tiny text").
19345. Tim Dedopulos' THE SHERLOCK HOLMES PUZZLE COLLECTION: THE LOST CASES (New York: Sterling/ Metro, 2015; 224 pp., $11.23) presents "over 140 cerebral challenges," imaginative, logical, and attractively illustrated.
19346. "Do Detectives Think?" (1927), a two-reel film produced by Hal Roach, featured Stan Laurel as Ferdinand Finkleberry (the world's second worst detective) and Oliver Hardy as Sherlock Pinkham, (the worst); Jennie Paton found the film at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y668cvm4>.
19347. Mattias Boström has noted that Susanne Buck's Mörder, Mode, Mitgiftjäger will be published by Jonas Verlag in October (216 pp., €20.00). It's all in German (according to the author, if the book were in English the title would be Fashion, Felons, Fortune-Hunters), and it's about high society in the 1920s; the fortune-hunters, it should be noted, included the "Marrying Mdivanis" (one of whom was Nina, who married Denis Conan Doyle).

19348. "It isn't every day you run into someone who crashed an invitation-only event 45 years ago," Scott Monty suggests. "When you add to the mix that the event was all-male and the interloper was a female —well, now we have the beginning of a good story." The event was a meeting of a Sherlockian society, and it's a good story indeed; you can listen to an interview with the interloper at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/yxgdvqu5>.
19349. When and where was the first computer-to-computer message sent? What was the message? Oct. 29, 1969, from a computer at UCLA to a computer at SRI. You'll find the rest of the story in an article about Leonard Kleinrock at <www.magazine.ucla.edu/depts/forward-thinker/making-magic>.
19350. Hal Prince died on July 31. He had a long career as a producer and director, beginning with "Pajama Game" in 1954, and continued with a long list of Broadway successes, including directing the musical "Baker Street" in 1964. He also purchased the rights to James Goldman's play "They Might Be Giants" and was the producer for its brief run in London in 1961; he then considered producing the play in New York (with George C. Scott and Colleen Dewhurst, and with Mike Nichols as the director), but decided that it couldn't be done properly. Prince kept the screen rights to the script, and when they were purchased by Universal for the 1971 film with Scott and Joanne Woodward, Prince recovered all of his losses from the London stage production ("probably the only time in my life that will happen," he wrote in his 1974 memoirs Contradictions: Notes on Twenty-Six Years in the Theatre).
19351. Howard Ostrom has reported that production is underway on "Sherlock Holmes in Russia" (a new television series that stars Maxim Matveev as Holmes); you can read all about it (in Russian) at <www.tinyurl.com/yy44lqyw>.
19352. "Sesame Street" will be the first television series to receive a Kennedy Center Honor; the series was broadcast by PBS-TV for many years, and now airs on HBO; the honors will be awarded on Dec. 8, and broadcast by CBS-TV on Dec. 15, and it's possible, though unlikely, that Sherlock Hemlock will be on hand for the festivities.
19353. Adam Nightingale's Masters of Crime: fiction's Finest Villains and Their Real-Life Inspirations (Stroud: History Press, 2011; 101 pp.) is out-of-print on paper, but available as an e-book (£6.99); the contents include a chapter about Conan Doyle and Moriarty and Wild and Worth, and another devoted to Hornung and Raffles and Tennington and Ives and Wilde.
19354. "Elementary" has now ended its seven-season run on CBS-TV, with Jonny Lee Miller as Holmes and Lucy Liu as Watson in 154 one-hour programs, setting a record for playing the roles together longer than anyone other than Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, who appeared together in more films and radio programs, but for fewer hours, since their radio programs ran for only 30 minutes. No spoilers here, but TV Insider ran an interview with show-runner Rob Doherty on Aug. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/y56t7lmv> in which he gave his reasons for how he did (or didn't) wrap things up. There's another interesting interview with Doherty at TV Line <www.tinyurl.com/y3lv4x3r>.

19355. The nominations for Mystery Readers International's Macavity Awards include Margalit Fox's Conan Doyle for the Defense and Leslie S. Klinger's Classic American Crime Fiction of the 1920s (for best nonfiction), and Laurie R. King's Island of the Mad (Sue Feder memorial award for best historical mystery). The winners will be announced at Bouchercon in Dallas on Oct. 21.
19356. The August issue of the Beacon Society offers the latest news of the society's awards, prizes, and on-going efforts to encourage introducing young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories. You can request a copy by e-mail from Steve Mason <mason.steve@epa.com>.
19357. David Stevens died on July 31. He joined the staff of Playboy magazine in 1966 as an assistant editor, and (according to one of his obituaries) said that he "never worked another day in his life." He retired from the magazine in 2004 as senior editor for modern living, and throughout his career there he was their resident Sherlockian, making sure that the Great Detective was mentioned often in the magazine.
19358. Jennie Paton spotted Russell Stutler's striking birds-eye view of 221 Baker Street under "strange maps" at Big Think's web-site; reported before (July 10 #6), but it's still worth a look <www.tinyurl.com/yxa8ezat>.
19359. "Barnes & Noble has been sliding toward oblivion for years," according to a recent article in the N.Y. Times <www.tinyurl.com/yye8mqrn>, kindly forwarded by Bill Seil. But rescue is at hand: the rescuer is Waterstones, a British company that owns a chain of successful bookstores in the U.K. and plans to return Barnes & Noble to profitability.
19360. Further to the report (March 19 #1) that "Sherlock Holmes 3" (the next film in the Robert Downey Jr. franchise) will take place in the Old West, the San Jose Mercury-News has explained why: the film has qualified for California's tax-credit production incentive, and will receive about $21 million in state tax credits in return for spending close to $107 million on below-the-line, middle-class production job wages and payments to in-state vendors in California.
19361. "'That's the trouble with this business,' said Sherlockian scholar Vincent Starrett deprecatingly, when I reminded him of this bit of bad taste, 'the wrong people get into it.'" That's from Norman Donaldson's essay "A Freeman Postscript" in The Mystery & Detection Annual (1972), reporting on his visit with Starrett in 1964, when they discussed R. Austin Freeman's work. books.
19362. And just what was "this bit of bad taste?" Donaldson wondered how closely it might be legitimate to carry a literary analysis. "Was I by any chance becoming guilty of the same deplorable excesses as some over-enthusiastic Sherlockians, who build too ponderous a superstructure of exegesis on too flimsy a foundation? Like the dentist who 'proved' that Holmes suffered from pyorrhea?" Donaldson was referring to Charles S. Goodman, whose essay on "The Dental Holmes" was published in 1944 Edgar W. Smith's anthology Profile by Gaslight.

19363. An interesting item was sold at auction this month at Dominic Winter Auctioneers at Cirencester: the original cover design for the May 1912 issue of The Strand Magazine, pen and ink on paper, initialed and dated, and advertising Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" (which was being serialized in the magazine) <www.tinyurl.com/y4n8zk5b>. Estimated at £100-£150, it sold for £1,450 (plus buyer's premium and VAT).
19364. Shane Rimmer died on Mar. 29. He began his entertainment career as a cabaret singer and went on to act on film and television, also working as a voice artist and script writer. He played Lysander Stark in the television "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1987) and Jefferson Hope in the BBC Radio 4 broadcast of "A Study in Scarlet" (1989).
19365. There's more news about Enola Holmes: Serena Blasco has adapted the first two of Nancy Springer's novels (The Case of the Missing Marquess and The Case of the Left-Handed Lady) as graphic novels for IDW Publishing (each 64 pp., $14.99); the adaptations and artwork are excellent, and The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets is scheduled for next year, nicely timed for the release of the movie starring Millie Bobby Brown. There was a well-illustrated interview with the artist at the School Library Journal web-site on Oct. 11, 2018 <www.tinyurl.com/yyvw46ql>. Blasco's graphic novels for all six of Springer's books have been published in France by Jungle Editions.
19366. When in Oklahoma: Sherlock Homes Inc. in Henryetta proclaims "19 years of amazing prices for nice mobile homes!" and uses a Sherlockian silhouette in their advertising <www.tinyurl.com/yyykc6rm>, spotted by Jennie Paton.
19367. Steve Mason reports that the Crew of the Barque Lone Star plan to publish a new anthology of limericks based on Sherlock Holmes and the Canon. Submissions are welcome from anyone, the deadline is Aug. 31, and details are available from Steve at <mason.steve@epa.gov>.
19368. Bearded Sherlockians may wish to investigate the Sherlock products (beard balm, beard oil, and beard co-wash) offered by the Honest Ape Beard Co. <www.honestapebeardco.com>.
19369. "Sherlock Holmes & Digital Worlds" is the title of a study that will document the history of Sherlockian video games from around the world. Mimi Okabe, a member of the Bootmakers of Toronto, would like to hear from anyone who would like to contribute information that will be available in an on-line data-base; details at <www.tinyurl.com/yy2lxlow>.
19370. This month's conference in Minneapolis ("Dark Places, Wicked Companions, and Strange Experiences"), sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers, the University of Minnesota, and the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, went extremely well, and was the occasion for the publication of The Best of Friends; it is a selection of essays and articles from past issues of the Friends' newsletter, edited by Ray Riethmeier, Julie McKuras, Richard Sveum, and Phillip Bergem, with additional comments by the authors of the essays and articles. The 224-page book costs $28.00 postpaid, from Phil Bergem (3829 172nd Avenue NW, Andover, MN 55304) (checks should be payable to the Norwegian Explorers).

19371. Kelvin I. Jones, a prolific author of Sherlockian articles and books in the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s, is preparing to publish The Sherlock Holmes Ultimate Smoking Companion, an up-dated and expanded edition of his earlier book about Holmes' affair with tobacco, and is welcoming submissions from any Sherlockian (or Holmesian) of a new story that has references to smoking, or a new article about smoking Canonical smoking (of tobacco or anything else). His deadline is Sept. 30, and details are available from him at <myscroft.221@yahoo.com>.
19372. Richard M. Caplan ("Dr. Jackson") died on Aug. 20. He had a longer career teaching dermatology at the University of Iowa, also serving as associate dean for continuing medical education. Dick was a prolific contributor to both medical and Sherlockian literature, and was the founder of the Young Stamfords of Iowa City. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1989.
19373. Jennie Paton reports a wide variety of Sherlockian designs available from Spoonflower <www.spoonflower.com> as fabric and as wallpaper.
19374. Alexander Orlov has reported from Russia that Anna Rossonova, a young woman from Chelyabinsk, is hard at work on creating a "knitted detective story" that will feature Holmes and Watson; you can see her attractive work at <www.tinyurl.com/y2f5k9hl>.
19375. Dante Torrese has kindly forwarded a report from Coin World Weekly (Aug. 19) about a nice discovery at Ballarat, where prospectors still are prospecting, sometimes quite successfully: a 4.4-pound gold nugget was found recently by a retiree who searches gold fields as a spare-time hobby, and offers of more than $160,000 have already been made for the "You Wouldn't Believe It" nugget.

19376. The Panama City News Herald posted a story and a 15-minute audio interview with Nancy Springer on Aug. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/y32g9tl9>; the story noted that Springer posted a rhetorical question on her Facebook page about the casting of Henry Cavill as Holmes: "Hottest Sherlock ever?"
19377. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES CASE BOOK (London: Carlton/Sevenoaks, 2018; 224 pp., $17.23) is a nicely-illustrated collection of ten solve-it-yourself mysteries (complete with solutions at the back of the book). The artwork is credited to Shutterstock <www.shutterstock.com>, a web-site that offers a wide range of attractive (and royalty-free) images, Sherlockian and otherwise.
19378. The Guardian reported on Aug. 19 that Greene King, a 220-year-old pub and beer company, is to be sold for £2.7 billion to the CKA Group, a massive conglomerate based in Hong Kong <www.tinyurl.com/y56un9b5>. Greene King was founded by Benjamin Greene, the great-grand-grandfather of author Graham Greene (who wrote an introduction for the Murray/Cape edition of The Sign of Four in 1974) and his brother Hugh Greene (who was director-general of the BBC and the editor of the "Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" series of books), and is of additional interest to Sherlockians because it owned The Sherlock Holmes pub in Northumberland Street.

19379. The usual theatrical news: David MacGregor's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Fallen Soufflé" has been scheduled at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, Mich., Sept. 19-Dec. 21; web-site's at <www.purplerosetheatre.org>.
19380. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is due at the Kress Theatre in Alexandria, La., Sept. 26 to Oct. 6 <www.cpptheatre.com>; and the SurfFlight Theatre in Beach Haven, N.J., Oct. 2-6 <www.surflight.org>.
19381. Also at the Clearfield Arts Studio Theatre in Clearfield, Pa., Oct. 10-19 <www.clearfieldarts.org>; at the Chickasaw Civic Theatre in Mobile, Ala., Oct. 11-20 <www.cctshows.com>; and at the Plaza Theatre in Wharton, Tex., Oct. 18-27 <www.whartonplazatheatre.org>.
19383. The musical "Sherlock Holmes and the East Wind" is due at the Arizona Rose Theatre in Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 12-27 <www.arizonarosetheatre.com>.
19384. "Baker Street Irregulars" (by Flip Kobler and Cindy Marcus) will be performed at the Luther Preparatory School in Watertown, Wis., on Oct. 17-20 <www.lps.wels.net>.
19385. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at Stage 212 in La Salle, Ind., Nov. 8-17 <www.stage212.org>.
19386. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Goose" (by Michael Menendian and John Weagly) will be performed at the Paola Community Center in Paola, Kan., Nov. 8-9 <www.cornerstoneperformingarts.com>.
19387. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Newport Theatre Arts Center in Newport Beach, Calif., Nov. 15-Dec. 15 <www.ntaconline.com>.
19388. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the James J. Hill House in St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 6-20 <www.theatrex.org>.
19389. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" will be performed at Studio 120 at the University of South Florida in Tampa, Jan. 9-26 <www.tamparep.org>.
19390. Jon Jory's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (four one-act plays) will be performed at Caldwell Community College in Lenoir, N.C., on Feb. 13-15 <www.broyhillcenter.com>.
19391. It's not possible to forecast everything in a monthly newsletter; if you would like more frequent news of theatrical events, Howard Ostrom offers exactly that at Twitter <www.twitter.com/HowardOstrom>.

19392. The UCLA Film and Television Archive's collaborative world-wide search for missing or deteriorating Sherlockian films (January 19 #3) now is formally underway, and details are available at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yy96y7fu>.
19393. Rebecca Romney will be the speaker at next year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture at 2:00 pm on Apr. 20 at the Toronto Reference Library (her topic will be "Using Sherlock Holmes to Expand What Book Collecting Can Be"); no charge for admission, the public is welcome to attend, and detailed information is available at <www.acdfriends.org/events.html>. There's also a save-the-date announcement for the Bootmakers of Toronto's next conference (on Sept. 24-26, 2021).
19394. Footprints of London <www.footprintsoflondon.com> offers a wide variety of walks in London, among them "Sherlock Holmes Goes East" on Oct. 7 and 31, and "Sherlock Holmes—The Return" on Oct. 3.
19395. Leonard Nimoy first played Sherlock Holmes in "The Interior Motive" (a 15-minute program produced by Kentucky Educational Television in 1975); it's now available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=h_rKfRpQZEE> (kindly reported by Jennie Paton).
19396. Januaryis Gayer Robinson notes an interesting web-site with all seven seasons of "Elementary" <www.tinyurl.com/y39kbn2>. There's a search engine, in case you want to search for other series (they have the Jeremy Brett and Benedict Cumberbatch series, and many non-Sherlockian series).
19397. Admirers of Sherlock Hemlock will enjoy a YouTube connection to all eleven of the segments of his appearances on "Sesame Street" (spotted by Jennie Paton) <www.tinyurl.com/y2s45z48>.
19398. The film isn't Sherlockian, but it does feature Charlie McCarthy wearing a deerstalker: Ann Marlowe has reported "Two Boobs in a Balloon" (1935), a 10-minute short that's the first film in a collection available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yx9654fu>.
19399. The Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem have found a nice way to use modern technology to publicize the society and to attract new members: a 9-minute video available at YouTube <www.yout.be/X9T294hDpDA>.
19400. Kelvin I. Jones has been pursuing Sherlockian scholarship since the 1960s, and his Sherlock Holmes' 'The Art of Detection' (Lisheard: Cunning Crime Books, 2019; 334 pp., £12.14) offers an interesting collection of ten of the many monographs written by Holmes. Those outside the U.K. can buy the book for $16.50 (with free shipping) from the Book Depository, which continues to be a good source for in-print British books; their web-site is at <www.bookdepository.com>. Those are the trade paperbacks; Kelvin has a few copies of the hardback version, available from him without charge except for £6.00 postage <mycroft.221@yahoo.com> (you'll be able to pay via PayPal).

19401. "Conan Doyle and London" is the title of a one-day symposium scheduled for Nov. 15 at the School of Advanced Study at the Institute of English Studies in London <www.tinyurl.com/y57xc3gq>. It's open to the public, and is the first event associated with The Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle, planned for publication by the University of Edinburgh Press.
19402. Frank A. Hoffmann ("Altamont") died on June 11. Frank had a long academic career teaching both folklore and cinema at Buffalo State College, where he founded An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo in 1976. He also worked for a time for the Kinsey Institute in Bloomington, Ind. (and in 1985

- contributed an article to The Baker Street Journal on “The Victorian Sexual Subculture: Some Notes and a Speculation”), and was happy to bring his 16mm Sherlockian films to show at meeting of the Illustrious Clients. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1979.
19403. Sarah Obermuller-Bennett’s A Study in Postcards (London: Sherlock Holmes Society of London, 2019; 38 pp., £6.00/€13.00/$14.00) provides a colorful look at “Sherlock Holmes in the Golden Age of the Picture Postcard” (which ended in 1918, when the cost of postage doubled, from a halfpenny to one penny); there was a wide variety of cards (advertising, theatrical, scenic, and the traditional miscellaneous), and it’s especially interesting to see the results of her research on cards that were accidentally Sherlockian, with connections discovered only with a magnifying glass. Available at the Society’s web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org/uk>.
19405. Félix J. Palma’s The Map of Chaos (New York: Atria, 2015; 574 pp., $27.00) is the third volume in a trilogy that involves time travel, alternate universes, steampunk, and both real and imagined characters; Conan Doyle ap-pears in this volume, along with H. G. Wells, in a battle to avoid the end of everything and everyone.
19407. Richard Booth died on Aug. 20. He was widely regarded as the most colorful book dealer in Britain, and for that matter in the world, having invented Hay-on-Wye as a destination for collectors. He crowned himself as king of the town, with Richard the Bookheart as his title, and was said to have appointed a horse as prime minister, and his obituary in the Washington Post <www.tinyurl.com/y5hq8smr> is well worth reading.

19408. Michael Sims’ Frankenstein Dreams (New York: Bloomsbury, 2017; 387 pp., $22.00) offers “a connoisseur’s collection of Victorian science fiction” (and his selections include Conan Doyle’s “The Horror of the Heights”); it’s part of a series Dracula’s Guest (vampire stories), The Dead Witness (detective stories, with “The Science of Deduction”), and The Phantom Coach (ghost stories, with “The Captain of the Pole-Star”).
19409. Sims notes in his introduction to “The Horror of the Heights” that Harold Ross (co-founder and editor-in-chief of The New Yorker) had “whimsically instructed his writers to be specific in identifying allusions by reminding them that only two figures were known to everyone in Western culture at that time . . . Harry Houdini and Sherlock Holmes.” That’s from James Thurber’s “The Years with Ross” in the Atlantic Monthly (Dec. 1957): “He once said that only two names were familiar to every reader in the civilized world: Houdini and Sherlock Holmes.”
19410. The next “Holmes in the Heartland” conference in St. Louis, Mo. on July 24-26, 2020, will include Curtis Armstrong as the keynote speaker; registration will open in October, and more information is available from Rob Nunn at <robertanunn@gmail.com>.
19412. “A fastidiously clean scent, with a dash of pipe and cigarette tobacco,” is only part of the description of the Sherlock Holmes Perfume Oil sold by the Black Phoenix Alchemy Lab <www.tinyurl.com/y3jrul4h>. And there is more: “Faintly beneath, you catch the fragrance of a smear of greasepaint, a stray horsehair, and a whisper of Moroccan leather and rosin.”
19413. Paul Darrow died on June 3. He had a wide-ranging career acting in Britain, on stage, screen, radio, and television, plus voice work on computer games and audiobooks. Darrow played Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in “Sherlock Holmes and the Missing Link” on stage and on television in 1992.
19414. The television series “Sir Arthur Conan Doyle’s The Lost World” featured Peter McCauley as Challenger and an assortment of underdressed “babes of the lost world” that fans likely found far more interesting than the dinosaurs; it ran for three seasons (1999-2002), and was released on DVDs, and is available at no charge for those who subscribe to Amazon Prime. There’s also the Oct. 2000 issue of Femmes Fatales Magazine, available at eBay and Amazon, with a cover story on Jennifer O’Dell; the artwork on the DVD set and the magazine helps explain why the series ran for three seasons.

19415. More news from Great Britain: Prime Minister Boris Johnson and his partner Carrie Symonds have adopted a Jack Russell puppy that was abandoned by a Welsh farmer and rescued by Friends of the Animals Wales. When asked earlier about the possibility that a dog might join the couple’s cat Larry, Johnson said merely that “There is a dog. The dog is like the giant rat of Sumatra, it is a creature for whom the world is not quite ready.” The puppy has been named Dilyn, and the BBC has posted video <www.bbc.com/news/uk-wales-49548946> of his arrival at Johnson’s flat in Downing Street.
19416. Laurance Donnelly will deliver this year’s Richard Lancelyn Green lecture to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London at the National Liberal Club on Oct. 17, on “The Applications of Geology to Police and Law Enforcement”; details at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/event/forensic-geology>.
19417. Jennie Paton has reported a new addition to the list of Sherlockian comic books: the Dec. 1955 issue of Marmaduke Mouse, published by Quality Comics; the issue (#56) shows Marmaduke in Sherlockian costume on the cover, but not inside the comic book, which has been scanned and is available on-line at the Comic Book Plus web-site <www.comicbookplus.com/?dlid=19305>.
19418. Claire O’Dell’s The Hound of Justice (New York: Harper Voyager, 2019; 326 pp., $15.99) is a sequel to her A Study in Honor (June 18 #6); the protagonists are Dr. Jane Watson and covert agent Sara Holmes, both black LGBTQIA women, and in this book Watson is hard at work trying to find and assist Holmes in a battle against a dire threat to their country after the next Civil War.
19419. Just in time for Christmas: Jennie Paton spotted an imaginative cherry-red sweatshirt with an attractive Sherlockian wreath, offered from Australia by Fruugo (AU$41.95) <www.tinyurl.com/y6bjya46>.
19421. The 60th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze will be held on Oct. 12 at the Hawthorne Race Course. You can request a registration form for the event from Philip Cunningham (9412 South Springfield Avenue, Evergreen Park, IL 60805) <pjc121@comcast.net>.

19422. Terrance Dicks died on Aug. 29. He was best known for his work as editor and writer on the BBC “Doctor Who” series beginning in 1986, and went on to write spin-off novels as well as plays, and children’s books that included ten titles in his Baker Street Irregulars series (1978-1987). He novelized Doctor Who and the Talons of Weng-Chiang (the program and book were full of Canonical allusions), had a cameo appearance by Conan Doyle in Doctor Who: Revenge of the Judoon (2008), and was script editor for the Tom Baker television version of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (1982).

19423. “Trafalgar Square Lions Could Give You Sepsis,” the Daily Telegraph warned on Aug. 23, reporting that experts had swabbed 24 statues in 13 European cities and found huge levels of bacteria. The statue of Sherlock Holmes in Baker Street, where tourists often touch the statue’s feet, was among those tested, and had “a large presence of staphylococcus,” which can lead to infections that include sepsis, conjunctivitis, cystitis, and endocarditis.”
19424. “A Life in Movies” is the title of an interesting section of the on-line Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia maintained by Alexis Barquin; you can see a delightful selection of home movies and newsreel footage of Conan Doyle and his family <www.tinyurl.com/y4e8o3uz>.
19425. It can be interesting when people with special knowledge write about Sherlockian films: David Salazar, editor-in-chief the web-site Opera Wire, has discussed the way that opera was used in the Robert Downey Jr. film “Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows” (2011) <www.tinyurl.com/y5hy2fm7>.
19426. Neil Gaiman’s Mr. Hero—The Newmatic Man is a comic-book series scripted by James Vance “based on a concept created by Neil Gaiman,” and published by Tekno-Comics. Issue #10 (early Dec. 1995) is titled “The Hand of the Baskervilles” and shows Mr. Hero (the Ratiocinator) in Sherlockian costume. The 18-issue series is collected in two volumes published by Papercutz in 2016 and 2017; Ted Slampyak’s artwork is striking, and it’s an impressive series.
19427. Internet search engines occasionally turn up stories about young men and women having been named “Sherlock Holmes Athlete of the Week”. The award was created in 2017, and is sponsored by the Sherlock Holmes Pubs in Edmonton, Alberta <www.thesherlockspubs.com/athlete-of-the-week>.
19428. The Dundee Courier reported on Aug. 22 that work has begun on a £100 million residential development on the site of the Sunnyside Royal Hospital near Montrose. The hospital building will be converted into 10 townhouses and 24 apartments, and there will be a total of 450 homes on the 64 acres of the hospital grounds. Founded in 1781 as the Montrose Lunatic Asylum, the hospital received its royal charter in 1810, and its patients included Sir Arthur Conan Doyle’s father Charles Altamont Doyle.
19429. Big Chief Studios continues to advertise authorized (and expensive) figures and dioramas from the “Sherlock” television series, with special offers on “The Abominable Bride” material <www.tinyurl.com/y57lafbx>.
19430. The web-site “We Got This Covered” reported on Aug. 7 that “sources” have said that “The Great Mouse Detective” is among the live-action remakes being planned by Disney. “Details are still largely unknown,” and the story has not been confirmed by anyone else.
19431. Steve Emeck reports that MX Publishing will live stream from Undershaw in Hindhead, Surrey, on Oct. 12 <www.tinyurl.com/y4d5lcqk>, presenting Orlando Pearson’s short play “A Scandal in Nova Alba”, a performance by deductionist Ben Cardall, author interviews, and a virtual tour of Undershaw.

19432. It’s always interesting to make accidental discoveries: Greg Darak found a copy of the Oct. 1900 issue of McClure’s Magazine, with Conan Doyle’s article “Some Lessons of the War” (about the Boer War), and observed that the issue also contained John Watson’s article on “The Life of the Master”. Alas, the article’s author, the Rev. John Watson, D.D., had written about Jesus, rather than the Great Detective.
19433. And just in time for Halloween: Jennie Paton discovered an attractive costume available from La Casa Di in Italy <www.tinyurl.com/yoochnw>, priced at €47.99 (no charge for shipping). There’s another one offered by Pink Queen in Houston <www.tinyurl.com/y5syscqy> at $55.99.
19434. Duncan Lamont died on July 2. He began his musical career at the age of seven, but soon switched to the saxophone and became a prolific songwriter, composer, arranger, and bandleader; his obituaries credit him for “The Sherlock Holmes Suite” created in collaboration with Spike Milligan. Does anyone know anything about Lamont’s “Sherlock Holmes Suite”? Alan Barnes used the same title for a different jazz album issued in 2003.
19435. David E. Fessenden’s The Case of the Exploding Speakeasy (Raleigh: Lighthouse Publishing of the Carolinas, 2013; 159 pp., $13.95) has Tom Watson, son of Dr. Watson, working with little success as a newspaper reporter in Philadelphia in the 1920s; his father, who has been taking care of an ageing Mycroft after Sherlock Holmes’ death, also dies, and Mycroft turns up in Philadelphia, where he happily helps Tom solve a mystery triggered by the destruction of a mob-owned saloon.
19436. The campaign to raise money to repair St. Mary’s Church in Ingleton, where the Rev. Thomas Dod Sherlock had been vicar, and where a nearby areas was called the Holmes (April 18 #2) continues. Jennie Paton has reported an interesting 11-minute Crowdfunder video in which Chris Leeming explains the local connections to Conan Doyle (who married Louise Hawkins in a nearby church in 1885) <www.tinyurl.com/yxoaxdmx>.
19437. According to Gemma Sherlock (on Cheshire Live) <www.tinyurl.com/y5cvddde>, filming has started in Chester on the television series “The Irregulars” (December 18 #5); it will focus on a group of street urchins whose crime-solving success a drug-addict Holmes takes credit for. And yes, the reporter really is named Gemma Sherlock.
19438. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world’s first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Mi Amigos Phoenix, on Sept. 25, warmly welcomed to Arizona during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. We will meet next in Houston on June 10, and in Montréal on Oct. 28.
19439. The GSA’s program included a presentation on an interesting use of forensic geology: Marjorie A. Chan’s paper “Case of the Missing Marbles: Iron Oxide Concretions of Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument, Utah.” Thousands of concretions (called “moqui marbles”), stolen by mineral collectors and dealers, were recovered by the feds, and the perpetrators were prosecuted <www.tinyurl.com/y69n835f>.

19440. “Don’t just book it, Thomas Cook it,” was the advertising motto of the company that once was the largest travel agency in the world. Founded in 1841, but in recent years battered by the economics of Brexit and the growth of do-it-yourself booking, the company went into compulsory liquidation this month, leaving hundreds of thousands of vacationers stranded. There’s a Canonical connection, of course: Watson consulted “the manager at Cook’s local office” in Lausanne (in “Lady Frances Carfax”).

19441. The Fifth Annual International Sherlockian Summit (a meeting of the Sherlockian societies in the Pacific northwest) will be hosted by the Dogs in then Nighttime in Anacortes, Wash., on Nov. 2. Details are available from Sheila Holtgrieve <sheilaholtgrieve@gmail.com>.
19442. "The first time I went to London," Michael Hingston wrote in the Washington Post on Sept. 15, "I asked a friend who lived there for bookstore recommendations. 'Well,' he said, 'that depends. What kind?' I was too embarrassed to admit I didn't realize I had to specify." It's a delightful article, and you can read it at <www.tinyurl.com/y26eed6>.
19444. "In the Company of Harold Prince: Broadway Producer, Director, Collaborator" is a new exhibition running at the N.Y. Public Library for the Performing Arts through Mar. 31 <www.tinyurl.com/y3dwsfax>. Hal Prince, who died on July 31, had a long career as a producer and director, beginning with "Pajama Game" in 1954, and continuing with a long list of Broadway successes, including directing the musical "Baker Street" in 1964 (August 19 #2).
19445. "Sherlock Holmes is dead. Or so it is assumed. The world knows the great detective went over the falls at Reichenbach with his nemesis Professor Moriarty. But as Holmes' body was never retrieved, a number of frauds, fakes, and charlatans have come forward since to lay claim to his identity, and it falls to Dr. Watson to disprove them. Then a telegram arrives informing Watson that three men, each claiming to be Holmes, have been committed to a remote asylum off the coast of Scotland. Now Watson must discover if one of the mad men is the real Sherlock Holmes." That's the premise of Jeffrey Hatcher's play "Holmes and Watson" (which I've now seen and enjoyed at a reasonably local theater); it is imaginative, and great fun, with suspense and a surprise ending, and recommended if it's produced at a theater near (or reasonably near) you.
19446. The Dramatists Play Service offers the script <www.tinyurl.com/y65djwh9> ($10.00), but it would be a great mistake to read the script before seeing the play. The play has been produced elsewhere, and well-reviewed, and all of the reviews seen so far have kindly and carefully not revealed the surprise ending.

19447. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed (in English) at the Circle Theatre in Copenhagen through Oct. 12 <www.ctcircle.dk>. It's also due at the University Theatre in Greenville, S.C., Oct.10-13 <www.gvltech.edu>; and at the Town Theatre in Columbia, S.C., Jan. 17-Feb. 2 <www.towntheatre.com>.
19448. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" is running at the Open Book Theatre in Trenton, Mich., through Oct. 12; web-site at <www.openbooktheatrecompany.net>.
19449. Mark Finbow's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is due at the Seagull Rep Theatre in Lowestoft, Suffolk, Oct. 1-2, and will then go on tour in East Anglia <www.seagullrep.co.uk>.
19450. The Baker Street Readers will present "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Hooker-Dunham Theater in Brattleboro, Vt., Oct. 4-5; Facebook page at <www.facebook.com/bakerstreetreaders>.
19451. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (written and performed by Rod Goodall and Steve Johnston) will be performed at the Mick Lally Theatre in Galway on Oct. 12 <www.druid.ie>; and at the Town Hall Theatre in Galway on Oct. 24-25 <www.tht.ie>.
19452. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is due at the Macon Little Theatre in Macon, Ga., Oct. 18 to 27 <www.maconlittletheatre.org>; and at the Rubber City Theatre in Akron, Ohio, from Oct. 25 to Nov. 10 <www.rubbercitytheatre.com>.
19453. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" has been planned at the Manistee High School Auditorium in Brethren, Mich., Oct. 18-27; more information can be found at <www.manisteecivicplayers.org>.
19454. Tim Kelly's adaptation of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Niswonger Performing Arts Center in Van Wert, Ohio, Nov. 22 and 23 <www.vwhstheatre.weebly.com>.
19455. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Harlequin Theatre in Olympia, Wash., Nov. 27-Dec. 31 <www.harlequinproductions.org>.
19457. "Sherlock Holmes Returns" ("an immersive dinner theatre experience") is to be performed at the Hunterdon Hills Playhouse in Hampton, N.J., Mar. 10-Apr. 30 <www.hhplayhouse.com>.

19458. Sherlockians will gather in New York on Jan. 15-19 to celebrate Sherlock Holmes' 166th birthday, and the most efficient way to receive information about all the goings-on will be via the "News from the BSI" e-mail system, which will offer an opportunity to reserve for events as soon as reservations open; if you've not already signed up for the service, you can do so easily at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-news-via-email>. Almost all of the events are open to everyone, and there's always much more going on than anyone with reasonable sense or stamina can deal with. There will be more information at Scott Monty's excellent web-site <www.bsiweekend.com>, and his helpful "Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips" will be found in December at <ihose.co/bsi2020tips>.
19460. Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss have not been on vacation. The first official trailer for their new "Dracula" series carries the warning "Guidance: Horror" <www.tinyurl.com/yy6ku49f>, and it's thoroughly appropriate. The trailer also notes that the new series is "from the makers of Sherlock."
19461. The Adventure of the Abbey Grange, published by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Fondation Martin Bodmer in 2016, offers a full-color facsimile of the manuscript, with a preface by Vincent Delay and an excellent essay by Catherine Cooke that discusses both the history of the manuscript and the different versions of the text of the story, and it's still available from the Society ($65.00) <www.tinyurl.com/y2ba8pmn> (and recommended to anyone who wants to see exactly what Conan Doyle wrote when he first put pen to paper).
19462. Also available from the Society is a second printing of Jessica Victoria Woolf's Through the Archives ($25.00); first published in 2018; the book offers 75 pages, fully illustrated in color, showing the Society's history as portrayed in its archives <www.tinyurl.com/y6acl8eu>.
19463. "Storm Area 51: They Can't Stop All of Us" was a Facebook event that took place on Sept. 20 at the U.S. Air Force Nevada Test and Training Range for those hoping to search for extraterrestrial life; more than 2 million people reported "going" (and 1.5 million more were "interested"), and about 150 people actually showed up at the entrance to Area 51, with none succeeding in entering the site. Not really Sherlockian, but the "Storm Area 51" event inspired a "Storm Loch Ness" event scheduled one day later for people who wanted to find the Loch Ness Monster; it would appear that no one took this seriously enough to show up the event, but publicity in the press often mentioned that "Nessie" already had been found, in 2016, when a Norwegian company using an underwater robot equipped with sonar imaging to explore the loch located the model used in the movie "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) (April 16 #5); the model sank while the movie was being filmed, and still rests quietly on the bottom of the loch.

19464. The summer 2019 issue of The Magic Door (that's the newsletter of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) includes an interesting article by Randall Stock about the "The Parish Magazine" (both the manuscript and the story), Robert S. Katz's discussion of Round the Red Lamp, and other reports from and about the Library and the Collection; copies are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb, Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
19465. And Cliff, chairman of the Friends, suggests in a separate letter that it might be time for an active literary society devoted to Conan Doyle; you can read his letter on-line at < www.tinyurl.com/yyw9hn8b>.
19466. "Why No BU Student Wants to Be a Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on an article in the Deccan Herald (Sept. 19). Not Boston University, but rather Bangalore University, where not a single student signed up for a master's degree program in criminology. "We all love Sherlock Holmes," the story suggested, but no student "wants to be like him in real life."
19467. Howard Ostrom has noted an imaginative life-size bronze sculpture by Irena Sedlecká < www.tinyurl.com/y2sevea2> of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the spirit of Sherlock Holmes, in the Garden of Heroes and Villains created by the late Felix Dennis in Dorsington, Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warwickshire; it's not easy to visit the Garden: see the story in the Stratford Observer earlier this year < www.tinyurl.com/y287nhsg>. The Garden will be open for at least a few days next year, according to the Eventbrite web-site < www.tinyurl.com/y228p3dg> (where you can sign up for notifications of additional open days).
19468. Jerry Margolin reports that "Under Your Sky" is a new album from The Sherlocks, a British indie/rock band from Sheffield that plays on tour (June 17 #6); their web-site's at < www.thesherlocksmusic.co.uk>.
19469. AM New York was launched by Newsday in 2003 as the first free daily newspaper in New York city, and of course they have a web-site, where you can read their story about the Mysterious Bookshop, which has been in business for more than 40 years < < www.tinyurl.com/y5tfvekj>. Otto Penzler, its proprietor, proudly boasts that it is "the oldest and largest mystery bookstore in the world."
19470. You've likely seen Derren Brown (briefly) in "Sherlock: The Empty Hearse" and you can read about him in an "Annals of Show Business" article in the New Yorker (Oct. 7) < www.tinyurl.com/y4by6a4y>, and listen to a New Yorker podcast about him on Aug. 16 < www.tinyurl.com/y28fs2ek>.
19471. An article in the Camden New Journal (Sept. 18) is headlined "Lillie Plays the Field" < www.tinyurl.com/y56hdm6w> and is based on Neil Titley's now-out-of-print The Oscar Wilde World of Gossip; it tells some grand stories about Lillie Langtry, who is believed by many to have been at least one of the inspirations for Irene Adler. Titley tells more stories at his colorful web-site at < www.wildetheatre.co.uk>.

19472. The Missing Mr. Moonstone (Marlborough Court, 2019; 178 pp., $14.99) is the first in Peter Tong's "Detective Ladies of Baker Street" series; Sherlock Holmes is reported to have died in Switzerland, and Mrs. Hudson and her Cockney maid-of-all-work Fanny-Annie Grubbins find themselves involved in "detectivising" in pursuit of a missing husband and his wife's missing jewelry. He has written a play "Mrs. H. of Baker Street" (2005) and two more novels in his "detective ladies" series, and has a web-site at < www.petertong.org>; his publisher's web-site is at < www.marlboroughcourt.org>.
19473. The next 221B Con will be held in Atlanta on Apr. 3-5. The annual event (billed as a "fan con for all things Sherlock Holmes") was first held in 2013, and more information is available at < www.221bcon.com>.
19474. If you would like to know more about the BSI Archives (which will be celebrated at a conference on Nov. 8-10), Glen Miranker and Ross Davies were interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog; listen to the interview at < www.tinyurl.com/y35nq7mf>.
19475. Pan Macmillan has reissued eight of its volumes of Sherlock Holmes stories in its "Macmillan Collector's Library" with attractive new cover artwork < www.tinyurl.com/y4vxbx4>.
19476. Gillette Castle is celebrating its 10th anniversary, and on Aug. 20 WTNH-TV (New Haven) aired a 15-minute interview with Friends of Gillette Castle president Wendy Vincent < www.tinyurl.com/y3yj8vy6> that included a video tour of the Castle.
19477. "Cleats" is a comic strip drawn by Bill Hinds, and Tina Rhea spotted this one on Oct. 7 (it's a repeat from 2008): The strip also was Sherlockian on Oct. 8 < www.tinyurl.com/y6pllzy9>.

19479. There aren't many authors who have been writing stories about Sherlock Holmes longer than Conan Doyle did (the first of his stories was published in 1887, and the last one in 1927). Nicholas Meyer certainly is one of them: his The Seven-Per-Cent Solution appeared in 1974 (and was both a best-seller and the basis for a hit movie), and his latest is The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols (New York: Minotaur, 2019; 238 pp., $25.99). The story is set in 1905, when Holmes and Watson are sent on a mission to determine the origins of the Protocols of Zion, and there is plenty of adventure as well as mystery (it's all nicely done indeed). The author has an excellent web-site at < www.nicholas-meyer.com>; click on [press] to find an interesting interview with Lenny Picker in Publishers Weekly in August, and click on [events] to see the schedule for public appearances and signings (it's well worth hearing what he has to say).
19480. Dan Andriacco's House of the Doomed: An Adventure of Sherlock Holmes (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2018; 115 pp., $19.95) is an imaginative pastiche, set in 1901, when Holmes and Watson investigate a mystery in Surrey (in an area that had become quite popular with writers and artists); Conan Doyle was one of them (he moved to Haslemere in 1897, but doesn't appear in the story). Gasogene's web-site is at < www.gasogenebooks.com>, and Dan has his own at < www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>.
19481. The Japanese anime series "Kakukichō Sherlock" (April 19 #2) began airing on television in Japan on Oct. 11 (showing "the comedic, mysterious, and dramatic adventures of a ragtag band of detectives as they live together in a tenement above Mrs. Hudson's bar in the red-light district and at

19484. Homunculus Verlag < www.homunculus-verlag.de> has published three imaginative Sherlockian advent calendars, the first two only in German, and the third this year in English as well as German; they’re colorfully attractive and offer 24 solve-it-yourself mini-mysteries. €15.00 each from the publisher in Germany. This year’s English version also is available from MX Publishing for £12.99 < www.tinyurl.com/y2gq3x5h>, and for $19.99 from The Strand Magazine < www.tinyurl.com/y6k8tn4b>.

19485. The famous (perhaps infamous) “Sherlock Holmes tent joke” has been in circulation at least since 1998, and in 2002 won second place in a Laughlab experiment intended to determine the world’s funniest joke. I won’t publish it again (since I promised not to), but you can find it easily on the Internet. I will call attention to two amusing tributes to the joke in the “Baker Street Elementary” comic strip in 2015 < www.tinyurl.com/y5rj2zm8> and 2019 < www.tinyurl.com/y6loduw7>.
19486. “The Beekeeper’s Apprentice changed my life,” Laurie R. King has written, celebrating the 25th anniversary of the book by telling some nice stories about those long-ago days when the long-running (and continuing) saga of Mary Russell was launched < www.tinyurl.com/y4c5f7qw>.
19487. Anna Quayle died on Aug. 16. She began acting at the Edinburgh Fringe in 1956, and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television, winning a Tony Award as best featured actress in a musical in “Stop the World —I Want to Get Off” in 1963, and playing Freda (Sigmund Freud’s maid) in “The Seven-Per-Cent Solution” (1976).
19488. When in Lebanon (Pennsylvania): the Red-Headed League Public House will be opening in November, on the top floor of the Lebanon Farmers Market. According to a post on their Facebook page < www.tinyurl.com/y58gq2ya>, the Sherlock Holmes story was inspired by a notorious murder committed by the Blue-Eyed Six in Lebanon in 1878.
19490. Derham Groves’ Feng-Shui and Western Building Ceremonies (Singapore: Graham Brash, 1991; 114 pp.) offers an architect’s approach to the geomancy of places, and the architect is a Sherlockian, so there’s a case study of the feng-shui of 221B Baker Street; the book is out of print, but readily available at Amazon and AbeBooks.
19492. They’re not mentioned in the Canon, but just about anyone who has visited or lived in London since 1948 has ridden in one of the iconic black cabs. My London had an interesting story on Oct. 20 < www.tinyurl.com/y6tobkvs> that included some facts that might be new to you, such as: the taxis are allowed to have a maximum turning circle of only 25 feet because the entrance to the Savoy hotel has a small roundabout that can’t be navigated by vehicles with a wider turning circle. And the taxis are black because when the Austin FX3 was introduced in 1948, black was the standard color, and buyers had to pay extra for any other color, so fleet owners decided that black was best.

19494. Scott Monty describes Vincent Starrett’s sonnet “221B” as an “iconic poem” for Sherlockians, and so it is; you can read what Scott has to say at his “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog < www.tinyurl.com/y48tx9x>, and follow links to the eleven chapters of Ray Betzner’s new (and delightful) monograph about the poem at his “Studies in Starrett” blog.
19495. William D. Goodrich (“Alexander Holder”) died on Oct. 20. He had a long career in banking in Chicago and was an energetic member of the Sherlockian societies there. Bill was one of the founders of Baker Street Miscellanea in 1975 and compiled two editions of his Good Old Index to the Canon in 1987 and 1994. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.
19496. “It’s summertime on the Riviera, where the Jazz Age is busily reinventing the holiday delights of warm days on golden sand and cool nights on terraces and dance floors,” Laurie R. King writes. The next Mary Russell novel, Riviera Gold, is set on the Côte d’Azur in 1925, when Russell and Sherlock Holmes encounter “hot sun and cool jazz, new friendships and old loyalties, childlike pleasures, and very grown-up sins.” Publication date is June 9. And it’s nice indeed when researching for a book means that travel is a business expense.
19497. “Gwyneth Paltrow Hired a Personal Book Curator” was the headline on an article in Town & Country on Aug. 20 < www.tinyurl.com/y45h6ove>. The personal book curator, Thatcher Wine of Juniper Books < www.juniperbooks.com>, also offers custom book jackets for sets of books that turn the books into an appropriate artistic image on your shelves, and there are two sets of the Canon.
19499. Mycroft and Sherlock: The Empty Birdcage (New York: Titan, 2019; 128 pp., $25.99) is the third in the series written by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse; it’s now 1873, and Mycroft, although he has resigned his post as secretary to the Secretary of State for War, has maintained his government contacts and finds them useful indeed when he meddles in international criminal affairs while he also tries to shepherd his annoying younger brother, who’s in pursuit of a different criminal. It’s nicely done, with style and substance.

19500. "J. D. Salinger" is the title of an exhibition at the N.Y. Public Library, running until Jan. 19 < www.nypl.org/salinger>, and displaying his manuscripts, letters, photographs, books, and personal effects, including a bookcase from Salinger's bedroom filled with books from his personal library. According to a report in the N.Y. Times (Oct. 18), the authors whose books he wanted close at hand at the end of his life included Conan Doyle; the library kindly reports that the two-volume edition of The Complete Sherlock Holmes is on display in the bookcase.
19501. It was in Salinger's story "Hapworth 16, 1924" (published in the June 19, 1965, issue of The New Yorker) that seven-year-old Seymour Glass wrote to his family from summer camp that "my love for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ... is an absolute certainty!" Roger Lathbury wrote in New York magazine on Apr. 4, 2010 < www.tinyurl.com/y2abnf4> about how he almost managed to publish the first edition of the story, Salinger's last book.
19502. Individual 7-cm figurines in the "Sherlockians" collection handcrafted in resin by Spanish artist Marco Navas are still available (€35.00 each), but the gallery designed to display them has sold out. Details and images can be found at < www.marconavas.com>.
19503. "In a series starting with The Beekeeper's Apprentice, young Mary Russell teams up with this British sleuth" was the answer worth $400 in the category "Untrue Detective" on the television series "Jeopardy" on Oct. 2, according to Bill Mosteller. One contestant guessed "Morse" and the other two passed.
19504. Don Hobbs is expanding his Galactic Sherlock Holmes data-base of foreign translations (which now has almost 8,000 entries) to include appearances in magazines and newspapers, and would be glad to hear from anyone who has found something that's not already in the data-base; the latest version is available on request as a 222-MB WeTransfer file < 221b@verizon.net>.
19505. "Bunny Yeager was a model and a beauty queen before becoming a photographer herself," I noted some years ago (May 97 #2), in an item about her offer of collector's cards that included "Sherlock Holmes' Apprentice" (for those more than 18 years old). Howard Ostrom has discovered an interesting item at eBay < www.tinyurl.com/y2m2f732> open for bidding until Nov. 7.
19506. The "British Library Crime Classics" series of anthologies edited by Martin Edwards (June 16 #5) continues, with Edwards providing enthusiastic introductions and a careful selection of stories, and the latest, just out, is Deep Waters: Mysteries on the Waves, reported to include "The Gloria Scott" (U.S. editions are published by the Poisoned Pen Press).
19507. MC Black, of Detective Walks, will lead a walk "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" on the evening on Nov. 14, through Covent Garden and the West End; details are available from MC at < mcb@detectivewalks.co.uk>. This is one day before the symposium on "Conan Doyle and London" at the Institute of English Studies in London < www.tinyurl.com/y57xc3gq>; it's open to the public, and it is the first event associated with The Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle, planned for publication by the University of Edinburgh Press.

19508. Falling Stars Theatre < www.fallingstarstheatre.co.uk> advertise that they're "known for their immersive style of performance," and are touring Yorkshire with a play written by Geoff Parker, presented by A.R.S.E.S. (the Amateur Rural Society of Entertainment and Singers). The play is "an antimime for grownups!" and seems to have a different title for each performance ("Join Sherlock, Watson, and Woofer as they embark on a journey to deepest, darkest Yorkshire in search of a beast").
19509. David MacGregor's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Elusive Ear" is being performed at the 10th Street Stage in Toledo, Ohio, through Nov. 3 < www.toledorep.org>.
19510. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is being performed at the Quogue Community Hall in Quogue, N.Y., through Nov. 10; web-site at < www.hamptontheatre.org>. And it's due at the Pima Community College Center for the Arts in Tucson, AZ, Nov. 7-17 < www.tinyurl.com/yy2gyv6s>.

19519. "Building an Archive: A Celebration of the Arrival of the BSI Archives at the Lilly Library" (the conference in Bloomington on Nov. 8-10) went very well, offering participants behind-the-scenes tours of the Lilly as well as an exhibition of treasures from the Archives. More than 90 people were on hand, and Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "Live from the Lilly Library" is episode #180 of their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" interviews; you can tune in to the proceedings at < ihose.co/ihose180>.
19521. And there's still time to subscribe to the Baker Street Journal for 2019 ($41.95) and receive all five issues, including the BSJ Christmas Annual, which will be about William S. Baring-Gould (who was the first to annotate the Canon) and will be available only to subscribers. But: the deadline for 2019 subscriptions is Dec. 6.
19522. Type Punch Matrix, the rare book firm founded by Rebecca Romney and Brian Cassidy has issued its first catalog < www.tinyurl.com/y2xv2747>; it nicely begins with two items of "Victorian Fact and Fiction": the first book edition of A Study in Scarlet (illustrated by the author's father Charles Altamont Doyle and published in 1888), and a second edition of a Police Manual (prepared by a Committee of Chief Constables of Scotland and published in 1894). The second book is “the real-life handbook for constables during the era of the romanticization of detective work in Scotland-born author Arthur Conan Doyle’s stories.”

19523. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star has published The Canon: Five Lines at a Time, an amusing collection of Sherlockian limericks submitted by members of the society and edited by Steve Mason; it’s available to one and all as a free download at < www.tinyurl.com/ybaqwa7y>.
19524. Registration is now open for the “Holmes in the Heartland” conference in St. Louis on July 24-26; details at < www.tinyurl.com/y7d5elmp>.
19525. Big Chief Studios has announced a “warehouse clearance everything must go” sale on its authorized (and expensive) figures, dioramas, and artwork from the “Sherlock” television series < www.tinyurl.com/y6t5z5z5>.
19526. Yahoo (which is owned by Verizon) has announced that it is shutting down Yahoo Groups on Dec. 14, and all Group contents will be deleted. The moderators of “Letters of Mary”, a Yahoo group for fans of Laurie R. King’s “Mary Russell” stories with more than 900 members, have found a new home for the group, at < lettersofmary@grops.io>. There’s no word as yet about any other Sherlockian or Doylean groups that used Yahoo.

19527. David M. Rush died on Oct. 28. He was a life-long Sherlockian and Doylean in Illinois, and as a guest columnist for the Decatur Herald & Review he made sure that his readers were often reminded of his enthusiasms. David also contributed to society newsletters and journals, and his article on “Holmes and the Opera Ghost” was reprinted from the Devon County Chronicle in an 1985 edition of Gaston Leroux’s The Phantom of the Opera. \
19528. “Get clued in during downtime, the N.Y. Times suggests, in an advertisement for its crossword puzzles, spotted by Samantha Wolov. You can subscribe to the puzzles for $39.95/year (which helps the paper avoid becoming what some have called “the failing N.Y. Times”).
19529. Bunny Yeager’s “Sherlock Holmes’ Apprentice” at auction at eBay (October 19 #7) < www.tinyurl.com/y2m2f732> sold for $199.99, one assumes to someone who enjoys blondes wearing only a deerstalker.
19530. Richard K. Radek’s The Problem of the Singular Stradivarius (2014) and The Tragedy of the Salopian Roses and Three Short Stories (2019) are the first two volumes of his “The Sequestered Adventures of Sherlock Holmes” (184/ 271 pp., $13.95/$14.95); they’re traditional pastiches, involving Holmes and Watson with forged Strads and other mysteries in an around London.
19531. The snub-nose .450 caliber Webley Military and Police revolver offered at auction at Karlan’s Arms & Antiques on Nov. 4 (October 19 #4) sold for $650, rather more than Sherlock Holmes would have paid for his.
19532. “Cartoonist Gahan Wilson Is Looking to Find His Way” was the headline on a story in 27 East on Oct. 30 < www.tinyurl.com/y6rjuzyg> about Gahan Wilson, who has drawn some delightful Sherlockian cartoons over the years. Now 89 and suffering from dementia and other health issues, he is living in Arizona and is still drawing; some of his recent artwork is on-line at a GoFundMe page < www.gofundme.com/f/gahan-wilson-team-effort>.
19533. Nicholas Meyer is on tour promoting his new pastiche The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols, and if you’ve missed seeing and hearing him, you can listen to Richard Wolinsky’s fine 45-minute interview with Nick on KPFA-FM on Oct. 24 < www.kpfa.org/episode/bookwaves-october-24-2019>, with discussion of the new book and much more.
19534. Derrick Belanger writes that Belanger Books is calling for submissions for its second young-adult Sherlock Holmes anthology (the first was The Irregular Adventure of Sherlock Holmes); guidelines are available from Derrick at < derrickbelanger@gmail.com>.
19535. “Your house can’t shave, but it can smell great!” according to the Chiseled Face Groomatorium, which advertises a handmade “Sherlock Scented Candle” that offers “a warm tobacco-based scent blended with toasted caramel, black pepper, moist dirt, and finished with a touch of leather, mandarin, honey, and rose” ($15.99) and a wide variety of other Sherlock products at their web-site < www.chiseledface.com>.

19537. Jeremy Kemp died on July 19. He started acting on radio with the BBC in 1958, starred in the BBC television series “Z Cars” (1962), and went on to a long career that included roles such as Baron Karl von Leinsdorf in “The Seven-Per-Cent Solution” (1976) and Dr. Grimesby Roylott in Granada’s “The Speckled Band” (1984).
19538. Watson’s Tin Box is hosting the next “Scintillation of Scions” on June 12-14, 2020, at the Sheraton Baltimore-Washington Airport. It’s an entertaining gathering of local and far-flung Sherlockians and will include the annual running of The Silver Blaze (Southern Division) at Laurel Park Racetrack. Registration is now open <www.scintillation.org>.
19539. Denny Dobry has very kindly reported viaLibri < www.vialibri.net>, a spectacular web-site managed by James A. Hinck, that provides a search engine that finds books and magazines advertised on a long list of on-line web-sites.
19541. “Let us consider the claims of Whitaker’s Almanack,” Holmes suggested (in “The Valley of Fear”). The Bookseller reported on Nov. 19 that Bloomsbury Yearbooks, is offering to sell Whitaker’s assets (the current edition, the on-line edition, and backlist editions going back to 1869), describing the almanac as “an excellent investment opportunity for the buyer interested in preserving this historic publication and presenting definitive answers to questions in an era of ‘fake news.’” < www.tinyurl.com/skylo4k>.
19542. Howard Ostrom notes a story in the Sunderland Echo on Nov. 1 about the new range of clothing offered by Master Debonair < www.tinyurl.com/y5q5ovxq> in mix-and-match pairs for Holmes & Watson, Rathbone & Bruce, and Lestrade & Moriarty < www.tinyurl.com/y6x3p2sl>.
19543. Mark Jones and Paul M. Chapman have launched a new podcast called “Doings of Doyle” < www.doingsofdoyle.com> devoted to discussion of Conan Doyle’s non-Sherlockian writings; the first episode deals with The Doings of Raffles Haw. See also the entry on “The Ophthalmologist’s Tale” and its link to an article in Eye News (Oct. 1) that focuses on the Conan Doyle notebook held by the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh that contains the manuscript of “The American’s Tale” and an unpublished poem.

19544. The life-size chocolate statue of Benedict Cumberbatch commissioned by UKTV (April 15 #3) now is available to all in a smaller version, Mental Floss reported (on Apr. 12) < www.tinyurl.com/weox3cy>. You can make a note to order one for Easter next year, from Chocolatician < www.chocolatician.com> (£39.95 and up); 400 grams (about 14 oz.) of chocolate, and they come in three flavors: milk chocolate, dark chocolate, and white chocolate (with a 22-carat bow tie).

19545. Karen Murdock notes that the [London] Independent said “We’d be hard-pressed to say there’s anything entirely useful about these glasses shaped like the pipe Sherlock Holmes puffed on while solving his most difficult cases.” The stems are glass straws useful for those who prefer not to sip their wine, and the Wino Sippos are available from Firebox ($18.99 for a set of two < www.tinyurl.com/y96cvv2x>). The paper suggests that “Christmas is about having a bit of fun, and these glasses are guaranteed to add to a general feeling of seasonal goodwill.” Firebox doesn’t mention Sherlock Holmes, but it does promise that “it’s almost impossible to knock one of these bad boys over.”
19546. No Word from Winifred (1986) is one of a long series of mysteries written by Amanda Cross (the pen name used by Carolyn G. Heilbrun), and it’s literate, witty, and entertaining, and full of Canonical allusions.
19547. “Tom Steyer’s Fortune Fuels Underdog 2020 Campaign” was the headline on an Associated Press story (Nov. 17) < www.tinyurl.com/v26uz9m>. The hopeful Democrat suggested that “this race is completely up in the air—seriously,” adding that “the game’s afoot.”
19548. The Devil’s Due, by Bonnie MacBird (London: Collins Crime Club, 2019; 369 pp., $26.99), is her third pastiche, and it involves Holmes and Watson in a battle against villainous opponents, with a series of gruesome murders, and plenty of twists and turns. Her fourth pastiche (The Three Locks) is due next year, and it will be a prequel; Bonnie’s interesting web-site at <www.macbird.com> offers blogs and annotations on the series.
19549. The Look and Learn History Picture Library < www.lookandlearn.com> offers access to “one of the world’s largest and most unusual collections of historical pictures and vintage imagery,” and the artwork is interesting indeed; their search engine turns up 96 images for [sherlock holmes] and 172 images for [conan doyle].
19550. The Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh has awarded this year’s Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Medal, which recognizes the highest-placed graduate ChM (Master of Surgery) in clinical ophthalmology, to Hani Hasan, according to the Swindon Advertiser (Nov. 12) < www.tinyurl.com/u33kpmf>.
19551. Flickering Myth reported on Nov. 21 that Titan Comics has announced a new comic-book series “Adler” that has Irene Adler teaming up with a “League of Extraordinary Gentlemen” to take on Moriarty; the first issue is due on Feb. 5, and there’s a preview of the first issue (with lots of colorful artwork) at < www.tinyurl.com/w4qncj2>.

19552. There’s seemingly no end to Internet buzz about whether there will be a new season of the BBC’s “Sherlock” (it appears that it’s absolutely positively definitely certain that there may or may not be new season), but Howard Ostrom noted some interesting news in Radio Times (Nov. 18) < www.tinyurl.com/rnn3tuf>: now that work has been completed on their three-episode series “Dracula” (which is due this year on BBC One) Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss told an interviewer that they would like to bring back another iconic detective: Columbo. “I did have a decent go at it,” Moffat said, “but the rights are really tied up.”
19553. Alan Barnes’ “The Sherlock Holmes Suite” was recorded and released in 2003 and is available as a 2-CD set at Amazon; he’s still performing, and received an enthusiastic review from Leon Nock in the on-line Jazz Journal on Nov. 19 < www.tinyurl.com/wgjp88>.
19554. Karen Murdock has reported an item in the Daily Telegraph (Nov. 5) about a politician on “Team Farage”: candidate Sarah Wass (East Leeds) is a human resources expert who talked her way into university despite having no A-levels. The Brexit Party said she held “two world records” for taking part in the biggest ever elf gathering, and the biggest Sherlock Holmes dance-off. The Guinness World Records web-site does have an entry for the largest gathering of Santa’s elves < www.tinyurl.com/u7kbdhk>, but no entry for a Sherlock Holmes dance-off.
19555. Ross Davies has reported a Kickstarter campaign for The Art of Frank Cho: A Twenty-Year Retrospective < www.tinyurl.com/u8mtubk>; if you run the video you can see him engaging in Sherlockian artistry. You can also scroll down to see his portrait of Holmes and Watson.
19556. Further to previous mentions of Big Chief Studios’ authorized (and expensive) figures from the “Sherlock” television series, they’re also offering fans of “Game of Thrones” a figure of Daenerys Targaryen: Mother of Dragons at a pre-order price of £1,499 < www.tinyurl.com/rxopv83>. Fans of the “Game of Thrones” series obviously are presumed to be more fanatical than fans of the “Sherlock” series. On the other hand, there have been no reports (yet) of a “Game of Thrones” escape room.
19557. When in Scotland: it’s remote connection, but Airth Castle was the ancestral home of the Baronets of Stenhouse; Nigel Bruce was the younger son of the 10th baronet, and thus didn’t inherit the title. On Nov. 13 the Airdrie & Coatbridge Advertiser published a letter to the editor from Cameron Stevenson, who suggested that if Nigel Bruce had been the older son, he might not have gone to Hollywood to become Rathbone’s Dr. Watson. Airth Castle now is a hotel < www.airthcastlehotel.com>, near Stirling about 40 miles from Edinburgh; there’s no mention of Nigel Bruce at their web-site.
19558. The Baker Street Quarter Partnership is the business improvement district (BID) for the Marylebone area of London, and they are celebrating Christmas this year with installations of Christmas lights. Baker Street will feature illuminated geese perched on columns to remind passersby of “The Blue Carbuncle”.

19571. Jean Upton reports in the District Messenger that congratulations are in order for Jerome Coopersmith: on Nov. 12, aged 94, he became a Chevalier in the National Order of the French Legion of Honor, in recognition of his service to France in WW2 (Sherlock Holmes received the same honor for his tracking and arrest of Huret, the Boulevard assassin). Coopersmith wrote the book for the musical "Baker Street" (1964), and you can read about the ceremony, and his military career, in a story in the Long Island Herald on Nov. 21 <www.tinyurl.com/scar5v5>.
19572. The District Messenger, launched in 1982 as the "grapevine service" of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, is an excellent monthly round-up of goings on in the Sherlockian and Doylean world in Britain and elsewhere; all back issues are archived at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/newsletter>, and it's available by e-mail <district.messenger@yahoo.com>.
19573. The "Sherlock Holmes tent joke" (October 19 #5) keeps turning up in new forms, including Legos <www.newgrounds.com/portal/view/742717>, noted by Jennie Paton.
19574. Edward S. Smith Jr.'s The Floor Plans of Baker Street, first published in 1996, offers a survey of what was where at 221 Baker Street, on all of the floors, with plans and citations; a second printing of the 38-page booklet now is available at Amazon ($15.00).
19575. The new movie "Knives Out" is a delightful blend of mystery and comedy and excellent acting, and it has some imaginative Canonical allusions.
19577. Further to last month's report that Yahoo is shutting down Yahoo Groups, Jim Hawkins notes that WelcomeHolmes ("a discussion group for fans of Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes"), formerly at Yahoo, now is hosted at <www.groups.io/g/welcomeholmes>.
19578. "Mostly Lost" is an annual conference at the Library of Congress' National Audio-Visual Conservation Center in Culpeper, Va. (William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" was screened there in 2015), and one of the features of the conference is screenings of unidentified films, in hopes that someone can help. Take a look at what the Nitrate Film Interest Group has posted on-line <www.flickr.com/photos/nfig/albums>. Nothing seems Sherlockian, but there's always possibility that something of interest will turn up.
19579. Jennie Paton found a jar of "It's Sedimentary, My Dear Cookie!" mix in an aisle at Trader Joe's; you may be able to find it at a local store, or buy it on-line <www.traderjoes.com/FearlessFlyer/Article/4578>. It was named by Jeannette Powers in a contest Trader Joe's ran in 2016 (July 16 #6).

19580. Gahan Wilson died on Nov. 21. Neil Gaiman once described him as "having a cockeyed, dangerously weird way of looking at the world," and Wilson told a reporter that "life is a grotesque thing, inexplicable, odd." As a cartoonist Wilson was a master of the macabre, and a frequent contributor to the New Yorker, the National Lampoon, and Playboy. His Playboy cartoons often were Sherlockian, beginning with a delightful four-page spread in the Dec. 1959 issue and continuing over the years. He also was the Distinguished Speaker at the Baker Street Irregulars' lecture in 2005.
19582. Joe Posnanski's The Life and Afterlife of Harry Houdini (New York: Avid Reader Press, 2019; 316 pp., $28.00) is a delightful account of the author's pursuit of Houdini; aided by a legion of Houdini's fans (and some detractors), Posnanski offers a splendid exploration of why Houdini became (and still remains) a legend. Conan Doyle is mentioned in passing, but he wasn't really part of the story that Posnanski has told so well.
19583. The podcast "Doings of Doyle" <www.doingsofdoyle.com> (launched last month by Mark Jones and Paul Chapman) now includes discussion of Conan Doyle's short story "The Winning Shot" (1883) and a report on last month's "Conan Doyle in London" conference. Planning is now underway for a "Conan Doyle in Edinburgh" conference <www.edinburgh-conan-doyle.org/events> at Napier University on June 25-27, 2020; Owen Dudley Edwards and Nicholas Daly will be the keynote speakers.
19585. The Christmas Card Crime and Other Stories, edited by Martin Edwards (Naperville, Poisoned Pen Press, 2018; 224 pp., $14.99) is part of the long-running series of "British Library Crime Classics"; none of the stories in this volume are Sherlockian or Doylean, but it includes a delightful story ("The Motive") by Ronald Knox, who in addition to being a fine author is credited with creating the "Grand Game" that Sherlockians still play.

19587. René Auberjonois died on Dec. 8. He began his acting career on stage in 1962, appeared in his first film in 1964, went on to play Father John Mulcahy in "M.A.S.H." in 1970 and many other significant roles in films and on television. He played Sherlock Holmes in "The 1977 Milliken Breakfast Show" (a ten-act "industrial musical" performed at the Waldorf Astoria in New York) and read Mark Frost's pastiche The List of Seven for a Dove audiobook in 1993.

19589. Further to last month's item about the Christmas lights that have been installed in Baker Street in London (featuring illuminated geese that will remind passersby of "The Blue Carbuncle"), the lights were designed by the Michael Grubb Studio, and are imaginative indeed.
19590. The National Science and Media Museum, in Bradford, Yorks., now owns all three of the cameras that were used to photograph the Cottingley fairies, according to a report in the Yorkshire Post (Dec. 16) <www.tinyurl.com/todj7n3>. The article includes an image of all three cameras, which appear thoroughly antique in modern times when everyone seems to have a smartphone; the museum also owns original prints of the photographs, and watercolor sketches of fairies drawn by Elsie Wright, one of the young woman who took the photographs that convinced Conan Doyle that the fairies were real.
19591. For those who were watching television in the 1960s (and remember "Beany and Cecil"), Greg Darak kindly reports an interview with Bob Clampett, the creator of the series, in Funny World (summer 1970); Clampett said that he was inspired by the prehistoric monsters in a silent movie when he created the dinosaur Cecil, and that Captain Hufflepuff, in beard and pith helmet, echoed a character in the film, which of course would have been "The Lost World" (1925). The series is available at YouTube, and "Beany Meets the Monstrous Monster" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ge5f2HSeFCc> is of particular interest: watch for Cecil as a detective, wearing a deerstalker.
19592. Greg also has posed an intriguing challenge: where in the Canon is Sherlock Holmes likened to Cleopatra?

19594. Sky News noted on Dec. 18 <www.tinyurl.com/vd8na8q> the end of an era of British publishing: Pearson has decided to sell its remaining stake in Penguin Random House to Bertelsmann. Now none of the "big five" of English-language book publishing remain in British ownership (Macmillan is owned by another German publisher Holtzbrinck, John Murray (for many years the publisher of Conan Doyle's books) is now owned by the French company Hachette, HarperCollins is owned by News Corp in the U.S., and Simon & Schuster (once owned by Pearson) is owned by ViacomCBS).
19595. Where in the Canon is Sherlock Holmes likened to Cleopatra? In "The Empty House" it's Holmes himself who says, "I trust that age does not wither nor custom stale my infinite variety," echoing the description of Cleopatra in Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra".
19596. Netflix has announced the lead actors in its new television series called "The Irregulars": Harry Lloyd-Hughes (Sherlock Holmes) and Royce Pierreson (Doctor Watson); Tom Bidwell, who is writing the series, has said "what if Sherlock Holmes was a drug addict and a delinquent and the kids solve the whole case whilst he takes credit?"
19597. And now for a mystery: the image shows Sophie Aldred as Ace, who was the companion to the Seventh Doctor (Sylvester McCoy) in the "Doctor Who" series from 1987 to 1989. Patrick J. DeCanio, who's both a Sherlockian and a Whovian wonders, about one of the patches that Ace is wearing on her jacket. Andrew Cartmel, the script editor of the series at the time, has said that it is related to the Baker Street Irregulars, and Charles Prepolec hopes that a reader of this newsletter might know more about the patch, which (as might be expected) has been reproduced is available for Whovians (and others) at Etsy for only $9.00 <www.tinyurl.com/sglbgbf>.
19598. Too late for this year, but in plenty of time for 2020: Jim Suszynski reports two colorful Sherlockian Christmas cards offered by Allport Editions; there's a third card that's Sherlockian only if inspected closely. Go to <www.allport.com> and search for [sherlock].
19599. Van Ryder Games is running a Kickstarter campaign for Sherlock Holmes: Baker Street Irregulars, which is described by the company as "a cooperative graphic novel adventures game" <www.tinyurl.com/uk94yf7>; there appear to be many Sherlockian games available; is anyone keeping track of them? Or maintaining a web-site that describes and discusses them?

19601. The Red-Headed League Public House in Lebanon (Pennsylvania) (October 19 #5) is now open for business on the third floor of the Lebanon Farmers Market, the Lebanon Daily News reported on Dec. 13. The name of the restaurant pays tribute to the Sherlock Holmes story that was (according to owner Michael Kapp) inspired by a notorious murder committed by the Blue-Eyed Six in Lebanon in 1878 <www.tinyurl.com/trk74m9>.
19602. The first permanent granite statue honoring Sherlock Holmes erected in the Americas has now been unveiled in Chester, Ill., according to Michael W. McClure <www.baskervilleproductions.com/statue>; Mike was interviewed earlier this year by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/tu8l4py> discussing "Sherlock, Popeye, and More" (and yes, Popeye has a connection to Chester).
19603. Ashley Polasek has reported on plans for The Conan Doyle Review, devoted to peer-reviewed scholarship on Conan Doyle's life and work. The journal will begin accepting submissions in the summer of 2020, and the first volume will be published in the spring of 2021. A special limited-run preview issue will be on sale in Covent Garden West during the birthday festivities in New York. Scott Monty reported on the project at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/uzk3qq>, and more information is available from Ashley (the editor-in-chief) at <editor@acdreview.org>.
19604. Claudine Auger died on Dec. 18. She began her long career as an actor in France in 1958, went on to star as Domino in the James Bond film "Thunderball" in 1965, and played Isadora Klein in Granada's "The Three Gables" in 1994.
19606. There's an on-going campaign to restore the Royal Court Theatre in Wigan (near Manchester) <www.royalcourttheatre.org.uk>. The 3,000-seat theater was open in 1886, and in 1903 Charlie Chaplin performed there as a teenager as Billy; that would have been with Charles Frohman's North Company on tour with William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (with H. A. Saintsbury as Holmes and Fred Inwood as Watson).
19607. When in Bialystok (in Poland): you can pay a visit to the Sherlock Holmes Pub <www.facebook.com/sherlock.bialystok>.
19608. There seems to be an unlimited supply of Sherlockian action figures, and Jennie Paton has reported a new one, showing Benedict Cumberbatch as Sherlock Holmes, made by Pekkasland and available from AliExpress for $13.64 <www.tinyurl.com/vkjg5gb>. Jennie also has noted a new set of 19609. Karl E. Meyer (“Fritz von Waldbaum”) died on Dec. 22. He had a distinguished career in journalism, as a foreign correspondent and editorial writer for the Washington Post, as an editor and television critic for the Saturday Review, and then as an editor for the N.Y. Times and the Foreign Policy Review. He wrote stories about the Sherlockian birthday festivities for the N.Y. Times in 1986 and 2000, and went on to a distinguished career as an author, making sure that his Tournament of Shadows: The Great Game and the Race for Empire in Central Asia (1999) included Dr. John H. Watson in the index. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.

19610. The conversion of Great Scotland Yard into a hotel (June 19 #6) is now complete, and the Great Scotland Yard Hotel is open for business. The Evening Standard had a nicely illustrated article about the new hotel on Dec. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/vbkt2yg>.
19611. Jennie Paton reports a new Sherlockian teddy bear that is made by Hermann Spielwaren in Germany and is available from various Internet sellers; it’s more imaginative than others of its ilk in that there appears to be tobacco in the pipe, which one supposes could be rigged so that there’s a bit of smoke.
19612. The January-February issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine continues a long annual tradition of celebrating Sherlock Holmes' birthday, with Sherlockian artwork by Erika Steiskal on the cover, a new and amusing pastiche by Terence Faherty, an Ellery Queen pastiche by Josh Pachter with a Sherlockian pun as a title, a Sherlockian cartoon by Scott Masear, and reviews by Steve Steinbock of new Sherlockian books.
19613. The Holmes Hotel London (formerly the Sherlock Holmes Hotel) has been reviewed on-line by Business Traveller <www.tinyurl.com/wgwhzl6>; the hotel has been refurbished and brought up to date, still with nicely Sherlockian décor.
19614. Correcting a typo (November 19 #1): registration is now open for the “Holmes in the Heartland” conference in St. Louis on July 24-26; more information is available at <www.tinyurl.com/yd5elpj>.
19615. Thanks to author Hank Philippi Ryan (who has written some fine, although non-Sherlockian) mysteries, here’s an iPhone secret: if you hold down the space bar, it acts like a mouse, and you can move to wherever you want to be in the message you’ve typed.
19616. Roger Johnson has discovered a nice treat for those who want something to drink while reading this newsletter: an Australian wine called Skuttlebutt sold by Stella Bella Wines <www.stellabella.com.au>. There’s a 2017 Cabernet and a 2019 Sauvignon Blanc Semillon advertised at the company’s web-site, and it appears that you don’t need to go to Australia to buy some: Little Peacock Importers <www.little-peacock.com> can tell you where it’s sold in the U.S.
19617. Jennie Paton has discovered a new audio production of “The Blue Carbuncle” from Redfield Arts Studio <www.redfieldartsaudio.com>, starring Mark Redfield as Sherlock Holmes, J. R. Lyston as Dr. Watson, and Carol Mason as Mrs. Hudson; it’s available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/sxcxw6x>.

19618. The three latest volumes of The MX Book of New Sherlock Holmes Stories: Whatever Remains, edited by David Marcum, continue his excellent series of anthologies, this time presenting a wealth of traditional pastiches, with Holmes facing “ghosts and mythological creatures, impossible circumstances, and curses, possessions, and prophecies,” in the stories, poetry, and radio scripts (London: MX Publishing, 2019; 383/419/ 380 pp., $24.95 each); MX Publishing’s books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
19619. Also: Sheldon Goldfarb’s Sherlockian Musings (2019, 299 pp., $16.95), is an interesting collection of the “musings” he prepared for meetings of the Stormy Petrels of British Columbia, by way of suggesting ideas for discussion of the Canon; it is nicely done, and will be helpful to other Sherlockian societies. The author offers samples of some of the essays at his web-site <www.sheldongoldfarb.wordpress.com>.
19620. And: Richard T. Ryan’s The Merchant of Menace (2019; 232 pp., $16.95) is his fourth pastiche, pitting Holmes against a master criminal who specializes in stealing precious objects, eventually meeting his match with the Great Detective at Blenheim Palace. Kim Krisco’s Irregular Lives: The Untold Story of Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars (2016; 356 pp., $18.95) is set in 1919, when Holmes and Watson are invited to a mysterious exhibition of photographs that reconnect them with the young boys who helped them all those years ago, and they’re all engaged in solving in a new mystery. Marcia Wilson’s The Adventure of the Flying Blue Pigeon (2016; 274 pp., $14.95), the first book in her “Test of the Professionals” series, is set in 1883 and offers an intriguing look at the world of Sherlock Holmes as seen by the Scotland Yarders (who include Lestrade, Gregson, and Bradstreet). And David Marcum’s Sherlock Holmes: Tangled Skeins (2015; 241 pp., $14.95) offers five pastiches set in London and in Sussex.
19621. Karen Murdock has noted an imaginative coffee mug that’s marked “Property of Diogenes Club/Comfortable Chairs/Latest Periodicals” and is available at Amazon UK <www.tinyurl.com/w3dfrmu> (£16.99).
19622. The Lost World is in the news again, mentioned often in articles about a successful attempt to climb the 2,000-foot high prow of Guyana’s Mount Roraima, credited by many as having inspired Conan Doyle when he wrote the story. Here’s what the Daily Mail had to say: <www.tinyurl.com/r3k6rk7>.
19623. The Sherlock Holmes Complete Puzzle Collection, with text and puzzles by Tim Dedopulus (London: Carlton Books, 2017; 400 pp., $25.37), offers “over 200 devilishly difficult mysteries, inspired by the world’s greatest detective.” It’s a reprint combining his The Sherlock Holmes Puzzle Collection (February 15 #1) and The Sherlock Holmes Puzzle Collection: The Lost Cases (August 19 #1), nicely bound and with attractive artwork.
19624. The Cambridge Companion to Sherlock Holmes, edited by Janice M. Allan and Christopher Pittard (Cambridge University Press, 2019; 261 pp., $19.99), is an anthology of excellent academic and readable essays that deal with a wide variety of aspects of the Canon, ending with Roberta Pearson’s up-to-date and interesting discussion of “Sherlockian Fandom”.

19625. At auction at Ahlers & Ogletree in Atlanta on Jan. 11: a copy of the Al Hirschfeld limited-edition colored lithograph “The Game’s Afoot” (showing Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce as Holmes and Watson), estimated at $800-$1,200 <www.tinyurl.com/uwsjw2>. Note: It’s also still available from Margo Feiden Galleries <www.alhirschfeld.com> $1,800.
19627. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” will be performed at the New Bern Civic Theatre in New Bern, N.C., Jan. 10-19 <www.newberncivictheatre.org>. Also at the Von Braun Center Playhouse in Huntsville, Ala., Jan. 17-25; web-site’s at <www.theatrehsv.org>. Also at the Topeka Civic Theatre in Topeka, Kan., Jan. 17-Feb. 9 <www.topekacivictheatre.com>; and at the Stageworks Theatre in Houston, Texas, Jan. 17-Feb. 9 <www.stageworkshouston.org>.

19628. Bart Lovins' "The Novel Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of Four" will be performed at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., Jan. 16-26, 2020 <www.thepac.net>.
19630. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" will be performed at the Waterville Opera House in Waterville, Maine, Jan. 24-Feb. 2 <www.operahouse.org>.
19631. Craig Wichman's radio-theater dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" will be performed at the First Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J., Mar. 13-14 and Oct. 30-Nov. 7 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
19632. "Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes" (by Jamie Robledo) will be performed at the Sheldon Vexter Theater in San Antonio, Texas, May 7-31 <www.vexter.org>.
19633. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes Returns" is due at the Greater Boston Stage Company in Stoneham, Mass., June 4-28 <www.greaterbostonstage.org>.
19634. Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Waukesha Civic Theatre in Waukesha, Wis., June 4-21; their web-site's at <www.waukeshacivictheatre.org>.
19635. R. Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the Raven's Curse" will be performed at the Shaw Festival Theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., June 21-October 18 <www.shawfest.com>.
19636. "Sherlock and Cinders" (a musical written by Tom Kirkham and Matthew Crossey) will be performed at the Carver Theatre in Stockport, Cheshire, July 3-4 <www.carvertheatre.co.uk>.

19638. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker on Thursday evening was Theodora Goss, an award-winning author of poetry, short stories, and novels in the fantasy genre (Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are characters in three novels about the Athena Club). On Friday the Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where Emily Miranker proposed the traditional preprandial first toast to her mother, Cathy Miranker, as The Woman.
19640. Mike Whelan ended the evening by handing over the gavel (and yes, there is a gavel) to Mike Kean, who as the new "Wiggins" then appointed Mike Whelan to the office of "Wiggins Emeritus". Mike Whelan has been head of the BSI for 23 years, and Mike Kean is only the sixth person to lead the BSI since it was founded by Christopher Morley in 1934.
19642. The next BSI annual dinner will be on Jan. 8, and the next Sherlock Holmes Society of London annual dinner presumably will be on Jan. 16.
19644. There are web-sites that monitor copyright's public domain. "The Sussex Vampire" and Conan Doyle's Memories and Adventures, which were published in The Strand Magazine in 1924, and Buster Keaton's film "Sherlock, Jr." (1924) are now in the public domain, as are "The Three Garridebs" and "The Illustrious Client" (published in Collier's in 1924).

19645. VITA Digital Productions <www.myvitadvds.com> offers a series of Virtual Walks, Virtual Jogs, Virtual Bike Rides, and Virtual Cruises designed for use while exercising on treadmills, Nordic Tracks, indoor bikes, and other exercise equipment, and one of them is 60-minute Sherlock Holmes Virtual Walk ($14.99 DVD/$6.99 download) that takes you on a tour of sixteen filming locations used in the BBC's "Sherlock" series. There's no voice-over, but there's a "Footsteps" feature that pays closer attention to some of the filming locations. You can sample the Sherlock DVD at <www.sherlockwalk.com>.
19646. It's not Sherlockian (so far) but: Willy Werby notes the existence of a personal computer ring that will play music, check your e-mail, give you alerts, and allow you to browse or chat with others. Who said that the future lies ahead? Seems to be here already.
19647. When in Austria: you can pay a visit to Conan Doyle Gasse [Alley] in Feldkirch, where he studied at the Stella Matutina in 1875 (and first became an author. He edited and published the hand-written Feldkirchian Gazette (copies of two issues survive, owned by the British Library), and Marcus Geisser reports that last year the Deutsche Sherlock Holmes Gesellschaft joined the town in celebrating Conan Doyle's 160th birthday, unveiling a street sign. There's a report (with video) of the ceremony available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/r5jmfe8>; it's all in German, but Google Translate will help you read the report.
19648. The Journal of Popular Culture's web-site has a paywall, so you might want to see if your local library has a subscription: Mattias Boström reports that the Dec. 2019 issue includes Mary Katherine Evan's interesting article "'The Name Is Sherlock Holmes, and the Address Is 221B Baker Street': Virtual Reality, Fan Communities, and Tourism".
19649. Robert E. Thomalen ("The Three Garridebs") died on Dec. 5. He was an energetic member of the Three Garridebs of Westchester County, and beginning in 1982 he presided over many "Autumn in Baker Street" (and one "Springtime in Baker Street") conferences, which he explained combined "scholarship with friendship, emotion with reason, and explication with participation". In 1987 Bob was appointed "Cartwright" of the Baker Street Irregulars and he was awarded the BSI's Queen Victoria Medal when he retired in 1996; he received his Investiture in 1983, and the Two-Shilling Award in 1988. He was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog in 2007; you can listen to both parts of the interview at <www.tinyurl.com/v5lwpuu> and <www.tinyurl.com/vbjkf2c>. You can also read some nice tributes to Bob, sent by friends to Scott Monty's blog, at <www.tinyurl.com/rq9enud>.

19650. The Royal Mail has announced that a new set of stamps honoring "Sherlock" will be issued on Aug. 18. No details available at the moment.

19651. I've reported before (February 18 #2) on APOPO <www.apopo.org>, an organization that trains giant African pouched rats to detect unexploded landmines in countries in Africa and Asia (the rats don't weigh enough to set off the mines, which can then be disarmed); the rats can also be trained to detect tuberculosis in mucous samples, and now they are in pursuit of smugglers who traffic in endangered species. Needless to say, APOPO welcomes donations from anyone who wants to adopt a giant rat.

19652. "Cats" (Universal's film version of the 1981 Andrew Lloyd Webber musical that was adapted from T. S. Eliot's book Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats) has been in the works at least since 1990, and there's much to enjoy: Idris Elba is suitably malevolent as Macavity, and Ian McKellen is excellent as Gus the Theatre Cat (although the film, like the musical, omits the Canonical allusion in Eliot's poem). Savaged by the critics, the film's likely gone from theaters by the time you read this, but it's well worth watching on television or a DVD.

19653. Now you can snuggle up with Holmes and Watson: Sidney Paget artwork is available in full color on a pillow case offered at CafePress <www.tinyurl.com/ql5d8u7>.

19654. There's also a full "The Game Is Afoot" Langshan sheet set available from Roostery <www.tinyurl.com/wpayd3q> for sizes twin to king.

19655. Lee Mendelson died on Dec. 25. He was a television producer, and in 1965 he persuaded Charles Schulz to write the animated special "A Charlie Brown Christmas", and went on to produce a long series of specials that included "It's a Mystery, Charlie Brown" (1974), in which Woodstock's nest mysteriously disappears and Snoopy, in Sherlockian costume, plays detective in order to find it.

19656. Gary Lovisi has been in business as Gryphon Books <www.gryphonbooks.com> for many years, offering a wide variety of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian material, and he has an interesting YouTube channel where you can view his visit to the Merchants Room (also known as Covent Garden West) during the birthday festivities <www.tinyurl.com/r7sd2bm> and an interview with collector and dealer Bob Hess <www.tinyurl.com/sz38bfr>.

19657. The third issue of The Newspapers (it's an "Irregular Journal of Sherlockiana" edited by Greg Ruby for the Sherlockians of Baltimore) has been published, with 183 pp. of articles, toasts, and much more, many by members of the SOBs ($23.00 postpaid). The focus is on material from Baltimore's newspapers, and about Baltimore, but Greg has cast his net widely, and includes William A. Walsh's report on "Harrison Schmitt: Bringing Holmes to the Moon" and Ira Brad Matetsky's article about "Rex Stout at the BSI Dinners". Available at <www.tinyurl.com/y4fe2zv> and from Greg D. Ruby, 2400 Boston Street #102, Baltimore, MD 21224.

19658. Greg also has published a detailed and colorful exploration of The Numismatic Edgar Allan Poe (160 pp., $50.00 cloth/$25.00 paper postpaid), discussing Conan Doyle's admiration for Poe in the introduction, reprinting Arthur S. Chapman's 1905 pastiche "The Unmasking of Sherlock Holmes", and including a nicely Sherlockian touch in Jeff Decker's back-cover artwork <www.tinyurl.com/rxswmq7>.

19659. Many Sherlockians have seen and enjoyed the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, which was briefly on hiatus and now is open at the South Carolina State Museum in Columbia, S.C., through Apr. 19 <www.scmuseum.org>.

19661. It's getting more and more difficult to find places where one can smoke cigars and cigarettes, but there still are cigar and cigarette cards being made (as trading cards): the Acheron Mint is offering a set of seventeen "Sherlock Holmes Moriarty Conan Doyle Irene Adler Lost World" trading cards at eBay ($14.95); sixteen characters cards plus one card randomly selected from nine other cards. You can see them all at <www.tinyurl.com/txfl3qg>.

19662. Alexander Orlov has reported his discovery at the Polish web-site Culture a fascinating article by Igor Belov that translates as "Elementary Watson: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in Poland" <www.tinyurl.com/wj3hpom>; he offers a details discussion of Poland in the Canon and of Polish Sherlockiana. It's all in Russian, but Google Translate will be of assistance.

19663. "Everything you've heard is true" was the slogan used to advertise Sherlock 2 for Apple's Mac OS 9 operating system. Named in honor of Sherlock Holmes, Sherlock was a file and web search tool that was officially retired and removed from Mac's operating systems when OS X 10.5 was released in 2007. But you can still buy the poster from The Missing Bite <www.tinyurl.com/sxor3lf> for $29.95. And there's more to the story: according to Wikipedia, advocates of Watson, made by Karelia Software, claimed that Apple copied their product without permission, compensation, or attribution in producing Sherlock 3. The phenomenon of Apple releasing a feature that supplants or obviates third-party software is so well known that being "Sherlocked" has become an accepted term used within the Mac and IOS developer community.

19664. For the true fans of the BBC's "Sherlock" series: SamsXStitch offers colorful 18-count cross-stitch patterns showing Benedict Cumberbatch as Sherlock Holmes and Martin Freeman as Dr. Watson ($3.99 each) at their shop at Etsy <www.etsy.com/shop/SamsXStitch>.

19665. Vicki Delany's There's a Murder Afoot (New York: Crooked Lane, 2020; 329 pp., $26.99) is the fifth in her series of "Sherlock Holmes Bookshop" mysteries that star Gemma Doyle (proprietor of the Sherlock Holmes bookshop on Cape Cod) and her friend Jayne Wilson (who manages the next-door Mrs. Hudson's Tea Room). The pastiche brings Gemma and Jane and their friends to London for a Sherlock Holmes conference, where they encounter a murder and other goings-on. The author has more than one series going, and her web-site's at <www.vickidelany.com>.

19666. Terry Jones died on Jan. 21. He was a charter member of the Monty Python comedy team, and he had a long career as an actor and director, and as an author, and once said that his "big hero" was Buster Keaton, "because he made comedy look beautiful."

19667. There were many new books available in the Merchants Room on Saturday during the birthday festivities, but (for various reasons) there hasn't been sufficient time to read and review them. Three new titles from the Baker Street Irregulars Press are listed at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>; you can click on [bsi books]. The Wessex Press has The Annotated White Company and the fifth volume of Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle in the Newspapers; they're at <www.wessexpress.com>. Stay tuned.

19668. Ralph Earle II ("Joyce Cummings") died on Jan. 13. He practiced law in Philadelphia and was a member of the Sons of the Copper Beeches, and began a new career in government in 1968, when he was appointed a Pentagon aide for international security affairs; he went on to serve President Carter as chief negotiator for the second round of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, with the rank of ambassador. He briefly led the Arms Control

- and Disarmament Agency, returning as its deputy director in 1994, and retired in 1999. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1968.
19669. Jennie Paton has spotted a Sherlock Holmes perfume (the fragrance features tobacco, smoke, leather, woody notes, moss, and citrus) created by Ali Habibi and available in Tehran <www.ayliperfumes.com/product/sherlock-holmes> (possibly only in Iran)
19670. "221b Baker Street: The Board Game Classic" (the most recent version of the board game designed by Jim Moriarty and first issued by Antler Productions in 1975) now has a Deluxe Edition, available from the John N. Hansen Company, offering 200 cases (including 20 new ones); the company boasts that more than 3 million copies have been sold worldwide. It's advertised for $38.49 (at Target), and at higher prices elsewhere, and it may be the oldest Sherlockian board game still in production.
19671. Sherlockians are indebted to Twentieth Century-Fox, the movie studio that gave us Basil Rathbone's landmark "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1939, and it's a bit sad to learn there will be no more films from the studio, at least under that name; it was bought last year by the Walt Disney Studios, and according to Variety (Jan. 17), "the mouse has officially killed the fox." The new name will be 20th Century Studios for the company (Variety quoted "an insider" as saying, "I think the Fox name means Murdoch, and that is toxic.")
19672. Dean Jobb's "Stranger Than Fiction" is one of the on-line features of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine; it appears monthly, and his January blog at <www.tinyurl.com/yxx8upzs> is the first of a two-part essay "Finding Sherlock" (the second part will appear in February); the EQMM web-site is well worth exploring.
19674. If you're old enough to remember "Pac Man" you're surely aware that computer games today are not as primitive as they once were. "Sherlock Holmes Game Evolution 1984-2019" is an interesting 14-minute video noted by Jennie Paton that shows just how much more realistic computer games are now <www.youtube.com/watch?v=OnWRDAhEQU>.

19675. Jim Lehrer died on Jan. 23. A lifelong journalist, first on newspapers and then on public television, he covered the Watergate hearings, presided over a dozen presidential debates, and helped to create a long-running one-hour news broadcast. In Mar. 1990 (when he was associate editor of the "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour") he wrote an instructive one-page essay for the Smithsonian magazine on the pleasures of collecting (describing himself as a world-class collector of bus depot signs and other memorabilia), and he offered a suggestion that many Sherlockians will agree with: collectors are not odd, he said, "we are merely possessed with a need to collect certain things that some people might consider odd."
19676. Peter Melonas is a creative designer and illustrator who has been offering Sherlockiana at least since the 1980s; you can see his latest merchandise at <www.society6.com/fancifullart>.
19677. Hugh Ashton's Some Cases of Mr. Sherlock Holmes Occurring in the Year 1894 (Lichfeld: j-views. 2018; 161 pp., $8.99) offers six pastiches revealing what happened in some of the unrecorded cases; it's the latest in a long list of collections of his pastiches <www.hughashonbooks.com>.
19678. James Gunn's appreciative and amusing tribute to "Asimov at 100" appeared in the Jan. 3 issue of Science <www.tinyurl.com/smcqjap>, mentioning Isaac Asimov's membership in the Baker Street Irregulars.
19679. Further to the item (December 19 #5) about the Red-Headed League Public House in Lebanon (Pennsylvania), and owner Michael Kapp's belief that the name of the restaurant pays tribute to the story that was inspired by a notorious murder committed by the Blue-Eyed Six in Lebanon in 1878, Gary Ludwig's 36-page pamphlet The Blue Eyed Six: A Historical Narrative (Lebanon: Hodge Podge Press, 2004; $13.95) offers a detailed account of the gang's crime and punishment. There's more about the book, and the author, at the web-site <www.hodgepodgeusa.com>.
19680. When in Chile: Willis Frick reports the Café Sherlock in Puerto Montt; no web-site, but they do have a page at Facebook [sherlock puerto montt].
19681. "The Game Is Never Over" is convention planned to celebrate "10 years of Sherlock" (that's the BBC series) scheduled for Nov. 19-22 at the Hilton Garden Inn in Phoenixville, Pa. <www.thegameisneverover.com>.
19682. 2020 will be a "Year of Mystery" in Bennington, Vt., planned by two local libraries and the Baker Street Breakfast Club, and of course the schedule includes Sherlockian events. You can see a video in which Sally Sugarman talks about the Sherlockian aspects at <www.vimeo.com/38715504>.
19684. Steve also posts a continuing series of amusing "Baker Street Elementary" comic strips (co-authored with his son Rusty and Joe Fay) at the web-site of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star. Annual compilations since 2005, and three comic books, can be read (and downloaded) at the society's web-site <www.dfw-sherlock.org>; click on [ephemera--general stuff].

19685. It was H. R. F. Keating, in Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World (1979), who explained that the "modern Belgian masters" whose pictures entirely absorbed Sherlock Holmes (noted in "The Hound of the Baskervilles") were the members of the XX Group. James Ensor was one of them, and Christie's offers an interesting (and colorfully illustrated) guide to Ensor and his work online at <www.tinyurl.com/s3s54dt>.
19686. The Literary Gift Company <www.theliterarygiftcompany.com> offers attractive Hound of the Baskervilles bracelets, and Holmes & Watson earrings and cufflinks, hand-crafted from "rescued" copies of the Canon.
19687. Paul Reffell died on Jan. 3. He was member of the Petaluma Radio Players for many years, and was excellent as Dr. Watson in five episodes of Vince Staddon's amusing "The Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes"; you can hear him as Watson at <www.petalumaradioplayers.com>; click on podcast].
19688. Max Allan Collins' The History of Mystery (Collectors Press, 2001) offers a 196-page colorful tour of detective stories and film noir, as shown in cover art for pulp magazines, books, DVD jackets, and film posters; Sherlock Holmes is included early on, but the emphasis is on later work whose artwork featured comely ladies undressed or in peril, or both. It's out of print, but readily available at eBay and elsewhere.
19689. Bradley Harper's Queen's Gambit (Jersey City: Seventh Street Books, 2019; 282 pp., $15.95) is the second in his series about Margaret Harkness, who is again involved with Arthur Conan Doyle and Joseph Bella and is working to foil a plot against Queen Victoria; as with A Knife in the Fog (October 18 #5), the story's nicely told, and the characters well drawn. The author's colorful Fantastic Fiction page is at <www.fantasticfiction.com>.

19691. Karen Murdock notes a report in Scotland on Sunday (Jan. 25) that Dr. Joseph Bell's former Georgian townhouse at 22 St. Andrew Square in Edinburgh has just opened as a hotel; Conan Doyle, while a medical student, worked as a clerk for Bell, and paid tribute to him as an inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. The paper's reviewer gave high marks to the hotel's restaurant/bistro, and there's more information at the Malmaison Hotel's web-site at <www.malmaison.com/locations/edinburgh-city>.
19692. The Holmes Hotel London (formerly the Sherlock Holmes Hotel) has been reviewed on-line by the Handbook <www.tinyurl.com/uh4zwbu>; the review includes a challenge from the hotel: solve "the barber shop mystery."
19693. Further to the report (October 19 #2) about the imaginative life-size bronze sculpture by Irena Sedlecká <www.tinyurl.com/y2sevea2> of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the spirit of Sherlock Holmes in the Garden of Heroes and Villains created by the late Felix Dennis in Dorsington, Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warwickshire, the garden will be open to the public the evening of June 25; details at <www.tinyurl.com/sarp8pj>.

19694. In her latest "News & Nonsense" newsletter, Laurie R. King describes the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars as "a room full of tux-clad men and sequin-bedecked women, raising their glasses and singing silly-ditties" such as "We Never Mention Aunt Clara", and provides a link to White Ghost Shivers singing the song at the Saxon Pub in Austin, Texas, on Apr. 21, 2012 <www.tinyurl.com/s3fpod2>. According to Wikipedia, White Ghost Shivers is an "eclectic American band" that was declared to be "Best None of the Above" at the Austin Music Awards in 2005 and 2007.
19695. Laurie also notes that Mrs. Hudson's given name is Clara (as revealed in an earlier "Mary Russell" novel, adding that "of course, we all know how much trouble she got into, back in her youth." A search for the title of the song at YouTube will bring up some interesting renditions in addition to the White Ghost Shivers recording.
19696. Donald Tosh died on Dec. 3. He had a long career with the BBC, helping to develop their series "Coronation Street" and working as a story editor on "Doctor Who"; he also dramatized "Shoscombe Old Place" (1968) for the series that starred Peter Cushing.
19697. Spotted by Dan Stashower: Nigel J. Hayler's imaginative Read+Doodle Book 1 (Lancaster: Pocket Doodle Reads, 2018; 52 pp., $12.80); "A Case of Identity" is one of four stories in the book, all with text, doodling hints, and pages to color <www.doodlereads.com>.
19698. Jennie Paton spotted an attractive and imaginative teaser for a new French graphic novel "Dans la tête de Sherlock Holmes" <www.vimeo.com/387129370>; the first of two volumes will be published in May, and you can order from the Ankama Shop <www.ankama-shop.com>.
19699. And some theater news: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is being produced at the Strauss Theatre Center in Monroe, La., through Feb. 8 <www.strausstc.com>. It's also due at the Longwood University Theatre in Farmville, Va., Apr. 15-19 <www.tinyurl.com/wjhkym7>.
19700. Jules Tasca's "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" is on at the Mesquite Community Theatre in Mesquite, Nev., through Feb. 15 <www.mctnv.com>.
19701. Tom Hitchcock's "Sherlock Holmes and the Seven Wooden Figurines" will be performed at the Manifest Theatre in Manningtree, Essex, Feb. 27-29; web-site's at <www.manifesttheatre.co.uk>.
19702. "Sherlock Holmes the Musical" will be performed by the Spring-Time Experimental Theatre (in Cantonese) at the Tuen Mun Town Hall in Hong Kong, Mar. 27-28 <www.springtime.com.hk>.
19703. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at Steeltown Coffee & Tea in Pittsburg, Calif., Aug. 14-23 <www.pittsburgcalifornia.com>.

19704. Last year's Baker Street Irregulars Press and the BSI Trust Book Fair was a rousing success; this year's event will be expanded to include an Open House at Denny Dobry's home in Reading, Pa., where you will be able to see his delightful recreation of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street. Mark your calendar for May 17, from 11:00 am to 4:00 pm, when you'll be able to do more than just see the sitting-room: visitors will be welcome to enter the room for hands-on inspection of its contents. The book fair will offer thousands of books and other Sherlockiana, at rock-bottom prices. Lunch will be available, and Denny's home is at 5003 Stony Run Drive in Reading (100 miles from Manhattan, 80 miles from Baltimore, and 40 miles from Philadelphia, and he suggests that you start planning your car pool). Additional information is available from Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>. There's a nice image of Denny's sitting-room at <www.tinyurl.com/rkojoza>.
19705. The Worst Man in London (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 2019; 186 pp., $39.95), edited by Daniel Stashower and Constantine Rossakis, is the latest volume in the BSI's manuscript series, and it's a grand way to get as close as one can to the writing of "The Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton"; there's a facsimile and a transcript of the manuscript, and scholarly essays by Randall Stock (on the manuscript and its history), Carla Coupe (on the illustrators of the story), Russell Merritt (on television adaptation), Jonathan McCafferty (on the villainous Charles Augustus Howell), and many others. It's recommended, and available from the publisher at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>.
19706. And there's more: the latest in the professional series is Education Never Ends: Educators, Education, and the Sherlockian Canon (2019; 210 pp., $39.95), edited by Marino C. Alvarez and Timothy S. Greer, with an excellent and wide-ranging assortment of scholarly articles.
19707. Also from the BSI: Upon the Turf: Horse Racing and the Sherlockian Canon, edited by Candace J. Lewis, Ira Brad Matetsky, and Roger Downey (2019; 203 pp., $25.95), discusses horses, horse racing, gambling, and related topics such as horses named from Conan Doyle's stories. By nice coincidence, the current audio interview at Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog is devoted to the book <www.tinyurl.com/rw3n8yg>.
19708. "A Mountaineer Named Sherlock" is the title of the inaugural West Virginia University Symposium on Sherlock Holmes, on Mar. 20-21 Morgantown, W.Va.; the registration deadline is Mar. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/rnootvg>.
19709. You can "tour the International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes at the South Carolina State Museum" in Columbia, S.C., in a colorful video spotted by Jennie Paton at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=XvclRWpXT4>; the exhibition runs through Apr. 19 <www.scmuseum.org> (January 20 #3).
19710. Bob Loomis' Houdini's Final Incredible Secret (CreateSpace, 2016; 323 pp., $13.00) is subtitled "how Houdini mystified Sherlock Holmes creator," and the author has devoted an entire book to his research on the "slate test" that Houdini performed for Conan Doyle when he visited Houdini's home in New York in the 1920s; you can decide for yourself whether Loomis actually has solved the mystery.

19711. Ashley D. Polasek's imaginative Being Sherlock: A Sherlockian's Stroll Through the Sherlock Holmes Stories (Guilford: Lyons Press, 2019; 430 pp., $26.95), offers ten short stories and "The Hound of the Baskervilles", each with entertaining and insightful introductions that explain her choices and provide insights for readers old and new; it is a grand and up-to-date approach to the Canon.

19712. Freda Howlett ("The British Government") died on Feb. 15, aged 101. She was the last of the founders of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, was one of its most enthusiastic members, and was its president from 2003 to 2009. Freda received her Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2020
19714. Conan Doyle called the novel "the best thing I have ever done," and it has never been out of print since it was published in 1891. Now you can read The Annotated White Company and see for yourself how good he was at writing historical novels; it's annotated and introduced by Doug Elliott and Roy Pilot, with a foreword by Nicholas Meyer (who, like John Ford, wanted to make a film based on the novel), and black-and-white illustrations by George Willis Bardwell (from the second American edition) and color illustrations by N. C. Wyeth (from a later American edition). There also are 14 appendices that offer more information about the author, his notebooks and manuscript, and life in the 14th century; it's nicely done indeed, and recommended (Indianapolis: Wessex Press, 2020, 410 pp., $48.95). The publisher's web-site is at <www.wessexpress.com>.
19716. And there's Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle in the Newspapers, Volume 5, July-September 1894, edited and annotated by Mattias Boström, Mark Alberstat, and Leah Guinn (2020; 204 pp., $36.95); the first volume in the series from Gasogene Books covered 1881-1892, the next three volumes covered six months each, and now it's three months, which show just how much more reporting there was in the press about his books, travel plans, and play "A Story of Waterloo".
19717. Finally, The Milvertonians of Hampstead: Forgotten Writings from the Worst Men in London, introduced, collated, and edited by Nicholas Utechin (2020; 130 pp., $18.95), is the story of the first scion society of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and it's a grand story indeed, painstakingly researched delightfully told, and reprinting for the first time the excruciatingly rare publications of the society.

19718. Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle's Wide World: Sherlock Holmes and Beyond (London: Tauris Parke, 2020; 327 pp., £20.00) is a delightful presentation of Conan Doyle's expertise as a travel writer; Lycett, author of an impressive biography of Conan Doyle (September 07 #6), offers an excellent selection from his fiction (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian), articles, and essays, all nicely showing how well Conan Doyle was able to give his readers a proper sense of place. An American edition is due in April.
19719. Mystery writer Duffy Brown may well own the world's largest Sherlockian teddy bear: her "Sherlock" is seven feet tall and she wrote about him in February in an "At the Scene" blog of Mystery Scene magazine <www.tinyurl.com/rlnskk3>.
19720. Kirk Douglas died on Feb. 5. He began his acting career on Broadway in 1941 and soon moved to films, appearing in more than 80 movies, with a starring role in "Spartacus" (1960). He received the American Film Institute's Lifetime Achievement Award in 1991, and an honorary Oscar in 1996. Like many famous American actors, Douglas appeared in television commercials that were seen only outside the United States; you can see him in Sherlockian costume, advertising Maxim coffee in Japan, at Greg Ruby's "Fourth Garrideb" web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/vbkdsx>.
19721. The Conan Doyle Review, due in the spring of 2021, is described as "an interdisciplinary journal for scholarship on the life, works, creative afterlives, and cultural legacies of Arthur Conan Doyle," and it will be edited by Ashley D. Polasek, Kate Bromley, and Mary M. Alcaro; a Special Is-sue 1, available during the birthday festivities, offered 16 pages devoted to Ken Ludwig and his Sherlockian plays (including his upcoming "Moriarty"), and the Review itself should be interesting indeed.
19722. Sorry about that: Donald Tosh, who died on Dec. 3 (January 20 #8) helped develop the television series "Coronation Street" for Granada; it was, and still is, broadcast by ITV. The series debuted in 1960, and will be celebrating its 60th anniversary this year.
19723. Registration is now open for the seventh "Holmes, Doyle, & Friends" gathering on Mar. 27-28 in Englewood, Ohio; details are available at the web-site of the Agra Treasurers <www.agratreasurers.net>.
19724. Orson Bean died on Feb. 7. He had a long career as a magician, stand-up comedian, and actor, on stage, screen, and television (where he became a fixture on game shows); he played Colonel Sebastian Moran/Sir Charles/Dr. Grimsby Roylott/Professor Moriarty in Susan L. Seder's play "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" in Lancaster, Pa., in 1988.
19725. A letter written by Conan Doyle in 1901 was found under the floorboards in one of the rooms in the Sherlock Art Hotel in Riga, Latvia, according to a story reported by Karen Murdock in the Daily Mail (Feb. 8). The boutique hotel's web-site tells more at <www.sherlock.lv/en/our-legendeng>, but you need not rush to make a reservation: Alexander Orlov queried the hotel and was told that there is no letter, and that the story was just an invention intended to generate publicity.

19727. Reported: Measure of Malice: Scientific Detection Stories, edited by Martin Edwards (Naperville, Poisoned Pen Press, 2018; 336 pp., $14.99) is the latest in the long-running series of "British Library Crime Classics" and it includes "The Boscombe Valley Mystery".
19728. Randall Stock has noted an article in Fine Books & Collections (Feb. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/tb2cubf> about an exhibition at the Old Bodleian Library in Oxford through Mar. 15: "From Studio to Selfie" displays photographs of authors, including one of Conan Doyle disguised as Professor Challenger. The photograph (which was the frontispiece in the 1912 first edition of The Lost World) is in a case displaying "Masks, disguises, and riddles" (in a bound volume of The Strand Magazine), which you can see at <www.tinyurl.com/uakqcrh> (at the right, in the sixth image).

19731. According to Wikipedia, George Ernest "Chinese" Morrison had a thoroughly interesting and colorful life <www.tinyurl.com/r66hxt>; the story of the spearhead is different at Wikipedia, both for its location and the name of the surgeon who removed it. And just to complicate things, Derham reports that Cyril Pearl, in Morrison of Peking (1967) says that "Chiene, assisted by Bell, and with sixteen other surgeons watching," operated on Morrison.
19732. The list of members of the Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films and on television can now be expanded to include music videos: there's now a video that promotes Pokey LaFarge's album "Rock Bottom Rhapsody" (due in April), and you can read all about it, and see the video, in an article in Rolling Stone (Jan. 22) <www.tinyurl.com/uylfoxj>. The video was shot in Randsburg, Calif., home of Jennie C. Paton, who reports that she appears in the video about a dozen times (and dares you to find her).

19733. Further to the report (September 19 #7) about the exhibition "In the Company of Harold Prince" (at the N.Y. Public Library for the Performing Arts through Mar. 31 <www.tinyurl.com/y3dwsfax>, Greg Darak reports that there's an interactive screen that allows you to scroll through the prompt-book and the script of the musical "Baker Street" (which Prince directed). There also are multiple photographs from the show, illustrating almost every page of the script, and a television commercial (possibly the first television commercial for a Broadway musical).
19734. Alexander Orlov notes that the National Library of Scotland offers on-line access to digitized material <www.digital.nls.uk>. A search for [sherlock holmes] or [conan doyle] turns up interesting material, including theater programs and post office directories.
19735. Welcome to the Year of the Giant Rat (or, according to the U.S. Postal Service, the Year of the Rat, which started on Jan. 25 (that's the Chinese Lunar New Year)).
19736. Karen Murdock noted a story in the Washington Examiner (Feb. 6) on the appointment of Dame Karen Pierce as the next British ambassador to Washington. She has been Britain's permanent representative to the United Nations, where she battled head-to-head with Russian ambassador Vasily Nebenzya in an exchange about the nerve-agent attack in Britain. Nebenzya said that Russia should be involved in the investigation, and she replied that "allowing Russian scientists into an investigation when they are the most likely perpetrators of the crime in Salisbury would be like Scotland Yard inviting in Professor Moriarty."
19737. Jennie Paton has noted The Literary Tea Company, which offers a wide range of Sherlockian teas, caddies, and infusers <www.tinyurl.com/rj8kpkn>; they offer merchandise honoring other authors and characters, in case you have non-Sherlockian friends.
19738. Will Thomas' Blood Is Blood (New York: Minotaur, 2018; 320 pp., $27.00) is the tenth in his series featuring private enquiry agent Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewelyn; it has an explosive beginning and a challenging mystery, and the characters, who include Barker's long-lost brother, are nicely done. The author has a web-site at <www.willthomasauthor.com>.
19739. Titan Comics is continuing its series of manga adaptations of the BBC television series "Sherlock" (with artwork by Jay); "A Scandal in Belgravia" is due in July, and you can see the cover and samples of the interior art-work at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/rnrdtwn>.
19740. For the ladies: Howard Ostrom has noted Miss Patina, who offers a Holmes trench coat <www.misspatina.com/product/holmes-trench-coat-tall> and other items in two Sherlock Holmes Inspired Collections; search for [holmes].
19741. The Swedish Film Institute <www.filmarkivet.se> has a nice web-site (click on the British flag for text in English); search for [sherlock holmes] to see an amusing television commercial from 1960, and on [conan doyle] for film of him arriving in Stockholm in 1929.

19742. There's yet another Sherlock Holmes pub, but it's not open to just anyone: according to a report in the East Anglian Daily Times on Feb. 7, spotted by Karen Murdock, the pub's at Glastonbury Court, a care home in Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, that provides quality dementia care for older people; there's a web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/wlmax9g>.
19743. And now for some theatrical news: Ed. Lange's "Sherlock's Secret Life" is due in Southampton, N.Y., on Mar. 6-22 <www.sc-arts.org>.
19744. Emily Pruna's "Hark! How the Bells" will be performed during the Sherlock Holmes Weekends in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 13-15, Oct. 30-Nov. 1, and Nov. 6-8 <www.capemaymac.org/sherlock-holmes-weekend>. The East Lynn Theatre Company will perform Craig Wichman's radio play "Sherlock Holmes' Adventure of the Speckled Band" during each weekend.
19745. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Way Off Broadway Dinner Theatre in Frederick, Md., Mar. 13-April 25 <www.wayoffbroadway.com>.
19746. Tim Kelly's adaptation of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Schwartz Center for the Arts in Dover, Del., Mar. 14-15; tickets at <www.eventbrite.com/e/sherlock-holmes-play-tickets-92036540711>.
19747. Jon Jory's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at Toccoa Falls College in Toccoa Falls, Ga., Mar. 27-29 <www.tinyurl.com/vqnxgvf>.
19748. Noveltease will perform a burlesque of "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes" Mar. 27-28 in the Auditorium at U-Heights in Seattle, Wash., on Mar. 27-28 <www.novelteasetheater.org>.
19749. Brit Ward's new "Sherlock Holmes and the Sinister Trio" will be performed at the Totah Theatre in Farmington, N.M., Apr. 17-26; their Facebook page is at <www.facebook.com/TEAcommunitytheatre>.
19750. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be presented by the Long Island Repertory Company in Saint James, N.Y., Apr. 18-May 3 <www.facebook.com/pg/longislandrep/posts>.
19751. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the East Riding Theatre in Beverley, Yorks., Apr. 23-May 16 <www.eastridingtheatre.co.uk>.
19752. Eric Coble's "Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars" is scheduled at the Cary Arts Center in Cary, N.C., May 15-17 <www.townofcary.org>.
19753. Jules Tasca's "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" is also due at the Heisler Theater in Lake Arrowhead, Calif., May 21-24 <www.heislertheater.com>.
19754. Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the Raven's Curse" is scheduled at People's Light in Malvern, Pa., Aug. 4-29, 2021 <www.peopleslight.org>.

19755. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's web-site is recommended as the best source for helpful and reliable information about COVID-19 and what to do about the current pandemic, and for what we do and don't (yet) know about the novel coronavirus <www.tinyurl.com/sx5yfuv>.

The CDC also tells you why they use the term COVID-19. If you scroll down, at the lower left there's a way to subscribe to e-mail updates. It's not the CDC's advice, but: "keep washing your hands, and family and friends."

19756. Of course, it's nice indeed that reading is a grand way to deal with self-quarantine. Bookshops in the DMV (that's the local abbreviation for DC/MD/VA) are helping <www.tinyurl.com/wd8poss>, and Mental Floss reported on Mar. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/uwccm5d> on one bookshop's imaginative response to the situation. Bill Seil has forwarded an interesting report from Penguin Books about "how Britain's independent bookshops are rallying to help readers during the coronavirus crisis" <www.tinyurl.com/vbvkuig>.
19757. Herewith a reminder that the very best way to receive news about the Baker Irregulars' events and publications is to sign up for free e-mail messages from the BSI at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-news-via-email>. For information about other Sherlockian events, the Sherlockian Calendar maintained by Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie <www.sherlockiancalendar.com> is a valuable resource; you can contact Ron <ronf404@aol.com> if you would like to have meeting or conference listed.
19758. The most recent news from the Baker Street Irregulars is that the "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" conference scheduled at the Bear Mountain Inn near West Point, N.Y., has been rescheduled to June 25-27, 2021; registration is expected to open by early April 2021. There's a revised web-site, with a colorful map <www.tinyurl.com/udu3vjx>.
19759. There are some Sherlockian events scheduled a few months ahead that have not been cancelled or postponed, one of them the Book Fair and Open House at Denny Dobry's home in Reading, Pa., on May 17 (February 20 #1). Additional information is available from Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>.
19761. Dean Clark has reported an interesting article on "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Adventure of the Boer War" posted on-line at History Today on Feb. 12 <www.tinyurl.com/vw8o22b> and notable for an attractive illustration by H. M. Paget; Henry Marriott Paget was Sidney Paget's brother.

19763. "Meet Maggie Schpak" is the title of an informative and interesting post to Greg Ruby's "The Fourth Garrideb" blog <www.tinyurl.com/ty56jfi>; Maggie is investitured in the Baker Street Irregulars is "The Soup Plate Medal" and has had a long career as a designer of medals and other artifacts for films and television, and for Sherlockian societies (and the Dr. John H. Watson Fund's raffle during the birthday festivities in New York each January).
19764. Will Thomas' Lethal Pursuit (New York: Minotaur, 2019; 308 pp., $27.99) is the eleventh in his series starring private enquiry agent Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant (now partner) Thomas Llewelyn, who also now is married but still hard at work; there is an intriguing mystery that involves secret societies as well as domestic and foreign intrigue, and as in earlier books in the series, the characters, both principal and supporting are interesting. The author has a web-site at <www.willthomasauthor.com>.
19765. German illustrator Romy Blümel's artwork was used by The New Yorker last November for a flash sale of subscriptions to the magazine, promising a free tote bag to new subscribers. Alas, the Sherlockian dachshund was used only in the advertisement, and did not appear on the free tote bag.
19766. James Lipton died on Mar. 1. After a long career in show business, he was invited to join the board of directors of the Actos Studio workshop, and in 1994 created the "Inside the Actors Studio" television series for Bravo. He also wrote An Exaltation of Larks (1968), an exploration of "the venereal game" (which is not quite what you may be imagining at the moment); it's a delightful exploration of collective nouns, and he quotes at length from Conan Doyle's Sir Nigel in which young Nigel demonstrates his knowledge of such things as a cete of badgers and a skulk of foxes. The book has been revised and expanded, most recently in 1991, to include new coinages, and it's great fun indeed.

19768. Dean Clark notes that the only copy of the unpublished memoirs of Nigel Bruce is held by his daughter Pauline Page, who was interviewed some years ago by Nicholas Utechin, who published extracts in the winter 1999 issue of the Sherlock Holmes Journal. For those who don't have access to that issue of the SHJ, Dean reports that Stuart Fanning has posted (with permission) some of the extracts at the Scarlet Street Forums on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/sy8cvmq>.
19769. There are at least a few people who claim to read the N.Y. Times primarily because its obituaries are so interesting and well-written; if you'd like to see just how much fun the obituaries can be, here's what Neil Genzlinger had to say about the late Peregrine Pollen <www.tinyurl.com/r2aszlk>.
19770. "May God blast anyone who writes a biography of me," J. M. Barrie wrote, according to Piers Dudgeon, whose Neverland: J. M. Barrie, the Du Mauriers, and the Dark Side of Peter Pan (2009) is a dark and grim examination of the lives of the author and his friends, and he quotes D. H. Lawrence, who wrote in a letter that "Barrie has a fatal touch for those he loves. They die." Conan Doyle is mentioned briefly, and the book still is available in a reprint edition.
19771. Potter & Potter Auctions in Chicago will be offering "fine books and manuscripts" on Apr. 18 <www.tinyurl.com/yx4y7j9l>, with interesting Sherlockian and Doylean material; search for both [sherlock] and [doyle]. It appears to be someone's collection (some of the books are inscribed to John Nieminski and Nathan L. Bengis).
19772. There was a nice (and nicely illustrated) article in France Today (Mar. 10) <www.tinyurl.com/u93pr7p> about French criminologist Alphonse Bertillon, whom Sherlock Holmes admired: "he expressed his enthusiastic admiration of the French savant," Watson said (in "The Naval Treaty").
19773. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Who Owns 221b Baker Street" headlined a story in The Telegraph (Mar. 14) that led with a misleading photograph of the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street; the photograph was misleading because the story is about the block of property at 215-237 Baker Street, which includes the site of the former Abbey National, where mail addressed to Sherlock Holmes was for many years answered by Holmes' secretary. The block of offices and flats at 215-237 is owned by "a string of anonymous holding companies" tied to Kazakh oligarch Nurali Aliviyev, and the government's National Crime Agency is investigating property in London that might have been bought with the proceeds of organized crime.

19774. It's interesting to see that it's not only The Telegraph that is confused about where Sherlock Holmes lived: if you ask Google Maps to show you 221b Baker Street, you're shown an image and the location of the Museum.
19775. Deadly Anniversaries, edited by Marcia Muller and Bill Pronzini (New York: Hanover Square, 2020; 396 pp., $26.99) celebrates the 75th anniversary of the Mystery Writers of America; it's an anthology of new stories by members of MWA, each involving some sort of anniversary, including Laurie R. King's "Ten Years On" (a nice addition to her Mary Russell stories).

19776. "Elementary, my dear Watson." One often hears or reads that Sherlock Holmes never said that iconic sentence, but of course it would be better to say that he never said that in the Canon (if one is going to play the Grand Game properly). The earliest recorded instance of Holmes actually saying that is in the film "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929), which isn't all that surprising since it's the first film in which Holmes actually speaks. There has been quite a bit of research into other people saying that, or something like that, and you can read all about it at the Quote Investigator web-site <www.tinyurl.com/tkm6pqu>.
19777. One hears of Sherlock everywhere: "While other detectives need their Mind Palaces to solve their crimes, the infamous 'Sherlock Homi' needs only a cup of tea and two eggs every morning! Come catch him in action with his partner, Dr. Jamshed Wadia in this funny yet adventurous play" at the Tata Theatre in Mumbai on Mar. 21.
19778. Cearnth Fox's Sherlock Holmes: Playing the Game (Melbourne: Fox's Plays, 2020; 184 pp., $12.99) is a delightfully imaginative pastiche: Holmes is preparing to retire to Sussex, and is informed by Mrs. Hudson that she has written her memoirs, in which she corrects the many mistakes he has made, and the many errors in Watson's stories; hoping to find a publisher, she takes her manuscript to Conan Doyle, who sends her to Greenhough Smith at the Strand magazine, and it is grand see two alternate universes collide. It's readily available at Amazon, and recommended.
19779. Fox also has written two two-act plays "The Real Sherlock Holmes" (2005) and "Nursing Holmes" (2009), and a two-act musical comedy "Sherlock, Stock and Barrel" (2007); you can read preview scripts of all three plays at his web-site <www.foxplays.com>. His own web-site's at <www.cenfoxbooks.com>.
19781. Roy Hudd died on Mar. 15. He launched his career as a comedian on stage in 1957 and went on to perform in pantomimes and music hall, and on radio and television, and was awarded an OBE in 2004. He played Sherlock Holmes in 1999 in the BBC Radio 2 series "The Newly Discovered Casebook of Sherlock Holmes", John Gedgrave in Granada's "The Dying Detective" (1994) and James Phillimore in "The Singular Inheritance of Miss Gloria Wilson on BBC Radio 4 (2002).
19782. Leonard Goldberg's The Art of Deception (New York: Minotaur Books, 2020; 320 pp., $26.99), is the fourth in his series that stars Sherlock Holmes' daughter Joanna Blalock, who learned much from her father and is working with Dr. John H. Watson and his son Dr. John H. Watson Jr. to capture an apparent madman who is defacing valuable paintings in galleries and private collections in London in 1916. It turns out that there's method to the vandal's madness, and more than one mystery for the team to resolve; the author's web-site is at <www.leonardgoldberg.com>.

19783. The Belfast Custom House is for sale, according to an article in the Belfast Telegraph on Mar. 9, kindly forwarded by Oscar Ross, who reports that the building is one of two candidates for the location of the post office in Belfast where James Browner mailed his gruesome packet (in "The Cardboard Box"); the Queen's Square post office was housed in the west wing of the building at the time the case occurred. You can see images of the Custom House on-line <www.tinyurl.com/vlww6hi>; the estate agents say POA [price on application], which may or may not mean "if you have to ask, you can't afford it."
19784. Here a plaque, there a plaque . . . Roger Johnson found the Open Plaques web-site <www.openplaques.org>, with information about 47,627 commemorative plaques that have been installed world-wide; the listing's not complete, but a search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] reveals a nice assortment, hither, thither, and yon.
19785. Catherine Cooke has received notice that the "Conan Doyle in Edinburgh" conference at Napier University on June 25-27 (December 19 #2) has been post-poned, and that dates for a rescheduled conference later in the year will be posted as soon as possible at <www.edinburgh-conan-doyle.org/events>.
19786. The Old Court Radio Theatre Company collaborated with the Sherlock Holmes Society of London to make splendid recordings of ten stories from the Canon, two Apocryphal tales, the Gillette play, and two pastiches, and they are available on-line so that you can listen to them free at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/category/podcasts>.
19787. Sam Siciliano's new The Venerable Tiger (New York: Titan, 2020; 317 pp., $14.95) is the latest in his series of accounts of the adventures of Sherlock Holmes and his cousin Dr. Henry Vernier; the story inspired by "The Speckled Band" (but with some interesting twists and turns). Siciliano's web-site is at <www.samsiciliano.net>.
19788. Samantha Wolov notes that Holmes and Watson are featured prominently (and unexpectedly), along with Wilkie Collins, Hunter S. Thompson, Dorothy Parker, Collette, Ernest Hemingway, and Samuel Taylor Coleridge, in Paul Bassett Davies' Dead Writers in Rehab (2017).
19789. Walter Satterthwait died on Feb. 23. He was a prolific writer of mystery novels and short stories, and his novel Escapade (1995) was a locked-room murder mystery set in an English country house in 1921 and with Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on hand.

19792. Book collectors soon (or eventually) discover how interesting provenance can be; it's the history of a copy of a book, from owner to owner, and of course there's much more to it than merely saying "from the collection of ...," as shown in Ray Betzner's post to his "Studies in Starrett blog" <www.vincentstarrett.com/blog/2020/2/1>.
19793. Type Punch Matrix, the rare book firm founded by Rebecca Romney and Brian Cassidy has issued a new catalog <www.tinyurl.com/ubnjtug>; there's nothing directly Sherlockian, but a copy of Sugiyama Toujiro's A Japanese Argument for Women's Suffrage (1887) is accompanied by an intriguing illustration that shows Japanese women dressed in contemporary Victorian fashion copied from British books and magazines (the Meiji Restoration began in 1868). Open the catalog in Adobe (there's a link at the right) and go to page 58 to see how up-to-date some Japanese women were in the year that "A Study in Scarlet" was published in Beeton's Christmas Annual.
19795. This isn't the best time to travel, but in the meantime the Hotel Sherlock Holmes in Meiringen has a nice video advertisement that you can watch at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=rk70dqfludg>.
19796. "There's a Place Where Lost Things Go" was a recent episode on "Legacies" (a series streamed on the CW) that aired on Mar. 12, and included a dream sequence that had Alexis Denisof (Professor Vardemus) as Sherlock Holmes and Quincy Fouse (Milton Greasley) as Dr. Watson). As with many series on the CW, it can be difficult to understand just what's going on unless you've watched earlier episodes (or have a cheat sheet), but you may be able to see an excerpt from the dream sequence at <www.tinyurl.com/sjntg56>.
19797. Kabukichō Syarokku [Kabukicho Sherlock] is an imaginative 30-minute Japanese animated series that's available on Amazon Prime; it's set in Tokyo's most famous red-light district, and features Katsuyuki Konishi (Sherlock Holmes) and Kuichi Nakamura (John Watson), and there's an entry at Wikipedia that gives you a good idea of what's going on.
19798. The Golden Raspberry Awards (for failure in cinematic achievement), also known as the Razzies, have been announced, and this year "Cats" won in six categories: worst picture, worst supporting actor James Corben, best actress (Rebel Wilson), worst director, worst screenplay, and worst screen combo (for "any two half-feline/ half-human hairballs"). Idris Elba, who played Macavity: The Mystery Cat) was not nominated in any category. Details at <www.razzies.com/razz-newz.html>.

19799. Ernest Dudley, Eille Norwood's son-in-law, was interviewed by David Stuart Davies at the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's film evening in 1998, and it's available, Jennie Paton notes, at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=xIH-g4UL5mo>. Norwood played Sherlock Holmes in 45 films in the early 1920s, and then in the play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1923), which was revised by Dudley and performed in 1953.
19800. Jennie also has discovered "Movie Magic & Mysteries: The Making of Sherlock Jr." <www.youtube.com/watch?v=0YR81Zp07AI>, a 23-minute documentary (produced by the Kino International Corp. in 2010) about how Buster Keaton made his now-classic 1924 silent film.
19801. Nils Claussøn, author of Arthur Conan Doyle's Art of Fiction (October 18 #3), reports that he has been commissioned by Cambridge Scholars Publishing to edit an anthology of essays on Conan Doyle's life and complete works (not just the Sherlock Holmes stories). The formal call for contributions is available on request <nils.claussøn@uregina.ca>; please put "Reexamining ACD" in the subject line.
19802. Reported: The Big Book of Reel Murders: Stories That Inspired Great Crime Films, edited by Otto Penzler (Viking, 2019), includes two tales from the Canon ("The Five Orange Pips" and "The Six Napoleons").
19803. L.A. Theatre Works has launched an imaginative program to assist students who are working on-line: "Setting the Stage for Learning" is a package of audio recordings of plays that allows teachers to enhance distance learning <www.latw.org/setting-stage-learning>; one of the plays is "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (dramatized by David Pichette and R. Hamilton Wright and performed by LATW in 2014). Their commercial CD set for the play included a live audience talk-back with Leslie S. Klinger, and it's available for purchase at <www.latw.org/title/hound-baskervilles> if you're not an educator.
19804. Adam Hochschild's King Leopold's Ghost: A Story of Greed, Terror, and Heroism in Colonial Africa, first published in 1998, now has a second edition (New York: Mariner, 2020; 380 pp., $16.99), and it's a grand book indeed; the sub-title is thoroughly appropriate. Conan Doyle joined the campaign against Leopold, writing The Crime of the Congo (1909) and many letters to the press, but E. D. Morel and Roger Casement are the real heroes in the battle to end Leopold's infamous conduct in West Africa.
19805. Steve Mason reports that the Beacon Society has established an Annual Re-Certification Exam for the Fortescue Scholarship Honours Program, by way of encouraging "increased familiarity with the Canon and the Sherlockian world." The questions are not overly difficult, he promises, and there is no charge to participate. Details at <www.tinyurl.com/rmo52dy>.
19806. The Strand Bookstore in New York, which boasts 18 miles of bookshelves, is opening a second store, on the Upper West Side, on Columbus Avenue between 81st and 82nd Streets, near the American Museum of Natural History; there is no word yet on how many more miles of bookshelves there will be at the new location <www.tinyurl.com/srlo88q>.

19807. There's an attractive edition of A Study in Scarlet (New York: Balzer + Bray, 2014; 277 pp, $17.99) with many illustrations (in color and in black and white) by Gris Grimly, who has been described as a "modern master of gothic romanticism," and is just that; he has illustrated many other books, including Frankenstein and Neil Gaiman's The Dangerous Alphabet, and he has a web-site at <www.madcreator.com>.
19808. Radio Times has reported <www.tinyurl.com/tk5fn6s> that Audible has kindly made hundreds of its titles available for streaming without charge during the coronavirus crisis; one of them being "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" read by Simon Prebble.
19809. James Macaluso Jr., who has illustrated more than a dozen of the Sherlock Holmes stories using Lego minifigures and bricks, also has created a similar A Sherlock Holmes Alphabet (London: MX Publishing, 2018; 68 pp., $12.95); it's in full color, dedicated to Edward Gorey and typeset in Zombified, and imaginatively Sherlockian. MX Publishing's books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
19810. The Nitrate Film Interest Group has an interesting web-site for those who want to help identify bits and pieces of films <www.tinyurl.com/vjmw3zy>; there (alas) many films that survive today only as fragments.

19811. You don't happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?" asked Sherlock Holmes (in "The Three Gables"). There are only five complete copies of the First Folio in private hands, according to Christie's, and here's your chance to own the sixth, which will be at auction at Christie's in New York on Apr. 24, estimated at $4 million to $6 million. Read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/rwt2lla>.
19812. Theatrics: the CDC having advised against large gatherings, it is likely that there won't be any theatrical performances in the near future; I've not heard that any of the following have been postponed or canceled, but it would be wise, to be sure, to check with theaters.
19813. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Historic Casino Hall in La Grange, Tex., May 1-3; Facebook page at <www.facebook.com/Fayettecountrycommunitytheatre>.
19814. Craig Sodaro's "Young Sherlock" will be performed at Playhouse 38 in Geneva, Ill., May 22-31 <www.tinyurl.com/qwjsv2k>. And his "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" is due at the PIX Theatre in Lapeer, Mich., May 22-23 <www.centerfortheartslapeer.org>.
19815. Sad news for my print subscribers: printing costs have risen again, so the new prices per year are $19.50 (U.S.) and $26.50 (foreign); as always, you can read the newsletter on-line at <www.redcircledc.org/index.php?id=39>, in full color and with live links, and at no cost whatsoever, and my feelings won't be hurt if you decide not to renew your print subscriptions.

19816. "The Man from Beyond" (1922) is a silent film based on a story written by Harry Houdini, who plays Howard Hillary, a man who is frozen in Arctic ice in 1820 and is thawed and brought back to life a century later; at the end of the film Hillary gives the woman he loves (and believes to be the reincarnation of his lost sweetheart from a century earlier) a copy of Conan Doyle's The New Revelation. Conan Doyle praised the film in a letter that was published in a press book <www.tinyurl.com/r74bysg>, and you can see the film at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=WYnbe_2lZ8Q>.
19817. If you can't attend a performance, you can always read the script: Jeffry Hatcher's Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders (based on the novel by Larry Millett) is available from the Dramatists Play Service ($10.00) <www.dramatists.com>. And Jon Jory's Holmes and Watson: The Game's Afoot has just been published by Playscripts ($9.99) <www.playscripts.com>; it's a collection of one-act dramatizations of four cases nicely suitable for school productions. Both companies also offer other Sherlockian plays.
19818. "Reichenbach Falls" (broadcast by BBC-4 in 2007) was adapted by John Mayor from Ian Rankin's 1996 "John Rebus" short story "The Acid Test"; Richard Wilson appears as Arthur Conan Doyle; Jennie Paton discovered the program on-line at <www.vimeo.com/400916730>.
19819. The winter 2019 issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal is at hand, and nicely done as always; if you aren't a subscriber, their summary of the issue will show you what you're missing <www.tinyurl.cm/sbpqwu3>.
19820. Laurie R. King's Riviera Gold (New York: Bantam, 2020; 368 pp, $28.00) is a sequel to her Island of the Mad (April 18 #2); now Mary Russell (and eventually her husband Sherlock Holmes) are in Monte Carlo in Jazz Age 1925, once more involved with Mrs. Hudson, whose early life is revealed to have been even more provocative than we learned in The Murder of Mary Russell (March 16 #1). It's all great fun, with some imaginative twists and turns in this 16th novel in the Mary Russell series. Laurie has an interesting web-site, well worth exploring, at <www.laurierking.com>.
19821. You can still go to the theatre while you're staying home: the National Theatre has begun streaming past productions on its YouTube channel, and they have done some magnificent shows <www.tinyurl.com/ufxrhpc>. You may eventually get to see Benedict Cumberbatch in their "Hamlet".
19822. "Kate Middleton Shows Off Her Incredible Book Collection in Rare Picture Taken Inside Her Kensington Palace Home" was the headline on an article in Hello! (Mar. 29) <www.tinyurl.com/tn6sngv>, spotted by Sonia Fetherston. That's Princess Kate, of course, and the "incredible book collection" actually consists of copies of Penguin's Clothbound Classics (£11.00 each), with attractive covers designed by Coralie Bickford-Smith. According to the article, she has The Hound of the Baskervilles (2010, with an introduction and notes by Christopher Frayling); the series has 69 titles so far, including The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (2018, with an introduction by Iain Pears and notes by Ed Glinert).

19823. Classic Penguin: Cover to Cover, edited by Paul Buckley (New York: Penguin, 2016; 288 pp., $30.00) is a colorful tribute to the cover designs on many of the classics Penguin has published over the years, including the spectacular artwork created by Adam Simpson for the wrap-around cover of Sherlock Holmes: The Novels (2015); there's commentary by Simpson, and by Michael Dirda, who wrote the introduction for the book.
19824. There's still a nice market for rare film posters such as one owned by the late Paul D. Herbert, offered at Heritage Auctions on Mar. 21 (January 20 #1): Paul's one-sheet poster for Clive Brook's "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929) sold for $17,400 <www.tinyurl.com/toqg9qs>.
19825. Greg Wagland has recorded many of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian stories, and made them available at YouTube; you can listen to him reading "The Brazilian Cat" at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=YOTtm2Lksm0>, and there are links to other stories.
19826. Neil Peter Jampolis died on Dec.15. He had a long career as a lighting, scenic, and costume designer for the stage, and was a professor emeritus at the UCLA School of Theater, Film, and Television; he won both a Drama Desk Award and the Tony for his lighting design for the American tour of the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes".
19827. The Royal Mail has honored the 250th anniversary of the birth of William Wordsworth with a set of stamps showing extracts from works by ten Romantic poets. One wonders whether Sherlock Holmes (before he pursued the case of the missing naval treaty) had read William Blake's "Auguries of Innocence".
19828. Michael W. McClure has edited and annotated The Speckled Band for first-time readers (Chester: Baskerville Productions, 2018; 72 pp., $9.99) with illustrations by Tijana Tumbas; it's a nice introduction for young people to the story that Conan Doyle, in 1927, said was his favorite. The publisher's web-site's at <www.baskervilleproductions.com>.
19829. "Word on the Street" is a 30-minute series, produced by BBC Persian TV and the British Council, with Ashlie Walker, Stephen Walker, and Rob Lewis as presenters; "Murder Mystery" (2014) included a Sherlockian segment, with Wendy Hurrell interviewing Roger Johnson at the Sherlock Holmes Pub, and you can view it at <www.tinyurl.com/rqu6yrm>.
19830. Fans of the late Jim French's "Imagination Theater" will welcome the news that it has been revived by Larry Albert and John Patrick Lowrie (who performed in many of their Sherlock Holmes broadcasts), and their web-site at <www.harrynile.com> offers a long list of their Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) broadcasts, as well as a blog and other features such as links to the radio stations that are carrying their shows; they began recording new Sherlock Holmes programs (from scripts by M. J. Elliott) in 2019 (included at the end of their list of "further adventures"), and some of their older broadcasts are available at their YouTube channel.

19831. Crippen & Landru has told its customers that "Amazon has not replenished orders of our books. They've halted all warehouse replenishments of 'non-essential' items," adding that books were on that list (ironically, since Amazon started with books). Crippen & Landru has published, and still

- offers at <www.crippenlandru.com>, excellent books, among them Douglas G. Greene's impressive biography John Dickson Carr: The Man Who Explained Miracles, and gladly fills orders directly. You can read more about this in an article at Vox <www.tinyurl.com/tu7r9k4>.
19832. Scale75 is a Spanish company that makes attractive 75mm figurines, and one of their offers is a two-piece set of Holmes and Watson, priced at £123.96 <www.tinyurl.com/yx2w4ytp> (Holmes and Watson also are available separately); their U.S. web-site is at <www.tinyurl.com/w2prjlw>.
19833. Christie's auction on Apr. 24 has been postponed to June 12, in case you are considering bidding on that first folio Shakespeare (March 20 #8); you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/rwt2lla>.
19834. Andrew Jack died on Mar. 31. Best known as a dialect coach, he also was an actor; his lengthy list of credits as dialect coach include "Sherlock Holmes" (2009) and "Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows" (2011), and you can see him working with Robert Downey Jr. at <www.tinyurl.com/vac565p>.
19835. "Cannabis-curious consumers in Canada who want to try marijuana drinks can now buy them at a dispensary or have them delivered to your door," according to the Green Entrepreneur (Apr. 2) <www.tinyurl.com/srq3ysd>. Tweed's "Bakerstreet and Ginger" is of them, named in honor of the street in which Sherlock Holmes lived, and another is "Houndstooth and Soda"; the active ingredient is THC, and Bakerstreet and Houndstooth are the names of two of their strains of cannabis.
19836. Christie's has a story on-line about "10 old masters that changed the art market" <www.tinyurl.com/spk8oh4>; one of them is Gainborough's portrait of Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, shown in full color, with discussion of the "Napoleon of Crime" (Adam Worth).
19837. Jennie Paton discovered Paul Tume's article on "The Screwball Comics of Gus Mager: Hippos, Monks, and Sherlock Holmes" on-line at the Comics Journal <www.tinurl.com/zfv555k>; it's a nicely illustrated exploration of one of the earliest (and long-running) appearances of Sherlock Holmes in the comics.
19838. Some Sherlockian societies have been using Zoom to hold virtual meetings. The Washington Post ran a story on Apr. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/rw27gyb> about potential problems for those using Zoom; the story includes a link to "how to protect your Zoom calls"

19840. And now for something completely different: "What's the least understood institution in Washington?" was the question put to Washington journalist Bob Woodward. His response was, "Congress. No institution has changed so much in the 30 years I've been reporting. Partisan warfare there is now like World War I, with everyone in their trenches. It is now an institution at risk." That's from the July 2004 issue of Washingtonian magazine, more than 15 years ago.
19841. "A certain gracious lady" (the great-great-grand-daughter of the one that's mentioned in the Canon) gave a rare televised speech to the nation on Apr. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/un49uka>, and the image that ran with many of the articles showed her in a green dress that made her a sitting Chroma-Key that was irresistible to many Photoshoppers, one of whom created an image that Alan Rettig found in an abandoned tin dispatch-box.
19842. Honor Blackman died on Apr. 5. She was best known for playing Pussy Galore in the James Bond film "Goldfinger" (1964), but also appeared as Dr. Cathy Gale in the early days of the British television series "The Avengers"; the series eventually aired in the U.S. in 1991. You can see her briefly at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cN1aSA2Qoxs>. The Sherlockian connection is rather minor, but in the episode "Don't Look Behind You" someone says to her, "That's Hound of the Baskervilles country." If you're a fan of the series, you'll enjoy exploring <www.theavengers.tv>.
19843. Robert Downey Jr. celebrated his 55th birthday on Apr. 4, tweeting a Sherlockian video message to his fans <www.tinyurl.com/va72oh3>.

19847. Nick Utechin would like to hear from anyone who owns a copy of S. C. Roberts' eight-page pamphlet A Note on the Watson Problem (1929), published in an edition limited to 100 copies for his friends (it was an off-print of his review of Ronald Knox's Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes). Nick wants to create a detailed census of surviving copies; you can contact him at <highfieldfarmhouse@gmail.com>.
19848. "The Bloggess writes stuff that actually is laugh-out-loud, but you know that really you shouldn't be laughing and probably you'll go to hell for laughing, so maybe you shouldn't read it. That would be safer and wiser." That's what Neil Gaiman had to say in his back-over blurb for Jenny Lawson's Let's Pretend This Never Happened (2012), and he's absolutely correct; highly recommended if you want to read something that's not at all Sherlockian, and Lawson's web-site <www.thebloggess.com> will let you see what you're in for if you read the book.
19849. The Open House and BSI Trust Book Fair scheduled for May 17 at Denny Dobry's home in Reading, Pa., has been postponed; if you'd like to be on the mailing list for an announcement of a new date, you can contact Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>.
19850. Ira Wolff ("Douglas Maberley") died on Apr. 4. He worked in sales and direct marketing, and was an energetic collector in two areas: 19th and early 20th century photography, and mystery and detective fiction (including the first page of the manuscript of "The Sign of the Four" (he donated the latter collection to the University of California in San Diego in 1977). He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1970.
19851. The "Scintillation of Scions" scheduled by Watson's Tin Box on June 12-14 at the Sheraton Baltimore-Washington Airport has, like so many Sherlockian events, been cancelled, but Karen Wilson and Greg Ruby have announced the substitute "Scintillation of Scions at Home" via the Internet on June 13. Many if not most of the presenters are expected to participate, and free registration will open on May 18 at www.scintillation.org.

19852. "Even Sherlock Holmes Author Takes No Chances with Coronavirus" was the headline on a story in the Times of Tunbridge Wells on Apr. 17 that included an image of the statue of Conan Doyle in Crowborough.
19853. "A Study in Scarlet" is seldom seen on stage, but Bart Lovins dramatized the story for a production in Elizabethtown, Ky., in Jan. 2019, it was done with imagination, on a revolving stage, with very few props, and it was impressive. His dramatization of "The Sign of Four" was performed in Jan. 2020, and there are links to videos of both shows at www.bartlovins.com/writing. The script for his "A Study in Scarlet" is available from Barnes and Noble ($14.99).
19854. Paul Thomas Miller's "Doyle's Rotary Coffin" (March 19 #4), a society whose motto is "All Holmes Is Good Holmes," has published No Holmes Barred (its first "scrapbook of Holmesiana"), which is available as a free download at the society's web-site at www.sites.google.com/site/doylesrotarycoffin.

19855. There's nothing Sherlockian about Dark Sky's weather reports, but it's spectacular: you can set it for your location and be told things such as "possible light rain starting in 6 min., stopping 14 min. later," which is far more specific than anything else available, and you can easily look out the window to see just how accurate it is. It's on-line at www.darksky.net, and available at Apple's app store ($3.99).
19856. Mort Drucker died on Apr. 9. He was one of the stars in the "usual gang of idiots" who made Mad magazine one of the most successful magazines of the 1970s. He worked for DC comics in the 1940s and went on to a 55-year career at Mad. Stabur Graphics advertised his signed caricature of Sherlock Holmes in the March 1984 issue of The Baker Street Journal.
19857. "Sherlock Holmes in Russia" is a new Russian television mini-series, with Maxim Matveev as Holmes in St. Petersburg, following the trail of Jack the Ripper (who has fled to Russia). Alexander Orlov has reported a trailer for the series, on-line at www.start.ru/watch/sherlock-v-rossii. And if that link doesn't work, try www.kinopoisk.ru/film/1272376/video/166497. START is a subscription streaming service, available world-wide; it costs $7.99 a month in the U.S.
19858. Porter Press International is offering their remaining copies of Douglas Wilmer's splendid autobiography Stage Whispers (April 09 #3) at £14.95, with 75% going to the World Health Organization's COVID-19 Solidarity Response Fund www.tinyurl.com/yat99q28.
19859. Matt Lubbers-Moore's Murder and Mayhem: An Annotated Bibliography of Gay and Queer Males in Mystery, 1909-2018 (Los Angeles: ReQueered Tales, 2020; 923 pp., $39.95) is a detailed survey of the genre; the 3,061 entries include main-stream pastiches such as Gyles Brandreth's series about Oscar Wilde as a detective and Russell A. Brown's Sherlock Holmes and the Mysterious Friend of Oscar Wilde, Larry Townsend's The Sexual Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Michael Hardwick's novelization of the film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes", many modern niche pastiches, and Conan Doyle's Round the Fire Stories, which contained the short story "The Man with the Watches" (Lubbers-Moore discusses the story in some detail, and presents the text so that readers can judge the homosexual content for themselves).
19860. Roger Johnson notes in the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's newsletter The District Messenger that the street artist Banksy has posted Instagram images of his latest artwork, showing (according to Roger) "clearly distant relatives of the Giant Rat of Sumatra" www.tinyurl.com/y9wh4a8d.
19861. The saga of the Lyndhurst Park Hotel continues. The New Milton Advertiser and Lymington Times reported on Jan. 10 that a section of the derelict hotel had begun to collapse www.tinyurl.com/ybsb8ja6, and on Feb. 26 that a new developer had pledged to revive the "original architectural glory" of the hotel as part of a plan to convert the property into 85 homes and five shops. A Hoburne Development representative explained that the project would bring back the entrance and battlement-style terraces designed by Conan Doyle in 1912 www.tinyurl.com/y9phrgp6.

19863. Kenneth C. Lanza ("His Last Bow") died on Apr. 13. He was an enthusiastic admirer of Frank Sinatra, old-time radio, and of course Sherlock Holmes; he was a co-founder of Altamont's Agents of Schenectady, and was awarded his Investiture in the Baker Street Irregulars in 1997.
19864. The Baker Street Almanac 2020, modestly described by editor Ross E. Davies as "an annual capsule of a timeless past and future," previously published on-line (March 20 #1), now is available in a print edition ($30.00 postpaid) with (as promised by Ross) some amusing extras. It is also imaginatively packaged, as you can see at www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/2020.html.
19865. Jason Lethcoe's No Place Like Holmes: The Future Door (Nashville: Thomas Nelson, 2011; 209 pp., $9.99) is the second book about Griffin Sharpe, a young American living in London with his uncle Rupert Snodgrass, who lives at 221A Baker Street; it's juvenile fiction, and nicely done, with adventures, time travel, and plenty of villains (including two Moriarty's).
19867. Keiji Fujiwara died on Apr. 12. He began his career as a voice actor in Japanese film and television in 1968; his many credits include dubbing for Robert Downey Jr. in "Sherlock Holmes" (2009) and "Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows" (2011).
19868. Here's your chance to see a member of the Baker Street Irregulars in action: Helen Dorey ("Helen Stoner") is deputy director and inspectress at Sir John Soane's Museum in London, and "Opening Up the Soane" is a three-episode report on their long-term restoration project; you can watch the series on-line at their web-site www.soane.org or at YouTube.
19869. In 1982 the television series "Fantasy Island" included a segment titled "Save Sherlock Holmes" in which Ron Ely played a department store detective in a fantasy that had him rescuing Sherlock Holmes from Prof. Moriarty. The cast included Peter Lawford as Sherlock Holmes, Donald O'Connor as Dr. Watson, Mel Ferrer as Moriarty, and Rita Jenrette (whose activities in Washington inspired the name of the group of political-satire performers "The Capitol Steps") as Nurse Heavenly. Howard Ostrom has found the segment on-line at www.youtube.com/watch?v=h2RyY6F8oQQ.

19871. "Britain's Ancient Tracks with Tony Robinson" is a British television series broadcast on Channel 4; their episode "Dartmoor" (2017) explored the story of the Hound of the Baskervilles, and Jennie Paton found it on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=FgQETaP7U7g>.
19872. You'll soon be able to see Benedict Cumberbatch and Jonny Lee Miller play the same character (not Sherlock Holmes), thanks to the National Theatre, which is making recordings of past productions available on-line at YouTube each week, and you'll be able to see their "Frankenstein" the first week in May <www.tinyurl.com/yblepqbh>; it's a spectacular show, thanks to Danny Boyle (who also produced the recent Summer Olympics in London).
19873. Theatrics (some theaters are planning to be open this summer, and others are planning ahead): Tal Aviezer's "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle" is scheduled at the Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum in Pelham Bay Park, N.Y., June 6-14 <www.bartowpellmansionmuseum.org>.
19877. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes Returns" is due at the Lifeline Theatre in Chicago, Ill., Sept. 11-Nov. 1 <www.lifelinetheater.org>.
19878. Brian Guehring's "Sherlock Holmes and the First Baker Street Irregular" is scheduled by the Children's Theatre of Charleston in Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 1-4 <www.ctoc.org>.
19879. Robert Brock's marionette production "The Death & Life of Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the Lancaster Marionette Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 31-Nov. 14 <www.lancastermarionette.org>.

19880. The 6sqft blog reported on April 24 <www.tinyurl.com/ycah5tum> on an interesting two-bedroom condominium at 106 Waverly Place near Washington Square in New York City, with 1,520 square feet, advertised at $3 million. One of its features is a library with teak built-in shelves and a secret closet that you can access by pulling on a copy of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.
19881. The Figure of the Detective: A Literary History and Analysis, by Charles Brownson (Jefferson: McFarland, 2014; 210 pp., $29.95) is an interesting academic discussion of the genre. Brownson's introduction to the detective story was reading, aged seven or eight, Walter R. Brooks' Freddy the Detective, and his book progresses from the preclassical detective to the metaphysical modern; there's a chapter about Sherlock Holmes, of course, with a section on "portrayals of Holmes as an index of social change" in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and other stories in films and television.
19882. "Mad Movies with the L.A. Connection" was a 30-minute series that was produced in 1985; Jennie Paton discovered their version of "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=BOV3fZLEs_0>.
19883. "Start the day at Speedy's Café, beneath the lodgings of Holmes and Watson," was the suggestion of the Londonist (Feb. 17). It's located at 187 North Gower Street, and has a Sherlockian menu; the article has some nice images <www.tinyurl.com/y79doj9c>, and one assumes that Speedy's will be open again eventually.
19884. Hans Meyer died on Apr. 3. He began his acting career in films in France in the 1960s, and went on to perform in television in the 1970s; he played Heberich/Veitch in Granada's "The Master Blackmailer" (1992).
19885. One hears of (well, sees) Sherlock everywhere: Mike Berdan has noted the Rolling Stones' "One World: Together at Home" split-screen video concert <www.youtube.com/watch?v=N7pZgQepXfA>; they performed "You Can't Always Get What You Want" from their homes on Apr. 18, and Keith Richards has on the table in front of him an indigo leather-bound copy of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. It's the Easton Press edition, published in 1981 in black leather, and later in indigo leather.
19886. When in New South Wales: the South China Morning Post ran a nicely illustrated story on Feb. 25 about the Hydro Majestic Blue Mountains Hotel, now "home to heritage luxury," noting that Conan Doyle stayed there during his visit to Australia in 1920.
19887. Those who attended the Sherlockian conference in Minneapolis last August may recall Steve Mason's challenge to identify the Canonical cases represented by an assortment of his imaginative Canonical needlepoint mats. He offered a similar challenge to members of the Beacon Society last month, with a deadline of Apr. 25, but you can see his mats in full color at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com> [click on "the puzzles of sherlock holmes"].

19889. If you have access to Disney+, there's an excellent six-part series titled "Imagineering" about how Disney theme parks were and are created; it's not Sherlockian, but there's another program on the channel that is: "Waking Sleeping Beauty" (2009, an 86-minute documentary about the Disney Renaissance from 1984 to 1994 that revived Disney animation, with discussion of and clips from "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986). According to the documentary, it was Peter Schneider, then president of Walt Disney Feature Animation, who was responsible for changing the title of the film based on Eve Titus' Basil of Baker Street (Wikipedia and other sources say that it was Michael Eisner (CEO and chairman of the board of the company) who ordered the name of the film changed).
19890. And then there's "The Great Louse Detective" (an episode of the Fox television series "The Simpsons") that aired on Dec. 15, 2020; there's nothing Sherlockian about the episode other than the punning title.
19891. If you are running out of room in your library, an Atlas Obscura post on Apr. 24 (spotted by Bev Wolov) about "7 Spectacular Libraries You Can Explore from Your Living Room" <www.tinyurl.com/y84lucc6> will be of interest, with virtual-reality tours of some spectacular libraries.

19892. The West Liberty Public Library has an imaginative outreach program that includes videos of director Allie Paarsmith's daily readings from The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes <www.facebook.com/WLPublicLibrary>.
19894. "What do you know, pray, of Tapanuli fever?" Holmes asked Watson (in "The Dying Detective"). And "Catch a Glimpse of Tapanuli, the World's Newest Ape" was headline on Matthew Moore's story in The Times on Apr. 18 about the Tapanuli orangutan, featured in "Primates" (a three-part series from the BBC's Natural History Unit). Pongo tapanuliensis was identified as a distinct species in 2017, and is found only in a small area in the Batang Toru area of South Tapanuli in Sumatra, and according to Wikipedia it is the world's rarest great ape.

19895. A few years back the Royal Mail issued a set of eight stamps honoring the 50th anniversary of the BBC's long-running tele- vision series "Dad's Army" (June 18 #3); the actors included Arthur Lowe as Capt. George Mainwaring and John Le Mesurier as Sgt. Arthur Wilson. They will soon be available <www.tinyurl.com/y8sy8qpt> as "bobble buddies" from Big Chief Studios. Lowe played Dr. William Watson in "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" (1977), and Le Mesurier was Eduardo Lucas in "The Second Stain" in the Alan Wheatley television series (1951), Barrymore in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), and Lord Redcliff in "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
19897. Howard Ostrom has noted another Sherlockian connection for Ian Whitcomb: he narrated the audiobooks for some of the many Sherlockian pastiches that have been written by Pennie Mae Cartawick.
19899. The Scintillation of Scions has come up with an imaginative way to celebrate the now-canceled gathering in June, offering T-shirts and tote bags for sale <www.tinyurl.com/yaryc9p9>.
19900. Josh Lanyon is a prolific author of male/male romance fiction, including a "Holmes & Moriarity" series starring mystery author Christopher Holmes and former police officer J. X. Moriarity, with occasion allusions to Sherlock Holmes; the third title in the series is The Boy with the Painful Tattoo (Palmdale: JustJoshin, 2014; 236 pp., $15.99. The author's web-site is at <www.joshlanyon.com>.
19901. The famous (perhaps infamous) "tent joke" has been making its rounds since 1998, and you can read it in this newsletter (December 01 #6), or (as noted by Jennie Paton) see it performed in Sinhalese at <www.tinyurl.com/y7gzia7g>.
19902. The manuscript of an unpublished chapter from "The Land of Mist" went to auction at Christie's last year (July 19 #1), estimated at £3,000-£5,000; it sold for £13,750 (including the buyer's premium). Now the manuscript of the story (as published) is on offer in a private sale, for £120,000. Visit <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/land-mist-2020.htm> for Randall Stock's discussion, with links to Christie's description of the manuscript as well as Christie's books-and-manuscripts specialist Sophie Hopkins.

19904. Molly Guptill Manning's When Books Went to War: The Stories That Helped Us Win World War II (2014) is an interesting discussion of the Armed Services Editions, the 123 million paperbacks that were distributed free among the men fighting in every theater of the war. There were more than 1,300 titles in the series, including Christopher Morley's Kitty Foyle and two Nero Wolfe books by Rex Stout, but nothing by Arthur Conan Doyle. There was, however, one Sherlockian title that collectors might want to pursue: Bennett Cerf's Try and Stop Me, a collection of humorous anecdotes and stories that include two about Conan Doyle and Holmes.
19905. Kathy Manos Penn's Bells, Tails & Murder (Atlanta: Manos Penn & Ink, 2020; 246 pp. $9.99) is the first of her "Dickens & Christie" mysteries; Dickens is a dog and Christie is a cat, owned by Leta Parker, who talks with them while they investigate crimes in the Cotswolds, where J. M. Barrie lived for a time in Stanway House (where Milne and Conan Doyle are said to have visited). It's Barrie who's at the heart of the mystery, and the author has a web-site at <www.kathymanospenn.com>.
19906. Yes, Virginia, there is a Sherlockian face mask, offered by TeePublic, but possibly temporarily out of stock <www.tinyurl.com/y8l7qd9c>.
19907. Howard Ostrom has reported that Tal Avezier, whose Sherlockian plays are performed by the Red Monkey Theater Group, reads some of the Canon on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/yavbgxi9>.
19908. "La dernière enquête de Sherlock Holmes" ["Sherlock Holmes' Last Investigation"] is an imaginative and nicely-produced 15-minute Swiss film that was produced by Gaël Grobéty and issued on a DVD (with English sub-titles) and added features in 2010; you can watch a trailer and purchase the film (CHF 10) at <www.sherlockholmes-lefilm.ch>.
19909. There was a series of six Sherlock Holmes television programs broadcast in Germany in 1967 and 1968, with Erich Schellow (Sherlock Holmes) and Paul Edwin Roth (Dr. Watson), and Jennie Paton has discovered them all at YouTube <www.youtube.com/channel/UC4h-j2r_hZReC8bi0X9zyg>.
19910. Tom Fahres reports a treat for fans of Lewis Carroll, and Benedict Cumberbatch, who reads "Jabberwocky" at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q_Um3787fSY>
19911. "The Booksellers" is a delightful documentary about the N.Y. antiquarian book trade; you can read Ella Taylor's enthusiastic review of the film on National Public Radio at <www.tinyurl.com/y7aozi6c>. You can also stream the film ($9.99 for three days rental) at various Internet web-sites, one of them being <www.theavalon.org>. It's not Sherlockian, but one of the dealers is Rebecca Romney ("That Gap on the Second Shelf" in the BSI); you can see what sort of books she offers at <www.typepunchmatrix.com>.

19912. Mike Kean has reported a book offered by Burnside Rare Books that has nice Sherlockian provenance: the first American edition of Eric Ambler's A Coffin for Dimitrios, with a dust jacket and inscribed by Ambler at the Mystery Writers of America dinner in 1975 (when he won the Grand Master

- Award) to Norman Nolan ("Godfrey Norton" in the Baker Street Irregulars), from the collection of Otto Penzler ("The King of Bohemia" in the BSI); $5,500 <www.tinyurl.com/ya4cqvh5>. Another copy, inscribed to a non-Sherlockian, is advertised at AbeBooks for only $4,500.
19913. Howard Ostrom continues to revise and expand his data-base of Sherlockian music "Under the Clock, Sherlock - Still Rockin' After All These Years"; it's a 249-page file, with images and links, and it's available on request from Howard at <howardostrom@gmail.com>.
19915. Gordon McAlpine's Holmes Entangled (Amherst: Seventh Street Books, 2018; 189 pp., $13.95) begins with the discovery (by J. L. Borges in Argentina) of a manuscript written by Holmes, and continues with his account of what happened when in 1928 he was consulted by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; the tale is well told, with twists, turns, surprises, and humor. Recommended.
19918. Laurie R. King has been keeping busy while waiting for the launch of her now Mary Russell novel Riviera Gold (April 20 #1), and there's much to see at her web-site <www.laurierking.com>, including background on the book in her "Mutterings" blog, plus a (free) download of a PDF of her short story "Mrs. Hudson's First Case" illustrated by Mary Russell fans. Laurie also has an interesting YouTube channel <www.youtube.com/user/LaurieRKing>.
19919. Rachel McMillan's A Lesson in Love & Murder (Eugene: Harvest House, 2018; 218 pp., $12.99) is the second of three novels featuring Merinda Herringford and Jem Watts (two young women who would like to become detectives in the tradition of Holmes and Watson); they're set in Toronto, and this one involves radical anarchists and a member of the Royal North-West Mounted Police in 1912. The author's web-site is at <www.rachelmcmillan.net>.

19920. TV Tropes (which describes itself as "the all devouring pop-culture wiki") defines a "noodle incident" as "something from the past that is sometimes referred to but never explained, with the implication that it's just too ludicrous for words—or perhaps too offensive for depiction—and the reality that any explanation would fall short of audience expectations." They've found noodle incidents in many categories, including "literature", with a number of citations for Sherlock Holmes in the Canon and its many derivatives <www.tinyurl.com/y8gnzmbu>.
19921. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London web-site has an interesting new feature: the Sherlock Holmes Gazetteer <www.gazetteer.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> that will offer images of and commentary on places suggested as locations in the Canon. It's not yet complete, but it's well worth a look.
19922. It has long been known that Queen Mary's Dolls' House has in its library the bound manuscript for Conan Doyle's pastiche "How Watson Learned the Trick" (written as his contribution to the library), but it turns out that there's another Sherlockian item in the library, mentioned in an article in the Daily Mail (May 11) <www.tinyurl.com/yaub3mmu> about a posting about the library at the Royal Family's Instagram account <www.tinyurl.com/ybo2zcq3>. The library also contains a miniature issue of The Strand Magazine with a Sherlockian article (presumably Fenn Sherie's "Sherlock Holmes on the Film", that was published in the July 1921 issue). The front and back covers can be seen at the Royal Collection's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y86z4pmd>, and it's not known (yet) whether the miniature issue actually has the article. In any case, there's now a unique variant of the magazine that completist collectors can only yearn for.
19923. When in Ooty (in India): you can stay at the Sherlock Hotel (when you can travel again, of course) <www.littleearth.in/sherlock/history.php>.
19925. Next year being the 70th anniversary of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition in London, Catherine Cooke <ccooke@westminster.gov.uk> would greatly appreciate hearing from anyone who has items, with display labels, and other original material, that were part of the Exhibition. A few items are known to have survived in library collections, the Sherlock Holmes Pub, and private collections; if you have anything from the Exhibition, please get in touch with Catherine.

19927. Further to the earlier report (April 17 #4) on the new SHERLOCK inexpensive diagnostic tool for detecting nucleic acids from disease-carrying microbes (developed from CRISPR), there was a report in the Washington Post on May 8 <www.tinyurl.com/ybemwpqu> that the Food and Drug Administration has approved the use of a CRISPR-engineered molecule to detect the genetic signature of the SARS-CoV-2 virus. CRISPR is an acronym for Clustered Regularly Interspaced Short Palindromic Repeats, and SHERLOCK is an acronym for Specific High Sensitivity Enzymatic Reporter unLOCKing. Feng Zhang, a molecular biologist at MIT, was a co-inventor of CRISPR and a year ago a co-founder of Sherlock Biosciences, said that "we think this has a lot of potential" in the current pandemic.
19928. F. Bennett's The Secret Diary of Mycroft Holmes (Manchester, Belanger Books, 2017; 193 p., $12.95) is sub-titled "the thoughts and reminiscences of Sherlock Holmes' Elder Brother, 1880-1888," and it seems that Watson is not the only Canonical character who possesses an unexpected vein of pawky humor, on display in Mycroft's account of his early career, his family, and his relations with his younger brother.
19929. In 1976 the John H. Jenkins Award for Bibliography honored Ronald B. De Waal for his ground-breaking work on The World Bibliography of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, and for those who know little (or nothing) about Jenkins, there's a new biography of the colorful Texas antiquarian book dealer, by Michael Vinson: Bluffing Texas Style (Norman: Univ. Of Oklahoma Press, 2020; 250 pp., $45.00). It's full of grand stories about Jenkins'

- “arsons, forgeries, and high-stakes poker capers,” as well as his timely and mysterious death, and there are passing mentions of three members of the Baker Street Irregulars (Stillman Drake, Christopher Morley, and Lew David Feldman).
19930. Paul Thomas Miller’s “Doyle’s Rotary Coffin” (March 19 #4), a society whose motto is “All Holmes Is Good Holmes,” has published However Improbable (a new “scrapbook of strange Holmesiana”), available as a (free) download at the society’s web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yb4rmqx6>; it’s their second book, and the contents are amusing and interesting, as well as strange.
19931. Geek Tyrant had an interesting interview (with video) on May 24 with VFX artists who worked on the visual effects in four films, one of which was “Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows” (2011) <www.tinyurl.com/y73hu7bl>.
19933. And: T. L. Garrison’s The Twisted Blackmailer (2016; 280 pp., $14.95) is a fine pastiche for young adults: Sherlock Holmes and Joanna Watson are both teen-age girls who meet in high school and become partners, investigating cases that echo the Canon; the story’s nicely told, and the girls are both appropriate and believable.

19935. Sorry about that: with regard to the item about Banksy and his image of a distant relative of the Giant Rat of Sumatra (April 20 #6), it’s Jean Upton who’s now the editor of The District Messenger, which still is distributed by Roger Johnson.
19937. The “Holmes in the Heartland” conference that was scheduled in St. Louis on July 24-26 <www.tinyurl.com/yd5elmpi> has been postponed until summer 2021.
19939. Tal Aviezer’s “Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Copper Beeches” has been scheduled at the Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum in Pelham Bay Park, N.Y., Aug. 14-23 <www.bartowpellmansionmuseum.org>.
19940. Mark Shanahan’s new “A Sherlock Carol” will be performed as a script-in-hand reading at the Westport Country Playhouse in Westport., Conn., Dec. 14 <www.westportplayhouse.com>.
19941. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” will be performed at the Metropolis Performing Arts Centre in Arlington Heights, Ill., Jan. 28-Mar. 13; their web-site’s at <www.metropolisarts.com>. It’s also scheduled (in Swedish) at the Åbo Svenska Teater in Turku, Finland, in Jan. <www.abovenskatheater.fi>.
19942. Ken Ludwig’s new “Moriarty” will have its world premiere at the Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park, Apr. 17-May 16 <www.cincyplay.com>.
19943. Steven Canny and John Nicholson’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” will be performed at the California Theatre in Pittsburg, Calif., in the summer of 2021 <www.pittsburgcommunitytheatre.org>.

19944. Those who have been waiting patiently for full details on the Sherlockian birthday festivities in New York will be glad to hear that the reports now are available at <www.tinyurl.com/ybj4grub>. Steve Doyle’s video podcasts for the Baker Street Irregulars are continuing at YouTube; you can search for [fortnightly dispatch] to find interviews with Ray Betzner, Bob Katz, and others. If you would like to receive more of this sort of news from the BSI, you should sign up for occasional messages at the BSI’s web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-news-via-email>.
19945. The manuscript of “The Land of Mist”, on offer in a private sale at Christie’s (May 20 #3), will be included in an on-line public auction that opens on July 9 and closes on July 30 <www.tinyurl.com/ybp7g8tw>. Randall Stock provides a discussion of the manuscript at his “Best of Sherlock” web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/land-mist-2020.htm>.
19946. Sherlockian collectors will be more interested in the offer of the manuscript of “The Greek Interpreter”, offered by Sotheby’s in an on-line auction that opens on July 6 and closes on July 21 <www.tinyurl.com/y76zzrso> (the estimate is $400,000-$600,000). Randall’s description of this manuscript is at <www.tinyurl.com/y84j47g6>.
19948. The South Carolina State Museum in Columbia, S.C. <www.scmuseum.org> has opened to the public, and the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition is still there, extended into September. The exhibition’s due at the Minnesota Historical Center in St. Paul, Minn., from Oct. 1, 2021 to Mar. 21, 2022.
19949. The Mysterious Bookshop posts to its customers helpful reading lists compiled by authors, and here’s what Lyndsay Faye wrote when recommending The Complete Sherlock Holmes: “These books are the best 60 short stories and novels ever to happen, but it’s not ultimately about how they solve crime or embark on adventures. These tales are about the most beautiful literary friendship I’ve ever seen. They helped define who I am as a person, and that’s not an exaggeration. Some of my best connections, life decisions, clarifying moments, and wonderful challenges were about these characters helping me figure out who I am.”
19950. If you’ve watched any of the German television programs that starred Erich Schellow and Paul Edwin Roth in 1967 and 1968 (May 20 #4) and thought the dramatizations were familiar, there’s a reason: Bert Coules notes that the scripts were adapted from the BBC’s television series that starred Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock.

19952. Alexander Orlov has discovered an imaginative caricature of Conan Doyle, published in Caricatures by Tom Tit (1913); “Tom Tit” was the pen name of Arthur Good (1853-1928), a French engineer, science educator, journalist, author, artist, and caricaturist. The book has been digitized and is available at the Internet Archive www.tinyurl.com/y8vwwcve.
19953. Proceedings of the Pondicherry Lodge, the semi-annual electronic newsletter edited by Jayantika Ganguly for the Sherlock Holmes Society of India, is now in its eighth year. The current issue (with 240 pages) offers colorfully illustrated scholarship, commentary, pastiches, the script of an audio play, and a quiz; all issues of the Proceedings can be found at the society web-site www.sherlockholmessocietyofindia.com.
19954. My Modern Met reported on June 8 about an imaginative Sherlockian DIY Book Nook Kit www.mymodernmet.com/hemisphere-design-book-nooks. It’s sold by Creative Design at Etsy www.tinyurl.com/yceojr9n (€74.32), and it will be a nice Christmas present for any do-it-yourselfers who have any room on their shelves.
19955. Further to the earlier reports on SHERLOC and WATSON (April 14 #2 and April 19 #5), the instruments are ready for their exploration of Mars. The mission is scheduled for launch between July 17 and Aug. 5, according to a report from Firstpost on May 29 www.tinyurl.com/y8v6j4o4. SHERLOC (an acronym for Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman and Luminescence for Organ-ics and Chemicals) is a spectrometer that will be working with WATSON (a camera that will take close-up pictures of rock textures). The National Aeronautics and Space Administration’s colorful press release on exploration of the Red Planet is on-line at www.tinyurl.com/yafo2xve, and there is more about SHERLOC at www.tinyurl.com/y95s4ln6. And WATSON (also an acronym) is NASA’s Wide Angle Topographic Sensor for Operations and eNgeering.
19956. Almost Canonical: “Discard the impossible; then if nothing remains, some part of the ‘impossible’ must be possible.” Who said it?
19957. Basil Rathbone once was asked whether he preferred playing Sherlock Holmes in films or on the radio, and he explained that acting on radio is by far more fun, “because no one can see what you look like.” Perhaps the best example of this is the dramatization by Bert Coules of “A Scandal in Bohemia” for BBC Radio 4 in 1990, with Clive Merrison as Sherlock Holmes and Michael Williams as Dr. Watson. The King of Bohemia was played by Andrew Sachs (whom you may remember as Manuel, the Spanish Waiter in the television series “Fawlty Towers”). You can hear him as the King of Bohemia at www.youtube.com/watch?v=yl8Cs_2_3ko.

19958. A wide variety of audiobooks are available (without charge) on the Internet, at web-sites such as LibriVox, including Sherlockian and Doylean titles, and parodies and pastiches such as J. Kendrick Bangs’ The Pursuit of the House-Boat and Mark Twain’s The Double-Barreled Detective Story (you can search for author or title, so you need to know what you’re looking for) www.librivox.org.
19959. Graham Reid has died. He was a British actor who began his career in the early 1990s, performing as Graham Martin, and he played Sherlock Holmes in Tim Churchill’s dramatization of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” in 2018.
19960. Phoebe Judge reads classic mysteries, including “The Hound of the Baskervilles” at her “This Is Criminal” blog www.thisiscriminal.com/mystery.
19961. Don Hobbs continues to expand his “Galactic Sherlock Holmes” data-base of foreign translations (which now has almost 11,000 entries) and many full-color illustrations, and would be glad to hear from anyone who has found something that’s not already in the data-base; the latest version is now available on request and without charge (as a 430-MB file via WeTransfer) 221b@verizon.net.
19962. Spotted by Alexander Orlov: “Sherlock Holmes Is on the Case” is the title of an amusing animated video that was uploaded to YouTube by the American Dental Association on Oct. 16, 2019 www.youtube.com/watch?v=86u1Mip2b90.
19963. Ruth Berman kindly forwarded an almost-Canonical “Discard the impossible; then if nothing remains, some part of the ‘impossible’ must be possible.” Who said it? Sherlock Holmes’ cousin Dr. Horace Verner, in Anthony Boucher’s “The Anomaly of the Empty Man” (first published in Fantasy & Science Fiction (Apr. 1952).
19964. Further to the item (October 19 #2) about Felix Dennis’ “Garden of Heroes and Villains” in Dorsington, Howard Ostrom has reported a post about the garden www.tinyurl.com/y8wlp56v by someone who blogs as peribrown and has a number of interesting posts under the heading “Sherlockian Sojourns”; this one offers images of many of the garden’s life-size bronze sculptures, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the spirit of Sherlock Holmes.
19965. BBC Radio Four Extra celebrated a Sherlock Holmes Weekend on June 13-14, and the good news is that the programs will be available at their web-site well into July; the programs are Peter Mackie’s “The Adventure of the Pimlico Poisoner” (1990) and Nicholas Utechin’s three-hour “The Game’s Afoot: Sherlock Holmes Special” with some delightful treasures from the BBC archives (2008), and links are available at the Sherlock Holmes Society of London’s web-site www.tinyurl.com/yclqkpg.
19966. Ellery Queen’s Mystery Magazine has a long history of offering Sherlockian and Doylean content, and that’s also true of its web-site, where web-only content in “The Crime Scene” includes podcasts with readings of Sherlockian pastiches by Steve Steinbock and Terence Faherty, and Dean Jobb’s blog “Stranger Than Fiction” with a two-part discussion of “Finding Sherlock” www.elleryqueenmysterymagazine.com.

19967. Philip Purser-Hallard’s Sherlock Holmes: The Spider’s Web (New York: Titan, 2020; 261 pp., $14.95) is an amusing cross-over pastiche in which Holmes and Watson investigate a complicated mystery in a London populated by characters created by Oscar Wilde; plot and dialogue are thoroughly appropriate. Lenny Picker’s interview with Purser-Hallard for Publishers Weekly (June 1) www.tinyurl.com/yarudl7k provides a nice behind-the-scenes look at how the book was written.
19968. There’s much more Sherlockian (and Doylean) material in Publishers Weekly, and the magazine has kindly made its current and archival content available without charge to all during the pandemic www.tinyurl.com/yd5sznre. The magazine was founded in 1872, and their first Conan Doyle item was a mention of his story “My Friend the Murderer” in 1883. A search turns up 2,906 hits for [conan doyle] and 3,354 for [sherlock holmes], which will keep researcher busy for a while.
19969. The late August Derleth, who created Solar Pons as a tribute to Sherlock Holmes, also was a great admirer of H. P. Lovecraft’s tales of supernatural horror and terror, and Derrick Belanger has edited The Necronomicon of Solar Pons (Manchester: Belanger Books, 2020; 429 pp., $24.95) as a tribute to both of Derleth’s enthusiasms; it’s an anthology of a dozen cross-over pastiches, subtitled as “Lovecraftian Tales of the Sherlock Holmes of Praed Street,” and that’s just what they are.

19970. Derrick also has edited The Pontine Dossier: Millennium Edition, a revival of the journal published by the late Luther Norris, founder of the Praed Street Irregulars (2020; 85 pp., $7.99), with eight new essays about Derleth and Pons. It should be noted that the August Derleth Society, founded in the late 1970s, continues to honor the author and his works; their web-site's at www.augustderleth.org.
19971. And there's more: Sherlock Holmes Is Everywhere, edited by David Marcum, Sonia Fetherston, and Derrick Belanger (2019; 302 pp., $19.99), is an interesting anthology of essays written by long-time Sherlockians and newcomers about the many ways that they have found and enjoyed the world of Sherlock Holmes. Sherlock Holmes: Adventures in the Realms of Edgar A Ian Poe, edited by Brian and Derrick Belanger (2019; 369 pp., $24.95), is an anthology of fourteen-crossover pastiches that bring Holmes and Watson into the many worlds of Poe.
19973. Katy Perry, a singer, songwriter, and judge (on the ABC-TV television series "American Idol") has issued five albums, with a sixth on the way. She also has written some songs that have not been released; she recently said in an interview that her favorite unreleased song is "Sherlock Holmes" ("I always think that song needed a lyric change and a rerecord on all fronts and it would be great!"). She wrote the song with Glen Ballard, and their lyrics are available on the Internet www.tinyurl.com/ycbwlbn.

19974. Noted by Dana Richards: "My Blushes, Watson!" is the title of an amusing post by Dales James Nelson a few years ago at Sven Sellanraa's "Orthosphere" blog www.tinyurl.com/yab434ck. The subtitle is "Of Blood, Blushing, Whistling, & Holding Hands" and the post explores how different things could be in Canonical times.
19975. Aziz Bin Adam notes that Iconic VIP Tours offers a Sherlock Holmes Virtual Escape Room Adventure via Zoom www.tinyurl.com/y8nn4hps. There are other literary escape rooms for non-Sherlockians www.iconicviptours.com.
19976. The Rat and Raven is the name of new pub in Lexington, N.C., according to a report in the Lexington Dispatch (June 14) www.tinyurl.com/yabjl7fd; owners Charlie and Layne McCarn inspiration for the name of the pub "was an old Sherlock Holmes movie, where Holmes and Watson duck into a pub with that same name." So: which movie?
19977. Fans who enjoy playing the Sherlock Holmes computer games created by Frogwares will welcome their announcement (with a trailer) www.frogwares.com of a new "Sherlock Holmes: Chapter One" prequel due for release in 2021.
19978. Jennie Paton has discovered Adagio Teas, which advertises a wide range of imaginatively-named and variously-flavored blends of Sherlockian tea, at www.adagio.com/signature_blend.html?blend-90697.
19979. "Dear Holmes" (reviewed in the N.Y. Times Book Review on June 7) was created by Michael Silver at Letterjoy www.dearholmes.com and offers monthly mysteries-by-mail.
19980. Dennis J. O'Neil died on June 11. Best known for revitalizing Batman during his career at Marvel Comics, he was a legendary comic-book writer and editor (sometimes credited as Denny O'Neil); he also worked at DC Comics, where he brought Sherlock Holmes to the public in the 1970s and 1980s.
19981. The Left Coast Sherlockian Symposium, held last October in Portland, Ore., will be held on-line this year on Oct. 19, promising "a fun and educational day of talks, socializing, and friendship" in the image of A Scintillation of Scions. More information, including their list of speakers, will be found at their web-site at www.leftcoastsherlock.com.
19982. Ruth Berman has reported sad news from Minneapolis: Uncle Hugo's/Uncle Edgar's, the joint science-fiction/mystery bookstores owned by Don and Elizabeth Blyly, were set on fire during the recent demonstrations there, and burned to the ground. You can read their detailed report on the tragedy at their web-site www.unclehugo.com/prod/index.shtml.
19983. "Frederic Dorr Steele: Forgotten Master" is the title of a 9-minute video at a new GoFundMe web-site www.bit.ly/FDSteele for a campaign to raise money for a memorial to the artist whose work personified Sherlock Holmes for American readers. After his death in 1944 his ashes were interred in his family's plot in a cemetery in Menands, N.Y., but no stone marks his resting place. The campaign achieved quick success, but information (and the video) still can be found at the GoFundMe web-site.

19985. Hannah McNally was one of the finalists in the competition to illustrate the Folio Society's The Selected Adventures and Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes (2019), and her striking artwork for the cover and three of the stories is available at www.society6.com/abeyance on a wide variety of merchandise.
19986. "Meitantei Conan" [Detective Conan] was first a Japanese manga comic-book series created by Gyosho Aoyama, then developed into a long-running animated television series, and then animated films; Shinichi Kudo is a 17-year-old master detective who is turned by villains into a child, and assumes the name Conan Edogawa (in tribute to Arthur Conan Doyle) and pursues evil-doers. The English-language version is called "Case Closed" and there's a series of DVDs: "The Phantom of Baker Street" (released in Japan in 2002, and with subtitles in English in 2010) has Conan and his friends trapped in a virtual recreation of 19th-century London, pursuing Jack the Ripper; the cast of characters includes Mrs. Hudson, Irene Adler, Sebastian Moran, and James Moriarty, and Sherlock Holmes makes a brief appearance. The DVD is out-of-print, but you can find copies offered at eBay.
19987. Ann Treherne's Arthur and Me (2020; 264 pp., £8.99) tells the story of her discovery of the psychic world, her seances, and her communications with Conan Doyle, who helped her find the derelict building that's now the Arthur Conan Doyle Centre in Edinburgh www.arthurconandoylecentre.com; her book offers a detailed look at modern-day spiritualism.
19988. "Arthur Conan Doyle" is a new music video that was uploaded to YouTube by Alien Tango Entertainment on June 3 www.tinyurl.com/yctxsm23. It's performed by Alberto and Oso Peligro, and it's nice indeed that closed captions help one understand the lyrics.
19989. In which movie did Holmes and Watson "duck" into a pub called the Rat and Raven? It was "Sherlock Holmes Faces Death" (1943) (the pub sign in the movie actually reads "The Rat and the Raven").
19990. David Lambert's latest contribution to The Strand Magazine's blog is "The Razor-Potato Man" (analyzing Harlan Ellison's short story "He Who Grew Up Reading Sherlock Holmes") on May 23. Ellison's story was first published in 2014, and Lambert has some interesting commentary.

19991. Deadline has reported (June 15) <www.tinyurl.com/y9yr4vae> that the team behind Netflix's "Astronomy Club" are moving onward and upward following the cancellation of their sketch comedy show and have partnered with "The Problem with Apu" producer Cowboy Bear Ninja on "Sherlock Homies" (a comedy series that they describe as "'Curb Your Enthusiasm' meets 'Reno 911' about Harlem's first all-black detective agency." It would seem that the only Sherlockian aspect of the series, if it ever gets made, is the title.

19992. One of the nice things about modern technology is that it is now so easy to attend distant meetings of Sherlockian societies, using Zoom or other programs. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's first virtual meeting, open to Sherlockians world-wide, is set for July 21 at 7:30 pm BST, and you are invited to contact Jane Arnold-Forster <janeaf@btinternet.com> so that she can send you meeting details.
19993. The roster of Sherlockian societies holding virtual meetings continues to grow; the following list surely must be incomplete, and any additions will be welcome: the Bootmakers of Toronto, the Cesspudlians of London [Ontario], the Crew of the Barque Lone Star [Dallas], the Curious Collectors of Baker Street [Los Angeles], Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients [Denver], Five Miles from Anywhere, the Goose Club of the Alpha Inn [Vermont], the Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn [St. Charles MO], the Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis, the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club [Tokyo], the John Openshaw Society [Houston], the Knights of the Gnomon, the Notorious Canary Trainers [Madison WI], the Norwegian Explorers Study Group [Minneapolis], the Outpatients [Denver], the Parallel Case of St. Louis, the Priory Scholars of New York, the Red Circle of Washington, the Reichenbach Irregulars, the Sherlock Holmes Goose Club of the Upper Valley [Hanover NH], the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, the Sherlockians of Baltimore, the Six Napoleons of Baltimore, the Sound of the Baskervilles [Seattle], the Tankerville Club [Cincinnati], Theatre-Goers Homeward Bound, the Three Garridebs of Westchester County [NY], The Torists International [Chicago], and Watson's Tin Box [Ellicott City MD].
19994. The next annual 221B Con (a well-attended "fan con for all things Sherlock Holmes") will be held in Atlanta, Apr. 19-21 <www.221bcon.com>. Next year's Scintillation of Scions will be held in Linthicum, Md., Aug. 6-7. <www.scintillation.org>.
19995. Inscribed first editions of Conan Doyle's books (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian) are far from common. An inscribed copy of the first edition of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes was offered by Lucius Books for £85,000 last month at Firsts (the London book fair held on-line this year during the pandemic); it's still available <www.tinyurl.com/ybpbwqnx>.
19996. Sarah LeFanu's Something of Themselves (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2020; 381 pp., $29.95), is sub-titled "Kipling, Kingsley, Conan Doyle, and the Anglo-Boer War," and it's a well-written history of the war, focusing on three writers who were in South Africa in 1900; Mary Kingsley, far less well known than the other two writers, is just as interesting, and Lefanu offers a grand story, well told.
19997. Reported by Nicholas Utechin: a new Sherlock Holmes Magazine published in Britain <www.sherlockholmesmag.co.uk> and already out of print.
19998. "Shermlock Shomes!" (a delightful parody, written by Harvey Kurtzman and illustrated by Bill Elder) appeared in Mad magazine (Oct.-Nov. 1953). The original artwork (all eight pages) will be offered at Heritage Auctions in July <www.tinyurl.com/ycstlg3j>; it has attracted some serious bidders: as we go to press, the current high bid is $10,500.

19999. Joseph W. Svec III's Sherlock Holmes and the Round Table Adventure (London: MX Publishing, 2016; 169 pp., $10.95) is the third book in his "missing authors" series; this time Alfred Lord Tennyson has gone missing, and Holmes and Watson encounter pixies, dragons, a unicorn, Merlin, Morgan le Faye, gnomes, the Lady of the Lake, Guinevere, and King Arthur before they are able to rescue the Poet Laureate. MX Publishing's books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
20000. Also: Molly Carr's A Study in Crimson (2010; 322 pp., $19.95), the second volume in the further adventures of Mrs. Watson and Mrs. St. Clair (they are the Watson-Fanshaw Detective Agency); Holmes and Watson are on hand, along with Moriarty and many others, and everyone is rather different from how they will be remembered by those who have read the Canon. James Moffett's The Trials of Sherlock Holmes (2017; 228 pp., $14.95) sends Holmes and Watson in pursuit of criminals in eight cases that end with a confrontation with a vicious adversary.
20001. Plus: Balaji Narasimhan's Sleight of Fate and Various Sherlock Holmes Puzzles (2013; 107 pp., $9.95) opens with a murderous challenge and continues with essays and pastiches set in India; it concludes with an exploration of Indian astrology used by Holmes to predict an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 1944. L. F. E. Coombs' Sherlock Holmes Plays the Game (2014; 243 pp., $16.96) is a collection of ten pastiches, many of which were brought to Holmes and Watson by Scotland Yard inspector Shershay. Phil Growick's The Secret Journal of Dr. Watson (2012; 285 pp., $18.95) sends Holmes and Watson to Russia in 1918 to rescue the Tsar and his family; the top-secret mission results in dire events and a thoroughly complicated mystery.
20002. There's still Sherlockian theater being performed during the pandemic, but on-line: you can watch the Children's Theatre of Annapolis presentation of Tom Considine's amusing one-act play "The Duck of the Baskervilles" (featuring Shylock Casa and Portia Watsonia in "a quacking good case") at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=biFIS7XwQ2g>. The script is available as a PDF from <www.offthewallplays.com>.
20003. Planning ahead: "Sherlock Holmes and the Strange Case of Alice Faulkner" (an adaptation of the Gillette play) will be performed at the Molino Community Center in Molino, Fla., July 31-Aug. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/y7p3nfad>.
20005. "Sherlock Holmes and the Blue Carbuncle" is due at the Helen Borgers Theatre in Long Beach, Calif., Nov. 20-Dec. 13 <www.lbshakespeare.org>.
20006. David MacGregor's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Ghost Machine" will be performed at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, Mich., Mar. 25-Apr. 29, 2021 <www.purplerosetheatre.org>.

20007. USA Today's "first look" story (June 24) about the new "Enola Holmes" film <www.tinyurl.com/yba5l6ml> was overtaken by the news that the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. has filed a lawsuit against just about everyone who had anything to do with the film, alleging that the film infringes on the CDEL's copyright on the few remaining Canonical stories not yet in the public domain. You can read the 19-page complaint at <www.tinyurl.com/y7khds83>, and the CDEL's brief statement about the lawsuit is available on-line at <www.conandoyleestate.com/news/enola-holmes>.
20008. The complaint says that Conan Doyle, after his brother and son died in the First World War, felt that "it was no longer enough that the Holmes character was the most brilliant rational and analytical mind. Holmes needed be human. The character needed to develop human connection and empathy." Thus a Holmes that demonstrates friendship and emotion is an infringement on stories still protected by copyright, according to the CDEL.

20009. The film, tentatively scheduled on Netflix in September, is based on six novels by Nancy Springer that were published from 2006 to 2010, and features Millie Bobby Brown as Enola Holmes, Henry Cavill as Sherlock Holmes, Sam Claflin as Mycroft Holmes, and Helena Bonham Carter as their mother.
20010. The lawsuit is similar to the one filed against the Ian McKellen film “Mr. Holmes” in 2015. That suit was settled out of court, and the DVD of the film and the Kindle edition of Mitch Cullin’s A Slight Trick of the Mind now have a statement acknowledging the CDEL’s permission to use material from Sherlock Holmes stories protected by copyright. Scott Monty has an interesting discussion of both lawsuits at www.tinyurl.com/y7gkqrkz, and a 2015 interview with Cullin at www.tinyurl.com/y88x64cq.
20011. Den of Geek quoted Nicholas Meyer on June 26 www.tinyurl.com/y9dk5enc as saying that while he did pay the Conan Doyle estate for permission to publish his first three pastiches (in 1974, 1976, and 1993) he didn’t for his The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols (2019) and won’t be paying for his next pastiche The Return of the Pharaoh (due in 2021). The estate “has a long and complicated history” Meyer said, adding that “The estate has become various squabbling heirs—most of them having nothing to do with Doyle and still less interested in Holmes, except as a source of money to spend. They’ve used Holmes rights as a cash cow for their own pleasure.”
20012. The story continues: the defendants have “filed an appearance” in the case (which gives them time to prepare and file a formal response to the complaint by the CDEL), so there will be more to come in the next few weeks.
20013. “The hardcopy texts are surrounded by on-line material (screenplays, reviews, fansubs, scanlations, etc.)” That’s according to the abstract of Mary Wardle’s “From Baker Street to Tokyo and Back” (discovered by Jennie Paton) www.journals.openedition.org/palimpsests/3582; the academic paper deals with “(para)textual hybridity in translation” and offers a fine example of how new words are being coined. Google kindly defines “fansub” and “scanlation” for (I suspect) many if not most of us.

20014. Literary experts and academics fear the Sherlock Holmes statue in Edinburgh may be targeted by activists because of the many “crass racist descriptions” in the Canon, according to an article by Tim Stewart in The Times (July 6); he cited problematic language (in “The Sign of the Four” and “The Three Gables”) and noted that Conan Doyle is “said to have believed in British superiority and was a staunch supporter of the Empire.” Several statues linked to the slave trade have been damaged during Black Lives Matter demonstrations. The article does not mention the statue of Holmes in Baker Street, nor the statue of Conan Doyle in Crowborough.
20015. It’s not Sherlockian or Doylean, but: it’s not easy to choose a title for a short story that makes you want to read it. “Mary Poppins Didn’t Have Tattoos” for example; that’s a story by Stacy Woodson in the July/August issue of Ellery Queen’s Mystery Magazine.
20016. George J. McCormack (“Hosmer Angel”) died on Apr. 2. His early interest in Sherlock Holmes resulted in his being a co-founder of the Diogenes Club Brooklyn when he was a senior at Brooklyn Preparatory School, and he went on to graduate from Fordham University and Harvard Law School and then had a long and successful career as an attorney. He attended his first annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars in 1959, received his Investiture in 1961, and went on to set a record for continuous attendance at 60 BSI annual dinners.
20017. The Internet can be a spectacular resource for people who want to research (or merely read) older publications such as The Strand Magazine; the Hathi Trust offers links to digitizations of the first 68 volumes (through 1924) www.catalog.hathitrust.org/Record/000642318; later volumes have been digitized, but are not yet available due to copyright restrictions (the volumes for 1925 will be available at the end of this year).
20018. Jean Upton reports (in the June issue of The District Messenger) that the web-site of the London Transport Museum www.tinyurl.com/ybsnn75v offers a nice selection of Sherlockian images from the history of the underground and of the decorations at the Baker Street Station.
20019. Virtual meetings of Sherlockian societies do seem to ignore geography: the Reichenbach Irregulars of Switzerland will hold their second Zoom meeting on Sept. 3 at 7:00 pm BST (that’s British Summer Time): Michael Meer will talk about “The Other War Service of Sherlock Holmes: The Master Detective in World War I Prison Camps” and anyone interested joining should contact Marcus Geisser reichenbachirregulars@gmail.com.
20020. Michael McClure has created an imaginative new board game (“The Original Sherlock Holmes and His Baker Street Irregulars”), and there’s a detailed and nicely-illustrated report at Scott Monty’s “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog www.tinyurl.com/yy57ppzv; you may recognize some of the images on the character cards. The cost of the game is $39.00 through the August ($55.00 thereafter) www.baskervilleproductions.com/shbsi; production is underway, with shipping planned for November, conveniently in time for Christmas.

20021. Simon Barnes’ Ten Million Aliens (New York: Marble Arch Press, 2015; 480 pp., $28.00) is a delightful book, offering “a journey through the entire animal kingdom” in short chapters that are devoted to the ten million (that’s his estimate) species known and yet to be identified on our planet, and the writers he mentions include Adams, Kipling, Disraeli, Joyce, Dahl, Verne, Dylan, and (of course) Conan Doyle (in the chapter on “Infernal agony of gelatinous zooplankton”). Recommended.
20022. “Police Sketches of Literary Characters Based on Their Book Descriptions” was an article on Mental Floss (Jan. 8, 2016) about illustrator Brian Joseph Davis’ use of the law enforcement composite sketch software FACES ID
20023. www.tinyurl.com/y7svwmhn; one of the characters is Sherlock Holmes (as described in “A Study in Scarlet”).
20027. When you can travel again: Karen Murdock found a long and favorable review of the Holmes Hotel (formerly the Sherlock Holmes Hotel) in London at the Business Traveler web-site www.tinyurl.com/wgwhzl6. They also had nice things to say earlier this year www.tinyurl.com/y8jboxek about the Great Scotland Yard Hotel; both reviews are well illustrated.
20028. Further to the item (April 20 #1) about the “incredible book collection” of Kate Middleton (aka the Duchess of Cambridge, wife of Prince William), Sonia Fetherston reports that Kate’s brother, James Middleton, has written an essay for the Daily Mail (June 28) www.tinyurl.com/yask95k4 about his new hobby: beekeeping. “On a warm summer’s day,” he explains, “there are few places on Earth I’d rather be than tending my bees.”

20030. Cory Howell has an interesting post (“Inspector Watson? An Alternate History Twist”) at Scott Monty’s “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog about a startling discovery at the Ill Bethisad Wiki at <www.tinyurl.com/ychedxtts>. The great detective in this alternative Canonical universe is an Inspector Watson who lives at 221A Quaker Street; many of his fans call themselves the Quaker Street Irregulars, and there’s much fun to be had in this imaginative world.
20031. It’s a nice reminder of the fun the late John Ruyle had with his Turlock Loams, who also lived in Quaker Street; John presided over two societies: The Quaker Street Irregulars and the Old Soldiers of Quaker Street, both parodies of Solar Pons societies created by the late Luther Norris as parodies of Sherlock Holmes societies. Anyone who tells you that the world of Sherlockian societies isn’t complicated shouldn’t be trusted.
20032. “Meiringen” (by ABBA SPARVA, featuring Brenda the Headless Mannequin) is a three-minute music video, based on an original idea by Brad Keefauver and uploaded to YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yadl4xmg> on June 20 by Paul Thomas Miller. Brad is the founder of the Reichenbach Falls Lemming Society, and Brad has a YouTube channel <www.youtube.com/watch?v=srtCEmPqoM> with many additional Sherlockian music videos.
20033. The Royal Mint has issued a commemorative £5 coin that honors music legend Elton John <www.tinyurl.com/y99c7jv9>; he was executive producer for the animated film “Sherlock Gnomes” (2018), and he wrote and performed some of the songs.
20034. Catching up: Catherine Cooke received the British Empire Medal “for services to libraries” in this year’s New Year’s Honours List. She presides over the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the Westminster Reference Library in London, a Member of Council of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and Investiture as “The Book of Life” in the Baker Street Irregulars
20035. When in Ontario: you can spend a night in the Arthur Conan Doyle room at the Arlington Hotel in Paris (a bit more than an hour’s drive from Toronto); the hotel has 23 rooms, each themed for “some of our favourite authors and creative minds” <www.arlingtonhotel.ca>.
20036. Carl Reiner died on June 29. He had a long career as a comic, director, and actor, famous for his appearance with Mel Brooks in their “2,000-Year-Old-Man” skit, and for being (as Billy Crystal called him) “a nice genius”. You can see him in Sherlockian costume (as Chief Inspector House) in the “Who Killed Supersleuth?” episode of “Burke’s Law” (Dec. 16, 1964, on ABC-TV) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=8zfMZUI8S7A>
20037. It should also be noted that Carl Reiner appears as a home craftsman in photographs in G. A. Mills’ A Saw Screams at Midnight (1956), which was sub-titled “the whodunit-yourself book” and contains a Sherlockian parody (“The Adventure of the Purloined Pants”); it’s possible, perhaps even probable, that Carl Reiner wrote the book using a pseudonym (no one has been able to track down Mr. Mills).

20038. It’s always nice to see the results of combining two enthusiasms. Clifford Goldfarb does just that in his article “Winston Churchill and Arthur Conan Doyle—Finest of the Empire” in the summer issue of Canadian Holmes (which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto). Cliff has carefully researched Churchill and Conan Doyle’s meetings and correspondence. Canadian Holmes costs $30.00 a year (US or CA), and single issues cost $12.00 <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
20040. MX Publishing has launched a Kickstarter campaign for Maureen Whittaker’s new biography of Jeremy Brett; details on the book and campaign, as well as an interview with the author, are available at Scott Monty’s “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog <www.tinyurl.com/y5flx9ge>.
20041. Julian Curry died on June 27. He began his acting career in television on the BBC, and went on to perform on stage and screen. Perhaps best known for playing Claude Erskine-Brown on “Rumpole of the Bailey”, he also appeared as Albert Shlessinger in “The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax” in the Granada series (1991), and as Sherlock Holmes in a commercial for OZ Kettle Descaler in the 1980s <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JHQ5YKbLTBs>.
20042. “Without Julian Wolff’s involvement, the Baker Street Irregulars might no longer exist,” and Sonia Fetherston tells us all about that in Commissionaire: Julian Wolff and His Baker Street Irregulars (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 2020; 176 pp., $21.95) <www.tinyurl.com/yb2gpxxq>.
20044. Januaryina Woods’ Mycroft Holmes and the Edinburgh Affair (London: MX Publishing, 2018; 386 pp., $18.95), the second in her series about Mycroft, his fellow Secret Service agents, and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, is more of a thriller than a mystery, but there is plenty of action and villainy. Arthur Hall’s The Secret Assassin (2017; 92 pp., $9.95) sends Holmes and Watson in pursuit of a mysterious killer in a case that begins in London and ends in rural Somerset. And Denis O. Smith’s The Further Chronicles of Sherlock Holmes, Volumes One and Two (2018; 412 pp., $34.95) is a collection of a dozen new pastiches, some of which were successful cases, and some not. Tim Symonds’ Sherlock Holmes and the Nine-Dragon Sigil (2016; 358 pp., $16.95) Holmes and Watson in Imperial China in 1906, involved in thwarting a civil war, in a tale that’s full of detail about Chinese life, politics, and history. Peter Bevelin’s A Few Lessons from Sherlock Holmes (2013; 81 pp., $9.95) offers advice on improving one’s critical thinking, with quotes from the Canon, and from others who include Cuvier, Pasteur, Darwin and Bell. MX Publishing’s books can be purchased at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.

20045. Neil McCaw died on Mar. 23. A professor of Victorian literature and Culture at Winchester University, he put together a delightful TED-Ed lesson in 2015 on “Who IS Sherlock Holmes?” that’s still available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/zcmrobb>; he also contributed an insightful introduction and an annotated transcription of the story to the university’s 2017 facsimile edition of The Adventure of the Creeping Man, wrote a Historical Dictionary of Sherlock Holmes (2019), and was academic director of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth.
20046. The eight pages of original artwork for Mad magazine’s “Shermlock Shomes!” (June 20 #7) did quite well at Heritage Auctions this month: $72,000 (including the buyer’s premium).
20047. “He was entirely absorbed in the pictures of the modern Belgian masters,” Watson said of Holmes (in “The Hound of the Baskervilles”). According to H. R. F. Keating (Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World, 1979, p. 90-91), the modern Belgian masters were the Groupe des Vingt; one of its

- founders was Théo Van Rysselberghe, whose painting “Barques de pêche-Méditerranée” went to auction at Christie’s in New York on July 10, estimated at $7 million-$10 million; it sold for $9,128,000 (including the buyer’s premium) <www.tinyurl.com/y9fhx3s8>. You can read about the painting and the artist at <www.tinyurl.com/y7cgexey>.
20048. Lenny Picker reports some welcome news for fans of Gary Larson’s “The Far Side”: he’s back, and has a new web-site at <www.thefarside.com/newstuff>, where he says “I’ve got my coffee, I’ve got this cool gizmo, and I’ve got no deadlines, And—to borrow from Sherlock Holmes—the game is afoot.” His past work includes a cartoon about Buddy’s dreams of being the Parakeet of the Baskervilles (Dec. 5, 1986) (reprinted in his Hound of the Far Side in 1987), and it’s nice to know he hasn’t forgotten Sherlock Holmes.
20049. “Take a Look at Baker Street Bar Dr. Watson’s Cheeky Toilet Makeover” was the headline on a nicely-illustrated article in the Middlesbrough Gazette on July 9 <www.tinyurl.com/yb5y9jlu> that explained that “a large mural of Sherlock Holmes now looms over punters in the gents loos—and he’s got his magnifying glass out.” Middlesbrough (N. Yorks.) also has bars named “The Twisted Lip and Sherlock’s.”
20050. “Strictly Professor Challenger” is a new one-man presentation written and performed by Jonathan Miller for Don’t Go Into the Cellar and MX Publishing, and it’s available on-line until the end of August at the MX web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y46u2r56>.
20051. Paul Thomas Miller has reported (sadly) the first coronavirus incident at a meeting of a Sherlockian society: “Now that easing is in place, 19th July 2020 was supposed to be the Shingle of Southsea’s first meeting since the COVID Lockdown. Unfortunately when our member turned up he refused to comply with society policy on wearing a face mask in The Sherloft. Things turned physical and the meeting had to be cancelled. Fortunately the entire incident was caught on camera and the Shingle of Southsea board will be considering whether to take further action based on the evidence caught in the video.” <www.youtube.com/watch?v=f179vEN9o-0>.

20052. The headline on the on-line version of Michael Dirda’s “Book World” in the Washington Post (July 16) reads “William Clark Russell’s ‘The Wreck of the Grosvenor’ Is a Transporting Nautical Adventure” (and the headline in print was “Sea Dogs Preyed Upon by Sea Wolves”) <www.tinyurl.com/78ccs7yc>; he begins by recalling that Watson was “deep in one of Clark Russell’s fine sea stories” (at the beginning of “The Five Orange Pips”). Dirda believes that the fine sea story was “The Wreck of the Grosvenor” and that “there’s enough action and suspense to satisfy anyone, even Dr. Watson, who knows a thing or two about adventure.”
20053. One of the many actors who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes celebrated his 85th birthday this month, and was congratulated by the president; the official announcement is at <www.tinyurl.com/y2aakdj6>.
20054. “Play Away” was a long-running 25-minute children’s series that was broadcast by BBC-2, and in 1984 an episode included an 11-minute segment (“The Murder of Lord Ronnie Eccleston Smythe”) featuring Floella Benjamin (Shirley Holmes) and Brian Cant (Wally Watson). The tape was thought to have been wiped by the BBC, but a videotape recorded by a fan has turned up at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yyjhjhl4>. A tip of the deerstalker for the discovery to Adrian Nebbitt.
20055. Roy and Maxine Reneker are seeking people, young and old, who would like to be charter members of a new Sherlockian society, open to everyone, in the Monterey region of California <mreneker@pacbell.net>.
20056. Greg Darak notes that the current issue of Little Shoppe of Horrors (“the journal of classic British horror films”) features “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (1959), and includes mentions of the BBC’s “Sherlock” in coverage of the new “Dracula” series <www.littleshoppeofhorrors.com/LSoH44.htm> ($10.95 plus shipping).
20057. Nominees for the Macavity Awards (from Mystery Readers International) include Terence Faherty’s “The Cardboard Box” (best mystery short story) and Laird R. Blackwell’s Frederic Dannay, Ellery Queen’s Mystery Magazine, and the Art of the Detective Short Story (best mystery nonfiction/critical); the winners will be announced during the opening ceremonies of the Sacramento Virtual Bouchercon in October, and you can see all of the nominees at <www.mysteryreaders.org/mccavity-awards>.
20058. And yes indeed, this year’s Bouchercon, scheduled for Sacramento, will be virtual, on Oct. 16-17 <www.bouchercon2020.org>. Bouchercon will be held in New Orleans, Aug. 25-29, 2021; and in Minneapolis, Sept. 8-11, 2022.
20059. The manuscript of “The Greek Interpreter” was offered in an on-line auction at Sotheby’s this month, with an opening bid of $300,000 (lowered to $280,000 toward the end of the auction), but the manuscript did not sell. Sotheby’s asked Mark Gatiss to reflect on-line on “the adventures of the famous detective” <www.tinyurl.com/y8e5vj8b>; Gatiss not only was co-creator of “Sherlock” for the BBC, but he also played Mycroft Holmes (who appeared in the Canon for the first time in “The Greek Interpreter”). Randall Stock describes the manuscript at <www.tinyurl.com/y87e5n6y>.

20061. “Sherlock Holmes Is Real” is an imaginative podcast launched by Toni Sutherland in 2017; now hosted by Talon King, with 28 episodes, it’s available at <www.sherlockholmesisreal.libsyn.com>.
20062. There was a virtual celebration of the 10th anniversary of the BBC “Sherlock” television series, in which Louis Moffat presided over a Q&A session with his parents, Steven Moffat and Sue Vertue, and Mark Gatiss; you can watch the proceedings at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=alJtully_QQ>. And Radio Times celebrated the anniversary with an edited version of an older interview with Steven Moffat on “how Conan Doyle inspired me” that you can read at <www.tinyurl.com/yyz8hdtq>.
20063. Benoit Guilielmo, an ardent Sherlockian in France, writes often about the Canon, in English as well as in French <www.tinyurl.com/y8xzd2e>, and his anthology of “Early Sherlockiana (1927-1934)” will be of special interest to anyone who wants to read early Writings about the Writings.
20064. Titan is continuing its series of manga graphic novels of the BBC’s “Sherlock” series (illustrated by Jay); the latest is “A Scandal in Belgravia: Part One” ($12.99), and you can see samples at <www.tinyurl.com/y2mbfbzy>.
20065. The original British Legion Album <www.tinyurl.com/y9c5hjit> went to auction at Sotheby’s in London this month, estimated at £30,000-£50,000; the album was compiled to aid veterans of the First World War, and a facsimile was published in 1924. The album contains hundreds of inscriptions, signatures, and other entries from a wide range of public figures, including Conan Doyle, who contributed the closing sentences, in manuscript, of The British Campaign in France and Flanders; the album was not sold (no bidder matched the reserve).
20066. There’s not much theatrical news, in this time of the novel coronavirus, but the Central Piedmont Theatre, which had to cancel their production of Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” in July, have instead have gone virtual, and on June 27 streamed “Sherlock Holmes” <www.tinyurl.com/y7nt3x7r>.

20067. A new (and partially improvised) three-actor dramatization "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed on the lawn at the Watermill Theatre in Newbury, Berks., through Aug. 8 <www.watermill.org.uk>.

20068. And the Pantaloons Theatre Company are on tour again in Britain, offering Mark Hayward's four-actor "Sherlock Holmes" <www.thepantaloons.co.uk>.

20069. Because of the pandemic, the Baker Street Irregulars are planning two virtual events in January, with the Distinguished Speaker Lecture on Thursday evening, Jan. 7, and the BSI Annual dinner on Friday, Jan. 8. Visit the BSI web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-event-dates>, and sign up for "News from the BSI" to receive additional information about the birth-day festivities when it's available.

20070. If you would like know more about the Baker Street Irregulars, and our new Wiggins, Michael H. Kean, he was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wol- der for episode 198 of their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog, on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y698vb4b>.

20071. The lawsuit that was filed by the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. over the upcoming Netflix television film based on Nancy Springer's "Enola Holmes" series of book (July 20 #1) will be contested: the film defendants (all those except Nancy Springer and her publishers) have filed a response, denying any infringement on copyrights and trademarks, demanding a jury trial, and asking the court to require the CDEL to reimburse the defendants for their costs.

20072. The defendants state in their response that the CDEL's "claims are barred, in whole or in part, by the equitable doctrine of unclean hands." That's nicely theological: according to Wikipedia, the doctrine can be traced as far back as the Fourth Lateran Council, which was held in 1215. There's much more to the response, of course, and the documents in the case conveniently are available on-line at www.free-sherlock.com

20073. Netflix has released an official teaser for the film, available on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=XrChuCpgbTO>, and has announced that the film is to be released on Sept. 23.

20075. "Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss Reveal Their Top Picks for Female Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a story in Radio Times (July 27): Moffat also noted a potential problem with casting a woman as Watson (the story's on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/y28wkqtr>).

20076. Otto Penzler is both the proprietor of the Mysterious Bookshop in New York and a publisher, and Penzler Publishers is issuing a long series of American Classic Mysteries, reprinting some fine books, often with new introductions and afterwords <www.tinyurl.com/yyrdpkm4> ($25.95 in cloth/$15.95 in paper). Titles of interest to Sherlockians include Anthony Boucher's Rocket to the Morgue and H. F. Heard's A Taste for Honey (2019), and Anthony Boucher's The Case of the Baker Street Irregulars (2020). Vincent Starrett's The Great Hotel Murder (2020), with an introduction by Lyndsay Faye, isn't Sherlockian, but nevertheless a nice mystery.

20077. Edward D. Hoch's Hoch's Ladies (Cincinnati: Crippen & Landru, 2019; 288 pp., $45.00 cloth/$19.00 paper) has an introduction by Michael Dirda and includes Hoch's "A Parcel of Deerstarkers" (reprinted from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine. Jan. 1995) <www.crippenlandru.com>.

20078. Jeffrey Marks now is the publisher at Crippen & Landru, which was founded by Douglas G. Greene (now the series editor), and they continue to publish grand collections of short stories by Ed Hoch and others, as well as long-out-of-print novels.

20079. "I'm a writer but then nobody's perfect" is a delightful epitaph, chosen by someone who was far more than a writer, and had Sherlockian credentials <www.flickr.com/photos/jrlogue/5199635955>. A tip of the deerstalker to Al Gregory for reporting this.

20080. The "Holmes in the Heartland" conference that was scheduled in St. Louis this summer has been rescheduled, and it will now take place on July 9-11, 2021 <www.tinyurl.com/yd5elmpj>.

20081. Cade Deverell has reported a new publisher of miniature books: Tony Firman Bookbinding <www.tonyfirmanbookbinding.com>; you can click on "Plum Park Press" and then on "Doyle" to see their edition of "The Five Orange Pips" ($47.00 postpaid). Earlier editions of "A Scandal in Bohemia", "The Red-Headed League" and "The Blue Carbuncle" are out of print, but might be re-printed, and "The Copper Beeches" is planned for January; if you're inter-ested in any of these, contact Tony Firman at <tonyfirmanbooks@gmail.com>.

20082. Chris Redmond's "Sherlock Holmes, Socks, and Simpson" (his latest contribution to Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere") shows that there always is something new to be said about things mentioned only in passing in the Canon <www.tinyurl.com/y22nq27z>.

20083. John Sutherland's Curiosities of Literature (New York: Skyhorse, 2011; 289 pp., $12.95), accurately sub-titled "a feast for book-lovers," presents a collection of short entries covering a wide variety of literary trivia and miscellanea; the section on "morbid curiosity" includes a brief discussion of "the Baskerville Effect" (can one actually be frightened to death?) and the fascinating story of the only person to have committed suicide in the London Library (the suicide's not Sherlockian, but the London Library is mentioned in the Canon).

20084. The manuscript of "The Land of Mist" (June 20 #1), at auction at Christie's in London, was sold July 30 for £47,500 (including the buyer's premium). Randall Stock offers a discussion of the manuscript at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/land-mist-2020.htm>.

20085. Remote Sensing in Action: The Curious Case of Sherlock Holmes and Albert Einstein, by Enders A. Robinson and Dean Clark (Tulsa: Society of Exploration Geophysicists, 2014; 374 pp., $122.00), is an interesting example of "scientific fiction" combining a fictional narrative with real science; in this book Robinson (a geophysicist) and Clark (a Sherlockian as well as an editor) use Holmes and Watson to explain the impact of Einstein's theory of relativity on the science of remote sensing <www.library.seg.org>.

20086. Just in case you weren't watching television in 1959: there's no mention Sherlock Holmes in "Count the Man Down" (an unsold pilot broadcast by CBS-TV), but it features Nero Wolfe (who of course does have a Sherlockian connection) and Archie Goodwin (played by an actor who may surprise you); kindly reported by J. P. Van Gordon, it's available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=9_AoebAAig4>.

20087. History Extra (the web-site of the BBC History Magazine) offers a 34-minute podcast in which Sarah LeFanu discussing her recent book Something of Themselves: Kipling, Kingsley, Conan Doyle, and the Anglo-Boer War (June 20 #7) <www.tinyurl.com/y4qe4cmu>.

20089. There's also Gavin McIver-Wright, who provided the voice of Conan Doyle, in "I Am Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (an 11-minute segment of the animated series "Xavier Riddle and the Secret Museum" that aired on PBS Kids on Aug. 6 this year). There are lots of repeats on the channel, so you may still be able to watch it.
20091. "Peter Cushing: In His Own Words" is an hour-long video (well, audio with images) of an interview with Cushing, recorded in 1986, long believed to have been lost, recently rediscovered, and issued last year by Rabbit & Snail Films <www.tinyurl.com/yyomufpr>. Cushing discusses his career as an actor, with due attention paid to Sherlock Holmes; there's a trailer at the web-site, and another at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/y46x9yn5>.
20092. This year marks the 100th anniversary of the publication of The Mysterious Affair at Styles, Agatha Christie's first book, celebrated by Publishers Weekly (Aug. 3) with an article ("In the Study, with a Typewriter") by Liz Scheier, who notes that the Guinness World Records credits Agatha Christie as the best-selling fiction writer of all time, as well as the most translated (7,236 translations as of 2017).
20093. On the other hand: Don Hobbs has recorded 11,287 translations of Sherlock Holmes stories, with more to come, in his colorful bibliography. The latest version of "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes" is available on request and without charge (as a 430-MB file via WeTransfer) <221b@verizon.net>.

20094. Bryan Woolley's Mythic Texas (2000) is delightful collection of stories about the weird and wonderful people the author has met and written about in the Dallas Morning News (and it's easy to discover such people in Texas); his "The Adventure of the Eccentric Sherlockians" tells about his encounter with Bill Beeson, Don Hobbs, and Jim Webb. The book's out of print, but readily available from on-line booksellers, and great fun.
20096. Further to the report (June 20 #4) on "Sherlock: The Russian Chronicles" (the new eight-part Russian television mini-series due later this year), there was a nicely illustrated interview with Nurbek Egen, director of the series, in Drama Quarterly (Aug. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/y45gmrzk>. And there is a trailer for the series at <www.tinyurl.com/yxnrdn3>.
20097. The Bradford Telegraph & Argus published a nicely-illustrated story (Aug. 4) <www.tinyurl.com/y57ydxm> on the Cottingley fairies material owned by the National Science and Media Museum; all three of the cameras are at the museum, along with Elsie Wright's drawings of fairies, made in 1983.
20099. Another interesting lot in Sotheby's auction, from the collection of M. T. Johnson, included five Kodak glass lantern slides of the Cottingley fairies <www.tinyurl.com/yyqzqn6c>. Marjorie T. Johnson was the secretary of the Fairy Investigation Society, a "semi-secret occult group" founded in 1927. Estimated at £3,000-£5,000, the lot sold for £4,032.
20100. "How Paul McGuigan Crafted the Visual Language of Sherlock" was the title of an interesting interview (Den of Geek, Aug. 5) with the director of the first four episodes of the BBC series <www.tinyurl.com/y4yxjufb>.
20101. Reported: the SeaWolf Press <www.seawolfpress.com> offers print-on-demand editions of a long list of classic authors, including Conan Doyle; their books are not facsimiles: A Study in Scarlet, for example, was published in 2018, but states 1888 on the title page and has text based on an 1892 British edition, and cover art from Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887.

20102. The Royal Mail has released its long-awaited stamps honoring both Sherlock Holmes and the 10th anniversary of the BBC television series, and offers a wide variety of collectibles: stamps, presentation packs, first day covers, prints, and (courtesy of the Royal Mint) silver medals <www.shop.royalmail.com/special-stamp-issues/sherlock>; the Royal Mail and the Royal Mint are corporations, and are far ahead of the U.S. Postal Service in catering to collectors. There also were plenty of authorized postmarks for the stamps <www.royalmail.com/postmarks>, in addition to the official first-day postmarks.
20103. There are six stamps with designs from the television series, each with a hidden message that can be seen with ultra-violet light, and four stamps in a miniature sheet commemorating stories from the Canon. The miniature sheet was designed by Lithuanian artist Karolis Strautniekas; you can see a selection of his other artwork at <www.strautniekas.com>.
20104. Eagle-eyed musicians were quick to report an error in one of the designs, explained at the Classic FM web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y5rs2ukx>. And yes, it's the Royal Mail's mistake, which isn't in the episode in the series.
20106. Nicholas Basbanes was one of the panelists at the Baker Street Irregulars' conference at the Lilly Library last year, and he has now written the introduction for W. Bolingbroke Johnson's The Widening Stain, recently reprinted in Otto Penzler's series of American mystery classics; Otto's 54-minute interview with Nick at the launch party for the book is available at <www.tinyurl.com/yxmam5lw>.
20107. Karen Murdock reports that Stanfords offers a "Sherlock Holmes Map of London" showing London as it was in 1891 and keyed to locations in the four novels (£9.99) <www.tinyurl.com/y2ha3mus>. There is a different (and interesting) interactive Sherlockian map of the world (with descriptions in Spanish) on-line at <www.sherlockland.com>.

20110. Roland-François Lack says his Cine-Tourist web-site is “about connections between maps and films” but there’s much more than that, and it’s well worth exploring <www.thecinetaurist.net>; there isn’t a search engine, so: click on “London” and then on “Sherlock Holmes” for a quick tour of his many Sherlockian discoveries. A tip of the deerstalker to Steve Rothman for reporting this interesting web-site.
20111. Linda Hein reports that Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are available for consultations at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif.; bring your friends or family, and a problem, and if you don’t have a problem, one can easily be arranged. Facemasks and social distancing are required, and tea and refreshments will be available <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
20112. One can still make good use of libraries while staying at home during the pandemic. The Toronto Reference Library has digitized 375 items in their Arthur Conan Doyle Collection: go to <www.tinyurl.com/yypgdpez> and click on “View digitized items” to have fun exploring. They also have created an imaginative virtual Sherlock Holmes Escape Room, which you’ll find on- line at <www.tinyurl.com/y69x9ghn>.
20113. A few years ago Dana Richards reported Doyle’s Delight, the highest peak in Belize, named in honor of “The Lost World” (June 17 #6). Now Geraldine Beare has noted Doyle’s Delight Street in Balmopan, the capital of Belize; the street’s only a few blocks long, but Google Maps shows you can dine at Bellavi’s Bistro, and there’s a nearby bed-and-breakfast to stay in.
20114. It’s nice to know that the Sesame Street Workshop has not abandoned Sherlock Hemlock, who appears often (although briefly) in the audience during “The Not-Too-Late Show with Elmo” (which launched on HBO Max on May 27). You can see him, Howard Ostrom reports, in the third row at the far right in a preview available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/yxvzxo9u>.
20116. Laurie R. King’s web-site <www.laurierking.com> always is interesting, and her blogs always entertaining; see “The Case of Laurie and the Monegasque Prince” (July 31) and “Feisty Old Ladies” (Aug. 12). She also reports in her occasional newsletter “News & Nonsense” that she is closing in on 200 pages in the first draft of her next Mary Russell novel Castle Shade.
20117. All of the seats at the new (and partially improvised) three-actor dramatization of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (on the lawn at the Watermill Theatre in Newbury, Berks.) sold out in the first 24 hours, so the run has been extended through Sept. 6 <www.watermill.org.uk>.

20119. “Enola Holmes” debuted on Netflix on Sept. 23. The tomatometer at Rotten Tomatoes <www.rottentomatoes.com> had it at 89% favorable for top critics, and 90% favorable for all critics on Sept. 22, and the scores later in the month were 95% and 92%. No count is available for Sherlockian critics.
20120. If you would like to know more about Enola Holmes, now that you have seen the film, Scott Monty and Burt Wolder have an interesting interview with Nancy Springer (the author of the series of books about Enola) at their “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y6c5kqel>. There are six books in the series, so more films are possible.
20122. There is nothing to report on the dueling lawsuits over the film (August 20 #1), which may or may not lead to a trial; the filings are on-line at <www.free-sherlock.com>.
20123. Earlier this year the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. filed an application for a trademark for the words “Sherlock Holmes” in the category “entertainment services” <www.tinyurl.com/y5262ctg>; the application was published last month, and this month Les Klinger formally filed opposing the application (as he did in 2018 when the CDEL applied for a trademark in the category “printed matter” and then withdrew the application). The documents in the case also are available at <www.free-sherlock.com>.
20124. Jennie Paton has noted an animated video “Five Orange Seeds” (recorded by the Erkonauts (“think of a Prog version of Motorhead that sometimes leans towards Gojira, sometimes toward Mastodon, sometimes even New Model Army”) and inspired by the Sherlock Holmes story; you can see and hear the song at <www.theerkonauts.streamlink.to/fiveorangeseeds>.
20125. None of them are the Mazarin Stone, but you can see some very attractive yellow diamonds at <www.graff.com/house/2019/wonder-yellow-diamonds>; the actual “Mazarin” diamond, which never was owned by the Cardinal, is part of the Iranian crown jewels (see the Baker Street Journal, Sept. 1974, p. 141-145).
20126. “New Marker Designates Rhinebeck as the Violet Capital of the World” was the headline on a story <www.tinyurl.com/y2pfy5vy> that aired on WAMC-FM on Aug. 6; Rhinebeck will be remembered fondly by those who made the Beekman Arms their headquarters for the occasional Sherlockian dinners at the Culinary Institute of America. The story mentions Basil Rathbone in passing, and his play “The Captive”, which was closed by the vice squad in New York City in 1927; Rathbone and the rest of the cast were arrested, along with the lead actor and cast of another play, which received much more attention the next day. That lead actor was Mae West, who was appearing in her play “Sex”.

20128. And the 2021 R. Joel Senter Sr. Essay Contest, sponsored by Carolyn Senter and the Beacon Society, is now open for submissions from students between the 4th and 12 grades, in the U.S. and Canada. More information about the contest can be found at <www.tinyurl.com/y3e8c94u>.
20129. “You don’t happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?” asked Sherlock Holmes (in “The Three Gables”). There are only five complete copies of the First Folio in private hands, according to Christie’s, and here’s your chance to own the sixth, which will be at auction at Christie’s in New York on Oct. 14, estimated at $4 million to $6 million. It’s the same copy scheduled at auction on Apr. 24, and June 12; both sales were cancelled due to the coronavirus. You can read all about the First Folio at <www.tinyurl.com/rwt2lla>.
20130. Marie Burrow reports an attractive and literate Sherlock Holmes 1000-piece jigsaw puzzle <www.tinyurl.com/y27ujgtvh> ($24.99) made by Cobble Hill in Canada; just the thing for keeping busy while staying home.

20131. There have been occasional Sherlockian allusions in the “Dennis the Menace” comic strip created by Hank Ketcham, and Dennis appears in Sherlockian costume in original artwork drawn by Ketcham on an envelope that also has stamps that were issued by the U.S. Postal Service in 1986 to honor T. S. Eliot (who created Macavity the Mystery Cat) and a Sherlockian cachet that was created for a stamp exposition held in Long Beach, Calif., in 1994. It’s quite likely that it was a Sherlockian who put everything together, and it’s nice that the envelope now is owned by a Sherlockian: Jerry Margolin.
20132. Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Was Not, edited by Christopher Sequeira (Melbourne: IFWG Publishing, 2019; 324 pp., $17.99), is an anthology offering a dozen new pastiches that involve Holmes with doctors other than Watson, and in cases of “mind-bending multi-versal mayhem” full of fantasy, metaphysics, and the supernatural.
20133. William Gillette and his wife (aka Tyke and Teddie Niver) are once again to be seen at (although not yet in) Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Conn., on Sunday afternoons <www.tinyurl.com/y4lkfvlx>.
20134. “Serial Flasher Who Wears ‘Sherlock Holmes Hat’ Sparks Hunt after Striking Three Times” was the headline on a story in the London Daily Star on Sept. 3, reporting that “a pervert is on the loose in a leafy Kent town wearing a rucksack, a deerstalker hat, and not much else” in Tunbridge Wells. According to the KentLive and KentOnline web-sites, he was seen three times in two days, and spokesman for the Kent Police said that “the three incidents are suspected to be linked”

September 20 #3

20135. Owen R. Minter’s The Shrouded Sword (Charlotte: Minter, 2019; 274 pp., $12.99) is an entertaining middle-grade fantasy (for youngsters aged 8 to 12) that involves three children with magic, mystery, time travel, and legend; the story’s nicely told, with interesting Canonical allusions, and is billed as the first of a series. The author’s web-site and blog are at <www.owenminter.com>.
20136. More and more Sherlockian societies are holding virtual meetings, and Jennie Paton is collecting video, when it’s available, to archive for posterity how Sherlockians are keeping things going during the pandemic. If you have any special programming of this sort, you’re welcome to share it with Jennie <jpaton221@gmail.com>
20137. Video of the Red Circle of Washington’s two virtual meetings, it should be noted, are available at <www.redcircledc.org>; tune it to see performances by Laurie R. King and Nicholas Utechin.
20138. If you would like to Zoom in to virtual society meetings hither, thither, and yon, many of them are listed in Ron Fish’s “Sherlockian Calendar” at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>; if your society’s meetings aren’t listed, you can send information to Ron at <ronf404@al.com>.
20139. From page to stage to video: “Yūkoku no Moriāti” [“Moriarty the Patriot”] is a Japanese manga (February 18 #1) that inspired a stage musical (December 18 #4) and now a video series that will premiere in Japan on Oct. 11, according to a story at the Anime Mojo (Sept. 3) <www.tinyurl.com/y343qzqx> that has a trailer for the series. Moriarty is an orphan who as a young man “seeks to remove the ills caused by England’s strict class system.”
20140. Christopher C. Courter has launched a Facebook group called “The Sherlock Holmes Exchange” (“a free and open place for everyone to sell, purchase, or trade all things related to the great detective or the Victorian era”) <www.facebook.com/groups/sherlockholmesexchange>; many people already have signed up for what appears to be a Sherlockian combination of Craigslist and Etsy.
20141. Cliff Goldfarb has kindly reported an article (“Scientific American vs. the Spiritualists”) in the magazine’s September issue, which celebrates its 175th anniversary <www.tinyurl.com/y4p3w6wa>; Katherine Harmon Courage notes that it was Conan Doyle who suggested to its publisher Orson Munn that instead of covering psychic work as an ongoing debate, the magazine ought to take an official stance on it, and that led to the famous contest that pitted Houdini against the medium Margery. It wasn’t until 1942 that the magazine announced that it was concluding the investigation, announcing that “it is, perhaps, too much to hope that it may ever be permanently settled.
20142. Publishers Weekly reported (August 31) on news from the Beijing International Book Fair: sales of children’s books went up 43% over last year, with the DK Natural History: The Ultimate Visual Guide to Everything on Earth the #1 title on the bestseller list; the top ten included a new 40-volume “Detective Sherlock Holmes” illustrated series for primary school students. There’s more information about the set at <www.tinyurl.com/y5ljqnti>.

20143. Mary McNamara had an amusing and interesting column (“Sherlock Holmes and Mary Russell Are Getting Me Through COVID-19. They Can Help You Too”) in the Los Angeles Times on July 24. She interviewed Laurie R. King, and learned that her latest book was planned to be set in the Tower of London; read the column to find out why she changed her mind <www.tinyurl.com/y2c7czuv>.
20144. “Cyclist Rescued from Infamous Sherlock Holmes Bog on Dartmoor,” according to Devon Live (Sept. 14) <www.tinyurl.com/y2gzvzor>; a Dartmoor search and rescue team assisted a 51-year-old cyclist who had become stuck in boggy ground in Fox Tor Mire (believed by many to have been the inspiration for the Grimpen Mire).
20145. Lyndsay Faye has nice things to say about Vincent Starrett and his novel in her introduction to his The Great Hotel Murder, recently reprinted by Penzler Publishrs (August 20 #1); you can read her introduction at the Crime Reads blog <www.tinyurl.com/y6su3tsl>.
20146. “An Indian Academic’s Lone Fight to Save the Great Andamanese,” according to the headline on an article in TRT World (Sept. 8) that provides an interesting look at Tonga’s world today <www.tinyurl.com/y4wmc5f>.
20147. Soot and Steel: Dark Tales of London, edited by Ian Whates (Alconbury Wes-ton: NewCon Press, 2019; 260 pp., £12.99/$15.99), is an imaginative anthology of stories, old and new, about the darker aspects of the city; one of the new stories is Paul Di Filippo’s “From the Casebook of Master Wiggins, Esq.” (a pastiche from the pen of one of the Irregulars).
20148. Also from NewCon is Simon Clark’s Case of the Bedevilled Poet (2017; 106 pp., £6.99/$7.99), a fantasy novella set in London during the blitz, when poet Jack Crofton becomes involved with two elderly gentlemen who claim to be the Holmes and Watson who inspired Conan Doyle’s stories.
20149. “Try to contact the dead with true believer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and debunk seances with his friend Harry Houdini” during an “Evening of Illumination” at the Midway Village Museum in Rockford, Ill., on Oct. 30; more information at <www.tinyurl.com/y2986ugy> (click on “Events”).
20150. Dame Diana Rigg died on Sept. 10. She began her acting career on stage in 1957, became a star as Emma Peel in the television series “The Avengers” (1961-1969), and went on to a long and storied career that included introductions for programs (including Jeremy Brett’s “Sherlock Holmes” series) for “Mystery” on PBS-TV from 1989-to 2003.
20151. Thursday Next, who first appeared in Jasper Fforde’s novel The Eyre Affair (2001), has been described as “a genre send-up hailed as an instant classic” and after starring in seven novels has her own Wikipedia entry. She is from Swindon (where Sherlock Holmes had lunch) and her uncle is Mycroft (quite possibly Holmes). First Among Sequels (August 07 #3) was great fun, and so is The Well of Lost Plots (2003), which also offers occasional mentions of Mycroft and other intriguing Canonical allusions. Fforde has an interesting web-site at <www.jasperfforde.com>.

20152. Sherlock Holmes spin-offs continue to be popular in Japan: one of them is “IQ246: Karei Naru Jikenbo” [“IQ246: The Cases of a Royal Genius”]. The 10-episode one-hour series debuted on TBS on October 16, 2016: Sharaku Homoji is the eldest son of a distinguished family that has studied crime for generations, with the eldest son always having an IQ of 246; he is assisted by Soko Wato a detective assigned to escort him, and his personality and deductions owe much to the latest BBC series. DVD sets are available at YouTube and Amazon (with and without subtitles).
20153. There’s also a Chinese spin-off: “Shao nu da ren” [“Maiden Holmes”]; the series is set in the Qi kingdom in the 6th century, and you can watch the first episodes (with subtitles) at <www.tinyurl.com/y6lzwhwa>. Thanks to Aziz Bin Adam for the report, and Jennie Paton for the link.
20154. Just in time for Halloween: they’re outdoors, so corn mazes seem to be in vogue, and there are Sherlockian corn mazes, one of them in Mt. Pleasant, Wis. <borzynskis.com/corn-maze>, and the other in Mt. Brydges, Ont. (near London, southwest of Toronto <www.tinyurl.com/yyde8b6j>).
20155. Larry Millett launched his series of pastiches about Sherlock Holmes and Shadwell Rafferty in St. Paul, Minn., in 1995; they were (and are) great fun, and nicely done, and still available from the University of Minnesota Press in trade paperbacks ($14.95 each). The Magic Bullet is an interesting locked-room mystery in which Holmes provides assistance from London.
20156. Joe Ruby died on Aug. 26. He began his career in animation at Walt Disney Productions and in 1959 went to work for Hanna-Barbera as a writer; he and his long-time partner Ken Spears created the cowardly Great Dane “Scooby-Doo” (who sometimes is seen in Sherlockian costume) and many other series.
20158. Reported: a new deck of “Sherlock Holmes” playing cards, with artwork in full color <www.tinyurl.com/y5tb8row>, available from Nicky Bird Designs in the U.K.; £6.00 (plus £6.00 postage to the U.S.) (postage per deck is less if you order more than one deck).
20160. I’ve long described this newsletter as “six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean.” If you would like to run a word-search on a large file with all of the text since March 1985 (that’s when I entered the computer age) can now do just that, thanks to Steve Mason, who updates his compilation each month and makes it available at the web-site of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star <www.tinyurl.com/ybxy2y2m>.
20161. September 20 #6 Further to the earlier report (May 20 #7) on the new SHERLOCK inexpensive diagnostic tool for detecting nucleic acids from disease-carrying microbes (developed from CRISPR by Sherlock Biosciences), the Tata Group in India has used CRISPR to create a rapid-test kit for COVID-19 that they have named the FNCAS9 Editor Linked Uniform Detection Assay (FELUDA), honoring the Bengali private investigator created by Satyajit Ray, who was inspired by Sherlock Holmes (his mother used to read the stories to him in English).
20162. Original artwork by Sidney Paget is coming to auction in the U.K. on Oct. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/y52h4v3a>; it’s a non-Sherlockian pencil and watercolor painting of boats and a sailing ship on a stormy sea.
20163. John E. Pforr (“Police-Constable Cook”) died on Sept. 23. He served with distinction during his long career with the Secret Service, and was an enthusiastic Sherlockian: he was Gasogene XXV of the Six Napoleons of Baltimore, and a member of many other east-coast Sherlockian societies. John received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1996.
20164. Drive-in theaters are making a comeback during the pandemic. Jennie Paton has reported that there was a screening this month of Robert Downey Jr.’s “Sherlock Holmes” on an inflatable screen at a pop-up drive-in in Tasmania (by nice coincidence at the Baskerville Raceway).
20165. Reported: “The Adventures of John Watson” is a new computer game from ArmiGames for Android phones and tablets; the first adventure can be played without charge, and there are four more games you can play after a single in-app purchase ($3.49/£2.99) <www.tinyurl.com/yyzsbzoc>. They expect to have a version for iPhones and iPads available by the end of November.
20166. Reported: Richard L. Kellogg’s Barry Baskerville’s Christmas Mystery (Airship 27) is the seventh in his series (illustrated by Gary Kato) about boy detective Barry Baskerville.
20167. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has decided not to have their annual dinner in January, because of the novel coronavirus, but they are holding virtual meetings, and they have announced an attractive Christmas card for this year. Details at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.
20168. Some theaters are opening: Ken Ludwig’s “The Game’s Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays” is due at the Foothills Playhouse in Easley, S.C., Oct. 2-18 <www.foothillspayhouse.org>.
20169. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” is scheduled at the Triad Stage in Greensboro, N.C., Nov. 15-Dec. 13 <www.triadstage.org>.
20170. Bilal Dardai’s new dramatization of Jamyang Norbu’s “The Mandala of Sherlock Holmes” will be performed at the Seattle Center in Seattle, Wash., on May 15-June 30, 2021 <www.book-it.org>.

October 20 #1

20171. Planning continues for the birthday festivities in January, and final details will be available in mid-November, at the Baker Street Irregulars’ web-site at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/bsi-event-dates>. You can also sign up for more timely “news from the BSI” e-mail alerts.
20172. There’s more news about the lawsuit filed by the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. over the Netflix television film “Enola Holmes” (August 20 #1): Penguin Random House (the publisher of Nancy Springer’s Enola Holmes books) has filed its own response challenging the CDEL, citing (among many other defenses) the doctrine of laches. You can read their filing on-line at <www.free-sherlock.com>.
20173. The Deadline web-site has reported that “Enola Holmes” was watched by an estimated 76 million households during the first 28 days it was available at Netflix.
20174. “Giant Rat Receives Award” could have been the headline on the article in the N.Y. Times on Sept 25 <www.tinyurl.com/y65cny5k>, but the actual headline on the story read “Rat That Sniffs Out Land Mines Received Award for Bravery.” I’ve reported before (January 20 #2) on APOPO <www.apopo.org>, an organization that trains giant African pouched rats to detect unexploded landmines in countries in Africa and Asia (the rats don’t weigh enough to set off the mines, which can then be disarmed); APOPO also trains rats to detect tuberculosis in mucous samples, and to help pursue smugglers who traffic in endangered species. The giant rat, named Mugawa, was honored for “lifesaving bravery and devotion to duty,” and (of course APOPO welcomes donations from anyone who wants to adopt a giant rat. You can see video of Mugawa at <www.pdsa.org.uk>.

20175. “During Sherlock Holmes’ long absence from Victorian era London when the world believe him to have perished at Reichenbach Falls, an unlikely duo takes up the crime-solving mantle: Barnaby Druthers and Irene Adler! Are they up to the task?” That is the premise of “The Adventures of Barnaby Druthers”, a 30-minute radio series broadcast during the Nutmeg Junction Radio Hour at WAPJ-FM in Torrington, Conn. The series launched in January, and the first two episodes, and additional information, are available at <www.josephquirk.wixsite.com/barnabydruthers>.
20176. Don Herron, who has been leading a Dashiell Hammett Tour in San Francisco since 1977, blogs at “Up and Down These Mean Streets” <www.donherron.com> and casts his net widely, occasionally discussing Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, August Derleth, and Ted Schulz.
20177. “However Improbable” is a new biweekly podcast launched by Marisa Mercurio and Sarah Kolb that will tour the Canon, story by story; you can listen in at <www.howeverimprobablepodcast.com>.
20178. The rare complete copy of Shakespeare’s first folio was sold at auction at Christie’s (in New York) on Oct. 14 for $9,978,000 (including the buyer’s premium), setting a new world auction record for any work of literature. It was in “The Three Gables” that Holmes asked Mrs. Maberley whether she might have a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it.

20179. Otto Penzler’s Mysterious Obsession (first published in 1919) has been reissued in a third printing (New York: Penzler Publishing, 2020; 163 pp., $40.00); it’s the story of his magnificent collection of mystery and detection, and of his career as a collector and bookseller and publisher, and he has written about some of the treasures that were on the shelves of his magnificent library <www.tinyurl.com/y680bzqr>; he does mention Holmes and Conan Doyle, from time to time, and some of his Sherlockian friends, and his stories are great fun.
20180. John Shaw’s interesting comments on “The Casebook of Copyright” <www.tinyurl.com/y2yd5jn9> appeared as a guest blog at the IKPat web-site, accompanied by imaginative artwork of a “Cat Sherlock” (created by an artist who uses the nom “Pinkleon”).
20182. Reported: “The Brazilian Cat” in The Golden Age of British Short Stories 1890-1914, edited by Philip Hensher (London: Penguin Classics, 2020; 640 pages, £25.00 in cloth).
20184. “This is a fan letter,” Susan Rice wrote to Ray Betzner (in 1992). They shared an intense interest in Vincent Starrett, and Ray’s splendid tribute to her is at his “Studies in Starrett” blog at <www.tinyurl.com/y5euyhu7>. Many more memories of Susan, with colorful images, will be found at Scott Monty’s “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog <www.tinyurl.com/y5kyu8rd>.
20185. Original artwork by Harry Rountree (a grisaille illustration for The Lost World) was sold at David Lay Auctions in Penzance on Sept. 17; estimated at £40-£60, it sold for £2,600 <www.tinyurl.com/y4v2ydw1>.
20186. Letters from Conan Doyle come to auction with some frequency, many of them actually written by Conan Doyle, but also some written by one of his secretaries; one of those secretaries was Alfred H. Wood, and one of the letters he wrote for Conan Doyle was at auction on Sept. 30 at University Archives <www.tinyurl.com/yxuw93u8>. Wood carefully added a tiny “W” to the signature to show that the letter was not written by Conan Doyle. The estimate was $1,500-$1,700, and it sold for $2,400.

20187. Martin Erwig’s ONCE UPON AN ALGORITHM (Cambridge: MIT Press, 2017; 315 pp., $29.95), subtitled “how stories explain computing,” deals not with computers, but rather with computer science (the study of systematic problem-solving), and used Hansel and Gretel, Sherlock Holmes, Indiana Jones, Harry Potter, and others to explain algorithms and languages encountered in computing; it’s not for the faint-hearted or the mathematically-challenged, but it’s interesting to discover how useful Sherlock Holmes can be to teachers and students.
20188. “Mycroft Poppins—Sherlockalifragilisticexpialidocious” (reported by Roger Johnson) <www.youtube.com/watch?v=mMjQmE8hRzc&t=24s> goes fast and furious (and is amusing).
20189. “Murder Is Her Hobby: Frances Glessner Lee and The Nutshell Studies of Unexplained Death” was a delightful exhibition at the Smithsonian’s Renwick Gallery in 2017-2018. Les Klinger has kindly forwarded an article in Atlas Obscura (Oct. 6, 2017) <www.tinyurl.com/yakykd87> with grand close-up images of her miniature rooms, one of which is Sherlockian.
20190. Sorry about that: the statues of Sherlock and Enola Holmes in London (September 20 #1) are not in Baker Street, but rather in the Marylebone Road, outside the entrance to the Baker Street underground station.
20191. Sherlock Biosciences is continuing its work on the new SHERLOCK diagnostic tool developed from CRISPR (May 20 #7), and has launched a 221b Foundation that will support racial and gender diversity in science, technology, engineering, and math; you can read the company’s Sept. 15 press release at <www.tinyurl.com/y6mj89mz>.
20192. Yūko Takeuchi died on Sept. 27. She began her acting career on television in Japan in 1996, and went on to award-winning performances on television and in films; she appeared in the title role in the popular eight-episode series “Miss Sherlock” on HBO Asia and Hulu Japan in 2018.
20193. The BBC reports that “pub giant Greene King” is cutting jobs after deciding that tighter lockdown restrictions mean some pubs will have to close, and that 79 sites will stay closed for the time being, with about a third of them expected to close permanently <www.tinyurl.com/y2nczrk2>. Greene King is the owner of The Sherlock Holmes in London; the pub’s still open, Roger Johnson has written, but only on weekends.
20194. <www.wikipedia.org/wiki/Category:Sherlock_Holmes_characters> is an interesting discovery at Wikipedia, reported by David Pinto. There aren’t all that many characters listed, but there’s a link to a separate list of “minor Sherlock Holmes characters” that’s also far from complete. Wikipedia allows users to edit entries, so the lists may lengthen.
20195. Scott Monty spotted an interesting story that ran on CNN Style (Sept. 25); it began “On a journey from Kenya to Hollywood, Kiran Shah has built one of the most impressive careers in blockbuster history. So why don’t you know more about him?” It’s well worth reading <www.tinyurl.com/y45sq7r7>, and there’s a Sherlockian connection not mentioned in the story. One of Kiran Shah’s many roles was Tonga in Granada’s “The Sign of Four” (1987).

20196. Kansas detectives investigating a report of unlawful relations between a staffer at the Sedgwick County Jail and a female inmate noted e-mail references to Sherlock Holmes and Inspector G. Lestrade in communications between the two, and quickly focused on deputy Timothy Baskerville, who has been criminally charged in the case; details will be found in a story in the Wichita Eagle (Oct. 2) <www.tinyurl.com/y348spoc>.
- 20197.
20198. Tony Tanner died on Sept. 8. He was a British actor, writer, and director who also worked in the U.S. and was best known for directing "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" on Broadway in 1982; he also played Sidney Prince in the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in New York in 1975.
20199. "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Mutineers" was Dean Jobb's "Stranger Than Fiction" column in the Sept.-Oct. 2020 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine; you can read the column on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/yygnedu7>.
20200. Quick quiz: who is this famous Sherlockian actor?
20201. Gerald Lynch's The Dying Detective <www.tinyurl.com/y53v7jy6> {published this month} is a new (and non-Sherlockian) mystery with the same title as one of the Canonical stories; the same title was used by Leif G. W. Persson for a mystery published in Finland in 2010 and translated into English in 2017. Other authors have written non-Sherlockian books with Canonical titles. Can you think of any?
20202. Sherlock Holmes continues to turn up in commercials from time to time, and Jennie Paton has noted a 5-minute South Korean commercial for the LG Cord-Zero A9 stick vacuum <vimeo.com/465336598>.
20203. Paul French's article on "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Case of Several Million Chinese Fans" <chinachannel.org/2020/09/18/holmes> in the Los Angeles Review of Books (Sept. 18) is an interesting account of "how Holmes came to China."
20204. The original artwork by Sidney Paget at auction in the U.K. on Oct. 9 (September 20 #6) <www.tinyurl.com/y52h4v3a> (a non-Sherlockian pencil and watercolor painting of boats and a sailing ship on a stormy sea) sold for £260.
20205. Marilyn MacGregor ("V.V. 341") died on Sept. 16. She worked as an administrator in the sociology department at UC Berkeley, a consultant for the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, and as a teacher at UC Davis. Marilyn was a devoted Sherlockian (and Wodehousean), and served the Bodymaster of the Scowrs and Molly Maguires of San Francisco for 23 years; she also was one of the founders of the Clients of Adrian Mulliner. She received her Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1999.
20206. In plenty of time for holiday hinting (or shopping), Randall Stock's annual informative nominations for the best Sherlock Holmes books/DVDs of the year will go on-line at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm>. There also are recommendations of older Sherlockiana, all with helpful explanations of his choices.

October 20 #5

20207. Frank Windsor died on Sept. 30. He began his acting career in British radio in the 1950s, went on to roles on stage, screen, and television, becoming best known as Sergeant John Watt (promoted over the years to Chief Superintendent) in the long-running television series "Z-Cars" and "Softly, Softly: Taskforce". He also performed as Watson on tour in Britain in Brian Clemens' "Holmes and the Ripper" (1988).
20208. Who was that famous Sherlockian actor? Jeremy Brett, in Etonian attire in 1949. Educated at Eton College, he claimed to have been an "academic disaster" (attributing his learning difficulties to dyslexia).
20209. The animated series "Yūkoku no Moriāti" ["Moriarty the Patriot"] (September 20 #3) is now being broadcast in Japan (Moriarty is an orphan who as a young man "seeks to remove the ills caused by England's strict class system.")
20210. Crunchyroll reported on Oct. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/y6mxzkfn> that there's a Moriarty the Patriot Café now open in Ikebukuro (northwest of Tokyo). CBR (formerly the Comic Book Review) has an interesting on-line discussion of Sherlockian animations, from "Sherlock Hound" to "Moriarty the Patriot", at <www.cbr.com/sherlock-holmes-moriarty-the-patriot-anime-history>. Two episodes with English subtitles are at <www.tinyurl.com/yy6sn437> and at <www.tinyurl.com/yxakk4tl>. Jennie Paton warns against downloading programs from sites such as Kissanime, where you are exposed to all sorts of malware and other dire consequences.
20211. The first volume of the manga of "Moriarty the Patriot" (written by Ryōsuke Takeuchi and illustrated by Hikaru Miyoshi) also been published as a book by VIZ Media <www.viz.com. (208 pp., $9.99, and digitally ($6.99). A preview of the first chapter is available free; the first volume's nicely done indeed, and of course there are more to come.
20212. Was there a cat at 221B Baker Street? Ailurophiles certainly will welcome a discovery made by James Edward Holroyd, noted in the summer 1970 issue of the Sherlock Holmes Journal; now Roger Johnson has tracked down a full-color image of the cover artwork by R. Noel Pocock for the Nelson seven-penny 1920 reprint of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Roger also has found more information about Pocock and his artwork in Steve Holland's blog <www.tinyurl.com/y33plth6> (which also shows Pocock's colorful illustrations for Wodehouse novels).
20213. Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel, Castle Shade, due next June, has cover artwork <www.laurierking.com/books/castle-shade/overview>; Laurie is not sure that it's Mary in disguise, but she kindly offers a plot summary by way of a teaser. She also is proud of In League with Sherlock Holmes: Stories Inspired by the Sherlock Holmes Canon, the latest in the series of anthologies she has edited with Leslie S. Klinger, due from Pegasus Books in December.
20214. The Baker Street Players at Baker Street West have launched a podcast, and you can listen to "The Legacy: A Golden Evening with Arthur Conan Doyle, Oscar Wilde, and Joseph M. Stoddard" at <www.bakerstreetwest.com>. Their next production will be "The Speckled Band" (due later this month).

20215. "Sherlock: The Russian Chronicles" (the new Russian mini-series that stars Maxim Matveyev as Sherlock Holmes) launched on the START cable channel in Russia on Oct. 22. The first of the eight episodes opens in London, where Holmes encounters Jack the Ripper and pursues him to Russia. The production values and supporting characters are excellent; there's lots of bloodshed and violence, and an interesting script. A trailer is available at <www.tinyurl.com/yxhrdnn3>, and there's a teaser at <<https://f.io/dXL0tniK>>. The first episode, with subtitles in English, is available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=uns48W10e9c>. They've also come up with an imaginative promotion <www.youtube.com/watch?v=A4-G6jhs-V4>, as reported by Alexander Orlov. No word yet on international distribution.
20216. Richard A. Lupoff died on Oct. 22. He began writing for and editing science-fiction fanzines in the 1960s and became an expert on Edgar Rice Burroughs and an established science-fiction author in the 1970s. Lupoff also wrote mysteries, including Sherlockian pastiches collected (with a recipe for Giant Rat of Sumatra Stew) in his Universal Sherlock Holmes (2007).
20217. Karen Kozenczuk's article "Off the Beaten Path: The Bee's Knees" on-line at Journal & Topics on Oct. 14 <www.tinyurl.com/y5w3g6ll> is an intriguing exploration of just what kind of bees Sherlock Holmes kept when he was in retirement in Sussex.

20218. Penang lawyers are mentioned twice in the Canon, and Rik Sheperd has noted an intriguing article <www.canequest.com/penang-lawyer> that explains just what a Penang lawyer was (and is, if you can find one) and include mention of lex baculina (which, if you don't understand Latin, is easily found on the Internet).
20221. Jennie Paton discovered "Tesla Wireless Radio" at YouTube, offering downloads of a long list of old Sherlockian radio programs and films, and lots more non-Sherlockian material <www.youtube.com/user/xtcg953>.
20222. The Curse of Sherlock Holmes: The Basil Rathbone Story, by David Clayton (Cheltenham; History Press, 2020; 190 pp. $27.95) is an entertaining biography of the actor who personified Sherlock Holmes on film and radio for more than a decade. He had a colorful life, and a long career on stage, screen radio, and television, and still has a legion of fans.

October 20 #7

20223. "Back about 1903 I was one of four schoolboys (in Baltimore)," Christopher Morley wrote (to Jerry Neal Williamson) in 1949, "who founded probably the very first secret Sherlockian society in America --- we called ourselves TSO-4." The letter went from Otto Penzler's collection to Heritage Auctions and sold on Oct. 16 at $875.00 (including the buyer's premium). There is more to Morley's letter, and you can read the rest of it at <www.tinyurl.com/y4wjzff>.
20224. Tyke and Teddie Niver (aka William and Helen Gillette) starred in the East Haddam News on Oct. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/y4vmfp8v>.
20225. Another spin-off television series in Japan is "Sherlock: Untold Stories" (2019), with 11 one-hour episodes set in present-day Tokyo; Shishio Homare (a genius working as a freelance crime consultant) is assisted by Junichi Wakamiya (a psychiatrist who thinks Homare is ignorant and arrogant at the start, but becomes more comfortable with him). Some the programs can be seen (with subtitles in English) at <www.dailymotion.com/playlist/x6w95m>.
20227. The Disney Comics Randomness web-site noted (Feb. 24) that Peachtree PlayThings <www.tinyurl.com/y3kh9hzk> has started reprinting stories from old issues of Disney comics, apparently available only at Dollar Tree stores, where Jim Suszynski found Disney Mickey Mouse #3 (2019) offering all three parts of "The Mysterious Crystal Ball" (from Walt Disney Comics and Stories, 1954); Mickey is assisted by detective Shamrock Bones. Copies also are available at eBay.
20230. Sherlockians have long made a visit to New York's iconic Strand Bookstore an important part of the January birthday festivities (wise Sherlockians, of course, visit the store when it's not full of other Sherlockians). The N.Y. Post reported on Oct. 23 <www.tinyurl.com/yxg4sdrq> that the Strand might have to close because of declining business during the pandemic; the response was so great, according to a story in Newsweek, that the store's web-site crashed <www.tinyurl.com/y3dl4vo8>. Fear not: the Strand's web-site is back <www.strandbooks.com>.

20231. And now for something completely different: Helder Guimarães is an astonishing magician. You can learn much about him at his web-site <www.thisishelder.com>, and you'll find additional video at YouTube. Dan Stashower and I have seen "The Present" (and will be seeing "The Future"). Like the late Ricky Jay, Helder is so skillful that even if you know what he's going to do, you can't see him doing it.
20232. More Than an Actor: The Story of Peter H., by W. Grey Champion (Page Publishing, 2018; 343 pp., $17.38), offers a fictionalized biography of Peter Jeremy William Huggins, better known to Sherlockians as Jeremy Brett, from his birth in 1933 to his death in 1995; it's a warmly sympathetic account of family, friends, and fellow actors, as well as his career and medical and personal problems, based on contemporary sources but embellished with invented dialogue and situations.
20234. It's the sort of comic strip that future generations may not understand, but it certainly was appropriate in these times of COVID-19: Mike Peters' "Mother Goose & Grimm" (kindly forwarded by Kelly Blau) was nicely Sherlockian on Oct. 18.
20235. There's more (well, at least some) Sherlockian theater to forecast. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is scheduled at the Fairfield Community Arts Center in Fairfield, Ohio, Nov. 13-22 <www.fairfieldfootlighters.org>.
20236. Joe LoCicero's new adaptation of "Sherlock Holmes and the Blue Carbuncle" will be fully staged and recorded by the Long Beach Shakespeare Company at the Helen Borgers Theatre in Long Beach, Calif., and available for viewing on-line from Nov. 26 to Dec. 31 <www.lbshakespeare.org>.
20237. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at the Belfry Theatre in Noblesville, Ind., from Nov. 27 to December 13 www.belfrytheatre.com

November 20 #1

20238. It has been erroneously reported that the Baker Street Irregulars' Annual Dinner in 2021 has been cancelled. As was announced three months ago, the BSI will hold a virtual dinner meeting, and other activities, in January, instead of in-person events. The virtual dinner will feature all the usual toasts, presentations, music, and awards and honors. Planning already is underway for a live, in-person dinner in 2022. In the meantime, please wash your hands, and (like Holmes and Watson in "Charles Augustus Milverton") wear a mask.

20239. There will be many other events held on-line during birthday festivities, among them the BSI's Distinguished Speaker Lecture, the William Gillette Luncheon, the Gaslight Gala, and the ASH Brunch, all are open to everyone. There's a link to register for the Lecture at <www.tinyurl.com/yvyn3wb>, with helpful hints on how to use Zoom, and there's information about other events at Scott Monty's <www.bsiweekend.com>.
20240. Both Sherlockians and Doylean are invited to attend the (virtual) inaugural meeting of the Literary Agents, a new society devoted to the study of the writings of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The society is based at the interesting "Doings of Doyle" podcast created by Mark Jones and Paul Chapman [May 20 #5]; more information about the meeting, scheduled for 11:00 on Jan. 10, will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/y6qg77ga>.
20241. The Las Cruces Sun News reported on Oct. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/y4ufn5o3> on the continuing lawsuit over the Netflix film "Enola Holmes", noting that the judge in Santa Fe has ordered a status conference on Jan. 15 to discuss scheduling a settlement conference in the case. Attorney Ben Allison (representing the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd.) told the newspaper that the CDEL's U.S. licensing representative [Jon L. Lellenberg] lives in Santa Fe and their legal work has always been based there. The story notes that if the lawsuit isn't settled, the case might continue through the end of 2021 into 2022.
20243. Ken Ludwig is a prolific playwright, and you can see just how prolific at his web-site <www.kenludwig.org>; his Sherlockian plays are "Postmortem", "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays", and "Baskerville", and it is well worth exploring his blog and his "thoughts on comedy".
20244. Holmes Reads Holmes: Reflections on the Real-Life Links Between the Jurist & the Detective, edited by Ross E. Davies and H. M. Hoefflich (Clark: Talbot, 2020; 84 pp., $24.95), is an intriguing chapbook devoted to the connections between the two Holmeses; there are essays by Davies, Hoefflich, and Robert S. Katz, a seasonal reprint of "The Blue Carbuncle, and on the front cover a colorful image of original artwork by Sidney Paget. Available from the publisher at <www.tinyurl.com/y5fzdx23>.

20245. "Sherlock Holmes on Screens" is a new and interesting web-site <www.sherlock-holmes-on-screens.com> that was created by Howard Ostrom, Thierry Saint-Joanis, and J. C. Mornard, who pursue all of the actors who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, radio, television, and the Internet; they've made many interesting discoveries, and it's well worth exploring.
20246. "Quaesitum" was the word of the day at the Word Genius web-site on Oct. 27 <www.tinyurl.com/y48v37ul>, Mary Burke has noted, with an interesting use of the word in a sentence: "No matter how confounding the case, Sherlock Holmes always finds the quaesitum." That's not from the Canon, of course, but what would the source be?
20247. Samantha Wolov found Angie Rozelaar's Bookish Cats Board Book, published this year by Mudpuppy; it's a "pawsitively purrfact collection of literary classics" that includes a cat in Sherlockian costume representing Arthur Clawnan Doyle and "The Catventures of Sherlock Holmes. Do a Google search for [bookish cats] to find the image on a reusable shopping bag, magnets, and a 500-piece jigsaw puzzle, as well as the board book.
20248. Sean Connery died on Oct. 31. He was an iconic actor, best known for his many films as James Bond, winner of many awards, and knighted in 2000 for services to film drama. He also played Jack Kehoe in "The Molly Maguires" (1970) and William of Baskerville in "The Name of the Rose" (1986). And in "Diamonds Are Forever" (1971) Norman Burton (Felix Leiter) said, "The diamonds are in the body, but where?" to which Sean Connery (James Bond) answered, "Alimentary Dr. Leiter."
20250. "I'm in Love with Jeremy Brett" is an amusing music video created by Poi Dog Pondering for their 2011 mini-album "Audio Love Letter"; watch it at <www.tinyurl.com/yy86vj21>, kindly reported by Dino Argyropoulos. If you can't make out the lyrics, read them at <www.tinyurl.com/yy8lwky5>.
20251. What's the source for the quote "No matter how confounding the case, Sherlock Holmes always finds the quaesitum" posted on-line at the World Genius web-site? Well, I asked them, and was told that the sentence was invented to show the usage of the featured word in a sentence.
20252. It's a blurb worth mentioning: "Reading Meyer's The Seven-Per-Cent Solution made me decide to become a writer. Reading his latest simply made me a delighted and satisfied reader." -Michael Chabon. Meyer's latest is his excellent The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols (October 19 #4), now out as a trade paperback (from Minotaur Books, $16.99); Chabon wrote the intriguing The Final Solution: A Story of Detection (2004) and Maps and Legends: Reading and Writing Along the Borderlands (2008), and won a Pulitzer Prize for The Amazing Adventures of Cavalier & Clay (2003).

20254. Josh Pachter's series of Ellery Queen pastiches with Sherlockian puns as titles continues with "The Adventure of the Black-and-Blue Carbuncle" in the Nov.-Dec. issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine. Don't ignore the closing sentence in the story.
20255. James Randi died on Oct. 20. A magician who performed as the Amazing Randi, he followed the path blazed by Harry Houdini in exposing fake mediums and psychic, eventually (and successfully) offering $1 million to anyone who could prove him wrong. His book Flim-Flam!: Psychics, ESP, Unicorns, and Other Delusions (1982) included a chapter on Conan Doyle and "Fairies at the Foot of the Garden".
20256. Jennie Paton has reported the Sherlock Holmes Hospitality Group, which now has three Sherlock Holmes pubs in and near Edmonton in Alberta; details at their web-site <www.sherlockshospitality.com>.
20257. Dave Hawkes died in October. He was a lecturer in mental health nursing at Anglia Ruskin University, and an enthusiastic member of the Chelmsford Theatre Workshop in Essex. He performed as Dr. Watson in "The Great Detective: The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (written by Roger Johnson for the CTW in 2001) and in audio plays recorded by the Old Court Radio Theatre Company (some available at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/podcasts>), and as Holmes in Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2015).
20258. Reported: Mike Resnick's pastiche "The Adventure of the Pearly Gates" (reprinted from his Sherlock Holmes in Orbit, 1995) is included in his collection First Person Peculiar (Wordfire, 2014).

20259. Bouchercon was held on-line rather than in San Francisco this year, and as so often there was a Sherlockian panel (“What Would Sherlock Do?”), with Les Klinger as moderator, and Laurie King, Bonnie MacBird, Liese Sherwood-Fabre, and Elizabeth Crowens as panelists, discussing how Holmes and other classic sleuths managed without modern forensic tools at their disposal; you can tune in at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=MVsgxSeH3rA>. The next Bouchercons will be held (everyone hopes) in New Orleans, Aug. 25-29, 2021; and in Minneapolis, Sept. 8-11, 2022.
20260. There’s more video from Bouchercon, recorded by Linda Hein at Baker Street West (with Brad Loffswold as Holmes and Joe Svec as Watson), used to open the conference <www.tinyurl.com/y3xqs2dg>, and (with Sidney Cohen as Conan Doyle) to open the Anthony Awards Ceremony <www.tinyurl.com/y26bbjzl>. It is nice that Bouchercon has made all of its sessions available at YouTube.

20261. Angela Misri’s The Detective and the Spy (Toronto: Cormorant, 2020; 234 pp., $22.95) is the fourth in her series about Portia Adams, the granddaughter of both Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, pursuing her own career as a consulting detective in London in 1935; she has been injured in an explosion, deaf and unable to speak clearly, and nevertheless involved in a struggle against both the British secret service and a devious villain. Angela’s web-site <www.angelamisri.com> offers information about her books and a video interview from her recent book-launch.
20264. New York’s Roosevelt Hotel will close after nearly 100 years, CNN Travel reported on Oct. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/yylb5zhv>. Named in honor of President Theodore Roosevelt, the hotel opened in 1924 and was the site of Guy Lombardo’s first broadcast of “Auld Lang Syne” from the hotel’s Grill on New Year’s Eve in 1929; more recently it has been the site of many of the Sherlockian birthday festivities each January. A spokesman for the hotel, now owned by Pakistan International Airlines, cited the coronavirus pandemic and the resulting drop in business for the decision to close.
20265. “How Suffragette Pavilion Fire Outraged Tunbridge Wells...and Conan Doyle” was the headline on a story in The Guardian <www.tinyurl.com/y4husayu> on Nov. 10; it was in 1913 that Conan Doyle made the nine-mile trip from his home in Windlesham to say that votes for women would be “not only against the constitution but the very laws of nature.”
20266. Soumitra Chatterjee died on Nov. 15. He acted in his first Bengali film in 1959 and went to star in more than 300 movies. Famed for his work with director Satyajit Ray, who wrote a series of novels about Feluda, a modern detective who used Sherlockian methods and, directed films such as “Sonya Kella” [“The Golden Fortress”] (1974) and “Joi Baba Felunath” [“The Elephant God”] (1979), in which Chatterjee appeared as Feluda.
20267. The “Conan Doyle in Edinburgh” conference that was held at Napier University on Sept. 24-25 went very well, according to reports from many who attended, and it’s nice indeed that the keynote address and the six panels were recorded and are available at <www.tinyurl.com/y2nqnrrpq>, along with news of the “Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle” (an on-going project with Douglas Kerr as general editor).
20268. There aren’t that many Sherlockian celebrations of Thanksgiving in editorial cartoons, but Pat Bagley provided a nice one 2011 with his “Who Killed Tom Turkeyday?” <www.pinterest.com/pin/326722147936507436>, which ran in 2011. Bagley has worked for the paper since 1979; you can see his current contributions at the paper’s web-site <www.sltrib.com/opinion/bagley>.

20269. Geoffrey Palmer died on Nov. 5. Perhaps best known here for his performance as Lionel Hardcastle in the BBC’s television series “As Time Goes By” (1992-2005), he had a long and varied career on stage, screen, radio, television, and recordings. He was Sherlock Holmes on stage in Hugh Leonard’s “The Mask of Moriarty” in Leicester (1987), and William Parnes (an actor who performed as Sherlock Holmes) in episodes of “Two Pipe Problems” broadcast by BBC Radio 4 in 2013.
20270. Bev Wolov reports “The World of Sherlock Holmes: A Jigsaw Puzzle by Doug John Miller (1,000 pieces, with a fold-out Sherlockian poster) ($18.99); available from The Strand Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/y6l6g4yz> (attractive and challenging). The poster is a key to the design of the puzzle, with text by Nick Utechin that explains the surprises that Miller has tucked away in his artwork.
20271. The Friends of Gillette Castle State Park are continuing to post interesting videos at their web-site, the latest being about the relationship between Gillette and his neighbor Mark Twain <www.tinyurl.com/yxu8xffk>. It isn’t Sherlockian, but it offers a chance to hear Gillette’s impersonation of Twain in a reading from “The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County”.
20272. A Case of Agony: Tales Inspired by the Agony Columns of the Victorian Period, edited by Steve Mason, is the latest annual collection of pastiches and scholarly articles published by the Crew of the Barque Lone Star; it’s downloadable (free) at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y2wc8szk>.
20274. Burt Wolder has reported that an attractive black granite stone honoring Frederic Dorr Steele has been installed in the Steele/King family plot at the Albany Rural Cemetery in Menands, N.Y. <www.tinyurl.com/ybylysus>. A ceremony is in the planning stages for next spring, and there’s an informative interview with Andrew Malec and Linda and Terry Hunt about Steele at the “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog <www.tinyurl.com/y3wov4yp>.
20275. John Sessions died on Nov. 2. He had a long career on British television as an actor, comedian, and impressionist, also performing on stage, radio, and the screen, and he had an interesting mix of Sherlockian and Doylean credits: Prof. Rutherford in one episode of “Murder Rooms” (2001), Joseph Bell in the television film “Reichenbach Falls” (2007), Kenny Prince in an episode (“The Great Game”) of “Sherlock” (2010), Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in an episode of “Mr. Selfridge” (2013), and Mycroft Holmes in Ian McKellen’s “Mr. Holmes” (2015).
20276. Jonny Marx’s Sherlock Bones and the Addition & Subtraction Adventure (New York: Sterling, 2018; 32 pp., $9.95) is an attractively illustrated book for children ages 7+, with Sherlock Bones and Doctor Catson using arithmetic to foil Professor Moriratty. There’s also a Sherlock Holmes and the Times Table Adventure, and both books are available in Spanish and French as well as English.

20277. Ira J. Fistell’s The Hidden Holmes: A Sherlock Holmes Compani on (Portland: Inkwater, 2020; 315 pp., $17.95) is subtitled as “a serious rereading of the stories and novels by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle with analyses and commentary,” and it’s an exploration of the Canon as an “adventure in literature,” with discussion, story by story, of structure, allegory, and inspiration.
20278. Ross Davies continues to collect Sherlockian toasts, making them available at <www.rossdavies.org/toasts>, and of course he welcomes additional contributions. There’s much more of interest at his web-site, including the links to [Green Bag] and [Maps and miscellany].

20279. Cliff Goldfarb has kindly forwarded an article that appeared in the Toronto Globe and Mail on Nov. 20, noting the importance of that date to every Sherlockian and Doylean <www.tinyurl.com/y34unp3w>.
20280. "It was a well used Rudge-Whitworth, splashed as from a considerable journey," Watson wrote (in "The Valley of Fear"); Leslie Katz has reported an amusing filmed advertisement for the Rudge-Whitworth, at 39:37 minutes in some old silent films available at <www.tinyurl.com/y3xvtttn5>.
20281. The Generic Radio Workshop <www.genericradio.com> offers free downloads of a wide variety of radio scripts, including seven for Sherlock Holmes shows from 1939 to 1955, and one for the Mercury Theatre on the Air in 1938.
20282. Ken Spears died on Nov. 6. He began his career with Hanna-Barbera in the late 1950s, and with Joe Ruby, who died on Aug. 26, created the cowardly Great Dane "Scooby-Doo" (who sometimes is seen in Sherlockian costume) and many other series such as "The Flintstones" and "Josie and the Pussycats".
20283. The Beacon Society has launched a new quarterly for younger Sherlockians, and the first issue of Sherlock's Spotlight Gazette is available at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com/sherlocks-spotlight-gazette.html> and by e-mail; younger Sherlockians are welcome to contribute artwork and other material to the Gazette.
20284. One hears of Conan Doyle everywhere: he's a wide receiver on the Burleson Elks varsity football team; he's class of 2022 in the Burleson, Texas High School, and you can watch him in action at <www.youtube.com/y4snyamg>.
20285. "Nicholas Meyer Discusses Sherlock Holmes, Antisemitism, and Raoul Wallenberg" was the headline on an interesting interview in the Holocaust Reader (Nov. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/y6k5axpm>, in which he talked about The Adventure of the Peculiar Protocols, and much more.
20286. January Morris died on Nov. 20. She was James Morris for the first 45 years of her life, and in 1953 was the only journalist with the British expedition to the summit of Mt. Everest; she then became a noted travel writer and historian before changing her sex and name, and continuing her career as an author. Her "Pax Britannica" trilogy (Heaven's Command, Pax Britannica, and Farewell the Trumpets: An Imperial Retreat) are a delightful account of the Victorian era, and the rise and fall of the British Empire.

20287. Mark your calendars for Feb. 18, when, if all goes well, SHERLOC and WATSON will land at Jezero Crater on Mars; they are on board the Perseverance Rover, which was launched on July 30, and the landing will be broadcast live from the Space Flight Operations Center at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. SHERLOC and WATSON are acronymed instruments [June 20 #2] that contribute to the exploration of the Red Planet.
20288. Noted by Les Klinger: a warm and enthusiastic appreciation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the CrimeReads web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yxkat36k> by James Lovegrove, who has written many Sherlockian pastiches, both short stories and novels, and has a fine web-site at <www.jameslovegrove.com>.
20289. Why is Nov. 20 an important date to every Sherlockian and Doylean? Philip King's story in the Toronto Globe and Mail, for those who do not have access to a computer, is headlined "Conan Doyle Sells Copyright to the First Sherlock Holmes Story". That's the date in 1886 when he wrote a letter to accept the offer of £25 for "A Study in Scarlet".
20290. Some readers of this newsletter may be old enough to remember the Comics Code Authority, and some younger collectors may wonder about the emblem seen on some older comic books. The Comics Code Authority was adopted in 1954 as a "code of ethics and standards" for the comic-book industry, revised in 1971, and then abandoned in 2011. The revision allowed vampires, ghouls, and werewolves, if "handled in the classic tradition such as Frankenstein, Dracula, and other high calibre literary works written by Edgar Allan Poe, Saki, Conan Doyle, and other respected authors whose works are read in schools around the world."
20291. The Sherlock Holmes Museum (which claims it's at 221b Baker Street in London) <www.sherlock-holmes.co.uk> has announced that it's now temporarily closed due to government guidelines during the second pandemic shut-down. So, alas, is the Sherlock Holmes Pub in Northumberland Street.
20292. Reported (just published): The Big Book of Espionage, edited by Otto Penzler (New York: Vintage Crime/Black Lizard, 2020; 832 pp., $26.00); billed as "the most complete compendium of double agents, dead drops, and duplicitous deeds ever collected," it includes "The Naval Treaty".
20293. "When Worlds Collide: Holmes and 'Somewhere in Time'" is the title of an interesting 46-minute interview with Les Klinger by John Rabe on his "Call Back Yesterday" blog (for fans of the movie "Somewhere in Time"); you can tune in at <www.tinyurl.com/y6q8u8oz>.
20294. Nev March's Murder in Old Bombay (New York: Minotaur Books, 2020; 400 pp., $26.99) is set in colonial India in 1892, when James Agnihotri, an admirer of the Sherlock Holmes stories as well as a recently discharged captain in the British army, finds himself investigating two mysterious deaths. The local color and supporting characters are nicely done, and the novel (then titled The Rajabai Tower Mystery) won an award from the Mystery Writers of America in 2019 for the best unpublished first crime novel.

20295. The Internet continues to offer hopeful comments about Robert Downey Jr.'s third Sherlock Holmes film, which (of course) is not yet in production, and about a possible Sherlock Holmes franchise in the Marvel Universe. Interviewed at the Fast Company Innovation Festival last month, the actor said, "At this point, we really feel that there is not a mystery-verse built out anywhere, and Conan Doyle is the definitive voice in that arena, I think, to this day," adding that "To me, why do a third movie if you're not going to be able to spin off into some real gems of diversity and other times and elements?". You can read more from the interview at <www.tinyurl.com/y3nt658e>.
20296. Sherlock Hemlock is alive and well: Jennie Paton reports that he is seen in the audience in "The Not-Too-Late-Show with Elmo" (a weekly series that debuted on HBO Max on May 27). Sherlock Hemlock first appeared on "Sesame Street" in the 1970s <www.muppet.fandom.com/wiki/Sherlock_Hemlock>.
20297. It has been a while since the last mention of "The Great Ace Attorney" (an addition to the Japanese Nintendo 3DS series from Capcom), a new game set in the Meiji period, and with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, in the cast of characters (May 17 #6). A sequel has been released in Japan, but the games have not been available in the U.S.; Nintendo Life reported on Nov. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/y3ax349r> on possible reasons, and the possibility of a release in the U.S. soon; you can watch a trailer at the Nintendo Life web-site.

20299. M. J. Downing's Sherlock Holmes: The Werewolves of Edinburgh (Louisville: Burns & Lea, 2020; 297 pp., $10.99) is the sequel to his Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Undead Client (June 19 #5); this time Watson is in pursuit of Holmes, and finds himself in dire peril while battling werewolves and magic and occult forces. The author's web-site <www.mjdowningsplace.com> offers a look at what he calls the "Downing-verse".
20300. Theatrics: Mark Shanahan's "A Sherlock Carol" will be performed live via Zoom on Dec. 10 and then streamed live on demand, Dec. 11-14, by the Florida Repertory Theatre <www.floridarep.ticketspice.com/a-sherlock-carol>.
20301. Don't Go into the Cellar will stream their live performance of "Holmes for Christmas" (their version of "The Blue Carbuncle") on Facebook on Dec. 27 at 9:00 pm BST (that's 4:00 pm EST) <www.facebook.com/cellartheatre>. The British company has presented Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) plays on tour in the past (their motto is "Victorian theatre with bite"), and their web-site's at <www.dontgointothecellar.com>.

20302. There's something else to add to your schedule for the birthday festivities in January: more than 200 items from Paul D. Herbert's collection of Sherlockiana and Doyleana will be offered in an on-line no-reserve auction at Everything But the House in Cincinnati, Jan. 6 through Jan. 10. All of the items will go on-line and be open for bidding at 2:00 am on Jan. 6 and the auction will close with automated bidding beginning at 8:00 pm on Jan. 10. The web-site's at <www.ebth.com> and the code for Paul's collection is 20CIN051.
20303. Some of the items are interesting indeed, including an attractive sculpture of Holmes and Watson by Richard Masloski; a copy of the first American edition of His Last Bow inscribed by Conan Doyle to Houdini (accompanied by a photograph of Conan Doyle presenting the book to Houdini); the Collier's Once a Week Library edition of "The Sign of Four" (the pirated edition published in 1891, and the first separate American edition of the story); and a lithographed poster advertising the appearance of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in The Strand Magazine.
20304. There's more news about the lawsuit filed by the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. over the Netflix television film "Enola Holmes" (August 20 #1): Les Klinger has reported that the case has been completely resolved, on mutually satisfactory terms, adding that "I think that Legendary Films is very, very satisfied with the outcome (and so we should be)." Les also reports that he and Laurie King have settled with the CDEL regarding the CDEL trademark applications in the categories of books and films, which the CDEL withdrew without prejudice.

20308. In League with Sherlock Holmes (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2020; 368 pp., $25.95), the latest in the series of anthologies edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger, offering "stories inspired by the Sherlock Holmes Canon." They continue their search for contributions from friends who (almost always) have not previously done anything Sherlockian, and most of the stories are intriguing homages, rather than pastiches.
20309. Barbara G. Peters opened the Poisoned Pen Bookstore in Scottsdale, Ariz., in 1989; there's now the Poisoned Pen Press, and the Poisoned Pen Podcast, on which Barbara hosted Laurie King and Les Klinger to discuss In League with Sherlock Holmes <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Et0rSEapeU>.
20311. "The Daintiest Scream on the Moor Charity Ball" held during the birthday festivities in New York in 2018 featured the unveiling of a made-to-order Sherlock Holmes Cake for the Baker Street Babes and their hangers-on, and at long last a recording of the event aired on the Discovery Family channel as "Elementary My Dear Buddy" in the 30-minute series "Cake Boss" on Dec. 3.
20312. One often encounters references to the dog that didn't bark, more and more without mention of Sherlock Holmes or the story that has the dog that did nothing in the night-time (which shows that the reference now is part of our cultural literacy), but now there is a book, reported by Tom Cynkin: it was written by Martin Fackler and published this year in Japan, with a title translated in English as "The Dogs That Didn't Bark: Media Control in Abe's Japan" <www.tinyurl.com/y625nt7g>.
20313. There's a Sherlockian calendar for 2021 available from Andrew F. Gulli's The Strand Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/y2ov4mfmm>, and much more Sherlockiana in their 221B Baker Street Collection <www.tinyurl.com/y5phqwxg>.
20314. It has been a while since the last mention of the excellent Camden House web-site <www.ignisart.com/camdenhouse/main.htm>, which offers a nice assortment of Canonical resources, including the Pinotheca Holmesiana with all the illustrations of all the first appearances of the Sherlock Holmes stories.
20315. The Norwegian Explorers' Christmas Annual for 2020 has "Games Are Afoot" as its theme, with contributions that include pastiches, essays, puzzles, and artwork, all related to appropriate aspects of the Canon; the 96-page booklet, edited by Ray Riethmeier and Phillip Bergem, can be ordered from Phillip (at 3829 172nd Avenue NW, Andover, MN 55304). The cost is $10.00 postpaid (checks payable to the Norwegian Explorers, please, or sent via PayPal to <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>).

December 20 #3

20316. Karen Murdoch reports a nice quote from Lisa Scottoline's essay "Literary Slut" in her collection My Nest Isn't Empty, It Just Has More Closet Space (2011) about when, as a young girl, she first went into a library: "Of course once inside I had no idea how to choose a book and was way too scared to ask anyone. But there were some books that had a picture of a man in profile on the spine, and the man had a big nose like my Uncle Rocky. And me . . . Anyway, because of his nose the man on the spine felt like family, so his were the books I checked out and read like a fiend. Like our girl crush Nancy Drew. Only later did I find out that the man wasn't Uncle Rocky but some guy named Sherlock Holmes. Who isn't even Italian. Bottom line, that's why I am a mystery writer today."

20317. Further to the discussion of letters signed by Conan Doyle's secretaries (October 20 #2), an autograph album offered at auction Dawson's in Maidenhead this month contained two Conan Doyle letters <www.tinyurl.com/y6g5j8nb>. The letter at the left actually was written by his secretary Charles Terry (note the ornate T beneath the signature); Terry also wrote and signed the "My dear Robinson" letter held by the Berg Collection at the N.Y. Public Library as part of its "Hound of the Baskervilles" material. The album, estimated at £2,000-£3,000, was sold for £2,290.
20318. Greg Darak has reported that the Russian "Sherlock Holmes" television series (with Igor Petrenko as Holmes and Andrei Panin as Watson) (2013) now is available (with subtitles in English) in a commercial set of two DVDs ($14.99) <www.tinyurl.com/y3smghnb>. The series was not well received in Russia (where many people prefer the old Livanov/Solomin series), but it has some nice surprises.
20319. The Jeremy Brett Sherlock Holmes podcast ("devoted to revisiting and honoring the world's greatest portrayal of the world's greatest detective") <www.sherlockpodcast.com>, created by Gus and Luke Holwerda in Jan. 2019, offers an interesting monthly mix of discussion and interviews.
20321. There was a nice item at auction at Bonhams in New York this month: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Surgical Scissors" <www.tinyurl.com/y39zzc3p>, estimated at $4,000-$6,000. Dame Jean Conan Doyle gave the scissors to Julian Wolff, who presented them to Norman S. Nolan when he graduated from medical school. The item went unsold when bidding didn't reach the reserve.
20322. Jeremy Musson's article "The Houses of Sherlock Holmes: How Arthur Conan Doyle's Architectural Savvy Shaped Literature's Greatest Sleuth" (in the Nov. 28 issue of Country Life) has splendid artwork by Matthew Rice, and it's conveniently available on-line <www.tinyurl.com/y2cfkh6g>. You may need to sign up for their (free) newsletter to have access to the article (but you can unsubscribe at any time).

20323. The fall issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) includes articles by Ray Betzner (about Vincent Starrett in Toronto), and Mark Jones (about The Tales of Captain Sharkey) and other reports from and about the Library and the Collection. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
20324. Sally Sugarman ("The Three Gables") died on Dec. 9. She was a teacher and a writer, presided over the Baker Street Breakfast Club for more than 30 years, and was the sparking plug for two excellent conferences at Bennington College ("Victorian Sleuth to Modern Hero: The Mysterious Journey of Sherlock Holmes" in 1994, and "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds" in 2010). Sally received her Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2010.
20325. The Japanese animated series "Moriarty the Patriot" (October 20 #5) already is streaming on the pay channel Funimation <www.funimation.com> in the U.S. First a manga, and then a stage musical, the series presents Moriarty as an orphan who as a young man "seeks to remove the ills caused by England's strict class system"; there was a detailed discussion of the series (with spoilers at the CBR web-site on Dec. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/y3vqw3vq>.
20326. "Arthur Conan Doyle Lived Here 1881 to 1882" according to a plaque on the building at 15 Lonsdale Terrace in Edinburgh, where an elegant five-bedroom top-floor flat is available for offers over £680,000 (the Edinburgh News reported on Dec. 13) <www.tinyurl.com/y67grhhu>.
20328. "I've always been captivated by the Cottingley fairy photographs and have harboured a secret ambition to give them a modern-day reworking!" British artist and fashion photographer John Rankin Waddell says, explaining the photograph at auction at Dreweatts in Newbury on Jan. 21, with an estimate of £2,000-£3,000 <www.tinyurl.com/y7fd42c3>. His photograph of Kate Moss in the same auction has a much higher estimate <www.tinyurl.com/ybm4x2yg>.
20329. Mediaweek reported (Dec. 11) that Netflix has announced its most popular programing in 2020 <www.tinyurl.com/y3bqdnln>; "Enola Holmes" was first in drama (film), which suggests that a sequel might be under consideration.
20330. If you're old enough, you may remember people living in trailers. Eventu-ally people started living in mobile homes. And now people live in manufactured homes (the Department of Housing and Urban Development regulates this sort of thing, decreed that after June 15, 1976, factory-built homes would be called manufactured homes. Anyone in Colorado Springs is welcome to buy one from Sherlock Holmes <www.sherlockholmesllc.com>, reported by Karen Murdock; the company has an imaginative graphic at its web-site.

20331. John le Carré died on Dec. 12. He worked for both Britain's Security Service (MI5) and Secret Intelligence Service (MI6) and was a highly regarded author of espionage novels; he mentioned Sherlock Holmes from time to time in his books. Bill Crow, a character in The Honourable Schoolboy, was based on Richard Hughes (who founded the Baritsu Chapter of the BSI in Tokyo in 1948); he said the book was "another piece of lampoonery, but if I sue he might tell the truth about me, just as Ian Fleming threatened to do if I moaned too much about Dikko Henderson." In a letter scheduled at RR Auction in Boston on Jan. 13 (reported by Randall Stock) <www.tinyurl.com/ycfumy53>, le Carré noted that while at school he enjoyed "all of Conan Doyle."
20332. "Fandom Conspiracy Theories Are Just as Dangerous as Others" was the headline on Jessica Mason's article published on The Mary Sue web-site on Nov. 30 <www.tinyurl.com/y4zplgfl>, and one of the conspiracy theories she mentions ("Johnlock") is about the relationship ("ship") between Holmes and Watson: "Fandom conspiracy theories pop up every few years, and they are almost always about ships," she wrote, adding that fans who subscribed to the Johnlock Conspiracy (the false idea that the BBC's 'Sherlock' series was filled with secret, intentional clues, from the music to the props and more) believed that there was a secret episode that would "make the ship canon."
20333. There is a wealth of resources on the Internet, one of them the Internet Archive <www.archive.org>, which has much to brag about: "In 2020 we grew from 40 million to 65 million public-media items, including texts, images, videos, and audio files. Right now we're storing over 70 petabytes of data (equivalent to the contents of 186 million filing cabinets) and serve more than 1.5 million visitors daily. The Wayback Machine has grown rapidly, too; right now there are 475 billion web pages archived inside it, and we are capturing another 750 million pages every single day!" Take a look to see how much fun one can have browsing there.

20335. The Crusader's Curse, by Stuart Douglas (New York: Titan Books, 2020; 284 pp., $14.95), is the latest in the publisher's long-running series of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes"; in this pastiche Holmes and Watson find themselves marooned a blizzard in a manor house in Yorkshire, faced with missing treasure, murder, and a possible ghost.

20337. Barbara Windsor died on Dec. 10. She began her acting career at the age of 13 in pantomime in Britain, and was best known for her roles in the "Carry On" films and the "EastEnders" television series; she played Annie Chapman in "A Study in Terror" (1965). In 2016 she was appointed Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire (DBE) for services to charity and entertainment.
20338. One hears of Conan Doyle everywhere: he came in first in the Riviere D'arc Chase in Pau on Dec. 15, winning €17,610 <www.tinyurl.com/y8lkzd8w>; Conan Doyle is a French eight-year-old gelding (yes, a horse), and was a winner in his only other race this year <www.tinyurl.com/y7kcpwox>.
20339. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star offer a "Hound of the Baskervilles" calendar for 2021 decorated with images of Sidney Paget's illustration; it's available (free) as a PDF from Steve Mason <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>.
20340. Otto Penzler has launched a new series at YouTube, showing off recent arrivals at the Mysterious Bookshop, talking about authors, collecting, and collectibles; the 13-minute first episode is about S. S. Van Dine, creator of Philo Vance <www.tinyurl.com/ycep2kpm>. The second is about Sue Grafton (creator of Kinsey Millhone) <www.tinyurl.com/y85aztsm>.
20341. Sherlockians are not the only ones who enjoy using old maps for research, but not everyone who uses old (and new) maps is aware of "trap streets", discussed by Martin Fone in an interesting article at Country Life's web-site on Dec. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/yyku3ksz>.
20342. Leslie Katz continues to make his Sherlockian scholarship available at the Social Science Research Network; you can read or download all of his (now) 33 articles at <www.tinyurl.com/y34yzpar>.
20343. Jeff Falkingham's Murder in Minnesota! (March 18 #2) has been reissued in a new edition (Eden Prairie: Frontier Fantasies, 2020; 287 pp., $10.99) with more artwork and illustrations, offering reprints of his earlier Sherlock Holmes and the County Courthouse Caper (2007) and his Sherlock Holmes in Search of the Source (2009); Holmes is in Browns Valley in 1886 to solve a series of murders, and in St. Paul in 1896 to solve another mystery (both stories involve quite a bit of local history); the author's web-site is at <www.cccaper.com>.
20344. Jennie Paton has noted video of an attractive Sherlockian dog created by Emma Krikunova <www.youtube.com/watch?v=4Pk-o10_Sfs>; there's more information about it at her web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yxud8pgs>. Alas, it is one of kind, and already sold.
20345. Vicki Delany's A Curious Incident (New York: Crooked Lane, 2021; 293 pp., $26.99) is the fifth in her series "Sherlock Holmes Bookshop" mysteries, starring Gemma Doyle (proprietor of the bookshop) in an adventure that begins with a hunt for a missing cat and ends with a solution to a murder; Gemma insists to all and sundry that she's not a consulting detective, but no one, quite correctly, believes her. The author's web-site has information on all of her books <www.vickidelany.com>.

20346. "Cate Blanchett Alters Plans to Sussex Home Due to Bat Colony," according to the headline on a story in the Brighton Argus <www.tinyurl.com/y7r87xsb> (Dec. 16). Blanchett bought Highwell House in Crowborough some years ago (January 16 #4 and July 18 #2) and was planning to demolish a cottage and shed on the grounds, but recently found roosts of common pipistrelle bats and brown long-eared bats, both protected species, and a license from Natural England will be needed before work can proceed. Press reports continue to state that Tom Baker and Conan Doyle lived in the house; while it's true that Tom Baker did, Sir Arthur lived nearby at Windlesham.
20347. Simon Bailey's Sherlock Holmes: Color in Classics (San Diego: Canterbury Classics, 2016; 144 pp., $14.99) is an imaginative and attractive approach to some of the Sherlock Holmes stories; it's one of a series that includes Alice in Wonderland and Grimms' Fairy Tales Fairy Tales.
20349. Forecast, Dan Stashower notes, from DC Comics in February: DC's Greatest Detective Stories Ever Told ($19.99). Sherlock Holmes and Batman are on the cover, and reprints of "key adventures" include "The Doomsday Book" from Detective Comics #572 (1987).
20350. Reported: a reprint of Neil Gaiman's short-story pastiche "A Study in Emerald" (2003) in The Neil Gaiman Reader: Selected Fiction (William Morrow, $40.00); a collection of 47 short stories and excerpts from 5 novels.
20351. The Martian Menace, by Eric Brown (New York: Titan Books, 2020; 345 pp., $9.95), another title in the "Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," is a science-fiction pastiche; the Martians have returned, almost twenty years after their first (and unsuccessful) invasion, and sharing their advanced technology and bringing prosperity, but (of course) there are problems in store, and a major conflict; Holmes and Watson travel to Mars, and back, and help restore peace to Earth.
20352. Reported: Sara Paretsky's Love & Other Crimes (New York: William Morrow, 2020; 448 pp., $17.99) is a collection that includes her Sherlock Holmes/ Miss Butterworth pastiche "The Curious Affair of the Italian Art Dealer" (reprinted from the 2014 anthology In the Company of Sherlock Holmes).
20353. The Fortescue Scholarship Honours Program, administered by the Beacon Society on behalf of the Watsonians, now has 120 Sherlockians who have completed all three of its examinations, and this year has issued a Re-Certification Exam for those who would like to continue their pursuit of Canonical Scholarship. The first three Examinations still are available; Steve Mason <mason.stev8080@gmail.com> will be happy to send more information.

20354. Vincent Starrett's The Great Hotel Murder (New York: Penzler Publishers, 2020; 210 pp., $15.95) isn't Sherlockian (well, a character does say "Cross my heart, my dear Holmes!"), but it's a wonderful reminder of what mystery novels were like in the 1930s (and it has a fine introduction by Lyndsay Faye).
20355. The Royal Mail will issue a set of 10 stamps on Jan. 14 celebrating the 70th anniversary of Great Britain's National Parks; four Parks, in Dartmoor, were created in 1951. The stamps also include the New Forest (2005) and the South Downs (2010), all mentioned in the Canon (each of them in more than one case, for those who want to attempt to list them all).
20356. Mark Alberstat's "2021 Sherlockian Calendar" offers artwork from the Canon (mostly by Sidney Paget) and information from the Baring-Gould chronology, and can be downloaded (without charge) at <www.tinyurl.com/ya9667zx>.
20357. Orlando Pearson's The Redacted Sherlock Holmes, Volume V (London: MX Publishing, 2018, 138 pp., $14.95) is another in his series of collections of pastiches, a mix of "what came after" extensions of Canonical cases, other cases that bring Holmes and Watson forward to the 1930s and 1940s, and some religious meditations. MX Publishing's books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
20358. Mr. and Mrs. William Gillette celebrated the Christmas holidays at their home in Connecticut; you can see them at <www.tinyurl.com/y98y7klm>.
20359. The Netflix eight-episode series "The Irregulars" (January 19 #4) is now described by the Internet Movie Data Base as in production, with broadcast expected in 2021; it has been vaguely described as featuring the Canonical Street urchins working for Dr. Watson to save London from supernatural elements. The cast includes Henry Lloyd-Hughes as Holmes and Royce Pierreson as Watson, but since they're not listed in the cast at the IMDB, they may not be seen in many if not most episodes.
20360. And there's some theatrical news: Bart Lovins' "The Novel Stage Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Hound of the Baskervilles" has been scheduled at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., on Jan. 23-31 <www.thepac.net>; it will then be streamed on demand.
20361. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed and streamed at the Metropolis Performing Arts Centre in Arlington Heights, Ill., on January 29-31, and streamed on-demand, Feb. 1-14 <www.metropolisart.com>; it's also scheduled at the Fort Walton Beach Civic Auditorium in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., Mar. 12-21 <www.stagecraftersfwb.com>.

20363. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker on Thursday was Andrew Lycett, the author of two fine books about Conan Doyle; his topic was "Conan Doyle's Questing World" (and close to 400 people were able to attend the virtual lecture); the event also included the announcement by Steve Rothman, editor of the Baker Street Journal, of the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article the BSJ last year: Jessica Schilling (for her "Just His Type: An Analysis of the Découpé Warning in The Hound of the Baskervilles").
20364. Irregulars and guests gathered on Friday for the BSI's annual dinner, with Andrew Joffe offering the traditional first toast to Nina Singleton as The Woman, and the program continued with the usual toasts, rituals, and papers; this year the toast to Mrs. Hudson was delivered by the lady herself, splendidly impersonated by Denny Dobry from his recreation of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street. Mike Kean (the "Wiggins" of the BSI) presented the Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) to Dan Andriacco (St. Saviour's Near King's Cross), Deborah Clark (Mrs. Cecil Forrester), Carla Coupe (London Bridge), Ann Margaret Lewis (The Polyphonic Motets of Lassus), Steve Mason (The Fortescue Scholarship), Ashley Polasek (Singlestick), Svend Ranild (A "Copenhagen" Label), Ray Riethmeier (Morrison, Morrison, and Dodd), Alan Rettig (The Red Lamp), and Tracy Revels (A Black Sequin-Covered Dinner-Dress). After which the BSI's prestigious Two-Shilling Award was presented to Ralph Hall and Jim Saunders.
20365. Three new titles are available from the Baker Street Irregulars Press: The Staunton Tragedy is the latest in the Manuscript Series (193 pp., $39.95); edited by Michael F. Whelan; it has a facsimile of the manuscript of "The Missing Three-Quarter", with an annotated transcription and scholarly commentary (as always, the series offers readers an opportunity to be close to the moment when one of the stories was written). Corporals, Colonels, and Commissionaires, edited by Michael J. Quigley and Marsha Pollak (241 pp., $39.95), is the next book in the Professions Series, offering a fine assortment scholarship on the many military aspects of the Canon. And "A Quiet Air of Mastery", edited by Leslie S. Klinger (130 pp., $25.95), is a collection of warm tributes to Michael F. Whelan, written by many of his friends in appreciation of his 23 years as the "Wiggins" of the BSI. All three can be ordered at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/the-bis-press>.
20366. The BSI's conference on "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" has again been postponed, in view of the prediction that less than half of the population will have received an initial coronavirus vaccination by June. The new date for the conference at the Bear Mountain Inn, N.Y. is July 29-31, 2022. Next year's birthday festivities will cluster around the BSI's next annual dinner on Jan. 14, 2022.

20367. "Doyle's Rotary Coffin" (a society whose motto is "All Holmes Is Good Holmes") has published its third book: Robert Perret and Paul Thomas Miller's "Sherlock Holmes" Is an Anagram of "Snarky Clock" and 327 Other Holmesian Facts, and it is a delightful contribution to the literature, from the dedication right through to the end; all three of the society's books are available in print, and as free downloads from the society's web-site at <www.sites.google.com/site/doylesrotarycoffin>.
20368. The Reichenbach Irregulars of Switzerland have announced a Zoom meeting on Feb. 25 with a reading by Johanna Rieke, author of six pastiches, from the first of the pastiches to be available in English: Sherlock Holmes and the Cornwall Affair; the event will end with a conversation and a Q&A session. If you would like to Zoom in to the meeting, more information is available from the society at <reichenbachirregulars@gmail.com>.
20369. Alexander Orlov has reported a very early appearance of Sherlock Holmes on a phonograph record, issued by Pathé Records in Russia; it's the "Sherlock Holmes Polonaise" (as recorded by Oscar Filippovich Knaub with the Pathé Orchestra, circa 1911-1917). You can listen to the recording at a Russian web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9ne6pgr>, if you want to, and see an image of the record label at <www.tinyurl.com/y8sjex4f>. For those who have not danced a polonaise, it has been described as "a stately Polish processional dance, performed by couples who walk around the dance hall."
20370. What city, mentioned in the Canon, had more than a million inhabitants when Conan Doyle visited it, but no longer exists?

- Anderson's pastiche "The Shadow of the New"; Ruth Berman's poetic "Watson's Plane"; and Steve Hockensmith's Amlingmeyer Brothers story "Curious Incidents". There is additional non-Sherlockian content in the issue, of course, including a newly-discovered story by Cornell Woolrich.
20372. William Link died on Dec. 27. Best known for his work creating and writing for television series such as "The Fugitive", "Mannix", "Colombo", and "Murder, She Wrote", he was named a Grand Master of the Mystery Writers of America in 2018; his many credits included "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" (1984), the pilot episode of "Murder, She Wrote".

20375. What city, mentioned in the Canon, had more than a million inhabitants when Conan Doyle visited it, but no longer exists? That challenge was issued in 1998, but the answer's still: Brooklyn (mentioned in "The Red Circle"), a city when he was there during his lecture tour in 1894, was annexed into the city of New York in 1896 and now is merely a borough.
20376. Tania Henzell is celebrating Sherlock Holmes' birthday (and her Sherlock Holmes Tartan) by offering a 10% discount on the deerstalker (also on the hip flask). The discount code-word is IRREGULAR10, and her web-site at <www.sherlockholmesstartan.com> has many other items in the Sherlock Holmes Tartan.
20378. The Public Domain Review recently posted an article about what may be the earliest "rogues' gallery" made available to the public: Samuel G. Szabo's Rogues: A Study of Characters, a photographic album published in 1857; the Pinkertons' collection of mug shots was circulated in 1855, but only among law enforcement agents <www.tinyurl.com/yxmmwmlid>.
20379. Edward C. McManus celebrated the holidays in verse with an amusing "Sherlockian Christmas Carol" posted to the blog of the Strand Magazine on Jan. 8 <www.tinyurl.com/y5nzzx22>.
20380. Further to the announcement of the publication of a facsimile of the manuscript of "The Lost World" (December 20 #1), Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/lost-world-2020.htm> now has a review of the facsimile, as well as interesting details about the manuscript and the story.
20381. Howard Ostrom and Ray Wilcockson have compiled a (now) 310-page data-base entitled "Under the Clock, Sherlock—Still Rockin' After All These Years" that discusses (often with colorful illustrations) a wide variety of Sherlockian music, in various formats, from 1893 to the present. It's available on request from Howard at <howardostrom@gmail.com>, and is a delightful demonstration of the many ways in which Sherlock Holmes has become a part of our cultural literacy.

20382. Carter Dickson's The Plague Court Murders (1934) featured Sir Henry Merrivale, who is a member of the Diogenes Club and explains how and why he received the nickname of Mycroft. Carter Dickson is a pseudonym used by John Dickson Carr, and his novel is the latest in Otto Penzler's series of American Mystery Classics, with an introduction by Michael Dirda (416 pp., $25.95).
20383. Karen Murdock has reported some interesting numbers in an article in Business Insider (Jan. 20): Netflix has listed its ten most-watched original movies, and "Enola Holmes" ranked 7th, with 76 million views ("Extraction" came in first, with 99 million views). The article also notes that Netflix counts a view if an account watches at least two minutes of a movie, so it isn't clear how Netflix views would translate into box-office dollars if the films had been shown in theaters.
20384. It's marginally Sherlockian, but Alexander Orlov spotted an advertisement <www.tinyurl.com/y2fy34hq> for Sadler's Peaky Blinder spirits with an image of what seems to be a detective. Sadler's, originally a brewery that was founded in Birmingham's "Black Country" in 1900, has expanded its offerings, and their Peaky Blinder label celebrates the violent urban street gang that that flourished there <www.tinyurl.com/y2p97gqf>. There's also a television series, and you can look them up at Wikipedia. You needn't worry about what the advertisement says: it's in Latvian, and a dire warning about the dangers of alcohol.
20385. Did Sherlock Holmes, in the Canon, ever wear tweed? Yes, in "A Scandal in Bohemia": "With a nod he vanished into the bedroom, whence he emerged in five minutes tweed-suited and respectable, as of old."
20386. Andy Fusco has noted a nice essay ("The Mystery Is Holmes: Why We Return to Conan Doyle's Stories Over and Over Again") posted by Timothy Miller at the CrimeReads blog on Jan. 21 <www.tinyurl.com/y3edtyv9>. There's also:
20387. Timothy Miller's new pastiche The Strange Case of Eliza Doolittle (Hoboken: Seventh Street, 2021; 249 pp., $15.95) is an imaginative mix of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw, and Robert Louis Stevenson in a nicely-written story that offers some dramatic surprises.
20388. The Parallel Case of St. Louis recently discussed "The Six Napoleons" at a meeting of their society, and someone reported a different and decidedly unusual bust of Napoleon <www.tinyurl.com/y5jhponj>.
20389. J.P. Van Gordon has discovered a four-hour "ambience video" for Sherlock Holmes' Parlour at 221B Baker Street <www.youtube.com/watch?v=MJeNG1R7FzM> (ambience videos offer "pleasant, soothing background images & sound for relaxation, study, play, or work"). A YouTube search for [ambience/asmr sherlock] will bring up many others.

20391. John Dickson Carr's The Island of Coffins and Other Mysteries from the Casebook of Cabin B-13 (Cincinnati: Crippen & Landru, 2020; 329 pp., $47.00 cloth/$22.00 paper) is a collection of his scripts, published for the first time, from the 1948-1949 CBS radio series. Tony Medawar and James

- Keirans noted in The Armchair Detective (fall 1991) that “Death in the Desert” echoes Conan Doyle’s The Tragedy of the Korosko, and that the murder methods used in “Till Death Do His Part” and “The Sleep of Death” were echoed in the 1953 Collier’s pastiches “The Adventure of the Sealed Room” and “The Adventure of the Gold Hunter”. The publisher’s web-site is at <www.crippenlandru.com>. Carr was a master of the locked-room mystery, and his scripts provide a chance to see how much fun radio drama could be in (what some like to say) the good old days.
20392. Ron Fish renews his offer to add meetings of Sherlockian societies to his Sherlockian Calendar, including gatherings held via Zoom or other technology; you can see his format at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>, and send him information about up-coming meetings at <ronf404@aol.com>.
20393. One of the nice things about buying a mixed lot of books at an auction (as I did at the Paul Herbert auction) is finding something unexpected, such as Bob Brumfield’s Brumfield (1980), a collection of columns he wrote for the Cincinnati Enquirer that includes one Sherlockian column. The opening is well worth quoting: “Baker Street seemed darker than I remembered it. This was due, primarily, to the energy crisis in England, with a resultant cutback in the use of electric lights; and, to some measure, I suppose, to the fact that I’d never been on Baker Street before.
20394. Robert Lloyd Parry’s “Nunkie Films” YouTube channel offers a long list of excellent readings of authors who include M. R. James, H. G. Wells, Arthur Machen, Edgar Allan Poe, H. P. Lovecraft, W. W. Jacobs, and Arthur Conan Doyle (five Sherlockian and two non-Sherlockian stories); the channel is at <www.youtube.com/c/NunkieFilms/videos>.
20395. If you’re concerned (and many are) about delays in receiving your copies of the Baker Street Journal, BSJ publisher Steve Doyle has a YouTube explanation <www.youtube.com/watch?v=YnX5N37Xdc0&feature=youtu.be> about how the pandemic has affected mail delivery.
20396. Tedd Long’s Forgotten Visitors: Northwest Ohio’s Notable Guests (Toledo: Univ. of Toledo Press, 2020; 197 pp., $24.95) tells stories of a variety of visitors, from explorers Zebulon Pike and William Clark in 1794 to musician Neil Young in 2004, with a chapter devoted to Arthur Conan Doyle, who visited in 1894, 1922, and 1923.
20397. Christopher Morley’s poem “Graduate Student” (it’s one of his many “Translations from the Chinese”) was published in the Saturday Review of Literature (Nov. 5, 1938) and reprinted in The Middle Kingdom (1944): The loveliest pupil I ever had / Was my little Samoyed soubrette / Who used to cry, after every lecture, / “When does the drinking begin?” / And declared that Bosanquet’s Essentials of Logic / Was more fun than Sherlock Holmes. You can find Bosanquet’s book (first published in 1895) on-line at the Internet Archive <www.archive.org/details/theessentialsof100bosauoft>.

20399. Scott Hilburn’s amusing “Argyle Sweater” comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on Jan. 22 <www.gocomics.com/theargylesweater/2021/01/22>, kindly reported by John Bergquist.
20400. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for this year’s Edgar Awards, and one of them is Nev March’s Murder in Old Bombay (November 20 #7) for best first novel by an American author (last year the novel won an MWA award for the best unpublished first crime novel). The winners of the Edgars will be announced on Apr. 29.
20401. Dick Van Dyke will receive a Kennedy Center Honor this year (you will be able to watch the festivities on CBS-TV on June 6). He started his acting career more than 70 years ago (he’s now 95 years old), and likely is best known for his “The Dick Van Dyke Show” television series. He went on to play Dr. Mark Sloan in the “Diagnosis Murder” television series; the episode “In Defense of Murder” (1997) was inspired by “A Scandal in Bohemia” and the Sherlock Holmes story is credited in the dialogue.
20402. There’s still news of some live theater: Neill Hartley’s will perform his one-man show “Sherlock Holmes and the Speckled Band” at the Historic Village at Allaire in Wall Township, N.J., on Feb. 13 and 20; their web-site’s at <www.allairevillage.org>.
20403. William Gillette’s “Sherlock Holmes” (adapted for the digital stage by Rachel Kohler) will be performed at the Majestic Theatre in Corvallis, Ore., on Feb. 13 <www.majestic.org> and uploaded to Facebook and Vimeo.
20404. John Nicholson and Steven Canny’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” will be performed (and streamed) at the Mad Cow Theatre in Orlando, Fla., Mar. 15 <www.madcowtheatre.com>.
20405. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” is scheduled at the Ziegfeld Theater in Ogden, Utah, Mar. 26-Apr. 10 <www.zigarts.com>; the announcement of auditions is an interesting summary of precautions some theaters are taking: “Safety: we will be taking every security measure possible throughout this process. No person will be allowed to attend our first in-person rehearsal without providing proof of receiving a negative test result for covid-19 within a week of Feb. 20. Masks will be required for all rehearsals. We will have enhanced sanitization of rehearsal and performance spaces to provide extra safety. For performances, actors will be masked off stage and possibly on stage in some scenarios.”

20406. The 2020 Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal celebrated the 100th anniversary of the publication of Vincent Starrett’s classic pastiche “The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet”, and Ray Betzner has written about the Annual, and the pastiche, at his Studies in Starrett blog; you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/y4aog2a2>.
20407. A correction: the Mystery Writers of America have announced their nominees for this year’s Edgar Awards; Nev March’s Murder in Old Bombay (November 20 #7) for best first novel by an American author (last year the novel won an MWA award for the best unpublished first crime novel), and James W. Ziskin’s “The Twenty-Five Year Engagement” in In League with Sherlock Holmes (December 20 #2) for best short story. The winners of the Edgars will be announced on Apr. 29.
20408. Angela Misri, whose The Detective and the Spy (November 20 #4) was the fourth in her series about Portia Adams, granddaughter of both Holmes and Watson, was interviewed by Shelagh Rogers on the CBC on Jan. 22; you can listen to the 17-minute interview from a link at <www.tinyurl.com/y6z5fso4>.
20409. Warren Randall (“Harold Stackhurst”) died on Jan. 26. He worked in administration at Stony Brook University on Long Island, and joined the Three Garridebs in 1987 and in 1988 he volunteered to edit the society’s newsletter Prescott’s Press, serving in that post for more than a quarter of a century. Warren was an enthusiastic member of most of the Sherlockian societies in New York and New Jersey, writing songs and skits for performances at their meetings, and was an expert punster. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2007.

20412. The Beacon Society offers annual January Stauber grants of up to $750 to fund development of programs that introduce young people to Sherlock Holmes in the U.S. and Canada; the deadline for grant applications is May 1, and details are available at the society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/h7acxds>.
20413. Jennie Paton found an interesting article at the We Are the Mighty blog on Apr. 2, 2018 <www.wearethemighty.com/articles/army-crime-lab-mickey-mouse> about Mickey Mouse appearing in Sherlockian costume in the official logo of the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Laboratory. The logo also is on-line at the lab's web-site <www.cid.army.mil/dfsc-usacil.html#sec3>.

20414. The Mystery of the Parsee Lawyer: Arthur Conan Doyle, George Edalji, and the Case of the Foreigner in the English Village (London: Bloomsbury, 2021; 320 pp., £20.00) is written by Shrabani Basu, an Indian author who tells the reader about George's father Shapurji Edalji, the complicated battle over George Edalji's guilt or innocence, and the deaths of George Edalji and all of his family, with due attention to the prejudice at the time against Indians in Britain. The book's available in India, the U.K., and Australia; no plans for a U.S. edition.
20415. Wolfgang Schramm's The Apocryphal Cases of Sherlock Holmes (Bloomington: Xlibris, 2010; 78 pp., $10.00) has Sherlock Holmes and Dr. James Watson investigating the shroud of Turin, the Loch Ness monster, and the Tunguska explosion.
20416. Karen Murdock has reported an exhibition ("The Great Fog and Other London Pictures") at the Paul Mahder Gallery in Healdsburg, Calif., of paintings by Lawrence Gipe that offer a colorful idea of what London looked like in the past <www.paulmahdergallery.com/current-exhibit>.
20418. When in Habbisburgh: you can visit the Hill House Hotel and see the blue plaque installed there in 2006 by the Eastern Daily Press and the Norwich School of Art & Design (it says that Conan Doyle, during a visit to the hotel, was inspired to write "The Dancing Men"). The hotel now is the Habbisburgh Hill House Inn <www.hillhouseinn.co.uk>, which offers a pub, dining room, coffee shop & carvery, and bed & breakfast, as well as a beer garden and the Dancing Men Brewery (plus a silhouette of Holmes at the web-site).
20419. Alison Flood's story in the Guardian (Feb. 4) was headlined "'I Think I've Written More Sherlock Holmes Than Even Conan Doyle': The Ongoing Fight to Reimagine Sherlock Holmes" <www.tinyurl.com/4qqtfaqv>; it's a good look at current and recently-past pastichery. The author who says he has written more Holmes than Conan Doyle, in case you don't want to read the article, is James Lovegrove.
20420. Christopher Plummer died on Feb. 5. He began his acting career in Canada on stage and radio, performing in both French and English, and went on to a career that lasted almost 70 years. He played Sherlock Holmes on television in "Silver Blaze" (1977) and then on screen in "Murder by Decree" (1979), and is one of the very few actors to have played both Holmes and an actor who played Holmes, the latter on stage in "Barrimore" (1998). It has been reported that Jeremy Brett suggested that Plummer tour as Holmes in Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes". Plummer's autobiography In Spite of Myself: A Memoir (2008) is well worth reading, and you can watch "Silver Blaze" at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=8l7hs0tRCCo> where there also are clips from "Murder by Decree")

20421. February 21 #3 The saga of the Lyndhurst Park Hotel continues. The Southern Daily Echo reported on Feb. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/2xluefjx> that the Hoburne Group is seeking permission to demolish most of the derelict hotel, which closed in 2014; the company wants to build 79 apartments and three commercial units on the site, and plans to retain the hotel's historic façade (the entrance and battlement-style terraces reportedly were designed by Conan Doyle in 1912).
20422. Needless to say, there is opposition: "Residents Give Mixed Response to Lyndhurst Park Hotel Plans as Verderers Slam Proposals' Effect on Forest" was the headline on an article in the local Advertiser & Times on Feb. 24 <www.tinyurl.com/kt3w9fby>. Official Verderer Lord Manners said that the verderers "do not usually comment on planning applications," but are making an exception in this case. In case you are wondering, verderers are forestry officials who deal with common land in former royal hunting areas that are the property of the Crown; the office dates from the Middle Ages, and the New Forest is of interest to them.
20423. Entertainment Weekly reported on Feb. 22 <tinyurl.com/da2dpu2z> that the new Netflix series "The Irregulars" will debut on Mar. 26. According to showrunner Tom Bidwell, "Sherlock Holmes is in the story, it's his world, but he's not the central focus. He plays a big part of it, don't get me wrong, but it's about the kids and their journeys." The Irregulars, now a slightly older group of teens "are the only ones who can stop an impending dark magical threat from destroying London." There will be eight episodes and there's a teaser video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=1APF6a4m74k>.
20424. The fall/winter issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) includes articles by Doug Elliott (about annotating Conan Doyle's The White Company) and Hartley R. Nathan (about Conan Doyle's The Firm of Girdlestone), and other reports from and about the Library and the Collection. You can ask for a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
20425. The 2019 Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture was presented at the Library by Martin Edwards (In Sherlock's Footsteps: The Connection Between Sherlock Holmes and the Detection Club") and his paper has now been published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available to people who join the Friends now. Their web-site at <www.acdfriends.org> has PayPal and credit-card capability, or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb (addresses above); the minimum donation of $35.00 brings you three issues of their newsletter and a copy of the 2020 Memorial Lecture. Edwards' presentation included a nice quote from Ronald Knox, who once wrote "A Study in Scarlet appeared in 1887, and since that date other things have been published, but it is only the detective stories that mattered."
20426. Steve Emecz continues to host on-line Sherlockian events for MX Publishing and offers links to videos of past events <www.tinyurl.com/2p3aw6wp>; you can explore the web-site to find information on their more than 400 titles and links to a long list of Sherlockian blogs.

20427. Michael Cox died on Jan. 29. He began his television career as a director of episodes of Granada's television series "Coronation Street" in 1965 and went on to a long career as director and producer. He was executive producer for "Young Sherlock: The Mystery of the Manor House" (1982) and producer (from its beginning in 1984) of Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series, in which he can be seen (uncredited) as the zoo cleaner in "The Creeping Man" (1991). His excellent A Study in Celluloid: A Producer's Account of Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes (2000), reprinted by the Wessex Press <www.wessexpress.com/html/studyincelluloid.html>, offers a fascinating history of the series, and Scott Monty's warm tribute to Cox is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/3je82yaw>.
20429. There were virtual birthday festivities from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London last month, and their annual dinner on Jan. 16 included a Zoom performance of Bonnie MacBird's dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle", now on-line at the Society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/1cob324u>.
20430. One finds all sorts of interesting things at Wikipedia, including an entry for "Sherlock Holmes fandom" (created in 2015). There also are entries for "The Baker Street Irregulars" and "The Baker Street Journal".
20431. The success of the Netflix film "Enola Holmes" seems to have drawn renewed attention to the books about her: Bill Seil notes that Publishers Weekly has reported that Nancy Springer has a new publisher (St. Martin's Press/ Wednesday Books) for two more books in the series; the first, Enola Holmes and the Black Barouche, is due in August.
20432. Ioan Baicu offers an interesting list of Romanian material for Sherlockians and Doyleans: movie posters and translations of Sherlockian and Doylean books <www.romanian-movie-collectibles.eu/sherlock-holmes.html>.
20433. Larry Flynt died on Feb. 10. Once called "the Horatio Alger of the sexual revolution" by the N.Y. Times, he launched Hustler as an explicit version of magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse, and reveled in the controversy that ensued. He published "The Affair of the Disappearing Dildo" (by John Hegenberger aka Dr. John H. Twatson) Nov. 1975 (noted by Ron De Waal as "a sure candidate for the most obscene parody"), as well as (at least) three Sherlockian cartoons over the years, 20434. The Wrap reported (Feb. 22) <www.tinyurl.com/bh3febmc>, that Guy Ritchie, who directed the first two films in the Sherlock Holmes that starred Robert Downey Jr., will write and direct a film about the Baker Street Irregulars. Not the Sherlockians, but rather the Special Operations Executive; the film ("Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare") is based on the book by Damien Lewis that is subtitled "how Churchill's secret warriors set Europe ablaze and gave birth to modern black ops." The SOE had its headquarters in Baker Street, and they were called (by those few who knew about them) the Baker Street Irregulars).

20435. "Dame Judi Dench and Benedict Cumberbatch as you've never seen them before" is Howard Ostrom's description of an amusing video at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ka47YeUj6eg> that takes you behind the scenes for a promotion recorded for Red Nose Day (which will on Mar. 19 in Britain). For adults only, perhaps, but they had fun.
20436. Cédric Asna's imaginative Sherlock Holmes: The Beginning (Van Ryder Games, 2020; $22.99) is the first of a series of five "graphic novel adventures" that allow the reader to try to solve a mystery along with Sherlock Holmes (and it's not easy) <www.vanrydergames.com>.
20437. Christopher Redmond's Lives Beyond Baker Street: A Biographical Dictionary of Sherlock Holmes's Contemporaries (London: MX Publishing, 2016; 299 pp., $18.95) offers a grand tour of the real and not-so-real people who are and who aren't mentioned in the Canon, with more than 400 brief (but informative) entries for people who range from George Wombwell and Sir Moses Montefiore to Mary Pickford and Marjorie Kay. MX Publishing's many books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
20438. Also from MX: Nicko Vaughan's The Adventure of the Wordy Companion (2018; 171 pp., $12.95) provides "an A-Z guide to Sherlockian phraseology" (from "a priori" to "Zeppelin"), helpful to the young (and perhaps no so young) reader.
20439. SHERLOC and WATSON are now on Mars. The Perseverance Rover, launched last year on July 30, landed safely on Feb. 18. They are resting quietly while the National Aeronautics and Space Administration tests the Ingenuity helicopter before activating the instruments on the rover. SHERLOC and WATSON are acronymed instruments (June 20 #2) that contribute to the exploration of the Red Planet.
20440. Ron Weighell died on Dec. 24. He wrote fiction in the supernatural, fantasy, and horror genres, as well as Sherlock Holmes and the Shadow of the Wolf (1992) and a collection of pastiches The Irregular Casebook of Sherlock Holmes (2000).
20441. The Book of Extraordinary New Sherlock Holmes Stories, edited by Maxim Jakubowski (Coral Gables: Mango, 2020; 281 pp., $18.95), is an anthology offering 15 pastiches, some straightforward, some supernatural and psychological. And Breck England's The Tarleton Murders: Sherlock Holmes in America (2017; 247 pp., $18.95) is set in pre-Watson 1878, in a story told by Rev. Simon Peter Grosjean, S.J., who was at school with Holmes at Stonyhurst, and brings Holmes a mystery that takes them to Rome (where they meet the Pope) and America (where they meet characters later found in the Canon and in other writers' fiction, as well as Gen. William T. Sherman and many other historical figures).
20442. Also from Mango: The Book of Extraordinary Amateur Sleuth and Private Eye Stories, edited by Maxim Jakubowski (2019; 267 pp., $19.95) is an anthology of new and interesting (although non-Sherlockian) stories, with a nice reward for those who look at a table of contents to decide what story to read first: Mary Harris' "The Chocolate Underpants Caper".

February 21 #6

20443. Darlene A. Cypser's The Consulting Detective Trilogy Part II: On Stage (Morrison: Foolscape & Quill, 2017; 282 pp., $12.99) continues her entertaining account of Sherlock Holmes' early life; he's no longer at Cambridge, after an explosive laboratory accident, and back in London becomes an actor with the Sassanof company, touring in England and then in the United States, hard at work honing his skills as a detective.
20444. If you bought the 50p Sherlock Holmes coin the Royal Mint issued in 2019 thinking it would be a good investment, there were only 8,602,000 of the coins minted <www.tinyurl.com/33v6g9n>.
20445. Margaret Maron died on Feb. 23. She was a prolific mystery author, and a Grand Master of the Mystery Writers of America. From her Corpus Christmas (1989): "People used to kill for 'noble' reasons—for revenge or honor or to usurp a throne. Today, everyone lets it 'all hang out' ... "You can't build a believable mystery around simple scandal for its own sake anymore. Can you imagine trying to write A Scandal in Bohemia today? Instead of hiring Sherlock Holmes to retrieve that picture of himself with Irene Adler, the king would probably be trying to peddle the negatives to The National Enquirer." ... "And would probably be turned down because both parties in the picture were fully clothed."
20446. Jennie Paton has reported some intriguing Displates offered by the English Society <www.displate.com/zeroroom/the-english-society>; a Displate is a magnet-mounted metal poster "designed to capture your unique passions."

20448. The Purple Rose Theatre is partnering with the Chelsea District Library to present a reading of David MacGregor’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Ghost Machine” on-line on Mar. 6. There’s no charge to attend, and you can register at <www.tinyurl.com/4ta4avjv>.
20449. Jacklyn Fazio’s new “Sherlock Holmes: Making the Grade” is scheduled during the next Sherlock Holmes Weekend in Cape May, N.J. on Mar. 19-21, and it will be repeated on Oct. 29-Nov. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/28273yxd>.
20450. Craig Wichman’s dramatization of “The Blue Carbuncle” will be performed at the Cape May Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J., from Oct. 29 to Nov. 6 www.eastlynntheater.org.

20452. It has been said that Sherlockian chronology is the most abstract and confusing and contradictory aspect of the grand game that Sherlockians enjoy playing, and now there’s a Sherlockian Chronologist Guild, founded by Brad Keefauver, who edits and publishes their electronic newsletter Timeline. If you would like to join the Guild, or merely see an issue of their newsletter, you can contact Brad at <bkeefauver@gmail.com>.
20453. It’s always interesting to see people quoting Sherlock Holmes from outside the Canon, as in a PsychTests press release (Feb. 27) noted by Karen Murdock <www.tinyurl.com/j9ar3pub>: “No one epitomizes the cool use of logic like Sherlock Holmes, who sliced through ignorance and ambiguity with his sharp, precise intellect. ‘Sentiment,’ he once remarked, ‘is a chemical defect found on the losing side.’” Where and when did Sherlock Holmes say that?
20454. If you enjoyed the first episodes of “Lupin” on Netflix (February 21 #6), you will welcome the rest of the first season, due this summer; here’s a brief teaser <www.youtube.com/watch?v=OWawfOIJLZI>.
20455. Jeff Falkingham’s Focusing the Lens on Doyle and Holmes (Monee: Frontier Fantasies, 2021; 78 pp., $6.99) offers 13 chapters that include his personal essays, scholarly studies, limericks, and book and film reviews, all nicely illustrated; his web-site is at <www.cccaper.com>.
20457. Leonard Goldberg’s new The Abduction of Pretty Penny (New York: Minotaur Books, 2021; 340 pp., $26.99), is the fifth in his series that stars Sherlock Holmes’ daughter Joanna Blalock, who learned much from her father and is working with Dr. John H. Watson and his son Dr. John H. Watson Jr. to rescue a young actress who has gone missing; they quickly find that she is a captive of Jack the Ripper, who has reappeared 28 years after his reign of terror in Whitechapel and soon threatens Joanna herself. The author’s web-site is at <www.leonardgoldberg.com>.

20459. Trevor Peacock died on March. 8. He had a long career on British television beginning in 1961, appeared also on stage, and wrote for musicals; he was best known for his role as Jim Trott in the series “The Vicar of Dibley” on the BBC (1994-2015), he also played Sidney Prince in the Royal Shakespeare Company’s revival of William Gillette’s “Sherlock Holmes” in 1974 in London, Washington, and New York.
20461. So: where and when did Sherlock Holmes say, “Sentiment is a chemical defect found on the losing side”? Paige Bigelow was quick to answer: in “A Scandal in Belgravia” (2012) <www.youtube.com/watch?v=utwenXbh9hA>.
20462. Nicola Pagett died on Mar. 3. She launched her acting career at the age of 8 in a school play, and went on to a long career on stage and then in television; her break-out role was Elizabeth Bellamy in “Upstairs, Downstairs” (1971-1973), and she played Countess Nadja in “Anonymous Letters” in the series “The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes” (1973).
20463. Gender and the Modern Sherlock Holmes: Essays on Film and Television Adap-tions Since 2009, edited by Nadine Farghaly (Jefferson: McFarland & Co., 2015; 252 pp., $29.95), is a collection of discussions by (mostly) academic writers about the sexuality of, and the relations between, characters in Robert Downey Jr. “Sherlock Holmes” films and the “Sherlock” and “Elementary” television series. It can be interesting examining footnotes and citations such books, and making discoveries.
20464. Ariane Devere’s list of interests includes barbershop singing, Formula One Grand Prix, and (most importantly for readers of this newsletter) Sherlock Holmes, and devoted fans of the BBC’s “Sherlock” series will welcome her transcripts of every episode <www.arianedevere.livejournal.com>. They are in fact more than transcripts, since they include her commentaries of what is happening as well as on what is being said.
20465. Herewith a reminder that the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition will be open at the Minnesota Historical Center in St. Paul, Minn., from Oct. 1 through Mar. 21, 2022 <www.mnhs.org>. The exhibition, created by the Exhibits Development Group, has been on tour since 2013, and there’s an impressive web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9b7yq83> where EDG promotes the exhibition to museums that might want to put it on display.

20466. The saga of the Lyndhurst Park Hotel continues. The local Advertiser & Times reported (Mar. 4) <www.tinyurl.com/p2eam9cv> that the Parish Council has recommended approval of the redevelopment, despite the plan calling for only eight affordable homes even though the New Forest National Park Authority's policy calls for 50 affordable homes on the site. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is said to have designed the entrance of the hotel and its battlement-style terraces in 1912, and the Daily Telegraph reported on Mar. 20 <www.tinyurl.com/p3a4482e> on a new discovery by local historian Brice Stratford in Portsmouth's Arthur Conan Doyle Collection of a sketch showing that his design for the front façade "was based on the spiritual view of the journey of the soul."
20468. Here's a somewhat unusual hansom cab, at auction in Switzerland this month: a German wind-up sheet-metal toy, color lithographed and hand-lacquered, made ca. 1910/20, and there's more information available at <www.tinyurl.com/ydkrr5mv>. It was estimated at 900-1800 CHF [Swiss francs], and sold for 1100 CHF [or about $1175].
20469. The 38th (2020) issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle; it has 77 pages of scholarship (including an interesting article by Daniel Polvere about George Macy, who presided over the Limited Editions Club when it issued its landmark edition of the Canon), quizzes, theatric, artwork, and reports on the society and its members. The annual costs $13.00 postpaid (or $20.00 outside the U.S.); checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles can be sent to Terri Haugen, 6710 51st Street Court West, University Place, WA 98467.
20470. Something new for fans of "Doctor Who": Mark Gatiss revealed in an interview in Radio Times (Mar. 14) <www.tinyurl.com/2zry963s> that he briefly considered having Conan Doyle appear in "The Crimson Horror" (2013). "The original pitch was going to have Conan Doyle in it," he said, but the idea didn't make it past the plotting stage. "There certainly wasn't a first draft with Doyle," Gatiss recalled, "but he does deserve his own story, so maybe some day."
20471. The Three Locks, by Bonnie MacBird (London: Collins Crime Club, 2021; 412 pp., $26.99), is the fourth in her series of pastiches, and a prequel, set in 1887 and involving Holmes and Watson with stage magicians in London and with students and dons at Cambridge; it's nicely done, and a welcome addition to the series. The story is told with style and surprises, and there is a personal mystery for Watson. Her web-site <www.macbird.com> has interesting and colorful annotations for all of the books in the series.

20472. Richard T. Ryan's The Vatican Cameos (London: MX Publishing, 2016; 319 pp., $16.95) alternates between the early 16th century, when Pope Alexander VI commissions Michelangelo to create the cameos, and the early 20th century, when Pope Leo XIII needs assistance from Holmes and Watson in recovering the cameos after they're stolen from the Vatican and the papacy is threatened. MX Publishing's books are available at a discount at <www.sherlockholmesbooks.com>.
20473. The Scotsman reported on Mar. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/yzsryxur> on an on-line exhibition ("Photographing Fairies") at the Stills center for photography in Edinburgh <www.stills.org/exhibitions/photographing-fairies>; it's colorful and interesting, and there's a 50-page exhibition book available for download.
20474. Adler was a five-issue comic-book mini-series written by Lavie Tidhar and drawn by Paul McCafferty, and it's now available as a graphic novel (London: Titan Comics, 2021; 128 pp., $16.95); "it's time to meet the League of Extraordinary Gentlewomen" is the premise, in a story set in London in 1902, when Irene is involved with a host of heroines and villains (Canonical and otherwise) in a battle to save London. There also is a colorful gallery of the mini-series covers, and a gallery of the artist's designs for many of the characters.
20475. Umberto Eco's best-selling novel The Name of the Rose (1980) was a medieval mystery that featured William of Baskerville as its detective, while confusing many readers with passages in Latin, including its last sentence (Stat rosa pristina nomine, nomina nuda tenemus). Lion Heart Autographs offers a letter from Eco in which he explains the meaning of the sentence <www.tinyurl.com/3vcas7r7>.
20476. This month all residents of England and Wales were legally obliged to complete a census form for the Office of National Statistics, or face a fine of up to £1,000, according to a story in the magazine Country Life (Mar. 6) <www.tinyurl.com/2bmajhum> that explains, among other things, when the first British census was held. Has anyone ever checked the 1890s census records to see who lived at 221B Baker Street, wherever it might have been at the time?
20477. The "Holmes in the Heartland" scheduled in St. Louis on July 9-11 has been cancelled. It's the latest casualty of the pandemic, according to an announcement from The Parallel Case of St. Louis, and they hope to be able to hold the conference safely, sooner rather than later.
20478. Accidental discoveries can be great fun; Anders Wiggström recently held a lottery for members of the Baskerville Hall Club (in Sweden), offering a copy of Patrick Kincaid's The Continuity Girl (London: Unbound, 2018; 268 pp.), described by the publisher <www.unbound.com> as "a comic love story in which the discovery of a long-lost version of a cult movie sheds light on a 45-year-old love affair between a Hollywood filmmaker and a real-life Loch Ness monster hunter." The movie, of course, is "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and the story alternates between Scotland in 1969 and London and Scotland in 2013 and 2014, and it's a pleasure to read.

20479. The Lima Symphony Orchestra began streaming a performance of "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Maestro" on Mar. 20, with Andrew Crust as the conductor and Enrico Lopez-Yañez as Sherlock Holmes; there's a teaser at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=MbG2uynt564>, and you can watch the performance at <www.limasymphony.com>.
20480. Dr. John H. Watson's Last Chronicles, by C. Alfred Lewis, Sr. (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2010; 81 pp., $5.95), is an account of events at the end of the partnership of Holmes and Watson, and the results of Holmes' experiments with bees in his retreat on the Sussex Downs.
20481. John Hillman describes his "Travels Through Time" podcast as "a mixture of serious history and a playful parlour game," and you can hear Peter Moore interview Shrabani Basu, author of The Mystery of the Parsee Lawyer: Arthur Conan Doyle, George Edalji, and the Case of the Foreigner in the English Village (February 21 #2) at <www.tinyurl.com/pn2fs96>.
20482. Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel, Castle Shade (October 20 #5), is due in June, and you'll find an amusing promotional video, and more news about Laurie, at <www.tinyurl.com/wfuuxe6p>.

20484. On Nov. 13, 1968, Sir Paul (as he was then) was the castaway on BBC Radio 4's "Desert Island Discs"; he briefly discussed his participation in the Society's first tour of Switzerland, and you can listen to a 12-minute extract from the program at <www.bbc.co.uk/sounds/play/p009y1j7>.
20485. The Bavarian poet and painter Carl Spitzweg (1808-1885) is perhaps best known for "Der Bücherwurm" [The Bookworm]. It is an image that resonates with book collectors, and Anders Wiggström (of the Baskerville Hall Club in Sweden) has found (and kindly forwarded) this amusingly-edited version on the Internet.
20486. Buckingham Palace announced on Mar. 1 that "The Duke of Edinburgh was to-day transferred from King Edward VII's Hospital to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where doctors will continue to treat him for an infection, as well as undertake testing and observation for a pre-existing heart condition." He underwent a successful heart procedure on Mar. 3, returned to King Edward VII's Hospital for rest and recuperation, and then left the hospital on Mar. 16 to return to Windsor Castle.
20487. Prince Philip, now 99 years old, was initially admitted to hospital as a precautionary measure after feeling unwell. Barts, founded in 1123, is the oldest hospital in Britain still providing medical services on its original site; it is well known to Sherlockians, of course, as the location of the first meeting of Holmes and Watson.

March 21 #6

20488. Robert Downey Jr. had a spectacular fight scene in "Sherlock Holmes" (2009), and there is a detailed and interesting analysis of the fight by a British doctor named Ed Hope that is available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=hmltHCrXkIQ>. Bob Katz (also a doctor, and one who knows whereof he speaks when it comes matters medical), says that the analysis is "very well done and comprehensive."
20489. Frank Mills died on Feb. 11. He began acting on television in Britain in 1958, and was perhaps best known for his starring role in the ITV series "Coronation Street". He also played Commissioner Peterson in Granada's "The Blue Carbuncle" (1984).
20490. Cliff Goldfarb has kindly forwarded a Mar. 17 article about Sherlock's Hats in Jerusalem <www.tinyurl.com/rw63cfz7>; it's an emporium that happily offers deerstalkers and many other styles of headgear. You can explore the shop in 3D at <www.sherlockshats.com>, and look for the picture of Sherlock Holmes.
20491. Country Life published an interesting article ("Who Created the Your Country Needs YOU Poster") on Mar. 13, and you can read the article on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/23nze82p>. The poster is one of most iconic images of World War One, and the artist was Alfred Leete, who was best known, perhaps, for his work for Punch, but he also was a prolific illustrator in The Strand Magazine from 1912 to 1932, including, in Oct. 1915, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's article "An Outing in War-Time".
20492. "An Outing in War-Time" seems not to have been reprinted, so it is only in the Strand (and now here) that one can see his portrait of Conan Doyle, sitting in a railway-carriage with a wounded veteran. It is interesting to consider how much the illustration echoes the now-iconic Sidney Paget illustration that shows Watson and Holmes on their way by rail to Exeter to investigate the disappearance of Silver Blaze.
20493. The Internet is a great source for Sherlockian cartoons that may not turn up in your daily newspaper, such as "The Flying McCoys" (which was Sherlockian on Mar. 6) <www.gocomics.com/theflyingmccoys/2021/03/06>; kindly reported by John Bergquist.
20494. In case you were worried about the bats at Highwell House (December 20 #7), the home of Cate Blanchett in Crowborough, the Tatler reported on Jan. 12 that that the Wealdon district council has granted permission to demolish the cottage on the grounds, provided that a "bat mitigation strategy" is implemented <www.tinyurl.com/y44x8r7z>. Press reports continue to say that Tom Baker and Conan Doyle lived at Highwell house; it's true that Tom Baker did, but Sir Arthur lived nearby at Windlesham.
20495. Ken Ludwig has written three Sherlockian plays ("Postmortem", "The Game's Afoot", and "Baskerville") and many others, and there's a lot about them all at his web-site <www.kenludwig.com>; click on the menu (the three horizontal bars at upper right) and then on [media] and [thoughts on comedy].

20496. Sherlock Holmes, The Missing Years: Japan, by Vasudev Murthy (Scottsdale: Poisoned Pen, 2015; 270 pp., $24.95), is an account of some of Holmes' adventures (with Watson) during the Great Hiatus, on their travels from London to Tokyo, via Alexandria, Bombay, Calcutta, Angkor Wat, Saigon, Nagasaki, and Kyoto, all the while attempting to foil Professor Moriarty's evil plans.
20497. Otto Penzler plans to celebrate the publication of The Three Locks with an on-line conversation with Bonnie MacBird and Dan Stashower, on Apr. 13 at 6:00 pm DST. Details will be available at the Mysterious Bookshop's web-site <www.mysteriousbookshop.com/pages/events>.
20498. How to Instantly Size-Up Strangers Like Sherlock Holmes, by Mark A. Williams, Sr. (South Richmond Hill: Real Deal, 2014; 384 pp., $26.79) offers a detailed examination of the many ways in which Holmes observed, drew inferences, and reached conclusions, and explains how you too can try to do the same.
20500. Sherlockiana, the newsletter of the Sherlock Holmes Klubben I Danmark, now in its 66th year and edited by Svend Ranild, has in its first issue of 2021 some delightful artwork by Michael Skov Lambeck, thoroughly appropriate for these lockdown days, which will end sooner rather than later as more and more of us are being vaccinated.
20501. "A crew of misfits investigates a series of supernatural crimes in Victorian London for Dr. Watson and his shadowy associate, Sherlock Holmes," is the premise of the new eight-episode series "The Irregulars" (launched on Netflix on Mar. 26). No spoilers here, in case you haven't watched it yet (or are refusing to watch it), although the Internet is full of buzz about the series (as was the case with Netflix' earlier series "Enola Holmes").
20502. There have been some interesting articles about the series, including one in Radio Times (Mar. 26) <www.tinyurl.com/5b8k92vk>. It would appear that there's a lot of binge-watching in Britain: Radio Times also provided (on Mar. 26) an explanation of the ending of the series, with a firm warning about spoilers <www.tinyurl.com/mfwhv9s>.
20503. If you've not seen the 1929 silent "Der Hund von Baskerville" that starred Carlyle Blackwell as Sherlock Holmes, the first 12 minutes are available on-line at <www.vimeo.com/529650729>
20504. "An Evening with Jeremy Brett's Sherlock Holmes" is the title of an interesting two-hour presentation arranged by Steve Emech for MX Publishing on Mar. 27 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=6h1rFslLs34>, featuring the premiere of a performance by Jonathan Goodwin, a reading from Maureen Whittaker's Jeremy Brett Is Sherlock Holmes, and a panel of admirers.

20505. Elizabeth Crowens' A Pocketful of Lodestones (New York: Atomic Alchemist, 2019; 314 pp., $20.00), a sequel to her Silent Meridian in her The Time Traveler Professor series (October 18 #4), is a complicated time-shifting novel that involves a set of parallel (and sometimes supernatural) universes; Conan Doyle is one of the characters. The author's web-site is at <www.elizabethcrowens.com>.
20507. The Spanish artist Marco Navas offered a "Sherlockians" collection with 12 7-cm figurines some years ago (November 14 #5), hand-crafted in resin and hand-painted, and there's now a new "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" collection that begins with a graphic scene from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.marconavas.com/Sherlock%20Holmes.html>. The web-site is in Spanish, and in English at <www.marconavas.com/EESherlock%20Holmes.html>.
20508. "It was a very good year." 1887 is, of course, important as the year in which the first Sherlock Holmes story appeared, but it also marked Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee, which was celebrated by the Royal Mint with a rarely-issued £5 golden sovereign. The Royal Mint now does more than provide Great Britain with its coinage; it's now a state-owned limited company that also deals in old coins, including the Golden Jubilee £5 sovereign (the first £5 sovereign ever minted), which they are advertising for a mere £3,950 <www.tinyurl.com/2mjncs4u>. There also was a Golden Jubilee £2 sovereign, available for only £1,720.
20509. Christopher Walsh's "Miss Holmes" will be performed at Colorado Mesa University in Grand Junction, Colo., Apr. 8-11, with audio of the production streamed on Apr. 14-22 <www.tinyurl.com/ya84htwa>.
20510. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" (scheduled at the Longwood University Theatre in Farmville, Va., last year but postponed due to the coronavirus) will be produced and streamed on Apr. 14-18 <www.blogs.longwood.edu/theatre>. And it is scheduled at the Windhover Center for the Performing Arts in Rockport, Mass., July 2-25 <www.windhover.org>.
20511. Cardinal Stage is presenting a walkabout radio-play series featuring two original Sherlock Holmes mysteries set in Bloomington, Ind. "Sherlock in Btown" will be presented in April, according to an article in the Indiana Daily Student (Mar. 3) <www.tinyurl.com/y6kv5k2x>. The two plays are Liam Castellan's "Predisposed to Violins" (beginning Apr. 15) and Bruce Walsh's "John Watson, PhD" (Apr. 23); more information will be found at their web-site <www.cardinalstage.com/mainstage/walkabout-radio-plays>. If you're not able to walk the route, Cardinal will be providing a visual companion featuring photos of the walk, allowing you to enjoy the self-guided option from home.

20512. A public service announcement: now that vaccines have become widely available, and more and more people are being vaccinated, it is possible that (at least) some people have not been fully advised on how important it can be to safeguard your vaccination records, because if they are lost it may not be possible to replace them. So: you should photograph or scan your card and store the image on your smart phone and other devices. You also should make copies of your card, for your wallet and for your files, and keep the original safe with your important papers, to tide you over until official vaccine passports are available for those who want to travel to other countries, or even within the United States. And do deliver a copy of the record to your primary care physician.
20514. The Chinese animated film "The Great Detective Sherlock Holmes: The Jail-Breaker" (2019) has been dubbed in English (and with sub-titles) and released on an 84-minute DVD as "Sherlock Holmes and the Great Escape" from Shout Factory ($19.98); all of the characters are animals, and it's nicely done; you can see previews at YouTube.
20515. The Adventure of the Oakshott Trunk, by C. Alfred Lewis, Sr. (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2010; 50 pp., $6.95), is a revised second edition of a story about Holmes and Watson's success in rescuing a young client while thwarting an evil villain.
20516. Les Enfants Terribles, a theatre company that was founded in 2001, created "The Game's Afoot" for Madame Tussaud's in London a few years ago, and now offers "The Case of the Hung Parliament" as an "immersive on-line experience" <www.sherlockimmersive.com> (described by one Sherlockian as "utterly delightful" but "not for purists").
20517. Howard Ostrom discovered "Dave Gorman's Terms & Conditions Apply" channel on the Internet, with an episode on "Guessing Weird Acronyms" that you can watch at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=hqoNZnMs-fk>. Two of the acronyms are HOLMES, one them the Home Office Large Major Enquires System, and the other Hunting cOol Low Mass Extrasolar planetS (which does seem to be a cheat).
20518. "As a small kid in South Africa in the late 60s and 70s, I didn't see anything unusual about being called Sherlock Holmes. He wasn't a well-known character there at that time." That's from an interview in Metro UK (Apr. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/kwmb2vj5> with a present-day Sherlock Holmes (who was named after his father, whose mother had a sense of humor).

20519. The Case of the Displaced Detective: The Arrival, by Stephanie Osborn (Kingsport: Twilight Times, 2011; 326 pp., $19.95), is the first in a science fiction/mystery series in which Holmes has survived his battle with Moriarty at the Reichenbach having been transported to an alternate universe thanks to Project Tesseract, a government project supervised by Skye Chadwick, who becomes both his protector and his assistant. The author's web-site is at <www.stephanie-osborn.com>.
20520. Britain is celebrating the 150th anniversary of the opening of the Royal Albert Hall in London, and there was a well-illustrated report on its history published by the BBC News on Mar. 29 <www.bbc.com/news/uk-england-london-56428543>. The Royal Mint also is celebrating the event with a £5 coin; details on the coin are at <www.tinyurl.com/53ns63sn>.
20521. It should be noted that Conan Doyle appeared at least twice in the Royal Albert Hall, the first time in 1901, when he was one of the judges at the world's first body-building contest, orchestrated by the strong man Eugene Sandow, and the second time in 1929, when he spoke during an Armistice Day spiritualist assembly. He may (or may not) have appeared a third time in 1930, during a spiritual memorial service in which a clairvoyant tried to contact him before an audience of 10,000 people; his widow, Lady Jean Conan Doyle, said that the event was "cheering and encouraging."

20523. Many Sherlockians have seen and enjoyed the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, which will be at the Science Museum of Oklahoma, May 1-Sept. 6 <www.sciencemuseumok.org>. Created by the Exhibits Development Group, the exhibition has an impressive web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y9b7yq83> where the company promotes the exhibition to museums that might consider putting it on display. The exhibition is scheduled next at the Frost Science Center in Miami, Fla., May 14-Sept. 5, 2022 (the appearance at the Minnesota Historical Center in St. Paul, Minn., has been postponed).
20525. Sherlock Holmes y la Conspiración de Barcelona written by Sergio Colomino and illustrated in full color by Jordi Palomé (Barcelona: Norma Editorial, 2012; 152 pp., $19.65) is an attractive example of graphic novels in other languages; it's set in 1893, during the Great Hiatus, with Holmes in dire peril in Barcelona. It's available from Amazon in Spanish and in Catalan, and the publisher's web-site is at <www.normaeditorial.com>. Also available from Amazon is their Sherlock Holmes y el Legado de Moriarty (2016), and Colomino's Sherlock Holmes de Hayao Miyazaki (2020), both in Spanish.

20526. Ridley Pearson's Lock and Key: The Initiation (New York: HarperCollins, 2016; 419 pp., $17.99) is the first volume in his trilogy about twelve-year-old Moria Moriarty. She's at school at Baskerville Academy, near Boston, where her older brother James is the roommate of Sherlock Holmes, and the series, written for young adults (age 8+) presents a well-told origin story for the boys who wind up arch enemies. The other two books in the series are The Downward Spiral (2017) and The Final Step (2018); the author has a web-site <www.ridleypearson.com>, where you can download a free prequel short story The Gadwell Incident.
20529. Sandra de Helen's The Hounding (McCorkle Ink, 2013; 168 pp., $14.57) features Shirley Combs (who would like to be the world's greatest detective) and Dr. Mary Watson in a murder mystery set in modern-day Portland. The sequel, The Illustrious Client (2013), has them investigating a series of murders, in the midst of which Mary finds romance (although not with Shirley). The author's web-site <www.sandradehelen.com> includes a video interview about the first book.
20530. Olivia Rutigliano suggests that "Once you eliminate the least compelling Sherlock Holmes performances, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the best" in her article "The 100 Best, Worst, and Strangest Sherlock Holmes Portrayals of All-Time, Ranked" posted to the CrimeReads blog on Apr. 8 <www.crimereads.com/100-sherlock-holmes-ranked>, kindly reported by Les Klinger. One can agree or disagree with her choices, and comments, but it is interesting to consider how many (or few) people there are who actually have seen all 100 of the portrayals.
20531. "Both in the books and on screen, Sherlock is shown to be fond of his tea, and so we infused vodka with Earl Grey tea. He's also found with a glass of wine, and we made a beetroot and wine reduction, making it look a little like blood for all the murder mysteries he's solved. Add to it a hint of rose for his unrequited hostility toward women, and a little fresh lime to balance it all. The very English gherkin pickles are added to it. We serve it with Sherlock's iconic magnifying glass." That's the recipe for "Sherlock in a Pickle" a cocktail reported (with an image) by Bill Seil in the Asian Age <www.tinyurl.com/39bfbv9ch>.

20532. Printer's Error, by J. P. Romney and Rebecca Romney (New York: Harper, 2017; 353 pp., $26.00), is subtitled "irreverent stories from book history," and it's a delightful excursion into the world of books and those who create them. It is not really Sherlockian (although Arthur Conan Doyle and Christopher Morley are quoted), but it is full of great stories, and Rebecca (who is "That Gap on the Second Shelf" in the Baker Street Irregulars) presides over Type Punch Matrix, with an on-line catalog <www.typepunchmatrix.com> that does not neglect the Canon in its offerings of interesting and rare books.
20534. Christopher Redmond wonders, "Can you name two literary works that never mention Sherlock Holmes but are coveted by Sherlockian collectors everywhere?" in his article in the spring issue of Canadian Holmes (published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto). The literary works are "Food for Poser" and "The Four Leaved Shamrock" (two drawing-room plays that accompanied "A Study in Scarlet" in Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887); Chris has some interesting commentary about the plays and their authors. Canadian Holmes costs $30.00 a year (US or CA), and single issues cost $12.00 <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
20535. Nikki Stafford's Investigating Sherlock: The Unofficial Guide (October 15 #4) was an insightful companion to the first three seasons of the series, with discussions of its history, analysis, and commentary on each episode. She hasn't updated the book, but her blog <www.nikkistafford.blogspot.com> has her commentary on "The Abominable Bride" and many other television series.
20536. The Washington Post ran a "March Madness" poll to determine the greatest fictional detective <www.tinyurl.com/9d29c9y3>, with 32 bracketed choices; the winner was Armand Gamache, with Sherlock Holmes in second place. The poll still is up and running, so you can still vote (and see how many of the detectives you actually recognize). It has been suggested that fans of Louise Penny's books carried out an organized campaign in favor of her detective.
20537. Quartet Records has released a "50th Anniversary Special Edition" CD for "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (€21.95) <www.tinyurl.com/54ykk6y8>; it's a remastered version of their 2013 CD, with additional material that includes a bonus track of "Gabrielle" (omitted from the 2013 version).

20540. SHERLOC and WATSON are alive and well on Mars, as you will see if you go to <www.apod.nasa.gov/apod/astropix.html> and click on the Calendar link at the bottom of the page, and then on the image for Apr. 3.
20541. "There's a genre of Sherlock Holmes story that starts brilliantly," Steven Moffat said, Radio Times reported (July 20, 2020), "and obviously someone comes to the door and suggests to Sir Arthur that maybe a game of cricket is in the offing, and he just dashes an ending rather quickly. Five Orange Pips and the Engineer's Thumb both fall foul of that. But they've got great beginnings!" <www.tinyurl.com/7kwfpvp2>.
20542. Will Thomas' Dance with Death (New York: Minotaur, 2021; 307 pp., $27.99) is the latest in his excellent series that features private enquiry agent Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewelyn; it's now 1893, and they're involved in combatting an attempt to assassinate the future czar of Russian, who is visiting London for a royal wedding; strong characters are the mark of a good series, and as usual, the plot is interesting and the story well told.
20543. Stefan Bechtel and Laurence Roy Stains' Through a Glass Darkly (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2017; 303 pp., $26.99) reports in detail on "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the quest to solve the greatest mystery of all"; the authors note that they "are not true believers," adding "but it's fair to say we don't not believe," and address both sides of the lengthy argument over Spiritualism.
20544. "Tobacco for the cigars was sourced from as far as Cuba and was fermented in fruits, jaggery, and honey, giving them their unique taste," according the News Minute (Feb. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/pxzkr7st>, in a story about the Trichinopoly cigar. It appears that cigars made in Trichinopoly are still available for purchase in India <www.tinyurl.com/5f7dr9dm>, although perhaps not with the same flavor as the cigar smoked by Jefferson Hope (in "A Study in Scarlet").
20545. Matt Wingett's The Mysteries of Portsmouth (Portsmouth: Life Is Amazing, 2019; 107 pp., £10.00) includes his acknowledgement that "while many stories in this book are explicable, many appear not to be," and among those stories is his brief account about "Conan Doyle and the Paranormal". Matt earlier published an excellent facsimile of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, Conan Doyle and the Mysterious World of Light 1887-1920, and Portsmouth: A Literary and Pictorial Tour, (February 19 #6), and all his books are available at <www.lifeisamazing.co.uk>.

20547. Diana Bacco explained "Why we should thank Sherlock Holmes for the invention of forensic geology" in a post on Apr. 22 to the Ripley's Believe It or Not! web-site <www.tinyurl.com/48hfjnke>.
20548. Bill Peschel's The Casebook of Twain and Holmes (Herschel: Peschel Press, 2018; 233 pp., $17.95) offers seven stories "as dictated by Samuel Clemens" in which Twain encounters Sherlock Holmes and other Canonical characters, most reprinted from his "223B Casebook Series" and all nicely cap-turing Twain's style and self-deprecating humor. Bill has a web-site at <www.peschelpress.com>.
20549. Alexander Orlov reports something new for Sherlockian gardeners: seeds for Sherlock Holmes sweet peppers <www.tinyurl.com/2nhparmb>; the web-site describes them as "incredibly productive" and "zoned for Siberia."
20550. Jon L. Lellenberg ("Rodger Prescott") died on Apr. 24. He had a long career as a strategist for the Defense Department, serving as the director of the Policy and Strategy Office of the Special Operations & Counterterrorism Bureau when he retired in 2006. Jon found the Sherlockian world as a member of the Red Circle of in the early 1970s, became the American representative for Dame Jean Conan Doyle after she was able to gain control of her father's American copyrights, and wrote and edited volumes for the Baker Street Irregulars archival history series and about Conan Doyle and his writings. He received his Investiture from the BSI in 1974, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1988.
20551. It's nice that theaters continue to open (with appropriate wear-your-mask precautions, while more and more of us are being vaccinated for COVID-19). Susan Zeder's "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Royal Theatre in Versailles, Mo., May 6-9 <www.theroyaltheatre.com>.
20552. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Historic Casino Hall in La Grange, Tex., May 14-16; Facebook page at <www.facebook.com/Fayettecountycommunitytheatre>.
20553. Amy Frey's new "Sherlock Holmes: A Scandal in Bohemia" will be performed at the Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum in Pelham Bay Park, N.Y., on June 14-13 <www.bartowpellmansionmuseum.org>.
20554. Leslie Bricusse's musical "The Revenge of Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled in a Spiegel-tent tour in Britain that's due to begin in Leicester in August <www.morphicgraffiti.co.uk>.

20555. D. Martin Dakin's A Sherlock Holmes Commentary (1972) was widely hailed as an important contribution to the Higher Criticism; he discussed all of the Canon, plus two apocryphal tales, noting many of the scholars who had preceded him. Now Bruce Harris, in his Anticipations in D. Martin Dakin's A Sherlock Holmes Commentary, recently published by George A. Vanderburgh, digs deeper into the older scholarship, in an era when modern technology has made older publications so much more easily available, and has found more earlier commentary on the points that interested Dakin. The 87-page book is available from Harris <marxman@comcast.net> ($19.00 postpaid).
20556. Russian writer and director Aleksandr Bubnov's credits include many artistic and amusing animations, two of them being "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson: The Murder of Lord Waterbrook" (2006) and "Sherlock Holmes and the Little Chimney Sweeps" (2012), both now available at YouTube, with English subtitles, at <www.tinyurl.com/ev9v3puj> and <www.tinyurl.com/2y95dhna>, kindly reported by Jennie Paton.

20557. Sherlock Holmes from Screen to Stage, by Benjamin Poore (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2017; 258 pp., $119.99), is a well-written and entertaining examination of the impact of stage, screen, and television on the continuing popularity of Sherlock Holmes, and it offers much more than its subtitle ("post-millennial adaptations in British theatre") suggests; there's discussion of William Gillette's play as well as many other American versions of Holmes, and more importantly, the author has seen or read the many productions, and has not merely relied on reviews.
20558. There were 28 issues of Moody Street Irregulars (A Jack Kerouac Newsletter) published from 1978 to 1992, and according to the entry at Wikipedia "the title of the publication derives from the Baker Street Irregulars, a group of street urchins often employed by Sherlock Holmes." No one seems to have reported a mention of Holmes in the newsletter.
20559. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London is celebrating its 70th anniversary this year, and Nicholas Utechin tells some grand stories about its history in an interview at the I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere web-site; listen in at <www.tinyurl.com/8mcw2b5j>.
20560. The spring issue of Sherlock's Spotlight Gazette (the Beacon Society's outreach to younger Sherlockians) and a Sherlockian thread in John Hambrook's amusing comic strip "The Brilliant Mind of Edison Lee" are now available from Steve Mason <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>; he'll be glad to add you to their mailing list.
20561. Christine Estima had an interesting article in the Hamilton Spectator (May 1) <www.tinyurl.com/2tt6mvhz> about the illustrated guidebooks published by Ward, Lock & Co. in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, mentioning in passing a Great Postcard competition in 1907 that was judged by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, with £6,666 in prizes. Thanks to Google, one finds the "Raphael Tuck and Sons Competitive Prize Exhibition of Postcard Home Decorations and Tours, Together with Postcard Originals" in London in the summer of 1907; it was an imaginative promotional effort, and the catalogue's on-line at <www.catalogues.tuckdb.org/sets/5993>. Conan Doyle was on the board of directors of the company, and yes indeed, it was Ward, Lock & Co. who published Beeton's Christmas Annual in 1887.

20564. The Paranormal World of Sherlock Holmes, edited by Timothy Green Beckley (New Brunswick, Global Communications, 2010; 292 pp, $21.95) is subtitled "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, First Ghostbuster and Psychic Sleuth" and offers commentary on Conan Doyle and on the Cottingley Fairies; most of the book consists of reprints from Conan Doyle's writings about Spiritualism, including the complete text of The Edge of the Unknown.
20565. The Reichenbach Irregulars will launch their new Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Switzerland: Serious and Less Serious Musings! at a conference via Zoom on June 15; details on the conference and on the book will be found (in German and English) at their web-site <www.221b.ch>.
20566. Netflix has cancelled plans for a second season of the series "The Irregulars", even though the series ranked in the channel's top ten programs in April. This certainly will not please Read & Co. Classics, who have just published The Irregulars: A Complete Collection of the Baker Street Irregular Stories (290 pp., $14.99), with "A Study in Scarlet", "The Sign of the Four", and "The Crooked Man", as a tie-in to the series.
20567. It is nice to be reminded that the Baker Street Irregulars, who have appeared in countless pastiches, are mentioned in only three of the stories in the Canon.
20568. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder are continuing their long series of interviews at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.ihearofsherlock.com>; their latest episodes offer Bill Peschel (#214), Nicholas Utechin (#215), and a tribute to Jon Lellenberg (#216).
20569. Karen Murdock reported that Garrison Keillor honored Christopher Morley's birthday in "The Writer's Almanac" on May 5: "Morley said, 'You can blow up a man with gunpowder in half a second, while it may take twenty years to blow him up with a book. But the gunpowder destroys itself along with its victim, while a book can keep on exploding for centuries.'"
20570. Ron Fish's "Sherlockian Calendar" <www.sherlockiancalendar.com> continues to be a go-to destination for anyone who wants to see what Sherlockian societies are doing, and thanks to Zoom there certainly has been a lot going on during the pandemic. The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis happily celebrated the beginning of the end of the pandemic by holding a "hybrid" meeting on Apr. 24, in person for locals and via Zoom for those more distant, and a recording of the event, the first of its kind for a Sherlockian society meeting, is available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=if9ISjliQtE>.

20572. The National Archives in the U.K. have an interesting web-site, as well as a weekly newsletter <www.tinyurl.com/4cuw5df2>, noted by Howard Ostrom.
20573. Paul Thomas Miller, not content with presiding over Doyle's Rotary Coffin, has created an electronic Chapter and Verse edition of the Canon, by way of making it easy to cite specific sentences in the stories. It's available as a free download at <www.chapterandverseholmes.co.uk>. The Appendix will be especially useful to some Sherlockians and Holmesians.
20574. ALT.SHERLOCK.HOLMES (Oxford: Abaddon Books, 2016; 416 pp., $9.99) offers novellas by Jamie Wyman, Gini Koch, and Glen Mehn, each of them with their own and thoroughly non-Canonical versions of Sherlock Holmes, set in the worlds of a 1930s carnival, the drug-culture 1960s in New York, and today in Hollywood.
20575. Admirers of Will Thomas' series about private enquiry agents Barker and Llewelyn (April 21 #5) will enjoy Vick Mickunas' May 8 interview with Will on WYSO-FM <www.tinyurl.com/yv9fwue>.
20576. Patricia Raybon's All That Is Secret (Carol Stream: Tyndale House, 2021; 374 pp., $25.99) is set in 1925, when Annalee Spain, a young Black theology professor in Chicago travels to Denver to investigate her father's murder; she is a devotee of Sherlock Holmes, and each chapter begins with a quote from the Canon, and it's an interesting mystery but not a pastiche.

20578. Robert J. Harris' A Study in Crimson: Sherlock Holmes 1942 (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2021; 306 pp., $25.95) is inspired by the Universal series of films that brought Holmes and Watson into the 1940s, and presents them in war-time Britain in pursuit of Crimson Jack, a serial killer whose crimes echo those of Jack the Ripper; Holmes and Watson don't echo Rathbone and Bruce, but one can see this as one of their films. The author has a web-site at <www.harris-authors.com>.
20579. You can see Sherlock Holmes in action (in Spanish) in a video spotted by Jennie Paton at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=B-QY2cXxRKl>.
20580. And here's Herbert Pattee as Sherlock Moans in a short silent film held at Southern Methodist University <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ll7R2TWXa8w>. But it doesn't seem to match any of Pattee's films listed in the Internet Movie Data Base. The shimmy was popular enough to have had its own song, "I Wish I Could Shimmy Like My Sister Kate" (written by Armand J. Piron and published in 1922), and if you would like to try the dance out for yourself, here's how <www.youtube.com/watch?v=iMwrNuXikA>.

20582. There's welcome news for all who enjoyed the first episodes of the Netflix series "Lupin" (March 21 #1): the rest of the first season will be available on June 11. The trailer is at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kJ6x279y8GI>, and the web-site for the series is at <www.netflix.com/title/80994082>.
20583. Norman Lloyd died on May 11. He had a long career on stage and screen and in television. His Sherlockian connection is by association: according to his obituary in the Hollywood Reporter, his first big break came in 1932, when while attending New York University, he was offered an apprenticeship at Eve Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theatre. Seeking advice, he knocked unannounced at the Broadway stage door of Nigel Bruce, who was then in the three-act play "Springtime for Henry".
20584. Bruce played the same part (the jealous husband) when the play was filmed in 1934. Alas: the film seems not to be available on-line or on DVD, but you can see what Nigel Bruce looked like in 1934 in a lobby card that may still be available at eBay <www.tinyurl.com/3f6z4bd3>.
20586. Palgrave Macmillan's Crime Files series includes Clare Clarke's Late Victorian Crime Fiction in the Shadows of Sherlock (New York: 2014; 221 pp., $199.99), an interesting exploration of the genre in the 1890s and 1900s (which has been called "the first golden age of detective fiction"), in a discussion that ranges from Robert Louis Stevenson to Guy Boothby; there's a chapter on "The Sherlock Holmes Stories and Work", and among many other contributions to the literature she traces the phrase "detective fiction" to its first appearance in print, in the Saturday Review (Dec. 4, 1886) a year before the publication of "A Study in Scarlet" in Beeton's Christmas Annual.
20587. Brianna Benji's Shirley Jane and the Mystery of the Golden Monkey (2014) is the first of five booklets for children aged 8-10; Shirley Jane Holmes is the great-great-granddaughter of Sherlock Holmes, who solve mysteries with her friends Janice Dickinson and Joshua Edgar Poe.
20588. Raise Your Glass to Sherlock Holmes, by Phil Angelo (Flesherton: Battered Silicon Dispatch Box, 2020; 159 pp., $15.00), is a pleasant collection of 75 toasts that were delivered at meetings of the South Downers, for each of the 60 stories and some of the major characters, enhanced by attractive woodcuts by George and Betty Wells, plus John Brousch's heraldic coats of arms for the stories. $19.83 postpaid from the author (740 South Greenwood Avenue, Kankakee, IL 60901) <philangelo@comcast.net>.

20589. The publishing world ain't what it used to be: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt has been purchased by HarperCollins, which brings the number of major publishers down to five. To see just how big HarperCollins is now, go to <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/HarperCollins> and scroll down to Imprints. Penguin Random House is planning to buy Simon & Schuster, which will take the number of major publishers down to four.
20590. Chicago artist Scott Gustafson has painted three impressive portraits of Sherlock Holmes, offering the original artwork as well as prints of each portrait <www.scottgustafson.com>.
20591. Lincoln Peirce's "Big Nate" comic strip featured a Sherlockian sequence on May 17-22; its on-line at <www.gocomics.com/bignate/2021/05/17>.
20592. Reported: H. F. Heard's pastiche "The Enchanted Garden" (featuring Mr. Mycroft) in Golden Age Detective Stories, edited by Otto Penzler for his American Mystery Classics anthology (2021; 312 pp., $25.95).
20593. Elizabeth Crowens' A War in Too Many Worlds (New York: Atomic Alchemist, 2021; 293 pp., $20.00), is the third in her "The Time Traveler Professor" series (March 21 #8); it's a complicated time-shifting novel that involves a set of parallel (and sometimes supernatural) universes; Conan Doyle is involved, along with H. G. Wells and Harry Houdini (and there are echoes of "The Lost World" and "The Island of Dr. Moreau"). The author's web-site at <www.elizabethcrowens.com> has more information on the series.
20595. The Sensible Necktie and Other Stories of Sherlock Holmes by Peter K. Andersson (London: MX Publishing, 2015; 204 pp., $14.95), offers nine traditional (and nicely plotted) pastiches. Susan Knight's Mrs. Hudson Investigates (2019; 218 pp., $14.95) offers seven stories that feature Holmes and Watson's landlady as the detective, and doing quite well with her own cases. Molly Carr's Sherlock in the Springtime (2012; 130 pp., $9.95) is a pleasant miscellany of notes and comments (as well as a short pastiche). A. S. Croyle's The Case of the Swan in the Fog (2017; 163 pp., $14.95) is the third in her "Before Watson" series; Dr. Poppy Stanford is again solving mysteries with Sherlock Holmes (while avoiding romantic entanglement with each other). All MX books are available at <www.sherlockholmes.com>. and MX has a "younger, sassy sibling at <www.orangepipbooks.com>.
20596. Laurie R. King's Castle Shade (New York: Bantam, 2021; 360 pp., $28.00) is the latest in her long series of novels about Mary Russell and her husband Sherlock Holmes, who (after their adventures in Riviera Gold) find themselves in Roumania; their client is Queen Marie, and since her Castle Bran is in Transylvania there's much talk of vampires and other creatures that go bump in the night. Laurie has much to say about the suspenseful story at her interesting web-site <www.laurierking.com>; just click on [blogs] to read her "Mutterings" and on [events] for information on upcoming signings, and don't neglect her YouTube channel <www.tinyurl.com/neh4hzac>.

20598. Alexander Orlov has reported an imaginative do-it-yourself version of the Hound of the Baskervilles <www.youtube.com/watch?v=H1eKyKuvPg>.
20599. The Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth is holding a series of four lectures via Zoom in honor of the late Neil McCaw, their academic director; details are available at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/v424xtfw>.
20600. Mike McClure, who presides over Stimson & Co. (a professional society for Sherlockian funeral directors), is seeking photographs of the final resting places of notable Sherlockians from around the world, accompanied by a brief biography; visit <www.baskervilleproductions.com/sherlockianplots> to see how it works, and provide assistance to Mike.
20601. The latest issue of the newsletter of the Friends of Gillette Castle State Park reports that the Castle (in Hadlyme, Conn.) opened to the public on May 29. The Friends' web-site is at <www.gillettecastlefriends.org>.
20602. Murder at the Royal Observatory, by Anna Elliott and Charley Velez (Wilton, 154 pp., $9.00), is the 27th volume in their "Sherlock Holmes and Lucy James" series; Lucy and her father, and her husband Dr. John H. Watson Jr., and his father) investigate a mysterious death at the Royal Observatory in 1900 that may be evidence of a real Martian invasion. The series web-site is at <www.sherlockandlucy.com>, and all of the books and stories can be bought at <www.amazon.com/gp/product/B0753CS4DJ>.
20603. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" is running at the Arts Theatre Cronulla in Cronulla, N.S.W., through June 12 <www.artstheatrecronulla.com.au>.
20604. A partially-improvised three-actor dramatization "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed in the gardens at the Watermill Theatre in Newbury, Berks., through June 19 <www.watermill.org.uk>.
20605. Craig Sodaro's "Young Sherlock" will be performed at the Ames City Auditorium in Ames, Iowa, June 18-27 <www.storytheatercompany.org>.
20606. The East Haddam Stage Company is celebrating its return to live theater with performances at Gillette Castle State Park in East Haddam, Conn., of a radio script of "A Scandal in Bohemia" on weekends, July 3 through Aug. 8 <www.ehsco.org>.
20607. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Octagon Theatre in Bolton, Lancs., from July 5 to Aug. 7 <www.octagonbolton.co.uk>.

20608. Mark your calendar for Aug. 21, when Denny Dobry will be holding an open house from 10:00 am onward at his home in Reading, Pa., where visitors can enter and play in his splendid recreation of the sitting-room, and browse the shelves in his book fair, where he will be selling Sherlockiana that has been donated to the Baker Street Irregulars Trust (prices will be modest indeed) and publications of the BSI Press. It is well worth a visit, and directions are available from Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>. There are some enticing images at <www.bsitrust.org/2021/06/book-fair-2021.html>.
20610. "Omnibus" (for those too young to remember black-and-white television) was a 90-minute series produced by the Ford Foundation and broadcast weekly by ABC-TV. On Dec. 9, 1956, the program included a 40-minute segment titled "The Fine Art of Murder" that featured a murder solved in different ways by some detective-story writers and their heroes, and you can see Dennis Hoey as Conan Doyle in a 9-minute clip spotted by Jennie Paton at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=fAH27x79zDc>; you also get to see Rex Stout, and yes) Dennis Hoey also played Inspector Lestrade in the Universal series.
20611. An imaginative "Sherlock Holmes Pixie Door" is available from Blue Toucan Studios <www.tinyurl.com/j4shankc>.
20612. Peterson of Dublin began making and selling pipes in the 1870s, and their pipes have long been popular with Sherlockians (even though there are far fewer Sherlockian pipe-smokers now). Sean Wright has kindly reported the recent blog by Mark Irwin <www.tinyurl.com/3npmjdfc> about their Rathbone (XL20) that honors the pipes that Rathbone smoked in his Sherlock Holmes films. Smokers (and collectors) will find the Rathbone pipe, in various finishes, at <www.peterson.ie/search/?term=Rathbone>.
20614. Otto Penzler is continuing his "Otto Penzler Presents" series at YouTube, talking about authors, collecting, and collectibles at YouTube; a recent video was about Rex Stout, and of course Otto describes the debt that Nero Wolfe owes to Sherlock Holmes <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kKOAx0NytKc>.
20615. When in Novgorod: there's now a Mycroft pub, noted on Facebook by Alexander Sedov <tinyurl.com/2yuewt5y>. The Russians are enjoying their interesting "Everything Sherlock Holmes" Facebook page.
20616. Nice news for film fans: the British Film Institute's National Archive has announced that Iron Mountain Entertainment Services will fund a full restoration of all of the 1920s films that starred Eille Norwood as Sherlock Holmes. This year is the 100th anniversary of the release of the first of his films, and the project is expected to be completed by 2023, the 100th anniversary of the last of his films. Only a few of the films can be seen at YouTube (search for "eille norwood"), and it will be grand to be able to see all of them (that's 45 two-reelers and two features).

20617. Paula Berinstein's Amanda Lester and the Purple Rainbow Puzzle (Agoura Hills: The Writing Show, 2015; 386 pp., $14.99) is the third in a young-adult series that now runs to ten titles; Amanda Lester, a descendant of Inspector Lestrade, is sent to a mysterious British school for descendants of famous detectives, where she encounters a real mystery and an assortment of villains, as well as some fantasy and science fiction (and with amusing touches) <www.amandalester.net>.
20618. Jennie Paton spotted video of "The Musgrave Treasure" on-line; this is an alternate title for Georges Tréville's "The Musgrave Ritual" (1912), and you can watch it at <www.dailymotion.com/video/x81a4rd>.
20619. Sherlockian fans of "Doctor Who" will recall "The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (broadcast by BBC-1 in 1977), starring Tom Baker as the Fourth Doctor. Big Chief Studios is taking pre-orders for its Fourth Doctor Mini Bobble <www.tinyurl.com/9au6rz64>; £9.99, due in November.
20620. Proceedings of the Pondicherry Lodge, the semi-annual electronic newsletter edited by Jayantika Ganguly for the Sherlock Holmes Society of India, is now in its ninth year, and it's one of the better Shelockian society publications. The current issue (with 204 colorful pages) offers scholarship, pastiches, and commentary, including Howard Ostrom's discussion of Father Brown and many other priests, vicars, and rabbis who had talents for detection, and David Marcum's detailed report on "prolific pasticheurs." All of the issues of the Proceedings are available at the society's web-site at <www.sherlockholmessocietyofindia.com>.

20621. "West of Kashmir: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure" is a film that was planned by Jim Danforth in the 1990s, but never made, except for a brief preview clip that you can watch at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=dJfPSvF7dVo>; thanks to Doug Chapman for reporting the clip. And to Howard Ostrom for identifying Mark Clifton as Holmes and Gordan Roberts as Dr. John Watson.
20623. One of the four stories in "Tales from the Darkside: The Movie" (1990) was Michael McDowell's dramatization of Conan Doyle's "Lot No.249"; Julianne Moore played Susan and on May 28 told an amusing behind-the-scenes story on "The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon" (on NBC-TV). There's a clip available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ok2bWabNeTg>.
20624. Mark Jones and Paul Chapman continue their interesting discussions of the writings of Conan Doyle (focusing on his non-Sherlockian work) on-line at their "Doings of Doyle" podcast <www.doingsofdoyle.com>; their latest post considers "The Terror of Blue John Gap" and they also have an interesting consideration of the Captain Sharkey stories (in case you're a fan of pirates), and a comprehensive report on the "Conan Doyle in Edinburgh" conference that was held at Napier University last September.

20625. "Typewriters might not be the first thing that comes to mind when watching 'The Lost World'" leads off Heritage Auctions' description of an unusual "Corona in the Lost World" tie-in poster issued in 1925, coming up in their sale #7243 on July 24-25, estimated at $1,500-$3,000 <www.tinyurl.com/2my245an>. And yes, Edward Malone did indeed have a Corona with him as part of his essential gear in the film.
20626. It's not Sherlockian, but if you've ever wondered about how they came up with the two-letter abbreviations for the names of all the states, here's an explanation <www.youtube.com/watch?v=dLECCmKnrys>.
20627. Nye & Company offered an interesting item at auction on June 2: 23 of the 24 volumes of the Crowborough Edition, apparently bound in leather, lacking (of course) the first volume (which was signed by Conan Doyle), with an opening bid of $100 and an estimate of $200-$300. It's possible that it was one of the few presentation sets, but one cannot tell without knowing the number that appeared on the signed limitation page in the missing first volume <www.tinyurl.com/274n67w3>. Presumably the first volume was sold earlier, by someone who valued only Conan Doyle's signature. The 23 volumes sold for only $250. Complete sets with all 24 volumes are advertised by used-book dealers now for $5,000 or more.
20628. Magda Jozsa's Sherlock Holmes in the 21st Century (CreateSpace, 2000; 314 pp., $13.99); offers three stories that involve time travel, clones of Mycroft and Moriarty, and the children of Holmes and Watson; she has written many other pastiches, and her web-site's at <www.read4life.com>.
20629. Tor.com is an on-line magazine launched in 2008, and one of its features is a "Reading the Weird" department in which Anne M. Pillsworth and Ruthanna Emrys recently discussed "The Horror of the Heights" in some detail <www.tinyurl.com/4mhhybkt>; there's also a link to their thoughts on Neil Gaiman's "A Study in Emerald", and the web-site has a search engine useful if you want to search for [sherlock holmes] or [conan doyle] or anyone or anything else.
20630. John Murray founded his publishing house in London in 1768, and the company went on to become (and still is) the publisher of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's books; this month they announced a new imprint, to be called Baskerville, for new crime and thriller authors.
20631. The Washington Post Book Club held an on-line "March Madness" bracket contest to "Pick the Best Fictional Detective" contest from Mar. 25 to Apr. 5 and can still see how it worked at <www.tinyurl.com/u9rmzpyy>. Your vote won't count now, alas; Sherlock Holmes came in second, well behind Armand Gamache. One might uncharitably assume that fans of Louise Penny's books launched an energetic turn-out-the-vote campaign (so far no one seems to have demanded a Cyber Ninjas recount).
20632. Hamilton House in Winnipeg, described as "one of the most historically and culturally important site in North America," is up for sale, at CA$410,000 (according to an article in the Winnipeg Free Press on May 25); what makes it so important is that it was the home of Thomas Glendenning Hamilton, a noted spiritualist who arranged for a séance that Conan Doyle attended in 1923, when he was visiting Winnipeg. You can read about the séance in an article by Michael W. Homer <www.tinyurl.com/39rucjsn>, and the realtor is Emma Alfons <www.tinyurl.com/ykz4pakj>.

20633. Roger Johnson has reported news from the Deadline web-site (on June 10) <www.tinyurl.com/ww8bfupd>: New Republic Pictures has optioned Adam Roche's podcast "The Secret History of Hollywood". The pod-cast included "The Game Is Afoot" (about Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, and their long friendship); there were three episodes, broadcast in 2018, and audio is available at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/3h4p7a8p>.
20634. The Baker Street Almanac 2021, edited by Ross E. Davies, Jayantika Ganguly, Ira Brad Matetsky, and Monica Schmidt, is now available in print for $30.00 postpaid <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/2021.html> or from The Green Bag, 6600 Barnaby Street NW, Washington, DC 20015), with a copiously-annotated edition of "The Priory School" (and much more about the Sherlockian world), as well as some "amusing extras" that are not included in the on-line edition. All four issues of the Almanac are available on-line (free) as PDFs at <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/bsa.html>.
20635. "Dear Holmes" is a monthly mysteries-by-mail subscription package created by Michael Silver <www.dearholmes.com> (June 20 #5); none of my readers has reported on it, but David John Moratta praised it enthusiastically in an article in Forbes (June 10) <www.tinyurl.com/h5hpzmv7>.
20636. Reported: H. F. Heard's pastiche "The Enchanted Garden" (featuring Mr. Mycroft) in Golden Age Detective Stories, edited by Otto Penzler for his American Mystery Classics anthology (2021; 312 pp., $25.99).
20637. John Gaspard's The Greyhound of the Baskervilles (Albert's Bridge Books, 2019; 218 pp., $19.99) is an amusing revision of the Canonical tale, told by Sherlock Holmes' greyhound Septimus. As with many books today, it also is available less expensively as a trade paperback, as well as via Kindle and Audible; the publisher's web-site is at <www.albertsbridgebooks.com>.
20638. The British Library's HistFest series included (in May) a panel discussion of "The Real World of Arthur Conan Doyle" with BBC broadcast Matthew Sweet and authors Shrabani Basu and Clare Clarke. You can watch them at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=HkFTZRRTEuQ>.
20639. More news for film fans, but this time it's good news and bad news. The good news is that the Museum of Modern Art has restored its print of Clive Brook's "Sherlock Holmes" (1932), reported by Russell Merritt in a post to "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/n5nv99hj>. The bad news is that the film was available on-line for only one month and only to members of the Museum, and (Russell notes) "the Walt Disney Company controls distribution rights, and getting them to release the film is likely to be an uphill battle."

20640. Marvin Kaye died on May 13. He was an editor and anthologist, mainly science fiction, fantasy, horror, and mystery, and also was a playwright and an author of novels and short stories. Kaye wrote two amusing pastiches, The Incredible Umbrella (1979) and The Amorous Umbrella (1981), as well as short stories that were collected in The Confidential Casebook of Sherlock Holmes (1998); he also edited The Game Is Afoot: Parodies, Pastiches, and Ponderings of Sherlock Holmes (1994) and The Resurrected Holmes (1996).

20641. Villains, Victims, and Violets, edited by Resa Haile and Tamara Bower (Irvine: BrownWalker Press, 2019; 316 pp., $39.95), is an interesting anthology published by the Studious Scarletts, a society for women who write Sherlockiana; it is subtitled “Agency and Feminism in the Original Sherlock Holmes Canon,” and the articles offer a new look at the ability of the women in the stories to act independently and to make their own decisions (that’s “agency” in this context) in the man’s world of the Sherlockian era.
20642. Margaret H. Laing has fun with her imaginative blog about “The Imaginary Writers’ Room” for the Chicago Tribune <www.tinyurl.com/ytyfmk97>; you can search her archive to find earlier posts about Conan Doyle, and Holmes.
20643. Charmouth, a small coastal village in Dorset near Lyme Regis, has a long history and an active local history society, which has published a colorful 8-page pamphlet “Discover Charmouth Old Village” that offers information about the many famous people who have lived and visited there. One of them was Arthur Conan Doyle, who in 1894 visited a local haunted house (which no longer survives). The pamphlet is available as a PDF from the society <www.freshford.com/Charmouth%20Trail%20and%20Map.html> Conan Doyle is on page 7).
20644. Mark your calendar for June 18 next year (and every year): it’s International Picnic Day, according to a post by Shikha Goyal at the Jagan Josh web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3kuxnddz>. The post quotes Conan Doyle: “Picnics are very dear to those who are in the first stage of the tender passion.” The quote is from the short story “Our Derby Sweepstakes” (first published in London Society, May 1882); the text is conveniently available at the Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3uvbrw>.
20645. Alexis Barquin presides over the Encyclopedia, which is comprehensive indeed, and well worth exploring. As an example, there’s a detailed examination of the 62 Sherlock Holmes stories written by Conan Doyle (yes, 62) <www.tinyurl.com/vaxct9ut>, with text, artwork, commentary, and much more.
20646. The Queen’s Birthday Honours List for 2021 included a knighthood for Jonathan Pryce for services to drama and charity (he played Holmes in the 2007 television film “Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars”), and an appointment as OBE (Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) David Forbes-Nixon for services to children and adults with special educational needs and disabilities (he created the DFN Charitable Foundation to fund the purchase of Undershaw, where Conan Doyle once lived, and converting it into the Stepping Stones School for children with learning difficulties).
20647. What does it mean to be a “Holmesian?” asks Stephen R. McAllister in his four-page Foreword to The Black Book of Justice Holmes, edited by Michael H. Hoeflich and Ross E. Davies (Clark: Talbot Publishing, 2021; 497 pp., $195.00). And nowhere in the Foreword does he mention Sherlock Holmes; he and his fellow Holmesians are devout admirers of Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. The Black Book is Holmes’ list of the books he read throughout his life, now reprinted both in facsimile and with a transcription. Holmes was an enthusiastic reader, and his notes include Exploits of Gerard and Study in Scarlet &c. &c. It’s nice to know that Holmes read Holmes. And frustrating not to know more about the &c. &c.

20648. Serendipitous Adventures with Britannia: Personalities, Politics, and Culture in Britain, edited by Wm. Roger Louis (London: I. B. Tauris, 2019; 366 pp., $50.00), is an anthology of thoroughly interesting lectures delivered at the British Studies seminar at the Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas in Austin, including one by David L. Leal on “Arthur Conan Doyle and Spiritualism”. Leal’s exploration of the Center’s splendid Conan Doyle collection yielded some intriguing discoveries, including a statement by Conan Doyle that “his own writing was worse when he used a typewriter rather than a pen.
20649. “Herr Skopf shook his head; then he scratched it. He was baffled. He had never heard of Sherlock Holmes or he would have lost no time in invoking the aid of that celebrated sleuth, for here was a real mystery.” One does indeed hear of Sherlock everywhere, this time in Edgar Rice Burroughs’ The Son of Tarzan, serialized in All-Story Weekly (1915-1916) and published as a novel by A. C. McClurg (1917). Kindly reported by Don Miguel, who notes that it’s available at <www.gutenberg.org/files/90/90-h/90-h.htm#chap04>.
20650. “Gomorrah” (2014) is a four-season Italian television series that aired in the U.S. on SundanceTV in 2016; the series is a fictionalized account of today’s crime syndicate in Naples <www.tinyurl.com/2yfundtv>. The title of the series is a pun on the syndicate’s real name, the Camorra, which is well known to those who are aware that the manuscript of “The Red Circle” states “Camorra” (when the story was published the name was changed, and is “Carbonari”). The series is now streaming on HBO Max (in case you subscribe to the service, or want an excuse to) <www.tinyurl.com/t84r7reb>, and you can watch a trailer at the web-site. There are subtitles in English, of course; when the series aired in Italy it was subtitled in Italian, because the dialogue is in the Neapolitan dialect rather than in proper Italian. Fair warning: the series is not for the faint-hearted.
20651. MousePlanet (which describes itself as an “independent consumer guide to Disney travel and vacations”) offers a blog on “Where Is the Love for This Disney Animation?”; on June 16 Jim Korkis had nice comments about Ratigan and “Basil of Baker Street” <www.tinyurl.com/yc34zd3r>.
20652. The French television series “Lupin” that’s available on Netflix (February 21 #6) offers more Sherlockian allusions: in the eighth episode Assane Diop steals into his son Raoul’s bedroom and leaves him a copy of Arsène Lupin contre Sherlock Holmes, and in the ninth episode Raoul is seen reading the book. Diop is a present-day gentleman thief inspired by Maurice Leblanc’s Arsène Lupin (it’s an excellent series). Omar Sy plays Assane, and Lauren Collins had an interesting profile of him in the June 21 issue of The New Yorker <www.tinyurl.com/4h6fwyyy>.
20653. Sherlock Holmes loves drinking at the Sherlock Holmes pub, according to an article in the Daily Mail (June 15) <www.tinyurl.com/x58fdj28>.
20654. Amir Joy’s The Chronicles of the Obscure Detective (2021; 174 pp., $9.99) stars Williams Joy, an “ambitious and obscure detective” who comes to modern-day London to follow in Sherlock Holmes’ footsteps and manages to rent Holmes’ rooms at 221B; the ink-on-paper version is mostly printed in white on black pages, but the less expensive and more readable e-book is black-on-white. The author, born in Romania and now an Egyptian national boxing champion, has a web-site at <www.amirjoy.net>.

20655. Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Switzerland: Serious and Less Serious Musings!, edited by Marcus Geisser, Guy Marriott, and Michael A. Meer (Meiringen: Reichenbach Irregulars, 2021; 108 pp., €21.99) is the society’s first book, offering papers delivered at the conferences held in Switzerland since the society was founded in 1989; it is all nicely done, and you can visit <www.tinyurl.com/4epcnrsx> to see a sample from the - book. There are various ways to order the book, on paper and as an e-book, depending on where you are; the society will be happy to explain it all <reichenbachirregulars@gmail.com>. The book will be celebrated at a “Routes to the Reichenbach” virtual event with the Red Circle of Washington, via Zoom on July 10; details and a registration button are available at <www.redcircledc.org>.

20656. Robert Quackenbush died on May 17. He began his literary career as an illustrator of children’s books, and then began writing as well. His creations included Sherlock Chick (who hatched from an egg holding a magnifying glass), and Detective Mole (who wore a trench coat and a houndstooth deerstalker).
20658. The spring issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) offers Joanne Alberstat’s “A Diamond Cut Three Ways” (about “The Crown Diamond” and “The Mazarin Stone” and Eille Norwood), and reports from and about the Library and the Collection, which will mark its 50th anniversary this year with a celebration, possibly virtual, on Sept. 24-26. The celebration will include the 2021 Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture on Sept. 25, with Jeffrey Hatcher speaking on “Arthur Conan Doyle as Playwright”; there’s no charge for the lecture, which will be a Zoom event, with registration opening on Aug. 23 <www.acdfriends.org>. A copy of the newsletter is available on request from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
20660. If you don’t already have The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes with illustrations by Sophia Martineck (December 14 #6), it is now available discounted to $5.98 from Daedalus Books <www.daedalusbooks.com>; you can sample her imaginative artwork at <www.martineck.com/e/projekt.php?number=170>. Daedalus is an excellent resource for discounted books.

20662. David MacGregor has written three plays produced by the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, Mich., from 2018 to 2021, and he has turned the plays into short stories that have been collected in Sherlock in Love: The Holmes-Adler Mysteries (London: Orange Pip Books, 2021: 429 pp., $34.95); they star Holmes, Watson, and Irene Adler (who in fact did not die after she encountered Holmes in “A Scandal in Bohemia” and instead has moved in with him at 221B Baker Street). To avoid shocking his readers, Watson has Irene posing as Mrs. Hudson, and their investigations involve them with Vincent Van Gogh, Oscar Wilde, Auguste Escoffier, Nikola Tesla, Thomas Edison, and Moriarty’s evil daughter; the stories are told with humor and style, and are also available as separate volumes ($14.95 each). Orange Pip is an imprint of MX Publishing <www.mxpublishing.com>.
20663. Also from MX: David MacGregor’s Sherlock Holmes: The Hero with a Thousand Faces is a carefully-researched and thoroughly-readable two-volume examination of the evolution of Sherlock Holmes, his readers, and the world of Sherlockians and Doyleans, with a particular emphasis (as one might expect from a playwright) on how Holmes has been portrayed on stage, screen, radio, television, video games, and the Internet. The first volume (2021; 338 pp., $28.95) covers the years from 1887 to 1937, and the second volume (2021; 344 pp., $28.95) brings everything up to date into 2021; MacGregor concludes by noting aptly that now “Sherlock Holmes isn’t merely a popular character in the genre of detective fiction. Sherlock Holmes is a genre in and of itself.”
20665. Steven Canny and John Nicholson’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” is due at the Mad Cow Theatre in Orland, Fla., July 9-18 <www.madcowtheatre.com>; and at the Mount Gretna Playhouse in Mount Gretna, Pa., Aug. 5 to Aug. 8 <www.gretnatheatre.org>.
20666. R. Hamilton Wright’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Raven’s Curse” is scheduled at the Shaw Festival Theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., July 23-Oct. 10 <www.shawfest.com>.
20667. “Spontaneous Sherlock” (improvised by the Spontaneous Players) is due at the Harbour Arts Centre in Irvine, Scotland, Nov. 14 <www.thehac.co.uk>.
20668. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” is scheduled at the Mercury Theatre in Colchester, July 30-Aug. 22 <www.mercurytheatre.co.uk>; and the Harlequins Coach House Theatre in Sandusky, Ohio, in October <www.harlequinstheatre.org>.
20669. Mark Shanahan’s “A Sherlock Carol” is scheduled by Fat Goose Productions in Cold Springs, N.Y., Nov. 22-Jan. 2, 2022.
20670. Katie Forgette’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily” will be produced at the Ross Valley Players Barn Theater in Ross, Calif., Jan. 21-Feb. 20, 2022.

20671. Paul Thomas Miller has announced the first Doyle’s Rotary Coffin Treasure Hunt <www.tinyurl.com/fke34nc6>; it’s open to everyone, and you have until Blue Carbuncle Day (Dec. 27), when the Treasure Hunt ends. Paul has noted that “it will be presided over by the psychic ghost of Silver Blaze, the famous undead murder horse, so cheating is a very bad idea.”
20672. Richard Brown explores “The Place of William Clark Russell in the Sherlock Holmes Canon” and Mark Alberstat discusses “ACD and the Olympics of 1912-1916” in the summer issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto, and also offers news of Sherlockian goings-on in Canada. Subscriptions cost $30.00 a year (US or CA); single issues cost $12.50 <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
20673. Nicholas Utechin’s From Abbey to Wiles (London: Sherlock Holmes Society of London, 2021; 30 pp., £7.00) is what he calls the “third incarnation” of the book published in 2016, offering a splendid (and full-color) examination of the work of the seven artists who illustrated the dust jackets for the John Murray editions of the Canon, revised to include new information. Nick believes (well, hopes) that he has now covered everything. You can purchase the new edition at <www.tinyurl.com/bsrv7wwb> (that’s the shop of the Society, where you’ll find a nice variety of interesting Sherlockian scholarship).
20674. There will be a fifth season of “The Crown” on Netflix, covering the royal family in the early 1990s. Jonny Lee Miller has signed on to play Prime Minister John Major, and Jonathan Pryce (another actor who has performed as Holmes) will appear as Prince Philip.

20675. Frederic Dorr Steele's original artwork showing "The Slaving Hound" was offered at Quinn's Auction Galleries in Falls Church, Va., on July 8, estimated at $800-$1200. Described as unpublished, it was loaned by Edgar W. Smith to the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House in London (1951) and at the Plaza Art Galleries in New York (1952). After Smith died his collection was bought by Carl Anderson, and after Anderson died his collection was purchased by Lew David Feldman, who published the artwork on the cover of his catalog Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockiana: 76 Items (1975). The artwork sold on July 8 for $6,500 (plus buyer's premium) to Jerry Margolin; Randall Stock has a detailed discussion of the artwork at <www.tinyurl.com/phnwj64h>.

20677. Roy V. Hunt: A Retrospective, edited by David and Daniel Ritter (First Fandom Experience, 2021; 144 pp., $45.00), is a delightful tribute to a legendary fan, artist, and illustrator; he was one of the organizers of the third World Science Fiction Convention in Denver in 1941, and in 2016 at the 74th WorldCon was inducted into the Posthumous Hall of Fame. He also was a dedicated Sherlockian, one of the founders of the Council of Four in Denver (which in 1960 published the landmark anthology The Science-Fictional Sherlock Holmes), and the principal illustrator of books and journals published by Luther Norris' Pontine Press. The retrospective includes many of his Sherlockian illustrations, and is available at the publisher's web-site <www.firstfandomexperience.org>.

20678. High fashion: Jennie Paton spotted Simona Lampe's autumn/winter "Sherlock-ology" collection on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/k4pp8umk>; scroll down and click on "part II" to see the rest of the collection.

20679. Alexander Orlov has reported a connection between Sherlock Holmes and the Russian city of Archangel. It is really a connection between Conan Doyle and Archangel, but that's close enough. You can start at 16 minutes into a Russian news broadcast on June 15 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=9jpp9btEfv4> (it's possible to get closed captions in not very good English). Then you can go to <www.vk.com/wall11955238_11914> to read Evgeny Tenetov's article (in Russian) about the Northern Maritime Museum in Archangel having what's left of the Peterhead whaler Eclipse; Google Translate will help you read the article in English. The Eclipse was the sister ship of the Hope, on which Conan Doyle sailed to the Arctic in 1880; in his diary, published as 'Dangerous Work' (2012), he records having visited the Eclipse more than once in 1880.

20680. The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection's celebration of its 50th anniversary at the Toronto Public Library (June 21 #7) will be entirely virtual, on Sept. 25; stay tuned for details.

20681. The Arts of Beauty; or, Secrets of a Lady's Toilet. With Hints to Gentlemen on the Art of Fascinating is the title of a book published in New York in 1858 that might be of interest to those who believe that the author was an inspiration when Conan Doyle created Irene Adler. The author? Madame Lola Montez, Countess of Landsfeld. A copy of the book was offered at the Swann Auction Galleries in New York on July 15, estimated at $300-$500; it sold for $688 (including buyer's premium) <www.tinyurl.com/yc7ymuk9>.

20682. The book is dedicated (in an era when dedications in books were not brief) "To all men and women of every land, who are not afraid of themselves, who trust so much in their own souls that they dare to stand up in the might of their own individuality, to meet the tidal current of the world," and if you would like merely to read (rather than own) the first edition, and see what Madame Lopez had to say, you can, thanks to Google Books, do so at <www.tinyurl.com/utzzzsw>.

20683. Sherlock Holmes died on Sept. 29, 2020, in Vestavia, Ala., at the age of 93, according to an obituary in the Carbondale Southern Illinoisan, a celebration of Life Service was held on July 10 <www.tinyurl.com/xsnnt9y9>.

20684. Ichthys Theatre Productions in Brantford, Ont., has been producing some of the old Sherlock Holmes radio programs and up-loading the recordings to their channel at YouTube; four shows are available, and a fifth show is due on Sept. 10.

20685. Denis Zilber has created an imaginative portrait of Holmes and Watson, in full color, and a thumbnail won't do it justice, so you'll need to go online to see it properly <www.tinyurl.com/vwfx94eu>; $21.99 as a print, and $95.99 on canvas. You can (and you should) see more of his artwork at his web-site <www.deniszilber.com>.

20686. Sightseeing in style in London: a private three-hour "Sherlock" location tour by black taxi from Get Your Guide <www.tinyurl.com/kavth3jb>, with a professional guide, driver and transportation, and hotel pick-up, for only $247.72 per person; kindly reported by Jennie Paton.

20687. The July issue of Timeline (the Sherlockian Chronologist Guild's official newsletter) gives detailed attention to their proposed Supreme Chronology Court. If you would like to join the Guild, serve on the Court, or merely see an issue of their newsletter, that's easy enough to achieve: just contact Brad Keefauver at <bkeefauver@gmail.com>.

20688. For anyone who remembers the film "Sin City" (2005) here's an interesting trailer that someone put together in 2011, kindly noted by Samantha Wolov <www.jezebel.com/walt-disney-presents-sin-city-5851797>; the film was not Sherlockian, but the trailer is.

20689. Steve Doyle's video podcasts (for the Baker Street Irregulars) continue at YouTube; search for [fortnightly dispatch] to watch interviews with Ross Davies and others (including a tribute to John Bennett Shaw).

20690. What is the world's oldest coin still in production today? According to the Royal Mint, it is the sovereign, first struck more than 500 years ago <www.tinyurl.com/mdrvuy6u>. Mentioned often in the Canon, the sovereign is a £1 coin (that's 20 shillings, for those who aren't decimalized).

20691. "Sherlock Holmes Under the Magnifying Glass: The Game's Afoot!" is one of the many programs scheduled by the Smithsonian Associates, and since its programs still are presented on Zoom, you don't need to be in Panic on the Potomac to take advantage of them. This one is due on Oct. 8, at 6:30 pm (Eastern Time), and it will feature Dan Stashower discussing the Great Detective, and Scott Sedar reading from some of Conan Doyle's works; details are available at <www.tinyurl.com/zmbeh8yr>. Dan and Scott team up often for the Smithsonian Associates, and they're always entertaining.

20692. "Like Matthiessen, he is a kind of Watson figure, sidekick throughout his adventure to a savvier character." According to Kathryn Schulz, in an article about Sylvain Tesson and Peter Matthiessen in the July 12 issue of The New Yorker <www.tinyurl.com/976sn9e5>. It's a nice example of cultural literacy: Schulz assumes her readers will know who Watson is, without any mention of Holmes.

20693. Fans of Michael Bond's "Paddington Bear" surely will flock to the British Library to see their new exhibition "Paddington: The Story of a Bear" (open until Oct. 31) <www.tinyurl.com/64kajz5x>. The exhibition may or may not have something Sherlockian, but Paddington used Sherlockian methods, and dialogue, in "Paddington Turns Detective" in More About Paddington (1959) and Paddington on Stage (1977). There's a video trailer for the exhibition at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=wqK_2uc7xR0>.
20694. The National Archives in London proclaim that "the great and undetectable detective—the clue is in our collection," and they do indeed have a lot to offer <www.tinyurl.com/ch5s7ezw>, including an imaginative on-line jigsaw puzzle. Kindly reported by Nick Utechin.
20695. Bill Amend's comic strip "FoxTrot" began a detective-agency thread on-line on June 23, and it quickly turned Sherlockian <www.tinyurl.com/nebfzmv>; thanks to Stan Hill for reporting on it. If you recall seeing the thread before, that's because it's repeated from June 2000 ("FoxTrot" now runs in papers only on Sundays).
20696. Brad Keefauver's interesting "The Seventeen Steps: Discussion Questions for Investigating Mr. Sherlock Holmes" covers each of the Canonical stories <www.theseventeenstepsto221b.blogspot.com> and will be useful to any Sherlockian society (or for that matter any Sherlockian) in an era when it occurs to many that no new insights to be found in the Canon. Alexander Braun (aka Murray the Orderly) posts discussions of the stories each week to the Hounds of the Internet, and they are readily available at Sherlocktron <www.sherlocktron.com/inquiries.html>, along with the Canon Queeries from the late Ralph Edwards <www.sherlocktron.com/queries.html>. You will find a great deal more of interest at Sherlockton, thanks to Willis Frick, who presides over the web-site.
20697. The Great Sherlock Holmes Puzzle Book, by Gareth Moore (London: Arcturus, 2021; 256 pp., £7.99), is a collection of puzzles and riddles described as "enigmas to puzzle even the greatest detective of all." And here's an ex-ample: what is special about the number 8,549,176,320?
20698. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration does far more than sending missions to the Moon and to Mars. The NASA Earth Observatory's "image of the day" for July 13 showed "Venezuela's Flat-Topped Mountains" (with a mention of Conan Doyle's The Lost World, and the movie "Up") and discussed the geography and geology of the area <www.tinyurl.com/2dzseytn>.
20699. There are at least some (who's counting?) who enjoy both Sherlock Holmes and Minions, and will be proud to wear a "Consulting Minion" shirt offered by TeePublic <www.tinyurl.com/3dewzjyp> with long or short sleeves; stickers, mugs, and masks also are available.
20700. The newsletter of the Public Domain Review recently called attention to an article about the Sanger Circus Collection that was published on July 9 at JSTOR <www.tinyurl.com/44t8vpzd>; those who have read "The Veiled Lodger" will recall the mention of Sanger. The nicely illustrated article offers a photograph of "Ellen Sanger, lion tamer and wife of George Sanger."

July 21 #5

20701. What's the second-most valuable Sherlockian periodical? The most valuable would be Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, in which "A Study in Scarlet" was published. Next in line would be the first issue of Playboy, with an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four" (as well as the iconic calendar photograph of Marilyn Monroe); a copy of that issue, signed by Hugh Hefner, was offered at Heritage Auctions on July 16, and sold for $48,750 (including buyer's premium) <www.tinyurl.com/ybdc6cjf>.
20702. Alexander Orlov has noted the Finaketto House of Chess in Baku (in Azerbaijan) <www.trend.az/life/sports/3447998.html#>, decorated with a mural that shows Holmes and Watson playing chess.
20703. Michael K. Vaughan is a prolific uploader to YouTube, talking about books, and so far he has done The Lost World (on the Sunday Penguin) and A Study in Scarlet and The Sign of Four (in Sherlock Saturday); they're excellent introductions for those who haven't read the books.
20704. Ken Ludwig has a monthly on-line Comedy Play Club that in August will celebrate his play "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" with a discussion on Aug. 11, and all sorts of fun and games <www.tinyurl.com/2nvfsujy>.
20705. "The Astonishing Adventures of Houdini's Favorite Detective" was the headline on Karen Lee's story at the Fishwrap blog on July 20. Houdini's favorite detective was not Sherlock Holmes, of course, but rather Rose Mackenberg, and you can read all about her at <www.tinyurl.com/xyrf4yef>. A tip of the deerstalker to Alan Rettig, for reporting the article.
20706. What is special about the number 8,549,176,320? It's the only number that contains all ten digits in alphabetical order.
20707. Fans of Benedict Cumberbatch who haven't already seen him in "Hamlet" and in "Frankenstein" (in which he and Jonny Lee Miller played both roles on alternate nights), and other fine actors in excellent plays, may wish to subscribe to National Theatre at Home <www.tinyurl.com/38n9rf5f>. Their plays have been streamed to theaters around the world, but you now have a chance to see them at home.
20708. Tom Fahres has noted that on July 12 Bill Griffith's "Zippy" comic strip had Zippy the Pinhead visiting Gillette Castle <www.tinyurl.com/4yxu2wum>.
20709. The "Corona in the Lost World" tie-in poster issued in 1925 and offered at Heritage Auctions this month (June 21 #3) was bought for $1,200 (including the buyer's premium). And yes, Edward Malone did have a Corona typewriter with him as part of his essential gear in the film.
20710. William F. Nolan died on July 15. A prolific author and screenwriter, as well as an artist and actor, he befriended Ray Bradbury and found his way into the world of science fiction. His short story "Sungrab" (first published in the anthology After the Fall in 1980), featured Mars-based private eye Sam Space, who was aided by computers named Holmes and Watson in pursuit of a new manifestation of the Baskerville curse; it was reprinted in his collection Down the Long Night in 2000.

20711. Just in case you want a nice present for someone special, the new Montblanc "writer's edition" tribute to Conan Doyle will do very nicely. There's a nice video <www.tinyurl.com/46kzdf4> that features Dan Stashower and others talking about Conan Doyle and the new pens. Forbes has a fine article about the pens <www.tinyurl.com/tptrtdz73>; there are four different pens, priced from only $1,150 up to $4,600, with accessories also available <www.tinyurl.com/dnph2yjd>. And despite its fancy French name, the company has always been German (Wikipedia has a nice entry for Montblanc).
20713. "The Adventure of the Pimlico Poisoner" was a 90-minute drama written by Peter Mackie and broadcast by BBC Radio 4 in 1990, with William Chubb as Sherlock Holmes and Crawford Logan as Dr. Watson; Jennie Paton notes that it's now available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/pwwnvtsc>.
20714. Yet another Sherlock Holmes cocktail, posted by Oliver Walkey at the Glass of Bubbly blog <www.glassofbubbly.com/sherlock-holmes-cocktail>; the explanation is perhaps more imaginative than the recipe. Sherlock Holmes is not recorded in the Canon as having imbibed a cocktail, although of course he could have: the Oxford English Dictionary cites the word as used in the Daily Telegraph (Aug. 23, 1864).

20715. Theatrics: Daniel Foley's "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" will be produced (during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe) at the Gilded Ballroom Teviot, Aug. 5 to 29 <www.tinyurl.com/dybjxdeb>.
20717. Ed. Lange's "Sherlock's Secret Life" will be produced at the Southampton Cultural Center in Southampton, Long Island, N.Y., from Sept. 17 to Oct. 10 <www.scc-arts.org>.
20718. Steven Canny and John Nicholson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is due at Theatr Clwyd in Mold, Wales, Sept. 21-25 <www.theatrclwyd.com>; and at the York Theatre Royal in York, Oct. 19-23 (on tour from the Octagon Theatre in Bolton) <www.yorktheatreroyal.co.uk>; and at the Weymouth Pavilion in Weymouth, Dorset, Oct. 21-23 <www.weymouthpavilion.com>.
- Denis Green and Anthony Boucher's "A Scandal in Bohemia" will be streamed by the Resident Ensemble Players at the University of Delaware, Sept. 29-Oct. 17 <www.rep.udel.edu/presentations/a-scandal-in-bohemia>.

20719. Nancy Springer's Enola Holmes and the Black Barouche (New York: Wednesday Books, 2021; 261 pp., $17.99) is the seventh book in her series about Enola, written after the successful release of "Enola Holmes" on Netflix; the story's set after the events in Millie Bobby Brown's film, and Enola and Sherlock are struggling to find an evil earl's missing wife. The story is lively and well-written, and the author's web-site <www.nancyspringer.com> offers information about all of her books, but not the eighth title in the "Enola Holmes" series; Springer has said that she had written eight books, with only six of them published; the success of the movie persuaded her to take the remaining two off the shelf, or out of the drawer.
20721. William Gillette entertained Sherlock Holmes at Gillette Castle last month (Tyke and Teddie Niver, impersonating the Gillettes, welcomed John Sherwood, who often has portrayed Holmes), and there's a video: "William Gillette: The Man Meets His Legend" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=MxACsUckgHs>.
20722. The BSI Trust's webinar lecture by Roberta Pearson (professor of film and television studies in the School of Cultures, Languages, and Area Studies at the University of Nottingham) will be held on Oct. 2; registration opened on Aug. 28 <www.bsitrust.org/2021/08/register-2021-lecture.html> (the lecture will be free via Zoom, but space may be limited, so registration early is encouraged).
20723. Sherlock Hounds Detection Canines <www.sherlockhoundsdetectioncanines.com> "provides an effective, proactive program that deters the potential existence of drugs, alcohol, and gunpowder in schools, businesses, and private homes" in and around Berthoud, Colo.
20724. Constantine Argyropo notes that Scott Hilburn's "The Argyle Sweater" comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on Aug. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/vtsw8cv9>.
20725. The "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog has reached episode 221, and by nice coincidence its subject is the Baker Street Journal; Scott Monty and Burt Wolder interviewed BSJ editor Steve Rothman about the BSJ's history, and much more <www.tinyurl.com/k2wzmsd3>. Episode 221B (they call it episode 222) is devoted to this newsletter, and other things.
20726. Jennie Paton has noted an interesting unisex blemish-busting acne system on offer from various Internet shops; search for [no zit sherlock].
20727. Isabella Goodman has won the 2021 Irene Adler Prize: a $1,000 scholarship for a woman pursuing a degree in journalism, creative writing, or literature <www.tinyurl.com/2kykxaz2>. Founded in 2017, the prize is named in honor of the heroine in "A Scandal in Bohemia".

20728. Sheila Mitchell's H.R.F. Keating: A Life of Crime (Olney: Level Best Books, 2020; 264 pp., $15.95), is an excellent biography of the award-winning author who created Indian Inspector Ganesh Ghoti and wrote insightful books about crime fiction (including Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World in 1979); Sheila Mitchell was his wife, and has many grand stories to tell about her husband's life and career, and his interest in Holmes and Conan Doyle (p. 137-139) (also discussed in the introduction by Len Deighton and the appendix by Martin Edwards). There's more about the book, and about Keating, at <www.hrfkeating.com>.
20729. The Beacon Society is continuing to publish its quarterly newsletter for younger Sherlockians, and the latest issue of Sherlock's Spotlight can be found at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>; they also have published a collection ("Peanuts by Schulz") that offers a set of the comic strip's Snoopy cartoons with Sherlockian content, available on request from Steve Mason <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>.
20730. The Royal Mail has issued a set of ten stamps honoring "some of the ground-breaking inventions that defined the industrial and electric revolutions," one of them celebrating the incandescent light bulb patented by Joseph Wilson Swan in 1800 (there was mention of "a thousand candle-power Swan and Edison right here in front of the hall door" in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Swan and Edison sued each other for patent infringement, and after Swan won in a British court they merged into the Edison and Swan United Electric Light Company in 1883.
20732. We hear of Sherlock everywhere, including a 1992 television commercial for Huggies, spotted by Jennie Paton <www.youtube.com/watch?v=giN0hfho3GU>.
20735. The Spanish artist Marco Navas offered a "Sherlockians" collection with 12 7-cm figurines some years ago (November 14 #5), hand-crafted in resin and hand-painted, and their "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" collection now includes a graphic scene from "The Final Problem"; their web-site's in Spanish and English at <www.marconavas.com/EESherlock%20Holmes.html>.

20736. Cale Atkinson has written and illustrated Simon and Chester: Super Detectives! (New York: Tundra, 2021; 64 pp., $12.99), a delightfully Sherlockian story for children aged 6-9. Simon is a professional ghost, and the book is a Junior Library Guild Gold Standard Selection; the story's nicely and humorously told. The author's web-site is at <www.cale.ca>.
20737. W.P. "Bill" Lawler died on July 19. He was an avid golfer, musician (he played the piano, guitar, and bluegrass banjo), and author; his books included two pastiches: Mystery at St. Andrews (2013) and Treachery in Torquay (2018).
20738. "Holmes & Yoyo" was a 30-minutes series broadcast by ABC-TV in 1976-1977, with Richard B. Shull (as Detective Alexander Holmes) and John Shuck (as his partner Gregory Yoyonovich, who is a good-natured but naïve android); Shull was a member of the Baker Street Irregulars (as "An Actor and a Rare One"), but the series otherwise is not Sherlockian. According to Wikipedia, it was considered one of the worst television series ever made, and you can now decide for yourself: Jennie Paton reports that some of the 13 episodes are available at YouTube.
20739. As usual, the Internet is full of rumor when it comes to the third Robert Downey Jr. "Sherlock Holmes" film and the next season of the BBC's "Sherlock" series, but there's real news about the second "Enola Holmes" film: the City Council of Hull (in East Yorkshire) has warned residents in the center of the city that scenes will be filmed there on Oct. 5-6.
20740. Bert Coules has written "Watson: The Final Problem" as a one-man show for Tim Marriott; it's far more than the title suggests, and thoroughly imaginative, as might be expected from the creator of BBC Radio 4's broadcasts for the entire Canon. It's now on tour (August 21 #8); a video trailer and a 59-minute full audio recording are at <www.smokescreenprods.com/watson>.
20741. Rob Byrne discussed the restoration of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929), with Carlyle Blackwell as Sherlock Holmes, in an interview in the Goethe Pop Up Seattle film series "German Cinema Now!" <www.vimeo.com/585518261>.
20742. The August issue of the newsletter of the Gillette Castle State Park, on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/pxfee543>, turns its "museum spotlight" on Gillette and Conan Doyle, offering images of some of the interesting material in the Castle's collection.
20743. Cost-of-living never seems to decrease. First it was my printer, and now it's the Postal Service: domestic mail is going up to 58¢ (from 55¢) and international to $1.30 (from $1.20) per ounce, so next month subscription prices will increase as well. Oh, for the days when my monthly mailings cost only $6.00 a year. Do keep in mind that I won't be a bit offended if you decide to switch to reading the newsletter on-line (in full color and with live links); my circulation department does wonder occasionally why there are people who have computers and access to the Internet, but still are willing to receive paper pages in the mail.

20746. Reported: The Best Mystery Stories of the Year 2021, edited by Lee Child (New York: Mysterious Press, 2021; 451 pp., $25.95); contents include David Marcum's "The Adventure of the Home Office Baby" (reprinted from the Strand Magazine).
20747. Bud Plant opened his first comic-book store in 1968, and now presides over Bud's Art Books <www.budsartbooks.com>, kindly reported by Tom Mann. You can search for [sherlock holmes] to find some unusual items.
20748. Richard Levangie's Secrets of the Hotel Maisonneuve (Lunenburg: Trap Door, 2020; 213 pp., $10.95) features a thirteen-year-old boy in Montreal, very much a teen-ager, who finds himself involved in solving a mystery that is full of Sherlockian echoes; the story is told with warmth and humor, and the book's a fine young-adult novel. You can sample the first chapter at the publisher's web-site <www.nevermorepress.ca/books>.
20749. When in Stillwater, Minn. (near the Twin Cities) (they're Minneapolis and St. Paul), you can stay for a night or two in the Arthur Conan Doyle Grand Suite at the Rivertown Inn <www.rivertowninn.com/arthur-conan-doyle>.
20750. Derham Groves has reported a designboom article from 2015 that will resonate with anyone who has read "The Engineer's Thumb" and would like to see a modern homage to the story <www.tinyurl.com/uh9jxr2>. Justin Poulson is a Canadian artist, and his handcrafted artwork "blurs the lines between photography, sculpture, and CGI." Images of some of his work can be seen at <www.justinpoulson.com>. He reports that he has never read the story, and, alas, he has no remaining items from 2015.
20751. Anatoliy Rudakov died on Aug. 1. He was an Honored Artist of the Russian Federation, and played Lestrade's assistant Tracy in the 2013 Russian television "Sherlock Holmes" series that starred Igor Petrenko as Holmes.

20753. "Während eines harmlosen Spaziergangs wird einer jungen Frau ihre Halskette gestohlen. Sie wendet sich hilfesuchend an den berühmten Detektiv Sherlock Holmes. Dieser kann den Dieb mit Hilfe seines Hundes fassen." That's the description of a two-minute German silent film recently discovered by Jennie Paton <www.vimeo.com/585461066>. Sorry: no additional information about the film is available, except that it might have been made in the 1920s.
20754. If you've not yet had a chance to see the excellent 1979 Russian television series that starred Vitaliy LivaNovember as Holmes and Vasili Solomin as Watson, Jennie Paton found all of the episodes on-line (with English sub-titles) at <www.youtube.com/channel/UCLihzBm1Vfur1vKdWkKXOQ>.
20755. "The mysterious Edinburgh secret society with a temple to the supernatural" was the headline on a post to the Edinburgh Live web-site on Aug. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/2wwaa645>. The secret society is the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and the article lists Conan Doyle as one of its members. The Wikipedia entry for the society lists him as one of the "known or alleged" members, but Andrew Lycett, in The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (2007), explains that while Conan Doyle knew members, and was invited to join, he declined, "claiming he was too busy to study to become an initiate."

20757. Worton Hall Studios in Isleworth (a London suburb) now is a fine-arts com-plex, but it once was one of Britain’s major film studios. The first film made there was “A Study in Scarlet” (1914), and there’s more about Worton Hall in My London (Aug. 17) <www.tinyurl.com/fe68vabr>.
20758. Tim Major’s pastiche The Back to Front Murder (New York: Titan, 2021; 252 pp., $14.95) is billed as “a fiendish plot,” and so it is, beginning with a young woman, a writer of mysteries who finds that someone has been murdered following a scenario she has written but not published, and comes to Holmes for help; there are plenty of complications, twists, and turns.
20759. Fred Taraba, a specialist dealer in original artwork by American illustrators <www.tarabaillustrationart.com>, has a delightful story that surely will resonate with any specialist collector: Shortly after he began working at Illustration House in 1991, they had a customer who wanted pictures with gas masks. So when a piece showing an attractive young woman holding a gas mask came in, he was over the Moon with excitement. At the time offering something to a client meant either mailing physical photo or having them come in, so called the customer and said, ‘We have a gas mask picture you might want to see next time you’re in town.’ A couple of days later he was there looking at it. After a pause he said politely, ‘Well, she’s not actually wearing the gas mask, is she? It’s not for me.’”

20760. According to an item in the Rome News-Tribune (in Georgia, not Italy) on Aug. 19 <www.tinyurl.com/4z34apst>, local Sherlock Holmes fan Tim Naddy has received permission to renovate the façade of a building in the city’s historic district so that it will appear similar to 221B Baker Street; the building will house his Hound Taint data-analysis business, and the offices of Baker Street Scientific.
20761. Reported: “The Terror of Blue John Gap” is reprinted in Richard Fallon’s anthology Creatures of Another Age (Vallancourt, 2021), one of an assortment of books about mythical and fictional creatures reviewed by Michael Dirda in the Washington Post (Aug. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/cwja3emv>.
20762. Commentary in the press about what’s happening in Afghanistan often mentions “A Study in Scarlet”, as with David Von Drehle’s column in the Washington Post (Aug. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/42n535vj>; Scott Monty, in his on-line newsletter “Timeless & Timely”, also reminded his readers of the opening of “A Study in Pink” <www.timelesstimely.com/p/present-tense>.
20763. The Building Design web-site reported on Aug. 19 that St. Bart’s Grade I-listed north wing and gatehouse are to be restored and opened up to more visitors; it’s certainly an impressive part of the hospital, and one wonders whether Holmes and Watson ever saw it <www.tinyurl.com/k75hf53c>.
20765. Heritage Auctions now has images of the single page from the manuscript of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” that will be at auction on Oct. 20 (June 21 #7); the page is item H31 in Randall Stock’s “Best of Sherlock” census at <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/hound-baskervilles-h31-2021.htm>.
20766. Peter J. Crupe (“The Noble Bachelor”) died on Aug. 14. Peter worked in forensic accounting and tax analysis, but his real passions were the N.Y. Yankees and Sherlock Holmes. He founded and presided over the Bay Ridge Irregulars and then the Montague Street Lodgers, and was an enthusiastic member of many other societies. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1994.
20767. Bouchercon 2021 in New Orleans was cancelled (well, postponed, as you will soon see), but you can plan ahead for Minneapolis, Sept. 8-10, 2022; San Diego, Aug. 30-Sept. 3, 2023; Nashville, Aug. 28-Sept. 1, 2024; and back in New Orleans, Sept. 3-7, 2025.
20768. Observations by Gaslight: Stories from the World of Sherlock Holmes (New York: Mysterious Press, 2021; 295 pp, $25.95) is a collection of reminiscences by Irene Adler, Henry Wiggins, Geoffrey Lestrade, Stanley Hopkins, A. Davenport Lomax, and Martha Hudson, all thanks to Lyndsay Faye, who has had fun writing as each of the Canonical characters; it’s all nicely done, with some interesting surprises.

20769. James E. Starrs died on June 26. He edited The Noiseless Ten or: The Bicycle in Literature (1982), an anthology that offers “The Priory School” and two excerpts from Christopher Morley’s writings, but was much better known for work that resulted in A Voice for the Dead: A Forensic Investigator’s Pursuit of the Truth in the Grave (2005), a book that covers his exhumations and research into the cases of Alferd Packer, Jesse James, and others, and of course he mentions Sherlock Holmes.
20770. Jim Ballinger has entertained the Bootmakers of Toronto (and others) for many years, and Jennie Paton reports that Jim now has a “Sherlock Songs” channel at YouTube <www.youtube.com/channel/UCHevjXMSY-uviz55e8mQqA>.
20771. There’s still time to register for the Toronto Arthur Conan Doyle Collection’s “Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture” on Sept. 25 (via Zoom and free) <www.acdfriends.org/events.html>; this year’s guest speaker will be Jeffrey Hatcher (on “The Adventure of the Occasional Playwright: Conan Doyle Onstage”). Their web-site also offers a recording of last year’s virtual lecture, by Rebecca Romney (on “Sherlockian Collecting”).
20772. Paul Thomas Miller continues to preside over meetings of his society the Shingle of Southsea (which isn’t difficult, since he’s the only member) as well as the society’s web-site <www.shingleofsouthsea.blogspot.com>, where you will find a series of Sherlockian “how to” videos, and much more.
20773. Up for auction at Holts Auctioneers in Wolferton on Sept. 20: a rare .450 single-shot sealing rifle made by Alex’r Henry, Edinburgh. Better-known for inventing the seven-groove rifling in the Martini-Henry rifle, which entered service with the British Army in 1871, Alexander Henry also made and sold sealing rifles; his first client, in 1870, was Capt. John Grey of the S.S. Hope, on which young Arthur Conan Doyle sailed in 1879. You can see his sketch (“Five Bulls at a hundred Yards”) in his diary of the voyage, showing him at work with a sealing rifle on May 3, 1880. The diary was published in 2012 as Dangerous Work, and the sketch is on p. 86. Conan Doyle mentions Martini-Henry rifles in his books about the Great Boer War, and in non-Sherlockian stories. Sherlock Holmes (in “The Sign of the Four”) says, “I would sooner face a Martini bullet, myself.”
20774. The Sherlock Holmes Children’s Collection (London: Sweet Cherry Publishing, 2019; $45.99) is a boxed set of ten of the stories, adapted by Stephanie Baudet for readers aged 7 to 9 and illustrated by Arianna Bellucci; each book includes a QR code that links to an audio reading of the story. The publisher’s web-site <www.sweetcherrypublishing.com> offers teaching resources, and two more boxed sets of ten stories were issued in 2020 and 2021; the 30 stories also are available as single volumes.
20775. Derham Groves’ Sherlock in the Seventies (Chambersburg: Visible Spectrum, 2021; 206 pp., $15.00) surveys “A wild decade of Sherlock Holmes films,” discussing in great detail the nine major films that made the 1970s so interesting for Sherlockian, and of course attracted attention from the general public; he has interviewed casts and crews, dug deeply into reviews and general criticism, and studied the films carefully, and tells all of his stories well. Recommended.

20776. “Dramarama” is a teen coming-out comedy that was screened at the British Film Institute’s Flair: London LGBTQ+ Film Festival in March. It was released in selected theaters in this month, and available in virtual theaters. It also will be streamed on-line; details can be found at the film’s website <www.dramaramathemovie.com>, where you can watch a trailer and a “murder mystery” clip that features Nico Greet-ham (Oscar) as Sherlock Holmes.

20777. There is plenty of theater coming up: Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” will be performed at the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach in Virginia Beach, Va., Sept. 3-26 <www.ltvb.com>; also at the Reilly Arts Center in Ocala, Fla., Sept. 30-Oct. 2 <www.reillyartscenter.com>; and the Everest-Rohrer Chapel Fine Arts Center in Wishawaka, Ind., Nov. 4-6 <www.tinyurl.com/e8467a4s>.

20778. James Barry’s “Sherlock’s Excellent Adventure” is due at the Parish Hall in Bosbury, Herts., on Sept. 4 <www.ourstartheatrecompany.com>.

20779. The Octagon Theatre’s production of Steven Canny and John Nicholson’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” will be touring in Britain from Sept. 16 into 2022 <www.tinyurl.com/tv5zm4e2>.

20780. Stuart Fortey’s “Holmes and Watson: The Farewell Tour” (“The Case of the Prime Minister, the Floozie, and the Lummock Rock Lighthouse”) will tour in Britain beginning on Sept. 17 <www.pyramusandthisbeproductions.com>.

20781. Bert Coules’ “Watson: The Final Problem” will be performed at Leconfield on Top in Petworth, West Sussex, on Sept. 22; and at the Rondo Theatre in Bath on Nov. 20 <www.tinyurl.com/57s38yfw>; see above (August 21 #x) for more about the show.

20782. Brian Guehring’s “Sherlock Holmes and the First Baker Street Irregular” is coming up at the Centennial Station Arts Center in High Point, N.C., Sept. 24-26 <www.hpct.net>; and at the South Arkansas Arts Center in El Dorado, Ark., Nov. 5-6 <www.saac-arts.org>.

20784. Charles Marowitz’s “Sherlock’s Last Case” will be performed at the Lohrey Theatre in Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 15-31 <www.theatrememphis.org>.

20785. Steven Canny and John Nicholson’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (on tour from the Octagon Theatre in Bolton) will be performed at the Richmond Theatre in Richmond, London, Nov. 2-6 <www.atgtickets.com>.

20786. Mark Shanahan’s “A Sherlock Carol” will be performed at New World Stages-Stage Three in New York, Nov. 11-Jan. 2 <www.asherlockcarol.com>.

September 21 #1

20787. Howard Ostrom reports that The Sherlocks are now offering decorative cans of their new IPA [that’s India Pale Ale] and glasses to drink it from, but the decorations are not Sherlockian <www.thesherlocksmusic.co.uk>; according to Wikipedia, The Sherlocks are a British alternative rock band, and their name was derived from an inside joke between the band mates. Howard says that he doesn’t know the exact joke, but has heard that it included the “No sh*t Sherlock” phrase.

20788. The Internet Archive <www.archive.org> is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. If you’ve never used it, there’s far more than the Wayback Machine (which now contains more than 600 billion web-pages); the web-site and its resources are well worth exploring.

20789. When in Tachikawa (a suburb of Tokyo): you can dine at the Sherlock Holmes Hamburger and Steak Restaurant, which was reviewed in Stars and Stripes on Aug. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/j3c29xc>.

20790. Television Business International reported (Aug. 26) that the Russian television series “Sherlock: The Russian Chronicles” has been bought by the French streaming service Salto, which will make it available as “Sherlock: Les Chroniques Russes” <www.tinyurl.com/4e4mnxre>.

20791. Bart Lovin’s imaginative dramatizations of “A Study in Scarlet” (2018) and “The Sign of the Four” (2019) at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., now are available streamed on demand through Jan. 31; details are available at <www.tinyurl.com/nnwp5d8z>.

20792. “Coins in Great Works of Literature” is the headline on recent post at the blog of the Royal Mint, and yes, of course the Canon is one of those great works. You’re welcome to try to guess which story they chose, before you read about it <www.tinyurl.com/dsdkjc>.

20794. “The pretty hidden gem of a town 62 minutes from London that has some of the ‘best views in England,’” is what the My London web-site recently had to say about Crowborough; there’s mention of the statue of Conan Doyle and an image of the Café Baskerville.

20795. Nicko Vaughan’s Far from Holmes (Canterbury: Telos, 2021; 262 pp., $17.84) promises that it’s “an irreverent guide to all the Sherlock Holmes films you really don’t want to watch yourself,” and it certainly lives up to her promise; she explains that she made it her goal to watch every on-screen adaptation of Sherlock Holmes that she could get her hands on, films and television, and wound up dealing with more than 350 titles, from which she selected 15 to discuss in detail. One of the best things about her book is that she actually likes bad films, and she writes about them with verve and humor. Recommended.

20796. Fans of American singer and songwriter Billie Eilish will know about her song “You Should See Me in a Crown”, which you can see at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=AhOYs50CqO8>; Howard Ostrom has reported an interesting video in which she explains how and why she wrote the song <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y_gPCVSJRso> (and yes, it’s Sherlockian).

20797. Reported: The Big Book of Victorian Mysteries, edited by Otto Penzler (New York: Vintage Crime, 2021; 640 pp., $27.00); 49 stories, among them “The Greek Interpreter” and “The Lost Special”.

20798. Stage Rights <www.stagerights.com> offers scripts for a variety of plays, among them Jaime Robledo’s “Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes”, “Watson and the Dark Art of Harry Houdini”, and “Watson: The Final War”; Peter Sham and Brad Carroll’s musical “Sherlock Holmes and the Great Royal Goose Chase!”; Mark Landon Smith’s “Sherlock Holmes Mystry School”, Jon Jory’s “Sherlock Holmes, Sleuth, Meets Father Brown, Detective”; and Jonathan Josephson’s dramatization of Conan Doyle’s “The New Catacomb”.

20799. Jim Hawkins’ 6-minute slide-show tribute to John Bennett Shaw is available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=CeXEUQHZN2Y>; you’ll have a chance to see what some of today’s Sherlockians looked like when they were much younger. For more about John, tune in to episode 224 in the “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” podcasts <www.tinyurl.com/zauzar72>, about “The Shaw 100” (his list of the most important books for a Sherlockian library), and about how the list changed over the years. It’s Scott Monty and Burt Wolder’s interview with Tim Johnson, curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in Minnesota.

20800. “The Electrical Life of Louis Wain” (screened at the Telluride Film Festival and the Toronto International Film Festival this month) features Benedict Cumberbatch as the prolific artist, who has an interesting entry at Wikipedia. He was famous as “the man who drew cats,” one of which was his postcard rendition of a delightfully Sherlockian cat dressed as William Gillette dressed as Sherlock Holmes. British Pathé filmed Wain in 1921 <www.tinyurl.com/y2jpx667>; the new film is due in theaters on Oct. 22 and on Amazon Prime on Nov. 5.

20802. "The Stories of Sherlock Holmes" was a South African series broadcast by Springbok Radio (1979-1985), with Graham Armitage as Holmes and Kerry Jordan as Watson; Jennie Paton notes that six of the programs are available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/2ek3w4r6>.
20803. Nov. 15 is the deadline for nominations for this year's Susan Z. Diamond Beacon Award, an on-going effort by the Beacon Society to honor people who have made a significant contribution to exposing young people to the stories of Sherlock Holmes. Details on the award, and a nomination form, are available at <www.beaconsociety.com/the-beacon-award.html>.

20804. September 21 #3 The Jazz Journal reported on Sept. 2 <www.tinyurl.com/xxs3cc7m> on Ben Crossland Quintet: Solway Stories Stories, a new album of songs written by the virtuoso bassist; one of the tracks is "The Devil's Porridge" (a phrase first used by Conan Doyle to describe the cordite manufactured as a shell propellant in a munitions factory on the banks of the Solway Firth. The album is Jazz Cat JCCD118 ($15.71); you can listen to the track at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cYeWQU2cM4>.
20805. Erle Stanley Gardner's The Case of the Borrowed Brunette is the latest in Otto Penzler's series of American Mystery Classics (250 pp., $15.59); the review in Publishers Weekly (Sept. 11) noted that book is a nice homage to "The Red-Headed League".
20806. Wikipedia offers an interesting list of "actors who have played Sherlock Holmes" <www.tinyurl.com/54mmrn2f>, but don't bother counting them. Howard Ostrom's data-base of actors who have played Holmes now has more than 7,400 entries (and more than 16,000 images).
20807. For those who fondly remember Sherlock Hemlock, there's a lot of information about him at Wikipedia <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sherlock_Hemlock>, and lots more if you scroll down and follow the external link to the Muppet Wiki. For those who came in late, Sherlock Hemlock was a long-running character on the television series "Sesame Street" and brought the iconic image of Sherlock Holmes to a vast audience of young (and older) viewers.
20809. Peter Melonas is a creative designer and illustrator who has been creating Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) artwork in black-and-white and color for decades; you can see (and purchase) his work at <www.tinyurl.com/5ped5ej>.
20810. Simon Heffer's The Age of Decadence: A History of Britain: 1880-1914 (New York: Pegasus, 2021; 897 pp., $39.95) is a massive and thoroughly detailed examination of the world in which Conan Doyle, as well as Holmes and Watson, lived, and of which very little will be found in the Canon (although there's a chapter on "The Uses of Literacy" in which Heffer notes that Conan Doyle "turned out to be the perfect author for the new age.") Michael Dirda, in his review in the Washington Post (May 5), offers an interesting reason why people should read the book, suggesting that "history provides perspective on the present" <www.tinyurl.com/yh95avks>.
20811. If you've not visited Birlstone Manor (which is featured in "The Valley of Fear"), you're welcome at Groombridge Place, where you'll be able to explore and enjoy the grounds <www.groombridgeplace.com>. Conan Doyle visited Groombridge when he lived in Crowborough, and acknowledged that it was the inspiration for Birlstone. He also once drove home from Groombridge with its ghost in his car; you can read about that in his article "The Ghost of the Moat", published in the Daily Express in 1927 and collected in The Edge of the Unknown (1930).

20812. Brian McCuskey's How Sherlock Pulled the Trick: Spiritualism and the Pseudoscientific Method (University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 2021; 195 pp., $34.95) offers an exploration of how Conan Doyle's long-standing belief in Spiritualism was reflected in the Sherlock Holmes stories, from their very beginning onward, as well as how his family, after he died, dealt with distractions such as mediums who delivered messages received from him, and with members of the Baker Street Irregulars and other Sherlockians, quoting Michael Saler's conclusion that Sherlockian belief may be ironic, but the faith is earnest; his principal thesis is that Holmes' reasoning is merely pseudoscientific, and he concludes with a discussion of how and why that sort of reasoning is found so widely today.
20813. Fans of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes are welcome to download (free) The World of Castle Shade, a 24-page anthology of fan fiction and fan art inspired by her latest novel and selected from submissions to a recent contest <www.tinyurl.com/a3nbk9yy>. There's also a new shop at <www.tinyurl.com/3ppdy57n> offering all sorts of merchandise displaying book covers and quotes and such.
20814. The times they are a-changin': "An Incredible Private Island for Sale in the Summer Isles at the Price of a Central London Parking Space" was the headline on a story by Thomas Kent at the Country Life web-site on Sept. 3 <www.tinyurl.com/j93wm55m>. Càrn Deas is an uninhabited island off the north-west coast of Scotland, on offer for £50,000; in the 1960s, when I lived in Iverna Gardens in Kensington, I just parked on the street, where there weren't even any parking meters.
20815. "When a doctor does go wrong he is the first of criminals. He has nerve and he has knowledge," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Speckled Band"), adding, "Palmer and Pritchard were among the heads of their profession." The story was written in 1891, so Conan Doyle was not aware of another candidate, the subject of Dean Jobb's The Case of the Murderous Dr. Cream: The Hunt for a Victorian Era Serial Killer (Chapel Hill: Algonquin, 2021; 401 pp., $27.95). Dr. Thomas Neill Cream poisoned women in Canada, the United States, and Britain, and was tried and convicted in London in October 1892 and executed in November 1892, too late for mention in the story about the evil Dr. Roylott. Jobb has done extremely well in researching and writing about Cream.
20816. Reported: The New Yale Book of Quotations, edited by Fred R. Shapiro (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2021; 1168 pp., $50.00); revised and expanded from the 2006 edition (December 06 #1), with 39 quotations for Arthur Conan Doyle (all Sherlockian) as well as a very early source for "Quick, Watson, the needle."
20817. Peterson of Dublin, which boasts that it is the oldest continuously-operating briar pipe factory in the world, has an extensive range of Sherlock Holmes pipes; the company will celebrate Christmas this year by offering all 14 best-selling shapes in three different finishes, with copper (rather than silver) mounts. You can see (and buy, of course) them all at the Laudisi web-site <www.laudisi.com/petersonpipes.cfm/christmas-2021-6938>.

20818. Big Finish continues to issue excellent Sherlockian audio, the latest of them being Sherlock Holmes: The Seamstress of Peckham Rye, dramatized by Jonathan Barnes, with Nicholas Briggs as Holmes and Richard Earl as Watson, on three CDs, with interviews with cast and crew (180 minutes, $34.99); also available as a download ($19.99), and you can listen to a sample from the story at their web-site <www.bigfinish.com>.
20819. "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects" from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker is the title of an exhibition scheduled at the Grolier Club in New York, from January 12 to Apr. 16, and to say that there will be some real treasures on display is an understatement; you can read about (and see) some of them at <www.sherlockin221objects.org>.
20820. Jennie Paton reports a web-site <www.viewcomiconline.com> that will please comic-book aficionados; search for [sherlock holmes] to see what's available.

20821. The “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog has reached episode 223, in which Scott Monty and Burt Wolder interview film scholar Russell Merritt about the British Film Institute’s plans to restore all of the 1920s films that starred Eille Norwood <www.tinyurl.com/556krefk>. As noted earlier (June 21 #1), only a few of the films can be seen at YouTube.
20822. An opulently-decorated Jezail flintlock weapon was offered at Auktionshaus am See in Konstanz on Sept. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/7hdvxn9z>, with an estimate of €380; it didn’t sell.
20823. Further to the report (August 21 #4) on The Best Mystery Stories of the Year 2021 (edited by Lee Child), the Mysterious Bookshop’s formal announcement of the book includes an opportunity to read Child’s interesting introduction <www.tinyurl.com/3ppdy57n>.
20824. Sherlock Holmes from A to Z, by C. V. Shea III (Boston: Three Trees, 2015; 500 pp., $24.99) is an alphabetical compilation of the people, places, and other things mentioned in the Canon, with descriptions taken from the stories; the “look inside” feature at Amazon offers a look at the beginning pages.
20825. J. Randolph Cox (“The Conk-Singleton Forgery Case”) died on Sept. 14. He worked as a librarian at the St. Paul Public Library and then as a reference librarian at St. Olaf College for more than 30 years. He taught one of the first college courses in the U.S. on mystery and detective fiction, and became a dedicated collector of dime novels and an expert on Nick Carter. Randy was an enthusiastic member of the Norwegian Explorers, and for a while presided over his own Birdy Edwards Society (whose members enjoyed 19th-century detective literature). He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1967.
20826. A Study in Lavender: Queering Sherlock Holmes, edited by Joseph R. G. DeMarco (Maple Shade: Lethe Press, 2011; 303 pp., $20.00), is an anthology of ten pastiches featuring not only Holmes and Watson, but also other Canonical characters <www.lethepressbooks.com>.

20827. Sherlock Holmes & the Ripper of Whitechapel, by M. K. Wiseman (Milwaukee: 2020; 213 pp., $22.50), is Holmes’ own account of his pursuit of Jack the Ripper, a case that involved Watson not as partner and biographer, but rather as the leading suspect. Of course we know that Watson wasn’t the Ripper, but Holmes doesn’t, until he confronts the evil serial killer at the end of the book.
20828. Her newest pastiche is Sherlock Holmes & the Singular Affair (Milwaukee: 2021; 192 pp., $22.50), also from the pen (well, typewriter) of Sherlock Holmes, written after he retired but set many years earlier, when he was still living in Montague Street, beginning his career as a detective and involved in a complicated case of impersonation and revenge. The author’s web-site is at <mkwisemanauthor.com>.
20829. Ann Marlowe notes that the Internet Archive <www.archive.org> offers lots of fun for those who enjoy old movies: a search for [sherlock holmes] and [movies] turns up (at press time) 1,259 hits (use the search engine with the black “go” button).
20830. Areté Editions has published a spectacular set of illustrated fine-press editions of Neil Gaiman’s pastiche “The Case of Death and Honey” and “The Creeping Man” (which inspired Gaiman’s tale); you can read about the company and their work at their web-site <www.areté-editions.com>, which also has information about and images of each of the editions.
20831. The Beacon Society has announced its 2022 R. Joel Senter Sr. Memorial Essay Contest for students in grades 4 through 12; the deadline for submissions is Feb. 1, and details on the contest (and its history) can be found at <www.tinyurl.com/xysv4mth>.
20832. Book Riot <www.bookriot.com> is a prolific podcast at which a search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] turns up many posts.
20833. Jennie Paton spotted “The Complete Sherlock Holmes Book Ornament” at the on-line shop of the N.Y. Public Library <www.tinyurl.com/457rmvua>. One does wonder about the propriety of a library destroying books to make ornaments.
20834. Nicholas Meyer’s The Return of the Pharaoh (New York: Minotaur, 2021; 262 pp., $25.99) is the latest pastiche by an author who has been writing stories about Sherlock Holmes longer than Conan Doyle did. The story is set in 1910, when Watson takes his wife to Egypt, in hopes of curing her consumption, and encounters Holmes, in disguise and in pursuit of a missing nobleman; there’s much more to the case, of course, including dire peril, assistance from Howard Carter, and the discovery of an unknown tomb (no, not that one; Tutankhamun’s tomb was not discovered until 1922). Nick’s web-site is at <www.nicholas-meyer.com>.
20835. “Perry Mason Was America’s Sherlock” was the headline on an article in the September issue of the Spectator <www.tinyurl.com/bd2mfhhz>, at hand from Mark Johann; Chilton Williamson Jr. reminisces fondly about the detective who was almost as popular as Sherlock Holmes.

20836. Reported: the Sherlock Holmes Society of London has published a second edition of Bernard Davies’ Holmes & Watson Country: Travels in Search of Solutions (September 08 #5); it’s a two-volume collection of spectacular scholarship and research. Details will be found at the Society’s web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>; click on [shop]. £22.00 to the U.K., and (alas) much more elsewhere, what with ever-increasing postal costs.
20837. There’s a long list of comic books (including many Sherlock Holmes titles) available in full color on-line at <www.read-comic.com>.
20838. The Sierra Blanca Brewing Company <www.sierrablancabrewery.com>, founded in Moriarty, N.M., 1996, offers a wide range of craft beers and sodas, including a “farm-to-bottle” Green Chili Cerveza, reported recently by Bill and Nancy Anselm; old hands will remember the town when it was less civilized than now, and the home of John Bennett Shaw’s society the Brothers Three of Moriarty.
20839. The Novel Bookstore <www.novelbookstore.co> (in Portland, Ore.) offers attractive bookwallets ($33.00 in leather), and one of them is “The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes”.
20840. Robert Fyfe died on Sept. 22. He began his acting career in 1962 and went on to what may be a record: appearing as Howard Sibshaw in the BBC-TV series “The Last of the Summer Wine” in 230 episodes, from 1985 to 2010. He also played the Clerk at Woolwich Station in Granada’s “The Bruce-Partington Plans” (1988).
20841. The rare .450 single-shot sealing rifle (similar, perhaps, to the one used by Conan Doyle in the Arctic in 1879), at auction last month with an estimate of £1,200-£1,600 (August 21 #7), sold for £1,300.

20857. Sherlockians will gather in New York on Jan. 12-16 to celebrate Sherlock Holmes' 168th birthday, and plans for almost all of the traditional events are afoot. There's a "Plans for BSI Weekend" page at the Baker Street Irregulars web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com> that has information on BSI and non-BSI events; most of the events are open to everyone, and there always is much more going on than anyone with reasonable sense or stamina can deal with. There also will be information available in mid-November at Scott Monty's excellent web-site <www.bsiweekend.com>, and his helpful "Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips" will be found at <ihose.co/bsi2022tips>.
20858. In plenty of time for holiday hinting (or shopping), Randall Stock's annual informative nominations for the best Sherlock Holmes books/DVDs of the year goes on-line at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm> on Nov. 1; there also are recommendations of older Sherlockiana, all with helpful explanations of his choices.
20859. The summer issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) has Douglas Kerr's article about "Conan Doyle's Desert Drama", Jessie Amaolo's discussion of "One-of-a-Kind Manuscripts from a One-of-a-Kind Collections", and reports from and about the Library and the Collection, which celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. A copy of the newsletter is available on request from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
20860. The Extensión Universitaria in Vigo is holding an on-line course on "Jornadas de novela y crimen: Conan Doyle, el creador de Sherlock Holmes" from Nov. 3 to Dec. 1 <www.extension.uned.es/actividad/idactividad/25501>.
20861. The Red-Throated League have been performing for the Norwegian Explorers for years, presenting staged readings from the Edith Meiser radio scripts held in the Sherlock Holmes Collections in Minneapolis, and you can watch some of their programs at <www.tinyurl.com/2s4u5r>.
20862. The arguments over vaccinations and vaccination mandates continues, and it is interesting that Conan Doyle thought and wrote about the issue; thanks to the Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia, you can read what he had to say at <www.tinyurl.com/4syk62kc>.
20863. Illustrator Jonathan Barry wrote about "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for the Irish Times (Sept. 16) <www.tinyurl.com/79zbca87>, commenting on the story and including some of his own atmospheric artwork.
20864. It's not particularly Sherlockian, except that there are cross-over pastiches, but: Ron Charles noted in the Washington Post's on-line Book Club on Oct. 1 that "Steve Metze hoped to raise $10,000 to publish a spell book inspired by the demonic works of H. P. Lovecraft. He reached that goal in 38 minutes." When the Kickstarter campaign ended, he had raised more than $188,000, and Charles wrote that "I suspect Satanic intervention." There is more about it all at <www.tinyurl.com/peanz6ar> (you'll need to scroll down), and at Kickstarter <www.tinyurl.com/aaymkxuw>.

20865. A. J. West's The Spirit Engineer (Richmond: Duckworth, 2021; 208 pp., £14.99) is a novel based on the true story of Kathleen Goligher, an Irish spiritualist medium who was championed by engineer William Jackson Crawford; the book begins in Belfast in 1914 and tells an atmospheric and chilling story involving both belief and deception. Crawford encounters Conan Doyle (and Houdini) while supporting Goligher, but they are only minor characters in a macabre story. It's historical fiction, and an American edition is due this month.
20866. The Bovestrians of Ragged Shaw is the most recently-formed Sherlockian society, which has two founding members, one of whom is Brad Keefeauver, who provided information about the brief history of the society last month at his Sherlock Peoria blog <www.tinyurl.com/3w44cr4k>.
20867. "Books, Bohemians, and Baker Street: A Study in Sherlock in Special Collections" is a new on-line exhibition at the web-site of the University of Delaware's library <www.exhibitions.lib.del.edu/sherlock>, kindly reported by Tom Horrocks. Browse the exhibition menu to see some real treasures, nicely presented.
20868. "The Owner of The Mysterious Bookshop Built His Dream House" was the headline on an article in the real estate section of the N.Y. Times on Oct. 3. Go to <nytimes.com> and search for [otto penzler] to read the story (there is a fine slide-show with the on-line version).

20870. Roberta Pearson's webinar lecture (on "The Adventure of the Mutable Detective") for the BSI Trust on Oct. 2 attracted an enthusiastic audience; if you weren't able to Zoom in, the lecture was recorded and will be available at the BSI Trust web-site <www.bsitrust.org> next year.
20871. "Many of you have asked what will happen to Becky and Flynn," according to Anna Elliott. Becky and Flynn were supporting characters in the long-running "Sherlock Holmes and Lucy James" series (written by Anna Elliott and Charles Veley), and now feature in Elliott's Guarded Ground (available on Kindle). It's set in 1915 during the First World War; Becky has become a surgeon, and Flynn now is a major in the British army. Sherlock Holmes is a supporting character this time, setting Becky and Flynn in pursuit of a dangerous German spy <www.sherlockandlucy.com>.
20872. The Sherlock Holmes Society's 2021 Christmas card celebrates the 70th anniversaries of both the Society and the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House in London; £6.00 for a packet of 10 cards (with envelopes), and you can order at the Society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/55jkyrt8>.

20874. "Joseph Caminada and His Colt Lightning Revolver: Manchester's Real-Life Sherlock Holmes" is the headline on a story in Guns-America Digest (Sept. 24) <www.tinyurl.com/e5ajkv8k>, at hand from John Linsenmeyer. Caminada has been mentioned here before (May 14 #6 and April 17 #2).
20875. Reported: "The Lion's Mane" reprinted in Guilty Creatures: A Menagerie of Mysteries, an anthology edited and introduced by Martin Edwards (London: British Library, 2021; 336 pp., £9.99). It's the latest in the "British Library Crime Classics" series; an American edition is due next year from the Poisoned Pen Press ($14.99).
20876. The Internet Archive, which was founded in 1996, has come a long way in 25 years, and still is hard at work capturing everything on the Internet; you can see Brewster Kahle (one of its founders) then and now in a documentary video about "the first crawl" at <www.tinyurl.com/yxv66svy>.
20877. Readers who know all about electric guitars will know what a compressor is and does; Derham Groves has reported The Engineer's Thumb, which was invented by Merlin Blencowe <www.valvewizard.co.uk/engineersthumb2.html>.
20878. It's "the legal 7% solution," according to En Voyage Perfumes by Shelley Waddington <www.tinyurl.com/rbzbnd8d>, kindly reported by Samantha Wolov. There's neither cocaine nor morphine nor heroin in The 7% Solution eau de cologne, and there's an on-line review at <www.tinyurl.com/yj8c64r8>.
20879. Those who like to browse the Internet will be familiar with Google and the Google Doodle, which on Oct. 12 honored the Polish actor Helena Modrzejewska <www.tinyurl.com/4vz7x863>. Her Wikipedia entry notes that Joanna and Catharina Polatynska have suggested that she might have been the model for Irene Adler. The suggestion was in an article posted in 2000 to the Diogenes Club web-site <www.diogenes-club.com/irene.htm>.
20880. When in Málaga (on the Costa del Sol in Spain); you can visit La Casa de Sherlock Holmes <www.facebook.com/SherlockHolmesPubMalaga>, kindly noted by James Utechin. It's a pub, and there's another one, not far away, in Torremolino.
20881. Robert Richardson died on Aug. 31. He was a British journalist and crime writer, serving twice as head of the Crime Writers' Association; his The Book of the Dead (1989) was a pleasant murder mystery tied to a Sherlock Holmes story written in 1894 and published by Conan Doyle in an edition of only ten copies, all of which he presented to his godson as a christening present (the pastiche is included in the novel, and shows more imagination and style than many others in the genre).

20882. The Only One in the World, edited by Narrelle M. Harris (Bittern: Clan Destine, 2021; 257 pp., $29.99), is an anthology of thirteen pastiches that reimagine Holmes and Watson in different time periods, cultures, and countries, from Viking Iceland to the distant future; the editor and many of the authors are Australian, and most are newcomers to the world of pastiches. Harris' web-site at <www.narrellemharris.com> offers information about this anthology and her other Sherlockian books, and there's a 49-minute video of her and Lucy Sussex (one of the authors) at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=4KspZU3qg08>.
20883. The Sherlock Holmes Is Real podcast's "a fictional docudrama about a supposed conspiracy to turn Sherlock Holmes from a historical figure to a fictional character over the last hundred years by person or persons unknown" (according to Talon King and Paul Thomas Miller); you can tune in to their conclusions at <www.sherlockholmesisreal.libsyn.com>. Miller also is responsible (or to blame) for the web-site Doyle's Rotary Coffin, definitely well worth exploring <www.tinyurl.com/y2xzezpz>.
20884. Jennie Paton has reported the entire "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" animated series at <www.youtube.com/c/TwoBobWatch/videos>, along with much more, including all episodes of "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes".
20885. SHERLOC and WATSON are hard at work on Mars, making significant contributions to the study of the Red Planet <www.tinyurl.com/5xarkkwx>. As noted earlier (June 20 #2) their names are acronyms, and they are part of the instrumentation on Perseverance, the Martian rover.
20886. Garage sales can be interesting, especially when someone finds and buys a piece of the Moon <www.tinyurl.com/cpxcr2c2>. The lunar rock was from the Apollo 17 mission, and quite possibly was collected by geologist/astronaut Jack Schmitt, who was responsible for naming Sherlock Crater in honor of geologist/detective Sherlock Holmes.
20887. "The first humans to make up stories may just have saved us all. Or not. It's hard to know for sure," according to Lee Child. You can his interesting and insightful introduction to The Best Mystery Stories of the Year 2021 (August 21 4) at CrimeReads <www.tinyurl.com/24ckj6yn>.
20888. The ACD Society ("a community dedicated to studying and enjoying the works of Arthur Conan Doyle") has a web-site at <www.acdsociety.com>, where you can read its first two newsletters, learn more about the society, and even become a member.
20889. Philip R. Brogdon ("John Sanger") died on Sept. 30. Phil found the world of Sherlockians through the Red Circle of Washington in 1975, and was an enthusiastic member of the society through the 1980s and 1990s. He delivered one of the toasts at the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars in 1986, spoke at Sherlockian conferences in 1986 and 1987, and received his Investiture from the BSI in 1988. His special interests were poetry and the theater (and his fine voice served him well in both), and his book Sherlock Holmes in Black was published in 1995.

20892. "Sherlock Holmes Afternoon Tea Comes with an Antique Chest and a Cocktail in a Pipe," according My London (Oct. 11) <www.tinyurl.com/55npyt3j>. The boutique Holmes Hotel in Marylebone has revamped its tea, and the article includes a link to the menu; the meal costs only £42.00 (or £55.00 with a specialty drink).
20893. Books of Wonder/William Morrow issued an attractive edition of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in 1992, illustrated by Barry Moser. Moser's own signed copy, with five signed original watercolors, will be up for bids on Nov. 10 at Hindman Auctions in Chicago <www.tinyurl.com/sd8mavk>, estimated at $4,000-$6,000.
20894. H. F. Heard's delightful Mr. Mycroft pastiche A Taste for Honey (1941) has been filmed twice, first as "The Sting of Death" for television's "Elgin Hour" (1955), with Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft, and then as "The Deadly Bees" (1967), with no one as Mr. Mycroft, because he doesn't appear in the film (Robert Bloch wrote the screenplay, which was thoroughly revised by Anthony Marriott, who deleted Mr. Mycroft, and Bloch refused to watch what he called his "deformed offspring"). "The Deadly Bees" then was parodied on "Mystery Science Theater 3000" (1998), and you can watch all three at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=QChOFJHdQps>, <www.dailymotion.com/video/x21jjwh> and <www.club-mst3k.com/episodes/905-the-deadly-bees>.
20895. Further to the report (September 21 #2) about "The Stories of Sherlock Holmes" (the long-running South African series broadcast by Springbok Radio), with Graham Armitage as Holmes and Kerry Jordan as Watson, Lenny Picker notes that almost all of the shows are available at the Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia <www.tinyurl.com/4eutpvfy>.
20896. Reported: "The Greek Interpreter" and "The Lost Special" reprinted in The Big Book of Victorian Mysteries, edited by Otto Penzler (New York: Vintage/Black Lizard, 2021; 640 pp., $26.00); each story with an introduction by the editor.
20897. When Otto Penzler's Mysterious Obsession (October 20 #2) was first published, he was interviewed by Gil Roth for the podcast The Virtual Memories Show; you can listen to Otto's stories about collecting and collectors, and his own collection and his decision to sell it, at <www.tinyurl.com/ud2jm8fs>. 20898. Mantan Web has reported (in Japanese) on Oct. 18 on just how popular Goshō Aoyama's "Detective Conan" manga has been since the series was launched in 1994 <www.tinyurl.com/yz8jkc2h>: the 100th volume has just been published, bringing the total number of copies to more than 250 million. That's not all: the CBR web-site reported (in English) on Oct. 20 <www.tinyurl.com/2fsnj2v4> that the television animation that began in 1996 now has more than 1,000 episodes, and there are 24 animated films in the franchise. The CBR web-site explains who Detective Conan is.
20899. Viktor Yevgrafov died on Oct. 20. He was a Russian actor and a stuntman, and played a sinister Moriarty in two episodes of the series "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1980, with Vasilii LivaNovember as Holmes and Vitali Solomin as Watson).
20900. Simon Chapman has written for China Daily (Oct. 10) about his expedition in search of the Lost World, attempting to follow in the footsteps of Col. Percy H. Fawcett through the Amazon jungle <www.tinyurl.com/dvbwppj>; his web-site at <www.simonjungle.co.uk>, and a video about the expedition is available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ktOiu4okXMA>.
20901. Dr. Doyle (the three-year-old brown gelding) (September 21 #7) continues to disappoint bettors, according to Peter McIntyre, finishing seventh (inside, weakened) on Oct. 12 <www.tinyurl.com/5eeyknpr> at Parx Racing in Bensalem, Pa.
20902. The Eurocrypt Christopher Lee Collection is a new boxed set with five of his films <www.severin-films.com/shop/eurocrypt-christopher-lee> on Blu-ray and CD ($105.00), with new audio commentary; one of the films is his "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (1962). Alas: they there are no plans to issue to films separately.
20903. Cliff Goldfarb notes that there's an elaborate Sherlockian corn maze about an hour's drive from Montréal <www.vergerlabonte.com/labyrinthes?lang=en>. "You'll scour the streets of Victorian London of the 1880s in the company of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson," the folks at Verger Labonté promise.
20904. Reported by Jennie Paton: an imaginative "Real Hollow Book Music Box" (the book is The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes) offered by Suegnight for $35.00 (discounted from $70.00) <www.suegnight.shop>, with any tune you choose).
20905. Jennie also spotted just the thing for rush-hour drivers: a collection of 374 old-time-radio Sherlock Holmes programs on a thumb drive, offered by Rawhguide for $13.00 (discounted from $26.99) <www.tinyurl.com/erxs6p4w>.
20906. Gyles Brandreth, who has written seven pastiches that feature Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle, also is chairman of the "Oldie of the Year" awards committee of The Oldie magazine <www.theoldie.co.uk>. The BBC reported on Oct. 20 <www.bbc.com/news/uk-58974656> that Queen Elizabeth, now 95 years old, has declined this year's award; her assistant private secretary wrote to him that "Her Majesty believes you are as old as you feel, as such The Queen does not believe she meets the relevant criteria to be able to accept, and hopes you will find a more worthy recipient."

October 21 #7

20907. It may be time for competition for the most-attention-getting title of a Sherlockian book. Certainly a serious contender in the contest would be Paul Thomas Miller's Was Sherlock Holmes an Elephant? (2021; 56 pp., $5.57), which offers the results of his search for an answer to a question quite possibly asked for the first time by any Sherlockian (or non-Sherlockian, for that matter). His answer? Well, no spoilers here. It's a welcome contribution to the literature from the man who presides over Doyle's Rotary Coffin.
20908. The Russian television series "Sherlock: The Russian Chronicles" (available on the French streaming service Salto (September 21 #1) also is available via the Roku digital media player <www.tinyurl.com/vbf4ccu>.
20909. Tina Rhea reports the on-line store Spoonflower, which offers a wide variety of attractive Sherlockian designs <www.tinyurl.com/29dpesk9> on cloth and wallpaper.
20910. The film "The Lost City of Z" (2017), which did not do well at the box office (according to Box Office Mojo, the world-wide gross was less than $20 million), is available on Amazon Prime, and a DVD can be found at eBay and elsewhere. Charlie Hunnam stars as Col. Percy H. Fawcett, who met Conan Doyle in 1910 and later claimed that he inspired "The Lost World"; Fawcett never returned from his last expedition into the Amazon jungle. The two men are discussed in Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin's The Annotated Lost World (1996) and David Grann's The Lost City of Z (2009), but there's no mention of Conan Doyle in the film.
20911. Heritage Auctions <www.ha.com> will offer a complete set of single issues of The Strand Magazine with the 58 Sherlock Holmes stories first published in the magazine at their sale on Dec. 7-8; you can check their web-site on or after Nov. 18.

20912. Speculation continues about who owns the block of property at 215-237 Baker Street, which includes the site of the former Abbey National Building Society (later the Abbey National Bank), where mail addressed to Sherlock Holmes was for many years answered by Holmes' secretary. A non-governmental organization called Global Witness reported (July 15 #2) that the property is included in a portfolio of real estate in London that's owned by a company tied to Rakhat Aliyev, a former Kazakh secret police chief accused in the European Union of money laundering and murder. Max Magee has found a Global Witness story <www.tinyurl.com/eaузkeu4> that includes a link to a report that includes a map that shows the company also owns property behind 239 Baker Street, site of the Sherlock Holmes Museum, but not the museum itself. Abbey National was at what's now 219 Baker Street, which retains the old façade and tower.

20913. Marshall McLuhan, perhaps best known for proposing that "the medium is the message," wrote an article "Sherlock Holmes vs. the Bureaucrat" in Explorations (Oct. 1957). He also discussed Holmes (and Conan Doyle) in "From DaVinci to Holmes" in his first book The Mechanical Bride: Folklore of Industrial Man (1951). That discussion was reprinted in Essential McLuhan (1995), conveniently available at <www.1lib.us/book/979006/ede63b>.

20915. Louis Robinson is an Atlanta-based songwriter who has a wide-ranging YouTube channel, where he has posted a video about "The One and Only Sherlock Holmes" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=PpT6iRK3hA>.

20916. Carole Nelson Douglas died on Oct. 20. She started writing as a journalist and turned to fiction with the Gothic novel Amberleigh (1980). Carol went on to write more than 60 novels, and many short stories; her "Irene Adler" series included eight novels and six short stories. There's much more about her work at her web-site <www.carolenelsondouglas.com>.

20917. "Why do clocks go clockwise?" is an intriguing, although non-Sherlockian, question. The answer will be found in an article at the Country Life web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3s47w7yw>.

20918. "Sherlock Holmes Murder Suspect in Kentwood" is the headline on a story at HL Arledge's "Bayou Justice" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/y4fjh64d>. Kentwood a small town in Louisiana, perhaps best-known today as the birthplace of Britney Spears, but in 1915 it was the home of Claude "Sherlock" Holmes (you can read the article to learn more).

20919. Theatrics: Michael Menendian and John Weagley's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Goose" will be presented (as a 1940s radio play) at the Collaborative Theater Project in Medford, Ore., Nov. 5-14; web-site at <www.ctpmedford.org>.

20920. Amy Frey's "Sherlock Holmes: A Scandal in Bohemia" is due at the Lyndhurst Mansion in Tarrytown, N.Y., Nov. 12-Dec. 5 <www.showclix.com>.

20925. Michael F. Whelan ("Vincent Spaulding") died on Oct. 25. Mike found the world of Sherlockians in the 1970s, and his business career took him all over the United States, enabling him to enjoy the fellowship of many Sherlockian societies as well as the Baker Street Irregulars, serving as the BSI's "Wiggins" from 1997 to 2020. He launched the continuing series of BSI conferences, greatly expanded the work of the BSI Press, and created the BSI Trust, which presides over the BSI Archives. He received his Investiture in 1974, the BSIs Two-Shilling Award in 1992, and a Golden Sovereign in 2017, marking his 20th year as head of the BSI. "A Quiet Air of Mastery" (the BSI's tribute volume to Mike) was published by the BSI Press in 2020 and is still available <www.tinyurl.com/463vad56>, and there's an excellent tribute to him, including a series of interviews, at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.ihose.co/mikewhelan>.

20927. Gildart Jackson, who has narrated more than 400 audiobooks, now has a YouTube "Fireside Readings" channel, where you can watch (and hear) him read "The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.tinyurl.com/4snbh2zi> and many other stories by other authors.

20928. Tales the Devil Told Me, by Jen Fawkes (Winston-Salem: Press 53, 2021; 178 pp., $27.95), is a collection of short stories that offer imaginative new versions of the lives of a dozen classical villains, from Rumpelstiltskin to King Claudius to Mrs. Danvers to Medusa to Captain Hook, and of course including Prof. Moriarty.

20929. Jennie Paton has reported a Sherlockian allusion in the film "Inglourious Basterds" (2009): the scene in which Christoph Waltz (Hans Landa), interrogating a French farmer, smokes a calabash pipe. It was indeed a Sherlockian allusion, as Quentin Tarantino, the film's director, explained on "The Charlie Rose Show" on Aug. 21, 2019. You can watch an excerpt from the interview at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=dexvHVBGGe>; the entire program is available at <www.charlierose.com/videos/26959>.

20930. President Calvin Coolidge paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. William Gillette at Gillette Castle on Oct. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/cwztpr9z>. Coolidge was impersonated by Tracy Messer, and the Gillettes by Tyke and Teddie Niver.

20931. "This Clock Uses Famous Book Quotes to Display the Time" was the headline on an article at Mental Floss (Oct. 27) <www.tinyurl.com/yk5yaw7k> about a new Author Clock created by Mechanical Design Labs. There's a different quote for every minute of the day, according to the article, and "a deep-cut Sherlock Holmes line chimes in at 10:36." There's no explanation why 10:36 is in some way Sherlockian, but if any reader finds out, you're welcome to tell us.

20932. Brad Keefauver's The Rise and Fall of an Eighties Sherlockian (2021; 206 pp., $10.00) is both a memoir and a history of the decade, and it's nicely done indeed, packed with good stories about major and minor figures in the Sherlockian world; there's no index, so you will need to buy the book (it's at Amazon) to see if you appear in one of his stories. His "Sherlock Peoria" blog <www.sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com> is interesting as well.
20933. "We like to think that Sherlock Holmes would approve of modern-day wrestling," Ross K. Foad and Howard Ostrom suggest in the introduction to their essay "Sherlock Holmes: Baker Street Brawler". You can read all about it at <www.nph.co.uk/the-baker-street-brawler.html>.
20934. You can make a collector happy: Joe Eckrich <jeckrich@sbcglobal.net> needs the first issue (v. 1, n. 1) of the Sherlock Holmes Journal so that he can complete his run of the magazine.
20935. Ray Wilcockson continues to make interesting discoveries in the pages of digitized newspapers, and reports on them in his "Markings" blog; his latest <www.tinyurl.com/swnp66w> is about "Conan Doyle's Spooks Tour with The Rolling Stones (1920-22)."
20936. Britain's National Archives has announced that the 1921 census of England and Wales will be made public on Jan. 6 <www.tinyurl.com/yy4zk4r9>, which is nice news genealogists, and people who just want to know who was where that year. The U.S. census is made public after only 75 years.
20937. Video of this year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture, by Jeffrey Hatcher (on "The Adventure of the Occasional Playwright: Conan Doyle on Stage") is available at the web-site of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection <www.acdfriends.org/events.html>; he has interesting comments on Conan Doyle as a playwright. You can also watch last year's lecture by Rebecca Romney (on "Sherlockian Collecting: A Tour of Clever, Creative, and Weird Pursuits").
20938. "Otto Presents" is a weekly YouTube podcast from the Mysterious Bookshop in which Otto Penzler talks about authors, books, and collecting; in "Otto Presents Sherlock Holmes" he talked about Holmes, and the books written by Conan Doyle and others <www.youtube.com/watch?v=uOj2R8tDais>.
20939. Sherlock Holmes died on Sept. 29, 2020, in Vestavia, Ala. He and his twin sister Shirley were born on May 20, 1927, in Marion, Ill., and he went on to found Sherlock Holmes Mobile Homes. You can read his obituary on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/nbxdux2m>.
20940. The Word is a new library and exhibition space in South Shields (in northeastern England), and their current exhibition "Investigating Detectives at The Word" also is available on-line <<https://detectives.theworduk.org>>. Sherlock Holmes and Detective Pikachu are among the detectives celebrated, and the web-site's well worth exploring. An earlier exhibition "Shiver Me Timbers: Pirates on Page, Stage and Screen" still is available on-line and is nicely done indeed (with a mention of Conan Doyle's "Captain Sharkey").

20941. One does hear of Sherlock everywhere: it turns out that there is something Sherlockian about the new movie "Dune" (based on the classic SF novel by Frank Herbert). Stephen McKinley Henderson plays Hawat (a human computer called a Mentat), and explained in an interview in the Hollywood Reporter (October 22) <www.tinyurl.com/5a2nwhrf> that his life-long enthusiasm for Sherlock Holmes helped him play a Mentat.
20942. Atlas Obscura celebrated Halloween with a long article about "The Famous Fight Over the Turn-of-the-Century Trend of Spirit Photography" that's of interest for the photograph taken in 1931 of Conan Doyle, his wife Jean, and their son Denis <www.tinyurl.com/w4rtcb4n>. It's a spirit photograph, of course (Conan Doyle died in 1930).
20943. The Beacon Society is continuing to publish its quarterly newsletter for younger Sherlockians, and the latest issue of Sherlock's Spotlight can be found at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>; the contents include material both by and for younger followers of the Great Detective.
20944. Mark Levy ("Don Juan Murillo") died on Oct. 30, 2021. A patent attorney by profession, he also was a writer, an inventor, and an enthusiastic member of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patents in Denver. His first article in the Baker Street Journal appeared in 1971, and he went on to contribute often to our literature. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2013.
20945. VioletandOberon offers a wide range of attractive Sherlockian merchandise; their web-site is at <www.violetandoberon.com>, and you can browse their collections at <www.tinyurl.com/4x9wsu5r>. There's also a colorful brochure available on request as a PDF <contact@violetandoberon.com>.
20946. A complete run of single issues of The Strand Magazine will all 58 of the Sherlock Holmes stories that appeared in the magazine will be offered in the Heritage Auctions sale on Dec. 9-10 <www.tinyurl.com/46dbf8hb>. It's not often that a complete run of single issues is available; the last time was in 2016. There will be some other nice Sherlockiana and Doyleana in the sale.
20947. Further to the report (September 21 #2) on American singer and songwriter Billie Eilish's explanation of how and why she wrote her song "You Should See Me in a Crown", the Geo News web-site reported on Nov. 10 that she responded to Instagram's "Ask me a question" feature with a Sherlockian answer when asked "Favorite fictional character?" <www.tinyurl.com/tzjr9urk>.
20948. Brimptsmead Estate, in the heart of Dartmoor National Park, for sale, offered at £4,950,000 <www.tinyurl.com/sfluxwawh>; according to the realtor's brochure, the building was leased from the then Prince of Wales in 1906, and the present owners were allowed to purchase the freehold from Prince Charles, but "His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales retains the right to fish on the river bank owned by The Brimptmead Estate, with 24 hours' notice." Press reports say that Conan Doyle stayed at the house, but that's not stated in the brochure.

20949. "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects" from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker (curated by Glen and his wife Cathy), is an exhibition scheduled at the Grolier Club in New York from January 12 to Apr. 16; it will have some real treasures on display, and it will be well worth a visit; Glen was recently interviewed on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/thhr4ztvb>. There's a web-site for the exhibition at <www.sherlockin221objects.org>; click on "Visit" for information about current regulations in New York City, and to make a reservation to see the exhibition.
20950. The exhibition catalogue, which will be published by the Grolier Club on Jan. 5, and is available now for pre-order at Amazon (168 pp., $60.00); is spectacular, with splendid full-color illustrations as well as grand stories about the exhibits, and highly recommended.
20951. Readers who lament the lack of reviews of Sherlockian video games in this newsletter may enjoy the conclusions of a reviewer who posts to YouTube: <www.youtube.com/watch?v=NZcjQb2fE6M> (kindly noted by Jennie Paton); it's stated as Part One, so there may be a second installment eventually.
20952. It's not quite "The Six Napoleons", but a letter, signed by Napoleon six times, listing the rolls of gold napoleons he was given when he left Elba in 1815, was sent to auction at Lion Heart Autographs on Oct. 27, with an estimate of $15,000-$16,000 <www.tinyurl.com/rabe2zb4>. The letter sold for $10,500.
20953. Lou Coty has commissioned an impressive and artistic image of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street, available as a print and on pillows, blankets, mugs, and much more, at <www.gothicandlight.com>; a 10% discount is available if you use the magic word (SCUTTLEBUTT10) at check-out.

20954. Steve Mason continues to add to his collection of autographs of actors who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes, and now has more than 700 autographs; you can see them all at www.tinyurl.com/44mh9e8u. And he asks that if you, or someone you know, has been Holmes on stage, screen, radio, television, or anywhere else, he's at mason.steve8080@gmail.com and would be happy to add to his collection.
20955. When in Bury St. Edmunds (in Suffolk): you can stop by Baskerville's Bar (formerly Moriarty's) www.baskervilles.uk; it's a vegan coffee shop with a "secret, hidden cocktail bar."
20956. James Thurber's The Cases of Blue Plovermell (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2021; 195 pp., $18.95) offers (reprinted for the first time) all of the baker's dozen of the stories about the detective who was described by Ray Betzner in 1992 as a "cross-eyed" parody of Sherlock Holmes, accompanied by notes and essays by Bill Peschel. The stories fill only a quarter of the book, and Bill has provided a detailed discussion of Thurber's life and career, journalism in 1923 (when the parodies were published in the Columbus Dispatch), and much more about one of America's greatest humorists. Bill's web-site www.peschelpress.com has information about all of the volumes in his 223B Casebook Series, and his many other books.

20957. Alex Ovechkin, who is well known to everyone who roots for or against the Washington Capitals (and for those who don't, the Washington Capitals play in the National Hockey League), has appeared in Sherlockian costume in Russian television commercials that promote the PSB Bank; the Russian Machine Never Breaks web-site www.tinyurl.com/rwespfxn has kindly made the commercials available.
20958. The page from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" sold at Heritage Auctions on Nov. 6 for $423,000 (including the buyer's premium); it's the second-highest auction price for any Canonical manuscript ("The Sign of the Four" was sold for $519,500 in 1996); no complete short-story manuscript has brought more than this single page did. Offered at auction in 2016, estimated at $100,000-$150,000, the page went unsold; offered again in 2019, estimated at $120,000-$150,000, it went unsold once more. Randall Stock has a detailed history and description of the page in his "Best of Sherlock" census at www.tinyurl.com/yu7jrhj.
20959. It should be noted that the page from the manuscript wasn't the only expensive item at auction this month: Kenneth Griffin, chief executive officer of the multinational hedge fund Citadel, paid $43.2 million for one of only two surviving first printings of the Constitution in private collections, setting a record for the most expensive book, manuscript, historical document, or printed text ever sold at auction. Smithsonian magazine www.tinyurl.com/2p92np9x had a nicely illustrated article about the sale at Sotheby's on Nov. 18.
20960. The Return of Sherlock Holmes: Further Extraordinary Tales of the Famous Sleuth, is edited by Maxim Jakubowski (Coral Gables: Mango, 2021; 321 pp., $18.95); it's an anthology of traditional and non-traditional pastiches, some nicely faithful to the Canon, and some imaginatively not.
20962. "The Baker Street Classics Sherlock Holmes" (Newbury: Baker Street Press, 2021) is a new uniform set of all of the nine Canonical books, with colorful dust-jacket artwork from the old John Murray Uniform Edition (£14.99 each).
20963. Kuonyi Nxlia, by John R. Morrison (Pittsburgh: Dorrance Publishing, 2021; 180 pp., $23.00), is the biography of his grand-uncle Dr. William McCutchan Morrison, who served as an American missionary in the Congo from 1906 to 1918 and was sued for his criticism of the abuses of the natives by the Belgian administrators of the colony. In The Crime of the Congo (1909), Conan Doyle wrote that "At this moment two American citizens, Shepherd and that noble Virginian, Morrison, are about to be tried at Boma for telling the truth about the scoundrels. Morrison in the dock makes a finer Statue of Liberty than Bartholdi's in New York harbour."

20964. Neil Gaiman's A Study in Emerald (Milwaukie: Dark Horse, 2018; 88 pp., $19.99) is an impressive graphic novel, with art and adaptation by Rafael Albuquerque, that's based on a short story written to combine the worlds of Sherlock Holmes and H. P. Lovecraft; the story won a Hugo Award in 2004, and the graphic novel is a careful (and colorful) presentation of Gaiman's story.
20965. Allan Devitt ("The Dancing Men") died on Oct. 17. He had a long career in management, at the University of Chicago and then at the American Management Association. Allan was an enthusiastic member of the Criterion Bar Association and other Sherlockian societies in Chicago, and of the Beacon Society, and with his wife Susan Z. Diamond presided over the running of the Silver Blaze in Chicago for many years. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2009.
20966. Under a Raven's Wing, by Stephen Volk (Hornsea: PS Publishing, 2021; 384 pp., £25.00), is a collection of excellent pastiches, five reprinted and two new, set in the 1870s, when a young Sherlock Holmes, in Paris, meets C. Auguste Dupin, who is not at all what he seems to be. Volk pays tribute to Arthur Conan Doyle and Edgar Allan Poe, and is skillful at presenting stories that truly are "tales of mystery and imagination." His web-site's at www.stephenvolk.net.
20967. Upcoming theater: Debbie Phillips' new "A Study on Sherlock" is to be performed as "immersive theater" at the Parish House in Clifton, Yorks., Dec. 6-11 www.tinyurl.com/yk8e8j7v.
20969. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is scheduled at the Abbotsford Arts Centre in Abbotsford, B.C., Mar. 11-19 www.abbotsfordarts.abbyschools.ca.
20970. "Spontaneous Sherlock" will be performed at the Sundial Theatre in Cirencester, Glos., Mar. 12 www.sundial-theatre.co.uk.
20971. Michael Fitcher's new "The Mystery of the Valkyrie" (with Holmes, Watson, Adler, and Moriarty) is due at the Queensland Performing Arts Centre in Brisbane, Qld., Mar. 29-Apr. 2 www.qpac.com.au.
20972. Richard Lavin's new "Sherlock Holmes & the Star of Arabia" is scheduled at the Heisler Theater in Crestline, Calif., Apr. 15-May 1; their web-site's at www.heislertheater.com.
20973. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Maestro" is due at the Noorda Center for the Performing Arts in Orem, Utah, on Apr. 19, and then moves to the Maurice Abravanel Hall in Salt Lake City, on Apr. 23; the web-site is at www.visitsaltlake.com.

20974. If you're planning to be in New York for the birthday festivities (or anything else), Tom Cynkin has kindly reported that the NYC COVID SAFE app is widely accepted at venues requiring proof of vaccination. It's free, easy to use, and helpful, but it may not be accepted everywhere, so don't leave your vaccination cards at home. Information about access to Baker Street Irregulars events may change; check at www.tinyurl.com/yck4ecm for the latest requirements, and you can stay truly up to date by signing up for free News from the BSI e-mail www.tinyurl.com/2p8n2ptm.

20975. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (for Sherlockian admirers of Wodehouse and Woodhousean admirers of Holmes) will hold their annual Junior Bloodstain via Zoom at 1:00 pm EST on Jan. 8, discussing Wodehouse's "The Split Infinitive". Contact Elaine Coppola <emcoppol@syr.edu> to request a copy of the story and a Zoom link.
20976. Scott Monty has updated his helpful "Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips" (recommended for anyone planning to be in New York for the birthday festivities <<http://ihose.co/bsi2022tips>>).
20977. Randall Stock has an excellent (and well-illustrated) report at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site on the "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker" exhibition that opens at the Grolier Club in New York in January <www.tinyurl.com/bddzt>.
20978. Lyndsay Faye was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/yx2u8na4>, talking about Observations by Gaslight (her new collection of pastiches), and about many other things.
20979. Leroy L. Panek died on Nov. 5. He worked for decades in the English Department at McDaniel College in Westminster, Md., and became interested in the detective novel in 1974. He was the author of eleven books and twice won Edgar Awards from the Mystery Writers of America, and helped create the Westminster Detective Library, which has as its mission to catalog and publish on-line all the short detective fiction published in the U.S. before 1891. He was the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker during the birthday festivities in 2006 (offering "Thoughts about the Beginning of the Detective Story in America").
20980. The Internet is alive with news/commentary/rumor about a fifth season of the BBC's "Sherlock" television series, and Karen Murdock has reported a three-minute trailer at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=IKR62ICxCK0>; it is one of many such trailers created by hopeful fans.
20981. HM Prison Dartmoor is well-known to Sherlockians, and will be familiar to all who have read "The Hound of the Baskervilles"; many people know that it was built to house French prisoners captured in the war with Napoleon, but not as many know that it also held American prisoners captured during the War of 1812 and not released until 1815 after some were killed in what was called (in the U.S.) the Dartmoor Massacre. A contemporary broadside about the event <www.tinyurl.com/ys23u6mt> was at auction this month, with a vivid description of what happened, estimated at $2,000-$3,000; it sold for $4,250 (including the buyer's premium).

20983. Stephen Sondheim died on Nov. 26. He began his entertainment career as the lyricist for "West Side Story" (1957), and his many awards included a Tony for best musical for "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the Forum" (the first Broadway show for which he wrote both words and music) in 1964, an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1974 for the film "The Last of Sheila", the Pulitzer Prize for drama in 1985, and an Oscar in 1991 (for best music and original song) for the film "Dick Tracy". He was a Kennedy Center honoree in 1993, and received the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2019; and wrote the song "I Never Do Anything Twice" sung by Régine as the brothel madame in the film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976) <www.youtube.com/watch?v=96MvzUWUDiy>.
20984. White House press secretary Jen Psaki was a guest on MSNBC-TV's "Morning Joe" on Dec. 3 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=5p6MOgvsct4>; at 5:21 you can hear her say "No you know what Sherlock?"
20985. Copyright on the Sherlock Holmes stories in the U.S. runs for 95 years after the date of publication, so only two of the stories will be protected in 2022 ("The Veiled Lodger" and "Shoscombe Old Place"), and they will enter the public domain in 2023.
20986. Michelle Birkby's All Roads Lead to Whitechapel (New York: Felony & Mayhem, 2019; 265 pp., $26.00) is the new title for the American edition of her The House at Baker Street (2016); it's the first "Baker Street Inquiry" written by Mrs. Hudson, who with the assistance of Mary Watson, Billy, and Wiggins, pursues a case that wasn't (but should have been) of interest to Holmes. The story's well told, and the characters ring true.
20987. Her No One Notices the Boys (2021; 295 pp., $26.00) is the title of the American edition of The Women of Baker Street (2019), and it's an excellent sequel, with Mrs. Hudson and Mary once again involved in a complicated mystery as they battle a fiendish criminal.
20988. Peter McIntyre reports that Dr. Doyle (the three-year-old brown gelding) came in 7th (20% lengths behind the winner) at Gulfstream Park on Dec. 8, continuing to disappoint bettors.
20989. Cliff Goldfarb has reported an interesting discussion of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Lit Century podcast at <www.link.chtbl.com/42JG949S>; hosts Sandra Newman and Catherine Nichols and special guests discuss one book for each year of the 20th century.
20990. Steve Mason has announced the creation of a new Sherlockian society that surely will find many members in this Age of the Pandemic. More information about the Legion of Zoom will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/2p8zv245>.
20991. Stuart Palmer was a prolific author and screenwriter, as well as a member of the Baker Street Irregulars, and was best known for a series of inventive novels and short stories about his detective Hildegard Withers. Hildegard Withers: Final Riddles? (Cincinnati: Crippen & Landru, 2021; 235 pp., $22.00) is a collection of reprints of some of the stories, two Sherlockian pastiches from 1944, and a warm tribute to Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle first published in the Baker Street Journal in 1948. Their web-site <www.crippenandlandru.com> is well worth exploring.

20992. "Asia and Europe Feel the Pinch as Chinese Tourists Stay Home" was the headline on a story in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 6) spotted by Karen Murdock; Paul Lehame, supervisor of the Sherlock Holmes Museum in London, said about 1,000 people visited per day at its peak, and at least half of them were from China, but after the Museum reopened on May 17, it has attracted only 10 percent of its usual numbers. And about a third of the merchandise and souvenirs sold at the web-site of the Museum is being shipped to China.
20993. Carl L. Heifetz died on Nov. 19. He had a long career in infectious disease research and after his retirement founded Micro Doc, a microbiology consultant firm. He was an enthusiastic Sherlockian, and was an officer of the Pleasant Places of Florida for many years; he also wrote a collection of essays Sherlock Holmes Through the Microscope (2018) and two volumes of pastiches.
20994. The Agra Treasurers' annual "Holmes, Doyle, and Friends" conference will be held in person at the Airport Clarion Inn in Dayton, Ohio, on Mar. 11-12; more information is available at <www.agratreasurers.net>.
20995. The complete run of single issues of The Strand Magazine (with all 58 of the Sherlock Holmes stories that appeared in the magazine) offered at Heritage Auctions this month sold for $45,000 (including the buyer's premium), and there were nice prices paid for other Sherlockian items in the auction <www.tinyurl.com/46dbf8hb>.
20996. Andrew Gulli's "The Strand Magazine" continues to publish colorful annual Sherlock Holmes calendars <www.tinyurl.com/2p8km7j3>, and there's a wide variety of Sherlockiana at its on-line shop <www.tinyurl.com/2p8cthc5>.

20998. Patrick Horgan died on Oct. 6. He began his acting career on British television in 1954 and went on to perform also on stage and screen. He had many Sherlockian credits, appearing as Captain Gregg in the musical “Baker Street” (1965), as Sir Edward Leighton and then as Sherlock Holmes in the Royal Shakespeare Company revival of Gillette’s “Sherlock Holmes” (1974), as Sherlock Holmes in Conan Doyle’s “The Speckled Band” (1973 and 1990), as William Gillette in Ken Ludwig’s play “Dramatic License” (1983), and as Sherlock Holmes in a 30-second commercial on American television (1990). He also recorded an abridged version of “A Study in Scarlet” for a record (1977), and the entire Canon for the Library of Congress’ “Talking Books for the Blind” and his memoirs “The Deception of Sherlock Holmes” (available as audiobooks from Decklin’s Domain) <www.decklinsdomain.com>.

21000. The national Aeronautics and Space Administration has reported <www.tinyurl.com/2p8j494s> that SHERLOC has discovered organic material on Mars. SHERLOC (an acronym for the Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman and Luminescence for Organics and Chemicals instrument on NASA’s Perseverance rover) found organics both inside a rock and in dust on other rocks; it won’t be until samples are returned to Earth that scientists will be able to determine whether the organic molecules have biological or non-biological origins.
21001. Laurie R. King is kindly celebrating the holiday by making a free download of the Mary Russell short story “Mary’s Christmas” available to her fans at <www.laurierking.com/books/mary-russells-war/overview>.
21002. Les Moskowitz died on Dec. 16. He was a consulting actuary and an energetic user of computers. Les also was a long-time member of the Six Napoleons, Watson’s Tin Box, the Red Circle, and other Sherlockian societies, and for many years presided over the Hounds of the Internet mailing list, where his messages were “scribbled by a drunken-looking groom, ill-kempt and side-whiskered, with an inflamed face and disreputable clothes.”
21003. John Alan Maxwell illustrated “The Speckled Band” in The Golden Book (Dec. 1930); some decidedly non-Sherlockian artwork inscribed to the mentalist Joseph Dunninger was at auction this month <www.tinyurl.com/2p8vt3wp>, estimated at $300-$600; it sold for $180.
21004. Further to the report of a “Sherlock Holmes Afternoon Tea” at the Holmes Hotel in Marylebone (October 21 #5), My London has published an enthusiastic review of the festivities <www.tinyurl.com/2p8wmvjf>.
21005. Doug Reside, curator of the Billy Rose Theatre Division at the New York Public Library, has blogged about “Sherlock Holmes on Stage”; the NYPL has some real treasures in its collection <www.tinyurl.com/2p9dkt4f>.
21006. Reported: “The Captain of the Pole-Star” included in The Valancourt Book of Victorian Christmas Ghost Stories, edited by Tara Moore (Richmond: Valancourt Books, 2016; 292 pp., $30.00).
21008. The Sherlock Holmes Club of Hungary offers a Sherlockian calendar for 2022 <www.sherlockian-sherlock.com/sherlock-holmes-calendar-2022.php>; the artwork’s by József Sváb, and it’s a free download.
21009. There was a time when Hollywood stars who declined to appear in television commercials in the U.S. were happy to do so on foreign television, knowing that American audience were unlikely to see them. That’s no longer true, thanks to the Internet, which also has made it possible to see some of the older commercials, such as the one that starred Kirk Douglas in Sherlockian costume, promoting Maxim Coffee in Japan in 1979. It’s readily available now, at <www.tinyurl.com/3vcdcxks>. Douglas made more (non-Sherlockian) commercials for Maxim, and Yuichi Hirayama has reported that you can see them at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vt5zBdYa6ss>.

21010. New generations of Sherlockians may not know that John Lennon (yes, that John Lennon) wrote a Sherlockian pastiche “The Singularge Experience of Miss Ann Duffield”; William Burton McCormick’s interesting essay about the pastiche was posted at the SleuthSayers blog on Nov. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/2p8jm94m>, kindly reported by Les Klinger.
21011. Former prosecutor Stephen Lee will deliver a webinar on “Sherlock Holmes and the Art of Evidence” on Jan. 12 at 12:00 pm CST for the Chicago Chapter of the Federal Bar Association; it’s free, and there’s a registration button at <www.fedbarchicago.org/event/sherlock-holmes-2022>. If there’s a conflict because of travel to the birthday festivities in New York, the webinar will be recorded and available on-line.
21013. “See Louis Wain’s Exuberant Cat Art at the Hospital Where He Spent His Later Years” is the headline on a story at the Smithsonian magazine web-site on Dec. 23. Wain was famous as “the man who drew cats,” one of which was his postcard rendition of a delightfully Sherlockian cat dressed as William Gillette dressed as Sherlock Holmes (September 21 #3). Benedict Cumberbatch stars as Wain in the new film “The Electrical Life of Louis Wain”, and the article includes a link to a virtual tour of the exhibition at the Bethlem Museum of the Mind.
21014. The Library of Congress Crime Classics series was launched in 2020, with the goal of reprinting “some of the finest American crime writing from the 1860s to the 1960s,” selected and annotated by Leslie S. Klinger, who was interviewed recently by Andrew F. Gulli for The Strand Magazine; you can read the interview at <www.tinyurl.com/3amh9kr7>.
21015. The “Sherlock Holmes and Lucy James” series (written by Anna Elliott and Charles Veley), includes short stories as well as novels, all available on Kindle, and four volumes of short stories now have been published as trade paperbacks <www.preview.mailerlite.com/i1u4r4/1848574774645626240/t6h4>.

21019. Les Klinger has reported an interesting article about a "cottage industry" with echoes in "The Creeping Man" in the fall 2021 issue of Hektoen International: A Journal of Medical Humanities; it's available at the journal's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/4sjms555>. Searches for [conan doyle] and [sherlock holmes] will yield more articles in past issues of the journal.
21020. The Internet has been full of colorful season's greetings from Sherlockians and Sherlockian societies, and one of the best is from the Société Sherlock Holmes de France <www.youtube.com/watch?v=LgUnNK2GY-o>.
21021. Vladimir Tatosov died on Dec. 24. He began acting on stage in St. Petersburg and went on to a long career in Russian film and television, and was Baron Von Herling in the Livanov/Solomin television series "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1987).
21022. Theatrics: "Sherlock Holmes and the Hooded Lance" (by Pat Whymark and Julian Harries) is touring in Britain through Jan. 13; more information will be found at <www.commongroundtc.co.uk>.
21024. Wayne R. Scott's "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" has been scheduled at the LifeHouse Theater in Redlands, Calif., on Jan. 15-30 <www.lifehousetheater.com>.
21025. Bart Lovin's "The Novel Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear" will be performed at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., Jan. 28-31 <www.thepac.net>.
21026. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Elgin Art Showcase in Elgin, Ill., Jan. 28-Feb. 12 <www.elgin-theatre.org>; also at the Stage-CenterTheatre in Bryan, Texas, Aug. 4-20 <www.stagecenter.net>.
21027. Brit Ward's "Sherlock Holmes and the Sinister Trio" will be performed at the Connie Gotsch Little Theater at San Juan College in Farmington, N.M., Feb. 18-27 <www.theater-ensemble-arts.square.site>.
21028. Brian Guehring's "Sherlock Holmes and the First Baker Street Irregular" is due at Kernersville Elementary School in Kernersville, N.C., Feb. 25-Mar. 5 <www.kltheatre.com>.
21029. I've long described this newsletter as "six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean." If you would like to run a word-search on a large file with all of the text since March 1985 (that's when I entered the computer age) can now do just that, thanks to Steve Mason, who updates his compilation each month and makes it available at the web-site of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star <www.tinyurl.com/ybxh2y2m>.

21030. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 168th birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 12 to 16; the (very) long weekend was filled with events, both formal and informal, and the events were well-attended despite the on-going pandemic, and the loss of the now-closed Roosevelt Hotel. Detailed reports on many if not most of the goings-on will be posted soon at the web-site of The Baker Street Irregulars <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com>. In the meantime, here are a few brief paragraphs to tide you over.
21031. Locals and early arrivals enjoyed the ASH Wednesday dinner, and on Thursday morning the ACD Society's Inaugural Doylean Awards Ceremony was held at the Mysterious Bookshop; their web-site <www.acdsociety.com> offers a link to video of the meeting.
21032. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker on Thursday evening was Prof. Mary Bendel-Simso, on "My dear Watson...the law is as dangerous to us as the criminals": Sherlock Holmes and the Official Police" (her paper will be published in the Baker Street Journal later this year).
21033. On Friday the Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where Julie McKuras proposed the traditional pre-prandial first toast to Jennifer Olson, as The Woman. The annual dinner's agenda included the usual toasts, rituals, and papers (Ray Betzner paid tribute to Vincent Starrett, and Ira Brad Matetsky celebrated Rex Stout). Russell Merritt received the annual Morley-Montgomery Award (a check and an attractive certificate) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal in 2021, and Mike Kean announced the BSI's Birthday Honours: Laurence Deloison ("Claridge's Hotel"), Jim Hawkins ("The Hans Sloane of My Age"), Heather Holloway ("Atlanta"), David Humphrey ("Chicago Central"), Tim Johnson ("Theophilus Johnson"), Mark Jones ("Peter Jones"), Tiffany Knight ("Knight's Place"), Crystal Noll ("Crystal Palace"), Rob Nunn ("Elementary"), Aaron Rubin ("The Amethyst Snuffbox"), Jonathan Tiemann ("The Bank of England"), Janice Weiner ("Scotland Yard"), Karen Wilson ("Bartholomew Wilson"), and Joanne Zahorsky-Reeves ("Toby"). And the BSI's prestigious Two-Shilling Award was bestowed on Marsha Pollak.

21037. More from the birthday festivities in New York: Gary Lovisi has uploaded a ten-minute video tour of Covent Garden West (aka the dealers room) to YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=FNYwSWe97vo>, and you are welcome to try to identify all those people behind all those masks.
21039. Referring to My Notes: Music and the Sherlockian Canon, edited by Alexander Katz and Karen Wilson (173 pp., $39.95), the next title in the BSI's Professions Series, explores what Nicholas Meyer, in his foreword, calls "the possibilities suggested by Doyle when he so blithely made Holmes a violinist and an opera devotee," and the scholarship extends to discussion of musicians who have been members of the BSI, and some of the Sherlockian musicals performed on stage. Both books (and many others) can be ordered at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/the-bsi-press>.
21040. The Sherlock Holmes Review: Anthology Volume Two 1988-1990 (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2020; 131 pp., $34.95) is a reprint of the second volume of Steven Doyle's periodical, called by one critic "the last great Sherlockian journal" (it was full of scholarship in an era when there were far fewer readers than there are today). And the Sherlock Holmes Review: 2021 Sherlockian Annual (118 pp., $24.95) is a welcome revival that is a fine demonstration of Steve's continuing ability to find authors who have interesting things to say about many aspects of Sherlockiana. Both can be ordered at <www.gasogenebooks.com>.
21041. More from Gasogene: The Finest Assorted Collection: Essays on Collecting Sherlock Holmes, edited by Peter Eckrich and Rob Nunn (232 pp., $26.95) an impressive gathering of essays written by people who pursue a wide variety of Sherlockiana and who have interesting things to say about it all. And Dan Andriacco's The Sword of Death (105 pp., $18.95), a nicely traditional pastiche that has Holmes and Watson investigating a case that involves a headless corpse and complicated family relationships; Dan's web-site is at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>.

21043. Disney honored the 35th anniversary of "The Great Mouse Detective" with an attractive ornament, kindly reported by Tim Kline, that shows Basil of Baker Street ready to head out on an investigation <www.tinyurl.com/bdef2sf>. $24.99 from the Disney Shop; part of the "Disney Sketchbook Ornament Legacy Collection", and it's a limited release (but they don't say just how limited the release is).
21045. Potter & Potter Auctions will have some interesting (and often rare) Sherlockiana and Doyleana in an auction of fine books and manuscripts on Feb. 26 <www.auctions.potterauctions.com/mobile/catalog.aspx?auctionid=1127>.
21046. Rick Boyer died on Jan. 19, 2021. He studied creative writing under Kurt Vonnegut Jr., became a writer himself, and taught English at Western Carolina University until he retired in 2008. His first novel (Billingsgate Shoal) won an Edgar Award in 1983, and he went on to write a pastiche The Giant Rat of Sumatra (1976) and four short pastiches collected as A Sherlockian Quartet (1999).
21048. Fred Taraba (at Taraba Illustration Art) specializes in original artwork by American artists, and is offering Roy V. Hunt's colorful rendition of Holmes, Watson, and a ghostly Hound of the Baskervilles for $2,650 (plus shipping). Hunt was a dedicated Sherlockian, one of the founders of the Council of Four in Denver, and the principal illustrator of the books and journals published by Luther Norris' Pontine Press. The artwork is from Luther's collection; contact Fred <fred@tarabaillustrationart.com> if you are interested.
21049. Vanessa Redgrave, who starred as Lola Deveraux in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976) has been awarded a DBE (Dame Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for services to drama in Her Majesty's New Year's Honours List for 2022. Anthony Horowitz, author of The House of Silk (2011) and Moriarty (2014), received a CBE (Commander) for services to literature.

21050. Nicely in time for the birthday festivities, the Yale Alumni Magazine celebrated Conan Doyle with an article by Betsy Golden Kellem about "The Man Who Believed Too Much" in its Jan.-Feb. issue, noting that in 1922 he lectured at Yale while touring the U.S. promoting Spiritualism <www.tinyurl.com/2p9cet24>. The article is accompanied by a fine portrait of Conan Doyle by Ricardo Martinez Ortega.
21051. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder ended 2021 at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcast with an excellent tribute to the late Mike Whelan by seven of his fellow Irregulars <www.ihose.com/ihose231>.
21052. Willy Werby died on Dec. 24. Well known to Sherlockians for her meticulous recreation of the sitting-room, first displayed at 1100 California Street, on the top of Nob Hill in San Francisco, and then on the top floor of the Holiday Inn on Union Square, Willy presided over what was for many years an attraction for the members of the Persian Slipper Club, visiting Sherlockians, and tourists.
21053. Ashley Polasek moderated an on-line session on "Arthur Conan Doyle's Afterlives" <www.tinyurl.com/mry3rkxf> at the annual meeting of the Modern Language Association on Jan. 9.
21054. The autumn issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) includes articles by Hartley R. Nathan and Charles L. Blanksteen (on "Arthur Conan Doyle: Stereotypes and Racism") and Elizabeth Savage ("In Search of Conan Doyle: Messages from the Afterlife"), and other reports from and about the Library and the Collection; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
21055. Mrs. Hudson is alive and well, hard at work as the "agony aunt" for the British magazine Country Life <www.tinyurl.com/ycknr7ev>. But she's not our Mrs. Hudson: the magazine was founded in 1897 by Edward Hudson.

21057. Reported: Sherlock Holmes: Das Kochbuch, by Silke Martin (Münster: Hölker Verlag, 2021; 128 pp., €24.00); in German, but reviewed in English in the Soledad Times on Dec. 30 <www.tinyurl.com/yckszww3>.
21058. Fans of the 2019 "Detective Pikachu" film will enjoy a new fan-film animation "Detective Pikachu: A Christmas Case" that was uploaded to YouTube on Dec. 25 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=krTu8-CI2DY>. The quality is thoroughly professional.
21059. Let me recommend this television series: "One Strange Rock" from National Geographic in 2018. It's now playing on Disney+ and available on DVD, and there's a trailer at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=XrC4vDcWmxk>. It's not Sherlockian, but it's a splendid explanation of the history of Earth, told by Will Smith, astronauts, and many others.

21060. Betty White died on Dec. 31. She appeared on an experimental television broadcast in 1939 and went on to stardom in a wide range of series that included comedies, soap operas, and game shows. She made a public-service commercial broadcast in 1989 in which she encouraged viewers to read more, suggesting the Canon as a possibility ("solve a mystery with Sherlock Holmes"), and mentioned that as a young girl her favorite books were "Alice in Wonderland" and "Sherlock Holmes".
21061. Heritage Auctions has an interesting article on-line about "The Wonderful World of Disney Maquettes" <www.tinyurl.com/4zjm86cv>, and the Great Mouse Detective will be at auction on Feb. 4-7 <www.tinyurl.com/3hjeprc6>. For those who don't remember the 1986 film, that's Basil of Baker Street.
21062. There will be a performance of "Time Travel Tinies: Mystical Creatures" by story teller Dani at the National Archives in Kew (in Britain) on Feb. 25 <www.tinyurl.com/5n6dw4pe>; their web-site has an attractive Sherlockian mouse created by Cog Design (the mouse may or may not be one of the mystical creatures).
21063. The August Derleth Society <www.augustderleth.org> was founded in the late 1970s and continues to celebrate the many-faceted literary career of the creator of Solar Pons. Membership costs $25.00 a year and includes their quarterly newsletter Sage of Sac Prairie; the latest issue offers a nicely illustrated article by Derrick Belanger on "Resurrecting Solar Pons" (with details on how the Pontine Canon was brought back into print, accompanied by a series of new pastiches by modern authors). The society's postal address is Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583.
21064. Adrian Conan Doyle was an author and an artist, as well as a fierce advocate of his father's place in literary history. Seven of Adrian's paintings will be offered at Roseberys London in an auction on Feb. 15-16, and you can see them at <www.tinyurl.com/uef99d6a>.
21065. "Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective" (a game issued by Sleuth Publications in 1981) now has an entry at Wikipedia; revised and expanded since 1981, the game now is available as four sets of ten cases each from SPACE Cowboys <www.tinyurl.com/2nyk8chw>. Their web-site offers much more information as well as a video and a free opportunity to pursue one of the cases; anyone who remembers the original game will be amazed at how far it has come over the years, how well it uses modern technology, and how long the game has lasted.
21066. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new Japanese film) is scheduled for release on June 17; it's a sequel of sorts to the television series "Sherlock: Untold Stories" broadcast by Fuji TV in 2019, with Dean Fujioka as Shishio Homare, a freelance crime consultant. You can see the poster and watch a trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/2c4hexs6>.
21067. Miss Moriarty, I Presume?, by Sherry Thomas (New York: Berkley, 2021; 353 pp., $16.00), is the sixth book in her "Lady Sherlock" series that stars Charlotte Holmes, who does her detecting while pretending to be the sister of the non-existent Sherlock Holmes, and encounters both mystery and romance while (now) in dire peril in a battle with Moriarty. The author's web-site is at <www.sherrythomas.com>.

21069. Philip Ball's The Modern Myths: Adventures in the Machinery of the Modern Imagination (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2021; 426 pp., $30.00) explores stories that have become myths because retellings of the stories have become necessary, from Robinson Crusoe to Batman, and (of course) including Sherlock Holmes. He suggests that Holmes is not quite what Conan Doyle intended, but rather is a "wish-fulfillment fantasy" that gives him mythic potency, and that the Sherlock Holmes myth "exists not because of but in spite of the advocacy of Sherlockians."
21070. The Beacon Society continues to administer the Fortescue Scholarship Honours Program, and more than 120 people have completed all three exams and have received their Doctorate in Sherlockiana. There also are annual Re-Certification exams for those who want to continue on, and there is more information about the Program at <www.tinyurl.com/5exr3zh2>.
21071. "Books, Bohemians, and Baker Street: A Study in Sherlock in Special Collections" is the title of a splendid on-line exhibition at the University of Delaware Library; many of the exhibits are from the collection of Mark Samuels Lasner. There are unique items such as a four-page typescript and an autograph manuscript page from the lecture Conan Doyle gave during his tour of the U.S. in 1894 (easily readable at the web-site), and the exhibition is well worth exploring <www.tinyurl.com/37rfz9m4>.
21073. "Extant Exhibits: The Remains of 1951" is an excellent article by Nicholas Utechin, published in the Platinum Jubilee Supplement (winter 2021) of the Sherlock Holmes Journal, and available to everyone at the web-site of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London <www.tinyurl.com/32xywvwr>; it's a well-illustrated account of his research into what has survived from the exhibition at Abbey House that led to the creation of the Society.
21074. It's a wrap! Filming on the next "Enola Holmes" film has been completed, and there's brief footage from the celebration <www.tinyurl.com/52cpp2t8>. No word yet on when the film will stream on Netflix.
21075. There seems to be no end to the list of buildings thought to be historic because of Conan Doyle: the attractive Torquay Pavilion, threatened by redevelopment plans has its supporters, because Conan Doyle once lectured there, according to Devon Live (Nov. 18)

<www.tinyurl.com/2p95nks4>. It's also considered to be important because Agatha Christie accepted a proposal of marriage after a concert there in 1903.

21076. The Sunday Times noted that "Britain's villages in all their diversity, prettiness and grittiness have survived and thrived over hundreds of years" in an article on "The 50 Best Villages in the UK" (Sept. 12), adding that all of them have "attractive houses, good connections, a decent school, and friendly neighbours who come together at the pub, shop and village hall." One of the villages is Minstead, where Sir Arthur and his wife Jean are buried; there are 600 or so residents and the average house price is £752,353.
21077. For those who enjoyed Ken Ludwig's delightful "The Game's Afoot; or Holmes for the Holidays" and would like to read the script, it was published by Samuel French in 2012 and is readily available at Amazon. It's grand to see what an accomplished playwright did with William Gillette and his fellow actors at Gillette Castle in 1936.
21078. Lyndsay Faye discussed the "10 Most Underrated Sherlock Holmes Stories" at the Publishers Weekly web-site on Jan. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/2p8k44pk>, explaining why she likes them.
21079. The U.S. Mint's new "American Women Quarters Program" celebrates "the accomplishments and contributions made by women to the development and history of our country," and the five quarters to be issued the year will include one honoring Anna May Wong, the first Chinese-American film star in Hollywood <www.tinyurl.com/34evmznd>. She played Mrs. Pyke in Reginald Owen's "A Study in Scarlet" (1933), and she also was in the title of "Herlock Sholmes in Be-a-Live Crook, or Anna Went Wrong" (1930), the British marionette burlesque of Clive Brook's film "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929).
21080. John Murray's new imprint Baskerville (June 21 #4) has now launched, with an appropriate logo <www.tinyurl.com/338rfydz>. The name of the imprint honors John Murray's long history as Conan Doyle's publisher; there's more about Baskerville and some of its new titles in an article in the Bookseller (Jan. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/2p9xtzwf>.
21081. "Briony Lodge, Serpentine Avenue, St. John's Wood" is an address that resonates with admirers of Irene Adler. If you'd like to know more about the neighborhood, and its history (including it having been an "ideal place to keep a mistress"), there was an interesting article in Country Life (Jan. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/yhjud7ss>.
21082. The Mystery Writers of America will honor Laurie R. King as a Grand Master at their awards ceremony in New York on Apr. 26; the award is regarded as the "pinnacle of achievement in mystery writing," and recognizes a body of work that is "both significant and of consistent high quality." The Mary Russell stories are only part of her long list of credits, and she is the fourth member of the Baker Street Irregulars to be named Grand Master (the others are Vincent Starrett, Rex Stout, and Fred Dannay).
21083. The New Yorker has its own YouTube channel, and one the videos is "Drawing Life with George Booth" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=AYlRXgnapj8>; Booth sold his first cartoon to the magazine in 1969, and is still at work for them. It's a warm tribute to a great cartoonist, kindly reported by Bob Coghill, who calls your attention to the bookshelf in the office of David Remnick, editor of the magazine (at 1:21 in the 23-minute video).

21097. The Barts and The London Student Association (BLSA) have launched a petition campaign against the decision by the Queen Mary University of London to change the name of Barts and The London School of Medicine and Dentistry to QMUL Faculty of Medicine and Dentistry, noting that "St. Bartholomew's Hospital was founded in 1123, making it the oldest remaining hospital in the country. St. Bartholomew's Medical College was of course the school of Dr. John Watson." If you'd like to read and sign the petition there's a web-site at <www.bartslondon.com/wearebl>. The Telegraph had a story about the campaign on Jan. 31 <www.tinyurl.com/md695y3j>.

21099. "Fresh Air" (produced by WHYY-FM in Philadelphia) is one of the best pro-grams on National Public Radio, and Karen Murdock reports that on Jan. 19 Terry Gross interviewed Benedict Cumberbatch about his new film "The Power of the Dog" <www.tinyurl.com/4xu5e6xc>; there's nothing Sherlockian about the interview, but it's well done indeed.
21100. The web-site of the Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth is well worth exploring; go to <www.tinyurl.com/2n9urv2n> to view a photograph (from the 1890s) of "Conan Doyle the cricketer" accompanied by his wife Louisa, his sister Connie, and husband E. W. Hornung.
21102. Stephen Chahn Lee's Sherlock Holmes and the Silent Contest (2022) is a 97-page monograph that offers his conclusions about "how Sherlock Holmes defeated Professor Moriarty and why Dr. John Watson lied." The approach to the Canon is interesting, and the book is available free from the author <stephenchahnlee@gmail.com>. You can also watch his lecture on "Sherlock Holmes and the Art of Evidence" at the Chicago Chapter of the Federal Bar Association at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=QQ6V0leExss>.
21103. Sonia Fetherston, who's gathering reminiscences about Thomas L. Stix (Wiggins of the Baker Street Irregulars), would appreciate hearing from anyone who would like to share first-person stories about Tom for a new book that will be published by the BSI Press <soniafetherston@comcast.net>.
21104. The Baker Street Irregulars are the oldest of the three American 20th-century literary societies with entries at Wikipedia, and the BSI entry is at <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Baker_Street_Irregulars>. It includes a list of 76 Irregulars who have their own entries at Wikipedia, and there likely are more who aren't yet on the list. In case you're wondering, the other two societies are the Norman Mailer Society and the Wolfe Pack.

21107. The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, adapted by Valerie Tripp, with illustrations by Carlo Molinari (New York: Starry Forest Books, 2020; 64 pp., $7.99) is one of the titles in the "classic adventures" series of chapter books for young readers (ages 7-10); with three stories ("The Red-Headed League", "The Speckled Band", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). The colorful and attractive illustrations by Carlo Molinari, can be sampled at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/2p94w4k9>.
21108. Barry Cryer died on Jan. 25. He was a writer, comedian, radio quiz panelist, and actor, performing on British radio and television for more than 60 years. He wrote Mrs. Hudson's Diaries: A View from the Landing at 221B (2012) and "Mrs. Hudson's Radio Show" for BBC Radio 4 (2018), and with his son Bob a play "Mrs. Hudson's Christmas Caper" (2014).
21109. Who was the first Sherlockian scholar? According to research by members of the Sherlockian Chronologist Guild, a new candidate is Helen Elizabeth Wilson, whose article "The Life of Sherlock Holmes" was published in the Oct. 1898 issue of the Cornell Magazine, as reported in the Dec. 2021 and Jan. 2022 issues of Timeline (the Guild's official newsletter), which are available by e-mail from Brad Keefauver <bkeefauver@gmail.com>. Vincent Wright has a detailed discussion of the discovery at his "Historical Sherlock" blog <www.tinyurl.com/yxnuejmg>. He also has posted a video at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=bks-LguCG7Q>, and was interviewed about his discovery by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/32dwhepm>.
21110. Kim Newman, author of Anno Dracula and The Hound of the D'Urbervilles, was the Baker Street Irregulars' distinguished speaker in 2013, and Jennie Paton has reported a YouTube video <www.youtube.com/watch?v=08E5fulS6Qc> in which he explains his enthusiasm for the film "Murder by Decree" (1979).

21154. There's a new Sherlock, noted by Andrew Jay Peck: "Merlin IS is powered by Sherlock, the world's first AI-driven digital document bloodhound and the backbone of Merlin's Search 2.0 platform," according to the press release <www.tinyurl.com/4xmpfrse>.
21155. Planning continues for "Jubilee@221B" (the conference celebrating the 50th anniversaries of the opening of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library, and the founding of the Bootmakers of Toronto) to be held at the Library on Sept. 23-25. To enroll on the mailing list, you can send an e-mail request to <jubilee_registration@acdfriends.org>.
21156. Don Hobbs continues to expand his "Galactic Sherlock Holmes" data-base of foreign translations of the Canon (which now has about 14,000 entries in 112 different languages, and many full-color illustrations), and would be glad to hear from anyone who has found something not already in the data-base; the latest version is available on request and without charge as a large WeTransfer file <221b@verizon.net>.

21158. The Three Winter Terrors (New York: Titan, 2021; 407 pp., $19.99) is James Lovegrove's latest pastiche; Holmes and Watson investigate three grotesque murders, in 1899, 1890, and 1894, all of them involving the same family, and all with a touch of the macabre. Lovegrove has information about all of his Sherlockian pastiches at his web-site <www.jameslovegrove.com>.
21159. Theater news: John Nicholson and Steven Canny's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being produced at Steeltown Coffee & Tea in Pittsburg, Calif., through Mar. 6 <www.pittsburgcommunitytheatre.org>. It's also due at the Ilkley Playhouse in Ilkley, W. Yorks., on Mar. 3-12; their web-site is at <www.ilkleyplayhouse.co.uk>.
21160. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Port Angeles Community Theatre in Port Angeles, Wash., through Mar. 14 <pacommunityplayers.org>; and at the Åbo Svenska Teater in Turku, Finland, through Apr. 23; their web-site is at <abosvenskateater.fi>. It's also due at the Little Theatre of Fall River in Fall River, Mass., Mar. 17-27 <www.littletheatre.net>, and it will be produced at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., Apr. 1-May 14 <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
21161. Jules Tasca's "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" (with three one-act plays) is being performed at Theatre Suburbia in Houston, Texas, through Mar. 26 <www.web.theatresuburbia.org>.
21162. Daniel Foley's "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" is running at Upstairs at the Gatehouse in London, Mar. 1-6 <www.upstairsatthegatehouse.com>.
21163. The Théâtre Sans Frontières will tour "Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band" in Britain, beginning at the Queen's Hall Arts Centre in Hexham, Northum., on Mar. 8 <www.tsf.org.uk>.

21164. Eric Cople's "Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars" will be produced at Silverdale Baptist Academy in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Mar. 10-11 <www.silverdaleba.org>.
21165. The Northern Opera Group has announced it will begin work in April in the U.K. on Lliam Paterson's opera based on "The Sign of Four"; there's more information at <www.northernoperagroup.co.uk/sherlockholmes>.
21166. Tim Kelly's adaptation of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" has been scheduled by the 3rd Act Theatre Company in Oklahoma City, Okla., Apr. 8-23 <www.3rdacttheatreco.com>.

March 22 #1

21167. The Baker Street Irregulars will celebrate Sherlock Holmes's 168th birthday at their annual dinner in New York on Jan. 6, 2023, which of course is his actual birthday. Planning is under way for the Distinguished Speaker Lecture on Jan. 5, and the Reception on Jan. 7. If you're not already receiving news and updates from the BSI, you can enroll on their e-mail list at <www.tinyurl.com/2p8n2ptm>.
21168. There was active (and serious) bidding at Potter & Potter Auctions on Feb. 26 for some interesting (and often rare) Sherlockiana and Doyleana. You can see the catalog at <www.tinyurl.com/y3ffy3jf> and the results of the auction at <www.tinyurl.com/yc2kw4d6>.
21169. Simon Guerrier's The Great War (New York: Titan, 2021; 293 pp., $14.95) is the latest title in Titan's long-running series of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes". Set in 1917 at a British field hospital, it features Augusta Watson, a VAD (Volunteer Aid Detachment) who assists nurses in the hospital and is assigned to help Sherlock Holmes an investigation of what turns out to be a complicated conspiracy; the book is more of a thriller than a mystery, but nevertheless nicely done.
21170. Lyndsay Faye wrote about "Pastiche, Fan Fiction, and the Sincerest Form of Flattery" at the CrimeReads blog on Feb. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/mryxsbdj> and lamented that when her first book Dust and Shadow was published she wasn't able "to hire a plane with an advertising banner reading DID YOU KNOW THE SHERLOCK HOLMES ADVENTURES ARE THE AWESOMEST THINGS TO HAPPEN SINCE SUPERNOVAS?"
21171. "Sherlock the Musical" (written by Stefan van de Graaff and Denning Burton), performed in Canada in 2017, has been filmed from a new production, with a studio cast recording uploaded to YouTube on Mar. 25; their channel's at <www.youtube.com/channel/UCGlo7-cOuNr_mn6CTc6R1Bg>, and a full filmed production will be uploaded on Apr. 26.
21172. Karen Ellery, who presides over the Tea Brokers of Mincing Lane, would appreciate hearing about any published articles, essays, and pastiches that focus on Sherlock Holmes and tea <teabrokersmincinglane@gmail.com>.
21173. Edwin Van der Flaes ("Victor Trevor") died in February. Born in Belgium, he emigrated to Canada in his teens and was an early member of the Bootmakers of Toronto, serving twice as the society's Meyers (president); Ed also was involved for many years as a leader in Scouts Canada, and enjoyed traveling, by car whenever possible, to meetings of other Sherlockians societies. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
21174. The campaign continues against the decision by the Queen Mary University of London to rename Barts and The London School of Medicine and Dentistry as the QMUL Faculty of Medicine and Dentistry (February 22 #1), and the "We Are BL" students have posted an update <www.tinyurl.com/2p88bhkf>; some of the newspaper articles can be read at <www.bartslondon.com/weareblresponses>.

21175. William Brittain was a prolific author of short stories that appeared in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine and Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine, and it's grand to see many of them back in print, thanks to Crippen & Landru, in The Man Who Read Mysteries (2018; 212 pp., $29.00 cloth or $19.00 paper) and The Man Who Solved Mysteries (2022; 316 pp., $32.00/$22.00); Sherlockians will especially enjoy "The Man Who Read Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" and "Mr. Strang, Armchair Detective" (in the first volume). Crippen & Landru (Jeffrey Marks and Douglas G. Greene) continue to bring "lost classic" mystery short stories back into print, and their web-site <www.crippenlandru.com> has much to offer.
21176. Fans of the BBC's "Sherlock" television series will recall Watson meeting Irene Adler in a scene filmed in the derelict (and atmospheric) Battersea Power Station, which no longer is as derelict as it was then; you can read about its history, and see what it's like now, in an article at the Country Life web-site on Mar. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/ymsdzyzn>.
21177. Yuichi Hirayama has noted an interesting use of the Canon: helping Japanese learn English grammar using "The Blue Carbuncle"; details available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vaEVyu_H5Mo&t=8s>.
21178. Benedict Cumberbatch was honored by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce on Feb. 28 as the 2,714th star on the Walk of Fame (February 22 #7), with only a brief mention of "Sherlock" during the ceremony. You can watch the festivities at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=lfkjN4_4NiE>.
21179. Those who attended the Arthur Conan Doyle Society's inaugural Doylean Honors awards ceremony at the Mysterious Bookshop during the birthday festivities in January received an attractive and amusing limited-edition Sherlock Holmes bobblehead statuette; Ross Davies has annotated the bobblehead (and there is much to explain) at <www.tinyurl.com/22e4eda3>.
21180. Tania Henzell (who is the step-great-great-granddaughter of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) has a new video in which she explains the design of her Sherlock Holmes tartan <www.youtube.com/watch?v=-1gLIcc6A>; her web-site is at <www.sherlockholmestartan.com>.
21181. Potter & Potter Auctions continues to offer interesting (and rare) Sherlockian and Doylean books, as well some Derleth titles, at a sale upcoming on Apr. 26 <www.auctions.potterauctions.com/Catalog.aspx?auctionid=1131>.
21182. The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State has announced that its annual Christopher Morley Birthday Lunch will be held in Philadelphia this year, on Mar. 7. Linda and Terry Hunt <hobokenfreestate@gmail.com> will be happy to provide more information.
21183. Craig Rice's Eight Faces at Three (1939) has been reprinted in Otto Penzler's "American Mystery Classics" series <www.tinyurl.com/md78fnkv>; the book's not Sherlockian, but Lisa Lutz's introduction ("Rediscovering the Gin-Soaked Screwball Mysteries of Craig Rice") is available at the Crime Reads web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2xua2zae> and offers a grand description of the author and the book.

March 22 #3

21184. John Keston died on Feb. 18. Born in London, he started his stage career as a singer, moved on to acting, and played Sir Edward Leighton when the Royal Shakespeare Company brought its revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" to the U.S. in 1974. His obituary in the Telegraph (Mar. 7) noted that he decided to stay in the U.S., teaching both voice and classical singing, and continued to perform on stage, eventually becoming an ardent and record-breaking runner.
21185. The Grolier Club's channel at Vimeo <www.tinyurl.com/bde62x42> offers recorded recordings about the exhibitions, including "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Glen S. Miranker" exhibition. There's another lecture by Glen at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Eb96PIH8rHg>.
21186. There has been considerable publicity about the discovery of the Endurance (10,000 feet below the surface of the Weddell Sea in the Antarctic); this was the ship that Sir Ernest Shackleton used in his attempt to reach the South Pole in 1915. As reported earlier (April 16 #1), a photograph of - his cabin showed the books he took with him on the expedition, and one of them was E. W. Hornung's RAFFLES, which Hornung dedicated to his brother-in-law Conan Doyle. You can see the photograph, and a list of all the books, at <www.bbc.com/news/magazine-35633374>. The site was declared a historical monument in the 1959 Antarctic Treaty, so the book (or what's left of it) will remain there undisturbed.

21187. The N.Y. Post noted (Mar. 11) a Wikipedia-style (crowd-sourced) web-site called Book Trigger Warnings <www.booktriggerwarnings.com> at which people can enter warnings about books with content that might be dangerously offensive. More than 6,000 books have been flagged, including some of the Sherlock Holmes stories <www.tinyurl.com/2p9c39hr>. A Study in Scarlet is the most dangerous, with warnings for: blood, drug addiction, forced marriage, homophobia, kidnapping, murder, persecution (Mormons), poison, rac-ism, and stalking.
21188. "A Celebration of Sherlock Holmes" is the theme of this year's DePaul Pop Culture Conference <www.tinyurl.com/5n6ntm73> at DePaul University in Chicago on May 7, featuring Arwel Wyn Jones (production designer for "Sherlock") Tom Ue (editor of Fan Phenomena: Sherlock Holmes), and Ashley Pola-sek (author of Being Sherlock).
21189. Gary Lovisi's A Sherlock Holmes Notebook (Eureka: Stark House, 2022; 198 pp., $15.95) offers a wide-ranging collection of reprints of his many articles and essays about Sherlockiana (and Doyleana); there's a warm tribute to John Bennett Shaw, discussions of plays and films, and much more. Gary has been collecting, and writing about collecting, for decades, and his YouTube channel <www.tinyurl.com/2p84d4du> shows just how varied his interests are.
21190. Ron Fish continues to publicize meetings of Sherlockian societies via his Sherlockian Calendar, including gatherings held via Zoom or other technology; it's a great way to find out what's happening, where and when. You can see his format at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>, and send information about upcoming meetings to him at <ronf404@aol.com>.

21191. The Times reported (Mar. 14) that the government of Kazakhstan has arrested Kairat Satybaldy, nephew of the country's former president Nursultan Nazarbayev, who ruled the country for three decades; Satybaldy has been charged with abuse of power and embezzlement of funds. Nazarbayev's daughter Dariga Nazarbayeva, and her son Nurali Aliyev, were named two years ago (March 20 #3) as owners of Park View Residence at 215-229 Baker Street <www.parkviewresidence.co.uk>, the building that retains the façade of Abbey House, where Abbey National for many years provided a secretary to answer mail addressed to Sherlock Holmes at 221B.
21193. His clients—Colonel Ross, whose racehorse flees,
Or Violet Hunter, seen at Baker Street,
Who crops her locks of hair—would all agree,
This haughty, hawkeyed Brit's a bit offbeat.
21194. Observed by Karen Murdock in The New Yorker (Dec. 27, 2021) in a puzzle "In the Doggerel House" by Andy Kravis and Liz Maynes Aminzade, who ask, "Can you identify the literary work or series that each poem is about, and find the character whose name is hidden within?" You'll have no trouble identifying the literary work or series, but can you find the character?
21195. The Original Theatre Company/Octagon Theatre Bolton touring production of John Nicholson and Steven Canny's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" has been recorded and will be streamed on-line from Apr. 14 to July 31; early-bird tickets are available at <www.tinyurl.com/44e6wruj>.
21196. Irish historian Turtle Bunbury has a new podcast "Turtle Bunbury's Global Irish" that recounts the stories of people who left Ireland to make their mark around the world; Lola Montez (thought by some to have been the inspiration for Irene Adler) will be featured on Apr. 11, and Arthur Conan Doyle on Apr. 18 <www.tinyurl.com/2p9ff7t9>.
21197. The Baz <www.tinyurl.com/3cwb4rh2> is a Basil Rathbone blog, noted by Jennie Paton, where you will find Marcia Jessen's interesting discussion of the German versions of the Universal Films (which of course were not released in Germany during WW2).
21198. Baker Street West, in Jackson, Calif., continues to offer podcasts, dramatic readings, and much more <www.bakerstreetwest.com>; it's one floor up from the Hein & Co., used-book store, and they recently received some nice (and colorfully illustrated) publicity, with mention of their recreation of the sitting-room, at the Time Out web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ynvens2>.
21199. The Festival de cine Fantástico de Canarias [Canary Islands Fantastic Film Festival] presented an honorary award in 2021 to Nicholas Rowe (who played Sherlock Holmes in two films); Jennie Paton notes video of the award presentation and the interview with Rowe <www.vimeo.com/688824999>.

March 22 #5

21200. Sherlock Holmes continues to be popular in Japanese manga and anime, and one of the weirdest incarnations surely is Oshiri Tantei [The Butt Detective]; the latest film features the master criminal Shiriarty <www.tinyurl.com/3xbdwmrb>. You can also watch the trailer for an earlier film <www.youtube.com/watch?v=047VMJIBZxQ>, kindly reported by Jennie Paton (you can set the subtitles for English).
21201. Did you find the character in that little poem on the previous page? He's in "crops her locks".
21202. Gary Lovisi's Sherlock Holmes in Oz (Cabin John: Wildside Press, 2022; 141 pp., $12.99) brings Holmes and Watson to Oz, pursuing the Red Poppy Menace and endeavoring to rescue Dorothy Gale (the great-niece of Watson's wife); they encounter L. Frank Baum, and many of the characters he created.
21203. How they got their start: Rob Lowe, an American actor, director, producer, and podcaster, made his acting debut at the age of 15, according to Wikipedia, but he first appeared on stage at the age of 12, as Billy in Thomas Hinton's "Sherlock Holmes: A New Adventure" at Wright State University in Fairborn, Ohio. You can read all about it in the Dayton Daily News, Mar. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/2s3e7ne4>.
21204. Yes, Nicholas Rowe did play Sherlock Holmes in two films, in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985) and thirty years later in "Mr. Holmes" (2015) in the black-and-white film Ian McKellen sees in a theater.
21205. The Legion of Zoom, a Sherlockian society that was founded late last year to reflect the Age of the Pandemic <www.tinyurl.com/2p8zv245>, continues to attract members; Edith Pouden, Rick Krisciunas, and Steve Mason (some of the ringleaders) were interviewed recently by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder on "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/3tye8fhz>. Don't confuse the society with the other one <www.tinyurl.com/9dvvb94zc>. Or the one in Kansas City <www.tinyurl.com/2btbkcdw>.

21206. For those who (mistakenly) believe that the Blue Carbuncle was a blue diamond: the De Beers Cullinan Blue (15.10 carats, step-cut) will be offered at auction at Sotheby's in Hong Kong on April 27; read about it, and watch a video, at <www.tinyurl.com/3aruc6m5>. Town & Country had an interesting article about blue diamonds (Feb. 16) <www.tinyurl.com/2p83d3nn>.
21207. The "Sherlock Holmes" electric locomotive, which ran on the Metropolitan Line in London for many years and was restored to service four years ago (June 18 #2), will be running on the North Norfolk Railway this summer, according to Rail Advent (Mar. 16) <www.tinyurl.com/38buudr2>; the story includes an amusing image showing how the locomotive arrived in Norfolk.
21208. Paulette Greene died on Dec. 6. She was a mail-order used-book dealer in Rockville Center, N.Y., in the 1980s, and her catalogs were helpful indeed to Sherlockian collectors; she also published Sherlockian books by Trevor H. Hall and Madeleine B. Stern, and interesting Sherlockian artwork by her son Sam. At the end of the 1980s she announced that she was retiring, and moved to Boca Raton, Fla., but continued to be active as a dealer.

21209. The 39th issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 73 pages of articles, quizzes, recipes, pastiches, and reports on the society and its members. It costs $14.00 postpaid ($25.00 outside the U.S.); checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles can be sent to Terri Haugen, 6710 51st Street Court West, University Place, WA 98467.
21210. Rob Nunn has issued a call for contributions to his upcoming The Monstrum Opus of Sherlock Holmes: A Compendium of Horrors Dr. Watson Dared Not Tell (not pastiches, but rather "scholarship that plants its tongue firmly in check"); the deadline is July 31, and there's more information at his Interesting Though Elementary blog <www.tinyurl.com/3h9v7v6r>.
21211. The Sherlockian Chronologist Convention for this year has been canceled, Ira Matetsky has announced, because "They couldn't agree on the date."
21212. One page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be up for bids at Heritage Auctions on June 4 <www.tinyurl.com/2hw5dts6>. It's page H37 in Randall Stock's census, and there's more information about it at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/5n7bahk8>.
21213. Nicholas Meyer will be the keynote speaker at "Jubilee@221B" (the conference that will celebrate the 50th anniversaries of the opening of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library and the founding of the Bootmakers of Toronto) to be held at the Toronto Reference Library on Sept. 23-25. To enroll on the mailing list, send an e-mail request to <jubilee_registration@acdfriends.org>.
21214. Priscilla Ridgway died on Feb. 23. She was executive director of the Mystery Writers of America for many years, went on to work at the New England Society of N.Y.; she enjoyed theater, opera, and concerts in New York, and a good friend of many in the Sherlockian world.
21215. Paddington Station, which opened only a few days after Sherlock Holmes was born, is mentioned in five of the Canonical stories, and Country Life had a nice article on-line (Mar. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/2tzedhj> about the history of this London landmark.
21216. Fans of the 1940s Universal films about Sherlock Holmes will remember Rondo Hatton, who played the Hoxton Creeper in "The Pearl of Death" (1944). The Rondo Hatton Classic Horror Awards, which were launched in 2002 at a fan-based web-site and recently reported by Ann Marlowe, can be explored at <www.rondoaward.com>.
21217. Broadway World reported on Feb. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/yk2p9fvt> that the American Lyric Theater has launched an Aria Access Project, "a free hub of downloadable contemporary aria sheet music" intended for singers who are asked to audition at 21st-century aria. One of the operas is "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Fallen Giant" (by Evan Meier and E. M. Lewis), first performed at the National Opera Center in New York in 2015. Three soprano arias from the opera are available (with sheet music and lyrics) for download at <www.altnyc.org/aap-soprano>.

21218. The imaginative life-size bronze sculpture by Irena Sedlecká that shows Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the spirit of Sherlock Holmes <www.tinyurl.com/y2sevea2>, on display in the Garden of Heroes and Villains created by the late Felix Dennis in Dorsington, Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warwickshire, is not easy to see, but the Garden will be open to the public during an evening fund-raiser (with food and drink available) on July 21 <www.tinyurl.com/2fpcahze>.
21219. Don Hobbs has reported an interesting discovery in Yr Herald Cymraeg [The Welsh Herald] <www.newspapers.library.wales/view/3781337/19>: a Sherlockian advertisement for Mackintosh's Toffee, published in 1910 (the toffee still is available in British shops).
21220. Rob Nunn's The Common-Place Book 2021 (33 pp., $5.99) offers 13 of the essays, stories, and toasts he has written since he attended his first society meeting in 2015, among them "A Study in Steadfast" (with an intriguing look at "A Study in Scarlet" by one of its minor characters).
21221. Life's 96-page special issue offering "the story behind the world's great-est detective" (with Basil Rathbone on the cover), which first appeared in 2016, has been reissued (with very minor differences that will be of interest only to the completist) and is back on newsstands, and available at Amazon and elsewhere.
21222. Game-playing Sherlockians may not be aware that Frogwares, the developer of many computer games (their latest is Sherlock Holmes: Chapter One) is headquartered in Ukraine. The company's CEO Wael Amr is featured in a recent interview spotted at the IGN web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2p8emjn7> by Jennie Paton.
21223. Original (non-Sherlockian) artwork by Sidney Paget is coming to auction in the U.K. on Apr. 6, estimated at £50-£80 <www.tinyurl.com/4ppuyxsc>; it's a watercolor of "a landscape with sailing boats on a lake with mountains beyond and a figure on a path."
21225. Le fantôme de l'oiseau lune (Paris: Editions l'Âge d'Or, 2013) is a graphic novel written by Yves Varende and illustrated by René Follet, with cover art that's striking indeed <www.tinyurl.com/2p83ev5h>.
21226. CGI (Computer Generated Imagery) has been used for quite a while now, but it's nice to know that the first CGI character in a film was the dancing knight from a stained-glass window in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985); the GeekTyrant web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2p8txfk> recently made available a fan-created video showing how much improved the technology is now, and the video includes (at 18:45) an homage to the 1985 film.

March 22 #8

21227. Theater news: John Nicholson and Steven Canny's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed at the Little Theatre in Hertford, Herts., through Apr. 2 <www.cops.org.uk>.
21228. Susan Lumenello's "The Sherlock Problem" is on at the Cape Cod Theatre in West Harwich, Mass., through Apr. 3 <www.capecodtheatrecompany.org>; it's a new comedy featuring Conan Doyle, Holmes, and Watson.
21229. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Runway Theatre in Grapevine, Texas, through Apr. 10 <www.runwaytheatre.com>. It's coming up at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., Apr. 1-May 14 <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.

21230. Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical "Cats" (with Macavity: The Mystery Cat) is on tour in the U.S. through June 26 <www.ustour.catsthemusical.com>.
21231. Richard Lloyd's "Sherlock Holmes and the Sons of Anubis" will be performed at the Coulsdon Community Centre in Coulsdon, Surrey, Apr. 2-9; web-site at <www.twcoulsdon.org.uk>.
21232. Liam Paterson's new opera "The Sign of Four" will have a special preview performance (scenes from the opera and a discussion with the audience) at the East Riding Theatre in Beverley, Yorks., on Apr. 9; their web-site at <www.northernoperagroup.co.uk>.
21233. Jeff Ames' "The Hit-or-Miss Adventures of Watson and Holmes" will be performed at the Wallenstein Theater at Big Bend Community College in Moses Lake, Wash., Apr. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/mrx6jpzr>.
21234. Jonathan Goodwin will perform his new "Sherlock Holmes: The Poet and His Muse" on-line on Apr. 30 <www.tinyurl.com/htmaapd5>.
21235. Craig Wichman's "The Blue Carbuncle" will be performed by the East Lynne Theater Company in Cape May, N.J., May 14-15 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
21236. Bert Coules' "Watson: The Final Problem" will be performed during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe at the Assembly Rooms in Edinburgh, on Aug. 3-10 <www.assemblyfestival.com/whats-on/all-shows/watson-the-final-problem>.
21237. Michael Mitnick's "Mysterious Circumstances" (which was inspired by David Grann's 2004 article in the New Yorker about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green) is scheduled at the Road Less Traveled Theater in Buffalo, N.Y., on Sept. 15-Oct. 16 <www.roadlesstraveledproductions.org>.
21238. Gael Stahlhuth's "The Norwood Builder" will be performed by the East Lynne Theater Company in Cape May, N.J., Oct. 21-22 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
21239. Ken Ludwig's "Moriarty: A New Sherlock Holmes Mystery" will premiere at the Cleveland Playhouse's Allen Theatre in Cleveland, Apr. 29-May 21, 2023 <www.clevelandplayhouse.com>.

April 22 # 1

21240. Breaking news about the Baker Street Irregulars' conference on "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" at the Bear Mountain Inn, N.Y., on July 29-31: registration will open to the general public on May 17. See the announcement about the conference at <www.tinyurl.com/2py9xsvs>.
21241. "They're creatures of our creation, like Sherlock Holmes is" might not be an expected answer to the question "What is math?" But there is indeed a relationship, according to Dan Falk's interesting article at the Smithsonian magazine web-site (Sept. 23, 2020) <www.tinyurl.com/3d2yu2bj>, noted by John Marlowe.
21242. Are you woke? Are you from Woking? Residents of the city (mentioned in "The Naval Treaty") are reported to be "caught in the glare of a cultural confrontation," according a piece by Stephen Rand in The Article (Apr. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/245pwp46>.
21243. Reported: Hugh Corbett's Hymn to Murder (Headline, 2021) is set on Dartmoor in 1312, and according to Ben Witherington at Patheos (Mar. 27), involves wild beasts and a taverner named Baskerville.
21244. Sherlockians are well aware that "A Study in Scarlet" was first appeared in Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887; the annual was named for Isabella Beeton, but it was her husband Samuel who published it, capitalizing on the fame of his late wife, who was renowned for her Book of Household Management, first published in 1861. Conan Doyle titled a chapter in his A Duet: With an Occasional Chorus (1898) "Concerning Mrs. Beeton", and involves his newly-wed couple in an amusing discussion of the book. Lytton Strachey planned to write a biography of Mrs. Beeton, but didn't; Kathryn Hughes' The Short Life and Long Times of Mrs. Beeton: The First Domestic Goddess was published in 2006, and she's scheduled to speak at the British Library on May 18 in a panel discussion of "The Culinary Worlds of Eliza Acton and Mrs. Beeton" <www.tinyurl.com/2p8eept4> (the cost is £13.00 live or streamed).
21245. Kathryn Hughes also has written The Victorian Governess (1993) and Victorians Undone: Tales of the Flesh in the Age of Decorum (2017), and she is now writing a book about the late Victorians' obsession with cats. Andrew Lycett wrote a sprightly review of her Victorian Undone for History Today <www.historytoday.com/reviews/stripping-down-buttoned>.
21246. It has been open since at least 2005: there's a Sherlock Holmes English Lounge in the Arabian Courtyard Hotel in Dubai, and now Jennie Paton has reported a visual tour at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=TN-ljkOXLFE>.
21247. Further to the preview of "A Celebration of Sherlock Holmes" at the DePaul Pop Culture Conference scheduled at DePaul University in Chicago on May 7 (March 22 #3), Paul Booth, who developed the conference, was interviewed recently by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/bdsu6jvb>.

April 22 #2

21248. John T. Lescroart began his writing career with Son of Holmes (1986) and Rasputin's Revenge (1987). They're about Auguste Lupa, and are more Neronian than Sherlockian. If you would like to know more about his long and successful career since then, there's an interesting interview with him published in the March-April issue of Sactown Magazine <www.sactownmag.com/life-of-crime-john-lescroart>.
21249. Something new: cli-fi (fiction literature that deals with the effects of climate change on human society). A brief Sherlockian cli-fi was one of the winners in a recent competition set by the British magazine The Spectator <www.tinyurl.com/f8vfuxss>.
21250. Jennie Paton spotted an unusual (to say the least) Sherlock in Brazil; you can see him at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=29Q07qN-cKM>.
21251. Lyndon N. Smith's Star Trek Nation (Sedgemoor, 2021; 179 pp., $32.95) offers "an Englishman's view of America." It's very much a memoir, written by someone who believes that the "Star Trek" television series has much to say about America, and its relationship with Britain, and that the Sherlock Holmes stories can be just as helpful to Americans who want to understand Britain. Smith's explanation of it all is nicely entertaining.
21252. The Atlantic Coast Theatre for Youth will be touring their new "Sherlock Holmes & the Opera Mystery" on tour from Sept. 2022 to Aug. 2024; it's for grades K-8, and their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3dry4s75> has a five-minute video preview.
21253. The Royal Mail has issued a set of stamps showing migratory birds, one of them a Stone-curlew, described as "an odd-looking 'goggle-eyed plover'" (curlews are mentioned in two stories: "The Priory School" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles").
21254. June Brown died on Apr. 3. She began acting on stage with the Old Vic in 1948, and was best known as Dot Cotton in the "Eastenders" television series, in which she appeared for more than 30 years. According to her obituary in the Guardian, she never cared about propriety, claiming that when she appeared in "Calendar Girls" in the West End at the age of 82, she was the only one in the cast who stripped completely naked for the photo call.
21255. She also played Anne Chapman in "Murder by Decree" (1979).
21256. Are you woke? Are you from Woking? Be skeptical about anything published on Apr. 1.
21257. Forecast: Sarah Penner's THE LONDON SÉANCE CLUB, due in 2023, is reported in The Bookseller (Apr. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/5cmzd6eh> to be set in London, in 1872, and "inspired by a real gentlemen's-only séance club founded by Charles Dickens and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Ghost Club, founded in 1862, is still going strong, but while Dickens and Conan Doyle were members, they weren't among its founders. Nor were they even members at the same time: Dickens died in 1870, when Conan Doyle was only eleven years old.

21258. It's reasonably official, since it was reported by both Variety and the Hollywood Reporter (Apr. 5): Warner Bros. hopes to expand its "Sherlock Holmes" film universe into television, and is working with HBO Max to develop two new series, with Robert Downey Jr. on board as executive producer. The new series likely would be a substitute for the long-delayed third RDJ film, which was originally scheduled for release in December 2020, but is not yet in production.
21259. The largest autograph album ever compiled by a single collector, with sig-natures of more than 60,000 notables <www.tinyurl.com/2p9dmwke>, is up for sale for $250,000. The history of the collection is fascinating indeed, even though (according to the dealer) Conan Doyle is not in the album.
21260. She wasn't a Sherlockian, but Lillian Virginia Mountweazel, well known to some (but not all) of those are interested in copyright, is worthy of attention; you can read about her at <www.tinyurl.com/cemjfumk>. Lady Mondegreen is better known to people interested in strange but useful words; you can read about her at <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mondegreen>.
21261. Old Marvel, the Scientific Detective (Dark Lantern Tales, 2021; 229 pp., $19.95) is an intriguing reprint of a serial, discovered by Joe Rainone, that appeared in Saturday Night (a weekly "story paper" published in Philadelphia) in 1884, three years before Conan Doyle's scientific detective. The book also has a reprint of "A Study in Scarlet" as serialized in The Illustrated Home Guest in 1894, and an introduction by Rainone detailing the coincidences between the two stories. It's all nicely edited by Mark Williams, who presides over Dark Lantern <www.darklantern.wordpress.com>.
21262. Glen and Cathy Miranker were interviewed in a CBS Sunday News segment on Apr. 10 on the "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects" exhibition at the Grolier Club <www.youtube.com/watch?v=f-555u43x68>.
21264. There have been many mentions of Cameron Hollyer in this newsletter over the years, and the annual Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture in Toronto is named in his honor; if you would like to know more about him, and his many contributions to the Sherlockian world, Chris Redmond's fine tribute will be found at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/2p837awa>.
21265. Further to the report (October 21 #8) on C. T. Scott's article about "The Curious Incident of Sherlock Holmes's Real-Life Secretary" in the Economist's 1843 Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/96baau4d> about Chris Bazlinton, who at the age of 27 signed on as Holmes' secretary at Abbey National: Aurra Studios has announced that "Sherlock Holmes's Secret Secretary" now is in development for television <www.tinyurl.com/4afm96ts>. Needless to say, a secret secretary makes for a better television title than real-life secretary.

21267. Just the thing for dinosaur fans: original artwork by Harry Rountree for "The Lost World" (ink wash and gouache on board) was sold at Heritage Auctions this month for $8,125 (including the buyer's premium); at auction in 2017 it sold for $5,500. It's fascinating to see just how much better the original artwork is than what readers of the story in the Strand Magazine saw <www.tinyurl.com/34w97sv6>.
21268. This year's Virtual Jack Benny convention included "Jack Benny Meets Sherlock Holmes" (written by Brad Strickland and performed by the Atlanta Radio Theatre Company); you can watch (and listen to) the 23-minute show at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JtQ1SbgUwKo>. The ARTC <www.artc.org>, founded in 1984, offers an interesting catalog of "adventure in sound," including "Sherlock Holmes and the Crime of the Century".
21269. The (real) "Jack Benny Show" had quite a few Sherlockian segments, including "Sherlock Holmes and King Kong" in the program that aired on May 26, 1933, starring Jack as Sherlock Holmes; Jennie Paton found it on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kJyZGVHgGU8>.
21270. The February issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' report on this newsletter (since there's a compete run in the collection), her "50 Years Ago" tribute to Hank Potter, and other news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Timothy Johnson, 15-G Elmer L. Anderson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <johns976@umn.com>.
21271. Ronald Levisky discusses "A Holmesian Homage—The Chronicles of Addington Peace" and Jerry Margolin explains how "The Slaving Hound Is Brought to Heel" in the spring issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto, and also offers news of Sherlockian goings-on in Canada. Subscriptions cost $30.00 a year (US or CA); single issues cost $12.00 <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
21272. The Knockhatch Adventure Park in Hailsham (Sussex) has a Sherlock Holmes Experience <www.tinyurl.com/yurfjxya>; Richard Doyle (grand-nephew of Sir Arthur) presided over the opening this month. There's also a trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=LIRbDfrYUS4>. The Parks also offers a Lost World Playbarn <www.tinyurl.com/yrhk8898>.
21273. Nev March's Peril at the Exposition (New York: Minotaur Books, 2022, 352 pp., $27.99), the sequel to her award-winning Murder in Old Bombay (2020), has Captain Jim Agnihotri, now married to Diana Framji, in Chicago in 1893 investigating a threat to the Columbian Exposition; Jim has disappeared, and Diana must find him, in a story that's a thriller with some Sherlockian sleuthing involved.

21274. Further to the items (September 14 #7 and December 14 #5 and May 16 #6) about a new Sherlock Holmes play, written by Rachel Wagsaff and Duncan Abel, and produced by Antonio R. Marion, forecast for Broadway in 2017, Deadline has reported (Apr. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/yjescyzh> that the play is (still) under development, "with an eye toward the West End and Broadway." Stay tuned.
21275. Lykkelig Påskekrim! Turns out that Norwegians have an interesting way of celebrating Easter <www.lifeinnorway.net/easter-crime>.
21276. If you didn't buy a bottle of Macallan's Archival Series of fine whiskies honoring the "luggy bonnet" for £250 two years ago (May 20 #2), you should have: one bottle was at auction at Sotheby's in Hong Kong this month, estimated at 8,000-12,000 HKD <www.tinyurl.com/bkb6cjfz>; it sold for 22,500 HKD (that's $2,868), with shipping extra.
21277. Who was the first Sherlockian scholar? Not, as it turns out, Helen Elizabeth Wilson, whose article "The Life of Sherlock Holmes" was published in the Oct. 1898 issue of the Cornell Magazine (February 22 #2). The spring issue of The Baker Street Journal reprints William Aspenwall Bradley's "Sherlock Holmes and His Literary Prototype" (first published in the Dec. 1896 issue of the Columbia Literary Monthly), accompanied by an article - about Bradley by Daniel L. and Eugene B. Friedman, who discovered the 1896 scholarship. You can subscribe to the BSI <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com> and receive the spring issue as part of this year's subscription.

21278. Why does Sherlock Holmes like Mexican restaurants? Jennie Paton found the answer at YouTube <www.youtube.com/shorts/l1TgXNw8Ntc>.
21279. More than 300 people attended the 221B Con in Atlanta on Apr. 8-10, and a good time seems to have been had by all. There were many panels, and you can see their list at <www.221bcon.com/panels>. The most detailed report from a Sherlockian about what went on is by Brad Keefauver; check his blog archive for April at <www.sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com>. You can also hear a 37-minute audio report <www.tinyurl.com/2p932jyn> at the Watsonian Weekly web-site.
21280. Steve Doyle's Fortnightly Dispatch continues; his latest interviews have been with Mark Jones and Ira Matetsky <www.tinyurl.com/mr45zbhu>.
21282. For those who are aware that William Gillette smoked a curved wooden pipe, rather than a calabash, when he performed as "Sherlock Holmes" (no one has ever come up with a photograph or contemporary artwork that shows him with a calabash): a "Sherlock Holmes limited edition calabash rusticated estate smoking pipe" (presumably a briar) <www.tinyurl.com/5d7x3w27> was at auction this month, estimated at $50-$150; it sold for $150.

21283. Mark F. McPherson's An Irregular Life: Being the Adventures and Memoirs of a Fortunate Sherlockian (London: MX Publishing, 2022; 539 pp., $39.99) is the second (and greatly expanded) edition of his memoirs, and it's a great read, offering a chance to share his travels and quests (for Camelot, Atlantis, Jack the Ripper, James Bond, Emma Peel, and the Loch Ness Monster, among others); his meetings with interesting Sherlockians (including his mentor Bill Rabe) and non-Sherlockians; as well as his appearances in his own one-man show "An Evening with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle". Memoirs, of course, are much more fun than autobiographies.
21284. "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker" at the Grolier Club in New York opened on Jan. 12 and closed on Apr. 16, and had 5,500 visits, more than any other exhibition in at least the last ten years, and would have had more if attendance had not been restricted during the pandemic. The exhibition next will be at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., August 1-Dec. 15; details will be found at Glen's web-site at <www.sherlockin221objects.org>.
21285. The Generic Radio Workshop <www.genericradio.com> offers free downloads of a wide variety of old-time radio scripts, including ten from the Rathbone, Conway, and Gielgud series <www.genericradio.com/series/sherlockholmes>, and the Mercury Theater broadcast of Orson Welles' version of the Gillette play <www.genericradio.com/show/8VCGXSKAOS>.
21286. "Experience the mystery in VR" seems to be something new in the Sherlockian world. Les Enfants Terribles have created "The Case of the Hung Parliament" as a "live immersive production" that was adapted for an on-line audience on Zoom <www.vrisc.com/projects/sherlock-holmes-vr>. There's additional information at <www.sherlockholmesvr.com>, and even more about it at <www.sherlockimmersive.com>. The review in the Evening Standard (Feb. 25, 2021) was far from enthusiastic <www.tinyurl.com/4p24znp6>.
21287. For fans of "The Lost World": the National Geographic's one-hour program "Explorer: The Last Tepui" began streaming on Disney+ on Apr. 22; you can watch the trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/y8sc37jr>. It's the story of an expedition to Wei-Assipu, also known as Little Roraima or Roramita (many believe that near-by Roraima was the inspiration for Conan Doyle's story).
21288. Walt and Roger Reed's The Illustrator in America 1880-1980: A Century of Illustration (New York: Society of Illustrators, 1984) offers a detailed and well-illustrated discussion of American artists. The entry for Joseph Clement Coll ("perhaps America's greatest virtuoso in the use of pen and ink") includes artwork for "Sir Nigel" and "The Lost World", and the entry for Frederic Door Steele ("best remembered for is portray of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes") shows a cover from Collier's.
21289. "A wise man once said, if you've eliminated the possible and the probable, then the impossible must be true! Sherlock Holmes, I think: 1899." According to Peter Parker (aka Spider-man), in the May 1973 issue of Marvel Team-Up, noted by Paul Thomas Miller in the April issue of the Sherlockian Chronologist Guild's newsletter Timeline, conveniently available by e-mail from Brad Keefauver <bkeefauver@gmail.com>.

21290. Rathbone and Bruce in 1959? They both signed a contract with NBC-TV on July 23, 1959, giving permission to use a photograph of them in a "reunion plug" <www.tinyurl.com/2kx4szmd>; the contract was at auction on Apr. 27, estimated at $1,500-$2,500; the photograph was not included, and there was no information on what the program was, or whether it aired. The lot was withdrawn, and for a good reason: Nigel Bruce died in 1953.
21291. Terry Hunt's presentation at the Bryant Library in Roslyn, N.Y., on May 12 about Christopher Morley's connections with Sherlock Holmes will be available on-line <www.tinyurl.com/5xhw3xxe>; Morley's "Knothole" is preserved in Roslyn, where he lived and wrote for many years.
21292. Terry also has created a new Sherlockian society, the League of Kilted Canonicals, for Sherlockians who wear kilts; more information is available from him at <sherlockstuff113@gmail.com>.
21293. Theater news: Brian Guehring's "Sherlock Holmes and the 1st Baker Street Irregular" will be performed at the James McCabe Theatre in Valrico, Fla., May 6-21 <www.thevillageplayersvalrico.com>.
21294. Allan Martin's "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Basketballs" (a puppet show billed as "appropriate for mature audiences, not children") will be performed at the Old Town Hall in Altamonte, Ont., May 12-15; web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/4hhzyes4>.
21295. John Nicholson and Steven Canny's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Keighley Playhouse in Keighley, West Yorks., on May 2-7 <www.keighleyplayhouse.co.uk>; also at the Daneside Theatre in Congleton, Cheshire, from June 14 to June 18 <www.congletonplayers.com>.
21296. The Lantern Light Theatre Company will perform "Miss Sherlock Holmes" (a triple bill of one-act plays) on tour in Britain in June and July; their schedule is at <www.tinyurl.com/yc23w4kw>.
21297. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Holmes and Watson" will be performed at the Park Square Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., July 12-Aug. 21 <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
21298. A new adaptation of "The Poison Belt" is due at the Jermyn Street Theatre in London, July 21-30 <www.jermynstreettheatre.co.uk>.
21299. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Great Plains Theatre in Abilene, Kans., Sept. 9-25 <www.greatplains theatre.com>.
21300. "Spontaneous Sherlock" will be performed at the Glee Club in Nottingham on Oct. 24 <www.thespontaneousplayers.com>.
21301. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and Case of the Jersey Lily" is due at the Alley Theatre in Houston, Apr. 14-May 7, 2023 <www.alleytheatre.org>.

May 22 #1

21302. The Baker Street Irregulars Trust and the Lilly Library are now accepting applications for research fellowships for 2023. The fellowships “support research on various aspects of Sherlockian studies that require consultation of the BSI Archive.” The applications deadline is Sept. 15, and more information is available at www.tinyurl.com/yw8nttvd
21303. This year’s BSI Trust annual webinar lecture will be given by Ray Betzner on Sept. 17 on “‘221B’: The Story of a Sherlockian Sonnet”; Ray is a fervent admirer of, and an expert on, the sonnet’s author, Vincent Starrett <www.tinyurl.com/59krarua>. Ray’s blog about Starrett has great stories about him and his books, and the latest story, about an unusual copy of one Starrett’s non-Sherlockian books, is at <www.tinyurl.com/57bn88b2>.
21304. More news about the Baker Street Irregulars’ conference (“Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire”) scheduled at the Bear Mountain Inn, N.Y., on July 29-31: there will be a huckster’s room, with limited space for tables, and anyone interested should contact Ralph Hall <bugmanhall@aol.com>. The announcement for the conference is at <www.tinyurl.com/56zskuus>.
21305. The Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia, maintained by Alexis Barquin, is well worth exploring; one of the many features he offers is digital text of all of Conan Doyle’s fiction <www.arthur-conan-doyle.com/search-fictions> (213 short stories, 24 novels, and 16 plays), with a search engine. “Sherlock the Musical” (written by Stefan van de Graaff and Denning Burton) has been performed and recorded, and can now be seen (without charge) at their web-site <www.sherlockmusical.com>.
21306. As the era of virtual meetings by Sherlockian societies eases to an end, Jennie Paton would like to capture for posterity an archive of recordings, and would appreciate hearing from societies who would like to have their meetings preserved <jpaton221@gmail.com>.
21307. The 2020 Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture was given at the Toronto Public Library by Rebecca Romney (“Sherlockian Collecting: A Tour of Clever, Creative, and Weird Pursuits”) and her paper has now been published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available to people who join the Friends now; their web-site at <www.acdfriends.org> has PayPal and credit-card capability, or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb (789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada). A minimum donation of $35.00 brings you three issues of their newsletter and a copy of the 2021 Memorial Lecture. Rebecca has some grand stories about collectors and collections.
21308. The spring issue of the Friends’ newsletter The Magic Door offers Hartley R. Nathan’s article on “Arthur Conan Doyle and the C.P.R. Securities”, an account by Jessie Amaolo of the Library’s exhibition “A Study in Sherlock & His Creator”, and much more. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb (address above) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.

21309. The Bangalore Detectives Club, by Harini Nagendra (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2022), is set in southern India in 1921, when Kaveri Murthy, a young doctor’s wife, turns detective; she’s an admirer of Sherlock Holmes, and the novel, while not really Sherlockian, is full of flavor in a story about Indians, rather than the British, at a time when Mahatma Gandhi was just beginning his campaign against colonial rule.
21311. Serena Blasco’s Enola Holmes: The Graphic Novels: Book One (Kansas City: Andrews McMeel, 2022; 192 pp., $14.99) is a reprint of her imaginative and colorful adaptations of the first three of Nancy Springer’s novels about the younger sister of Sherlock and Mycroft, nicely timed for the soon-to-be-released second season of the Netflix series. There was a well-illustrated interview with the artist at the School Library Journal web-site in 2018 <www.tinyurl.com/yyvw46ql>.
21312. Bart Lovins’ dramatizations of “The Novel Adventures of Sherlock Holmes” (the four long stories) for performance at the Hardin County Schools Performing Arts Center in Elizabethtown, Ky., are imaginatively staged, and available streamed on-line ($5.00 each) at <www.tinyurl.com/2p8e4rbp>.
21313. The late Marvin Kaye edited the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Magazine since it was launched in 2008, and its new editor is Carla Kaessinger Coupe, whose first issue offers the traditional interesting mix of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian fiction and commentary. $12.00 ($39.99 for four issues) from the Wildside Press <www.wildsidepress.com> (7945 MacArthur Boulevard #215, Bethesda, MD 20818), and you can explore their web-site for more of their Sherlockiana.
21314. When in Tyler (Texas): the Rosevine Inn Bed & Breakfast is place to stay for visiting Sherlockians <www.tinyurl.com/yc2n63v8>.
21315. The Reichenbach Irregulars, having celebrated the 30th anniversary of the Reichenplaque (the commemorative plaque that was unveiled at the Falls on May 2, 1992), are hard at work planning for their next conference (“Musings on the Amusements in the Canon”) which will be held in Leukerbad on June 1-4, 2023. More information about the conference (and the society) will be found at their web-site <www.221b.ch>.
21316. Reported: “Sherlock Holmes: The Peter Cushing Interview” on a new DVD from Kaleidoscope Facilities (£24.99) <www.tinyurl.com/4hkxrn5v>.
21317. “Evaline and Mina didn’t mean to get into the family business” is the hook for Colleen Gleason’s The Clockwork Scarab (2013), the first of five books in her series about Evaline Holmes (the niece of Sherlock) and Mina Stoker (the sister of Bram), and their adventures in a steampunk Victorian London. There’s a free download of the book at <www.cgbks.com/Scarab>, and more about the series at <www.colleengleason.com>.

21318. Edinburgh policeman James McLevy’s Curiosities of Crime in Edinburgh and The Sliding Scale of Life were published in 1861, and although there’s no record of Arthur Conan Doyle ever having read the books, it’s intriguing to think of him encountering and enjoying them during his student days in Edinburgh; first editions of both books are available from Type Punch Matrix <www.typepunchmatrix.com> ($3,000).
21320. Rachele Zylberberg died on May 1. Better known as Régine, she founded a basement nightclub in Paris in 1957 (later claiming that it was the first discothèque) and went on to create a $500-million world-wide empire of 23 clubs. She also was an actress and a singer, and led a thoroughly colorful life, and you can hear her sing “I Never Do Anything Twice” (written by Stephen Sondheim) as the Madame in the film “The Seven-Per-Cent Solution” (1976). You can listen to the song at <www.tinyurl.com/23etp5vp>, and to an interesting podcast discussion of the song (noted by Max Magee) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=SbOI8U1kNVc>.
21321. Howard Ostrom has reported an interesting one-hour video-biography of Benedict Cumberbatch at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=tydks9RpJ2k>.
21322. Patrick Horgan’s The Detection of Sherlock Holmes is a “slightly fantastic autobiographic tale” written by an actor who played Sherlock Holmes often, and William Gillette once, in the world premiere of Ken Ludwig’s “Dramatic License” (which is still performed as “Postmortem”). Never published as a book, it’s available as an audio-book, recorded in 1998 by Horgan himself, from Decklin’s Domain <www.decklinsdomain.com> ($5.00 as a download, $9.95 on CD or $12.45 on a thumb drive); it’s imaginative, and nicely done, and recommended. Decklin also offers nine downloads of Horgan reading the entire Canon, three more of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories, and many stories by other authors; you can sample them, and discover just how wonderful Horgan was.

21324. The Internet Archive Software Collection, said to be "the largest vintage and historical software library in the world, providing instant access to millions of programs, CD-ROM images, documents, and multi-media," has much to offer <www.archive.org/details/software?sin=TEXT>. If you run a search for [sherlock holmes] you get 182 hits for metadata, and 103 hits for text contents. There's much of interest to Sherlockian gamers.
21325. Max Magee notes that the Internet Archive also offers a treasure trove of Sherlockian radio broadcasts, including 74 BBC programs that were written by Bert Coules, with Clive Merrison as Sherlock Holmes; you can listen to them all at <www.tinyurl.com/3b4k8d9j>. You can also search for [sherlock holmes audio] and find enough keep you happy for hours on end.

21326. "Sherlock Holmes in Comics" is a new "guide to Sherlock Holmes in comic books, graphic novels, and manga" created by Johanna Draper Carlson, who was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/3pvdwdv9>, where you'll find much more, including the tale of "the gorgeous typeface that drove men mad and sparked a 100-year mystery." You can explore Johanna's colorful database at <www.comicsworthreading.com/sherlock-holmes-in-comics>.
21327. Forrest T. Athey ("The Hammerford Will Case") died on Apr. 2. He worked in finance, accounting, and corporate taxation, was the author of a pastiche published in the Baker Street Journal in 1969, and received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1978.
21328. Howard Ostrom launched his "Who's on First, It's Not So Elementary: First Sherlocks by Country" data-base with 50 counties, and he now has 97 countries; you can see the latest 186-page, fully illustrated, version at Ross Foad's "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mr25sxbm>. There also is a Google Drive version at <www.tinyurl.com/2p89xxew>.
21329. Roger Johnson has kindly noted a documentary about Craig's Court in London <www.youtube.com/watch?v=6gwjMWfXd3g>; it's described as "London's forgotten square," and has a Sherlockian connection (if you're impatient, just skip ahead to 8:05).
21331. Terry Hunt gave a PowerPoint presentation at the Bryant Library in Roslyn on May 12 about "Christopher Morley's Influence on the Sherlockian World" (and he'll be happy to do it via Zoom for Sherlockian societies); you can contact him at <18goldini95@gmail.com>.
21332. The Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth, with funding from the Arts Council England, presented a series of on-line lectures this month, in honor of the late Neil McCaw, with talks by Michael Comben (on "Conan Doyle as A. C. Smith: Football and Portsmouth"), Antonija Primorac (on "In Search of Sherlock Holmes's Doubles: Translation and Early Pastiche"), and Anne Chapman (on "Arthur Conan Doyle in the Idler Magazine"); the lectures may be available on-line (stay tuned). Information about the Collection's ongoing project "The Detectives" is conveniently available at their web-site <www.visitportsmouth.co.uk/conan-doyle/our-work>.
21333. The De Beers Cullinan Blue diamond (March 22 #5) was sold at auction in Hong Kong on Apr. 27 for $57.5 million (including the buyer's premium). Weighing 15.10 carats, it's the largest blue diamond ever sold at auction (the Hope Diamond, never at auction, weighs 45.52 carats).

21334. The ACD Society has launched a new project: an annotated version of the manuscript of "The Terror of Blue John Gap"; it's an on-going project, edited by Margie Deck and Nancy Holder, with commentary by Paul Chapman, Derek Belanger, Mattias Böstrom, Charles Prepolec, and Bob Coghill, with more to come <www.acdsociety.com/bjg/a/bjga.html>. You can also go to <www.acdsociety.com> for more information about the society's other activities.
21335. Here's your chance to own a Stradivarius (although you'll need to pay much more than Sherlock Holmes did for his): the Smithsonian magazine web-site reported (May 9) <www.tinyurl.com/mtzyje9e> that the Tarisio auction house will offer one on June 9, estimated at about $20 million (which would make it the world's most expensive violin).
21336. It was the Les and Laurie Show at the Mystery Writers of America's awards dinner in New York on Apr. 28: Les Klinger presented Laurie R. King with the MWA's prestigious Grand Master Award, and you can watch the presentation at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=KvddnMIFT0>. Ingenuity, the little helicopter that has been flying nicely on Mars since 2021, when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's rover Perseverance landed, is nearing the end of its useful life, according to an article in the Washington Post (May 15) <www.tinyurl.com/2m6kevne>. SHERLOC and WATSON <www.tinyurl.com/mswem6ev>, however, are still at work.
21337. Jim Hawkins is hoping to identify the first Sherlockian society lapel pin. Ron De Waal has Hugo's Companions' "221B Lapel Pin" (1966), and the Scowrrers and Molly Maguires' "Membership Lapel Pin" (1971). Does anyone know of other candidates? Contact Jim at <seniorhawk@gmail.com>.
21338. "Hitler the ranting detective" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=SrUiKl4LDbs> is a new video spotted by Jennie Paton. See for yourself: "Hitler proves how easy Sherlock Holmes' mysteries are by solving them!"
21339. The Florida Bibliophile Society held an on-line meeting on Apr. 19, with Ray Betzner as guest speaker; his topic was "Vincent Starrett and Sherlock Holmes" and you can tune in at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=zNM8DAGyCIA>. Ray notes that his presentation starts at 9:30.
21340. Douglas Wadle's Einstein's Violin: The Love Affair Between Science, Music, and History's Most Creative Thinkers (Bloomington: Archway, 2022; 215 pp., $33.95) is aptly subtitled: the author does a deep dive into the relationship between music and genius, acknowledging how important music has been to Albert Einstein, Sherlock Holmes, and many others who "relied on music to access the innate creativity of the brain."
21341. Overton Audios has produced two interesting albums of Sherlock Holmes pastiches "The Game Is On" and "Family Values" (with Connor Chadwick as Sherlock Holmes and Daniel J. Patton as Doctor John Watson), available free at their YouTube channel <www.tinyurl.com/3sfak72h> (scroll down to find the Sherlock Holmes audios).

21342. Conan Doyle wrote (in his Preface to His Last Bow) that Sherlock Holmes "lived in a small farm upon the Downs five miles from Eastbourne." But we don't know whether he ever stayed at the Grand Hotel in Eastbourne, which opened in 1875 and is the only five-star hotel on the British coastline, according to an article at the Sussex Life website <www.tinyurl.com/2xne2dnj>. The article also says that the Grand was "beloved by illustrious

- guests such as Winston Churchill and author Arthur Conan Doyle,” and the hotel web-site www.grandeastbourne.com/our-history does mention him (and shows just how grand a hotel it is).
21343. Steve Mason has created an imaginative and colorful Sherlockian Periodical Table, available on request <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>.
21345. D. H. Friston is well known to Sherlockians as the illustrator of “A Study in Scarlet” in Beeton’s Christmas Annual for 1887; you can see his cover illustration for the Jan. 28, 1882, issue of The Penny Illustrated Paper at <www.tinyurl.com/348zc8hj>.
21346. Theater news: Richard James’ “The Death of Sherlock Holmes” will be performed at the Conquest Theatre in Bromyard, Herts., on June 17; website at <www.conquest-theatre.co.uk>.
21347. “Sherlock Holmes Not According to Doyle” (four radio plays dramatized by Catherine Behrens) will be performed by the Edge Ensemble Theatre Company at the Keene Public Library in Keene, N.H.; Mark Twain’s “Sherlock Holmes Goes West” and August Derleth’s “The Adventure of the Late Mr. Faversham” on July 21 and July 23; and Derrick Belanger’s “Yes, Virginia, There Is a Sherlock Holmes” and Vincent Starrett’s “The Unique Hamlet” on July 22 and July 24. Free admission, and all part of “Sherlock Week” sponsored by the Monadnock Sherlockians (the local Sherlockian society).
21348. “Holmes/Poirot” (a new play by Jeffrey Hatcher and Steve Hendrickson) will be performed at the Park Square Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., July 19-Aug. 20, 2023; it’s based on Agatha Christie’s “Murder on the Links” and brings “two of the greatest detectives of all time” on stage to solve a crime.
21349. The Crime and Comedy Theatre Company will perform Martin Parsons’ radioplay dramatization of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” on tour in Britain, Oct. 28-Nov. 20 <www.crimeandcomedytheatrecompany.co.uk/dates>.
21350. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” has been scheduled at the Everyman Theatre in Baltimore, Md., Dec. 6-Jan. 1 <www.everymantheatre.org>.

21351. Many Sherlockians have seen and enjoyed the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, which is at the Frost Science Center in Miami, Fla., through Sept. 5 <www.frostscience.org/exhibition/sherlock-holmes>. It will next be at the Minnesota History Center in St Paul, Minn., from Oct. 20 through Apr. 6 <www.mnhs.org/historycenter>. Created by the Exhibits Development Group, the exhibition has an impressive web-site <www.tinyurl.com/4sv5jdj3> where the company promotes the exhibition to museums that might consider putting it on display.
21352. Sherlock Holmes and the Strange Death of Brigadier-General Delves, by Tim Symonds (London: MX Publishing, 2022; 168 pp., $12.95), brings Holmes and Watson to the Bailiwick of Guernsey to rescue a war-time comrade of Watson from conviction on a charge of murder; there is much about Guernsey (where the author grew up), and the ill-fated British campaign in Afghanistan.
21353. A nice copy of Vincent Starrett’s The Unique Hamlet (a Walter L. Hill variant) was at auction in Canada last month <www.tinyurl.com/yp7ak8s6>, estimated at CA$1,500-CA$3,000; it didn’t sell.
21354. Kay Wheeler had a nice remembrance of Basil Rathbone in the Portland Press Herald (May 26) <www.tinyurl.com/45kdr69z>.
21355. Wanda Dow, formerly in Florida and now in New Mexico, has launched a colorful newsletter (“Papers on the Sundial”); it’s available on request via e-mail from Wanda at <hal0tot@verizon.net>.
21356. Playing with Fire: The Weird Tales of Arthur Conan Doyle, edited and introduced by Mike Ashley (London: British Library, 2021; 286 pp. £11.31), is an excellent addition to the British Library Hardback Classics series; in his Introduction, Ashley discusses Conan Doyle’s fascination with the strange and supernatural, and the collection opens with a reprint of his autobiographical essay “Stranger Than Fiction” (first published in 1915) and continues with a fine selection of his non-Sherlockian stories.
21357. Richard L. Kellogg’s Barry Baskerville’s Fishing Adventure (Fort Collins: Airship 27, 2022; 40 pp., $11.99), with attractive artwork by Gary Kato, is the eighth in his young-readers series about a boy detective.
21358. Users of the Internet who aren’t aware of Cunningham’s Law might well be interested in how it works <www.tinyurl.com/3sh3f8r5>. Or doesn’t.
21359. Baker Street West (in Jackson, Calif.) has emerged from the pandemic with a wide range of dramatic and other events, and their web-site’s well worth exploring <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
21360. Stephen Browning’s On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes (Barnsley: Pen & Sword History, 2022; 141 pp., $34.95) offers seven guided walks through London, for both armchair and on-the-ground Sherlockians, plus information about areas outside London and about Conan Doyle; it’s up-to-date, and interesting, with commentary about what’s seen on the walks.

21362. Thomas Bruce Wheeler’s The Mapped London of Sherlock Holmes (2018) links to an interactive “Map of Sherlock Holmes’ London” available free on-line <www.sherlockslondon.com>; it’s a splendid demonstration of the application of modern technology to the London of the Canon. It’s handy indeed for people who are walking in Canonical London, and Tom has reported that since his book was published an average of 266 people a day have visited the web-site.
21363. Disney’s Twentieth Century Studios is at work on a new film of “The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen”, according to the Hollywood Reporter (May 17) <www.tinyurl.com/yxwdunrf>. The comic-book series, launched in 1999, included Holmes and Watson as characters, and had the League organized by an off-stage Mycroft, and the first film (2003), had Richard Roxburgh as Moriarty. The new film is to be aired on Hulu.
21364. The Royal Mint does much more than merely issue British coins: they also offer souvenirs, and rare coins such as a set of 1887 gold sovereigns honoring Queen Victoria’s golden jubilee (£6,430) <www.tinyurl.com/3xkmrmz8>.
21365. The “John Bennett Shaw” web-site <www.johnbennettshaw.com> maintained by Jim Hawkins continues to expand: a text search for [here’s a video] will take you to a report on his recent visit with Saul Cohen, who was a founding member of the Brothers Three of Moriarty.
21366. “The Case of the Hung Parliament” (a “live immersive production” created by Les Enfants Terribles) (April 22 #6) is now being performed on-line by the Shanghai Grand Theater, according to a report in China Daily (June 24) <www.tinyurl.com/pjme6zhc>.
21367. Reported: Conan Doyle’s non-Sherlockian “Playing with Fire” is included in Brendan Connell’s anthology The Zinzolin Book of Occult Fiction (Snuggly Books, 2022; 334 pp., $22.00).

21368. A bloodhound named Trumpet won best in show at the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show this month, which might not seem Sherlockian. But the report on “Today” on NBC-TV on June 23 <tinyurl.com/ms4jms3> included an appropriate and amusing clip from the Fred Willard movie “Best in Show” (2000)
21369. Ray Wilcockson enjoys research in digitized newspapers, and has discovered that Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes were in Dublin in 1897, and again in 1899 <www.altamarkings.blogspot.com/2020>. A nice opportunity for pasticheurs.
21370. “How to Catch a Cheater Using Math” is the title of a video noted by Jennie Paton <www.tinyurl.com/3955ujmk> that has a Sherlockian blob explaining frequency hypothesis testing (Dana Richards, who’s an expert at this sort of thing, says it’s a remarkably clear explanation).

21371. The single page from the manuscript of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” went unsold at Heritage Auctions on June 4 when the reserve wasn’t met. It was available for purchase for $125,000 for a few days from Heritage Auctions, but is no longer offered. The web-site’s at <www.tinyurl.com/4yfk6rj6>. A different single page from the manuscript sold last year for $423,000 (including the buyer’s premium) (November 21 #5). Obviously the underbidder in that auction wasn’t interested in the page offered this year.
21372. “Why would someone wake up and claim they’re Napoleon? The answer: something of a fixed idea.” Which of course reminds one of the idée fixe mentioned in “The Six Napoleons”. Victoria Shepherd will be lecturing about “A History of Delusions” on-line for National Archives on July 13, and you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/963yw93n>. There’s also Laure Murat’s book The Man Who Thought He Was Napoleon: Toward a Political History of Madness (2014), for those who might want to pursue this particular delusion. And Daniel Freeman’s BBC Radio 4 lecture on “Napoleon and ‘Delusions of Grandeur’” is at <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m0007lh6>
21374. Richard Gordon played Sherlock Holmes (with Leigh Lovell as Watson) on radio in 1930-1933) and in the film “The Radio Murder Mystery” (1933), and (with Harry West as Watson) on radio in 1936. Now Ray Wilcockson has discovered that Gordon also played Holmes on stage; you can read all about it in Ray’s “Markings” blog <www.tinyurl.com/t4a6x8sc>.
21375. Cole Porter’s classic musical “Anything Goes” (1934) has a rather tenuous Sherlockian connection, and a production at the Barbican in London in 2021 was filmed. You can watch it on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ycktz6sj>; it’s all great fun, and the Sherlockian scene starts at 65 minutes.
21376. An article in the Indian Express (June 6) <www.tinyurl.com/yahcd6m2> includes an image of the Sappers War Memorial in Bengaluru, and there is a Canonical connection: the 1st Bangalore Pioneers (mentioned in “The Empty House”) are thought to have been the 1st Madras Pioneers, a regiment that was raised by the British in 1780; it was disbanded in 1933 and absorbed into the Madras Sappers.
21377. “Dr. Watson and Sherlock Holmes are tracking a criminal mastermind in the present-day United States. Watson lists out the states the mastermind has visited in alphabetical order. They are: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina. Watson stares at the list, but he can’t make out any sort of pattern. But Holmes’ eyes light up. ‘Why, it’s elementary, my dear Watson!’” That’s a problem posed by Eric Snyder at the Riddler Express at Zach Wissner-Gross’ “FiveThirtyEight” web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ybthfnar>. So: what’s the pattern?

21378. Philip Purser-Hallard’s Sherlock Holmes: Masters of Lies (New York: Titan, 2022; 257 pp., $15.95) is a complicated and entertaining pastiche, set in London in 1898, that pits Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Stanley Hopkins against a clever mastermind who is skilled at forgery, impersonation, and murder.
21379. Further to the report (April 22 #4) on the Sherlock Holmes Experience at the Knockhatch Adventure Park in Sussex, there’s now a walk-through video at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=U4SatfMwbHE>.
21380. So: what is the pattern in the Riddler Express puzzle (June 22 #3)? It’s element-ary.
21381. Howard Ostrom’s “The A-Z of Sherlock Holmes Performers” data-base now has more than 8,000 people who have appeared as Sherlock Holmes, or in Sherlockian costume <www.nplh.co.uk/a-z-index.html>.
21382. Japanese interest in Sherlock Holmes continues: there’s now a translation of Roger Johnson and Jean Upton’s The Sherlock Holmes Miscellany (November 12 #5), translated and edited by Masamichi Higurashi; you can see the colorful cover at <www.tinyurl.com/ywkf75bk>.
21383. Mr. Doyle’s Class Presents A Study in Scarlet is a delightful graphic novel published by the Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth in 2020 (70 pp., £10.00) <www.visitportsmouth.co.uk/conan-doyle/shop>; adapted by Matthew Hardy for ages 7-11, it’s an imaginative presentation of the story, with attractive art by Russell Mark Olson.
21384. The Genesee Country Village & Museum in Mumfords, N.Y., “the largest living history museum in New York state,” will help you “step into the history, mystery, and culinary delights” of Sherlock Holmes on Aug. 6-7; their web-site’s at <www.gcv.org/events/a-novel-weekend>.
21385. There are more and more Sherlockian tattoos to be seen, thanks to the Internet <www.tinyurl.com/yc2ujv42>, and some of them are both imaginative and artistic.
21386. Max Magee has noted the “Raffles Redux” web-site <www.rafflesredux.com>, where Sarah Morrissey and Genevieve L. Morrissey offer annotated versions of E. W. Hornung’s “Raffles” stories, and his play “A Visit from Raffles” (1909), in which H. A. Saintsbury played the title role, making him one of the very few actors who have played both Raffles and Sherlock Holmes.
21387. Treefort Media has produced a ten-episode audio mini-series “Moriarty: The Devil’s Game” that will be available at Audible on July 7; you can listen to a sample at <www.audible.com/pd/Moriarty-Podcast/B0B2DZBVR>.
21388. Steve Doyle’s Fortnightly Dispatch continues; his latest interviews have been with Henry Boote <www.youtube.com/watch?v=xK6KI813AiM> and with Evelyn Herzog <www.youtube.com/watch?v=LeQGdELPI1A>. Steve himself was featured in print in an interview in his hometown Zionsville Current on June 13 <www.tinyurl.com/k6jb3ptb>.

June 22 #5

21389. Reported: “The Lion’s Mane” reprinted in Guilty Creatures: A Menagerie of Mysteries, edited by Martin Edwards (Scottsdale: Poisoned Pen, 2022; 308 pp., $14.54); the American edition of the British Library’s anthology of mysteries in which animals play an important role. Amazon’s “look inside” feature offers a chance to read the introduction, in which Edwards discusses Conan Doyle, and Heard’s A Taste for Honey.
21390. “Tribute to Sherlock Holmes on the Occasion of His Hundredth Birthday” was a 30-minute program broadcast by the BBC Home Service on Jan. 8, 1954, and it included Dennis Arundell (as Lord Peter Wimsey), recalling how he had once met Sherlock Holmes, in a segment written by Dorothy L.

Sayers. The program has not survived, but her script was published in Sayers on Holmes (2001), and Allyn Gibson has found it at the “One Other Gaudy Night” blog <www.tinyurl.com/46s82jbh>.

21392. An attractive oil-on-canvas painting by Walter Paget showing King Henry V at Agincourt was at auction this month <www.tinyurl.com/m78ssbsj>, with an estimate of $5,500-$8,250. Walter Paget (Sidney Paget’s younger brother) illustrated “The Dying Detective”, and this painting might well be considered Sherlockian since (according to Shakespeare) Henry V proclaimed “the game’s afoot” long before Sherlock Holmes did. The painting didn’t sell, presumably because bidding didn’t reach the reserve set by whoever bought the painting for $5,000 earlier this year.
21393. “Evaline and Mina didn’t mean to get into the family business” is the hook for Colleen Gleason’s series about Evaline Holmes (the niece of Sherlock) and Mina Stoker (the sister of Bram), set in a steampunk Victorian London. The Carnelian Crow (Avid, 2017; 256 pp., $19.99) and The Zeppelin Deception (Avid, 2019; 290 pp., $23.95) are the last of a five-book series of young-adult novels aimed at teen-age girls, and the stories offer romance, villainy, and lots of energy and excitement. The author’s web-site is at <www.stokerandholmes.com>.
21394. The Mini-Tonga Scion Society may be inactive, but people still are having fun creating Sherlockian miniatures: Samantha Wolov has noted Jamie Robertson’s post to Instagram <www.tinyurl.com/4svnnkxw>.
21395. The manuscript of “The Greek Interpreter” (owned by the late David Karp les) will be offered at Heritage Auctions on July 16 with an opening bid of $100,000, with no reserve <www.tinyurl.com/3e5a7sfk>. Randall Stock’s detailed page about the manuscript is at <www.tinyurl.com/yc79d8j8>.
21396. There also will be some nice Sherlockiana and Doyleana in Heritage’s sale 6253 (July 27-28) <www.tinyurl.com/2p93r9mf>, including Collier’s Once a Week Library (1891, the first American edition of “The Sign of the Four”) and the three-volume set of Dreamland and Ghostland (1887, with five non-Sherlockian stories, Conan Doyle’s first appearance in a book in Britain).

21397. A copy of a later edition of The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, signed and inscribed by Conan Doyle to Lady Sackville, will be at auction on July 6 <www.tinyurl.com/nbe5y8d4>, estimated at €400-€500. Victoria Sackville-West, a colorful lady <www.tinyurl.com/55ftv64w>, isn’t as well-known now as her daughter Vita Sackville West.
21398. “You don’t happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?” asked Sherlock Holmes (in “The Three Gables”). A copy of the First Folio will be at auction at Sotheby’s on July 21. Read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/5xp59nwd>.
21399. Who knew? Sherlock was in Ballarat. Well, it was Jim Sherlock, and the Ballarat is in California, noted by Jennie Paton. It’s a ghost town now, and according to Wikipedia <www.tinyurl.com/yhfdnwz2> it has one permanent resident. There’s much more about Ballarat, and about some of its colorful residents, at <www.desertusa.com/desert-california/ballarath.html>.
21400. Theater news: Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” is due at the Burgfestspiele in Jagthausen, Germany, July 1-Aug. 25 <www.burgfestspiele-jagsthausen.de>, and at the Lamb’s Player Theatre in Coronado, Calif., on Oct. 1-Nov. 20 <www.lambplayer.org>.
21401. The Our Star Theatre Company began touring James Barry’s “Sherlock’s Excellent Adventure” in Britain on July 1 <www.ourstartheatrecompany.com>.
21402. Eric Coble’s “Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars” will be performed at the Riverlea Theatre in Hamilton, New Zealand, July 2-16; website at <www.riverleatheatre.com>.
21403. Todd Wallinger’s “The Enchanted Bookshop” will be performed at the Royal Off-the-Square Theater in Brownstown, Ind., July 15-23 <www.jcct.org>.
21404. The Gotham Radio Theatre will perform “Sherlock Holmes: Redheads and Bohemians (a dramatization of the two stories) at the Bedford Playhouse in Bedford, N.Y., on July 16 <www.bedfordplayhouse.org>.
21405. Nick Lane’s new “Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear” will be touring in Britain beginning at the Wilde Theatre in Bracknell, Berks., on Sept. 14 <www.blackeyedtheatre.co.uk>.
21406. “Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes” (by Jaime Robledo) has been scheduled at the CVIC Hall in Minden, Nev., Oct. 14-23 <www.carsonvalleycommunitytheatre.org>.
21407. Stephen Dietz’s “Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure” is due at the Portland Stage in Portland, Maine, Oct. 26-Nov. 13 <www.portlandstage.org>.
21408. Nick Scovell’s “Sherlock Holmes: The Final Problem” will be performed at the TPS Studio in Petersfield, Hants., Nov. 2-5 <www.thestudiotps.com>.

21410. Registration’s now open for “Jubilee @221B” in Toronto, Sept. 23-26. More information about the conference, sponsored by the Bootmakers of Toronto and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library, will be found at <www.acdfriends.org/jubilee221b.html>.
21411. Les Klinger and Bert Coules were interviewed by Jon Rees and Karl Coppack on July 16 on their “Sherlock: From Adler to Amberley” blog available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=wc7v7V5IZtQ>, and had interesting things to say about the Canon, and what people have done with or to it (their interview starts at 23:00). You’re also welcome to visit their web-sites at <www.lesliesklinger.com> and <www.bertcoules.co.uk>.
21412. Sherlock Holmes isn’t all that well known, it would appear: a collection of twenty DVDs with “TV Classics” <www.ebay.com/p/6471353> was issued in 2003, and the classic heroes whose portraits were on the cases did not include Sherlock Holmes.
21413. Jennie Paton has found “The Private Eyes” (1980) at Dailymotion; it’s a comedy that starred Don Knotts as Inspector Winship and Tim Conway as Dr. Tart in Canonical costume <www.dailymotion.com/playlist/x733x1>, but without the scene reported in the original release in which Conway wore Sherlockian costume when Dr. Tart impersonated Inspector Winship.

21414. The spring issue of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust's electronic newsletter For the Sake of the Trust, now edited by Ray Betzner, has been uploaded to the Trust's web-site <www.bsitrust.org>; there's an article by Bob Coghill about his adventures with the cardboard box(es), and other news about the Trust's activities, and you're more than welcome to explore the Trust's web-site.

21416. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Tim Johnson's long interview with Larry Millett about the past and future history of his series of novels about Sherlock Holmes and Shadwell Rafferty, and Musings by Julie McKuras in which she announces her retirement after 23 years of editing the newsletter. Copies are available from Tim Johnson (Elmer L. Anderson Library #15-G, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455).
21417. June L. Kinnee ("Miss Hatty Doran") died on May 25, 2022. She was a long-time member of the Trained Cormorants of Los Angeles County and one of the founders of the Curious Collectors of Baker Street, and for many years an enthusiastic ticket-seller for the Watson Fund raffle. June received her Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1999.
21418. "The Adventure of the Trying Detective" is the latest "Baker Street Elementary" comic book from Joe Fay and Rusty and Steve Mason. You can find all of their comic books (and their comic strip) at the Crew of the Barque Lone Star web-site <www.dfw-sherlock.org/baker-street-elementary.html>.
21419. Sherlock Holmes and the Fiends of New York City is the latest in the series of excellent audio recording by Big Finish; Nicholas Briggs stars as Sherlock Holmes, with Richard Earl as Watson and a strong supporting cast, in an interesting story written by Jonathan Barnes; 180 minutes on three CDs ($30.25 CD+download or $19.99 download only), and you can listen to a sample at their web-site <www.bigfinish.com>, where you'll find many other recordings available.
21420. Roraima (the Venezuelan tepui considered by many to be the inspiration for "The Lost World") seems to be getting crowded: there's another documentary film ("House of the Gods") <www.vimff.org/film/house-of-the-gods> that has not yet made it to television, but you can watch a trailer for the film at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=VKhEpe8Rzww>.
21421. Something new in Sherlockian artwork: "The Case of the Dueling Sherlocks" and "Sherlock Holmes at the Tower of London" are two performance-art photographs offered by Robert Kawika Sheer <www.spiritshadows.net>; you can search for [sherlock] to find them easily.
21422. Erika Kobayashi reminisces about "On Growing Up in a Household of Sherlock Translators" in a nice article at Crime Reads <www.tinyurl.com/2p88wmd>. Her father was the late Tsukasa Kobayashi and her mother is Akane Higashiyama; they were co-founders of the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club, and Akane is its president.
21423. John Wesley Anderson's Sherlock Holmes in Little London: 1896 The Missing Year (Colorado Springs: Circle Star, 2020; 303 pp., $29.95) has Holmes and Watson, commissioned by the Queen herself, in hot pursuit of counterfeiters in a case that involves travel around the world, and keeps them busy for an entire year. "Little London" is Colorado Springs (the author is a Colorado historian), and they spend much of the year in the American west. The author's web-site is at <www.jwander.com>.

21424. "The Masks of Death" (1984) was a British television film that was broadcast in 1984, with Peter Cushing as Holmes and John Mills as Watson, and some fine supporting actors (including Anne Baxter, Ray Milland, and Gordon Baxter); it was issued on a VHS cassette, but apparently never on DVD, and it is nice indeed that Jennie Paton has found it available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=TfD5se40-Qk>.
21425. It's a thoroughly tenuous connection, unless there's really a connection between Sherlock Holmes and Nero Wolfe, but there's the pilot for a "Nero Wolfe" television series, made for CBS-TV 1959, that never was broadcast, reported by Lenny Picker <www.youtube.com/watch?v=9AoebAAig4>: "Count the Man Down" starred Kurt Kaznar as Nero and William Shatner as Archie, many years before Shatner played Stapleton in Stewart Granger's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1972).
21426. "A Small Study of Ink Marks" is a new Sherlockian society founded by Monica Schmidt; their motto is "Have Sherlockian ink (tattoos)? Join us!" If you qualify, contact Monica at 1640 Deborah Drive NE, Solon, IA 52333, or <sweeper887@gmail.com>.
21427. "Sherlock's Mystery" (reported by Jennie Paton at YouTube) is impressive <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vWqlaaYuOXo>.
21428. Dan Stashower's next book will be American Demon: Eliot Ness and the Hunt for America's Jack the Ripper, due from Minotaur in September; Dan assures his fellow Sherlockians that Sherlock Holmes is mentioned in the book, and you can read Lenny Picker's interview with Dan in Publishers Weekly (July 1) <www.tinyurl.com/hvbwxyz>.
21429. My Scientific Methods, edited by Dana Richards (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 2022; 244 pp., $39.95), the next title in the BSI's Professions Series, explores "science in the Sherlockian Canon" and includes scholarship about most of the sciences that appear in the stories, and about Conan Doyle himself as a scientist, concluding with Ashley Polasek's essay "Techno-Rebel: A Case for Steampunk Holmes". The book can be ordered at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/books>.
21430. Harvey Dinnerstein died on June 21. He was a noted artist and educator, best known for his sketches of the Montgomery Bus Boycott in 1956 and the trials that followed. He also provided illustrations for Tales of Sherlock Holmes, a collection published by Macmillan in 1963; you can see one of his illustrations for the book at <www.weheartit.com/entry/316527741>.
21431. There have been many bush fires reported in Australia, including one near Sherlock Station in Western Australia. Sherlock Station has an entry at Wikipedia <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sherlock_Station>, without information on who named it, and why. But there's a Sherlock River not far from the Station. The river was named on July 11, 1861 by the surveyor and explorer Frank Gregory while on expedition in the area (according to Wikipedia), too early to be Canonical; Gregory's report is available on-line <www.gutenberg.org/files/10461/10461-h/10461-h.htm>, but he says only that he named the river Sherlock and doesn't say why.

21432. The Smithsonian Magazine has reported that the oldest footage of New Orleans has been found (in Amsterdam), with a two-minute view of an 1898 Mardi Gras parade <www.tinyurl.com/ys2j2caz>. There's nothing known of what happened to "Samson of New Orleans" (mentioned in "A Study in Scarlet", but if he still was there in 1898, here's what he might have seen <www.youtube.com/watch?v=65DpZ_OnByE>).

21434. And there's more about Sherlock in Western Australia: there's also a Sherlock Bay, named after the river, and the Sherlock Bay Project, which is a nickel-copper-cobalt deposit waiting for development as an open-pit mine <www.miningdataonline.com/property/262/Sherlock-Bay-Project.aspx>.
21435. Bill Barnes notes that there also is a Sherlock in South Australia ("two or three buildings at most, situated on a highway." It apparently was officially named in 1907, with "no research so far on the relevance of the name" <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sherlock_South_Australia>.
21436. Alexis Soloski's article "The Shape-Shifting Sherlock Holmes, Now Playing the Villain" in the N.Y. Times (July 6) <www.tinyurl.com/ya6kmp55> was inspired by the new 10-episode "Moriarty: The Devil's Game" (now available on Audible). Soloski quotes Leslie Klinger, Nicholas Meyer, Ashley Polasek, as well as Charles Kindinger, who wrote the audio drama. If you're blocked by the paper's pay-wall, the article was reprinted in the Indian Express (July 7) <www.tinyurl.com/yz7yff7e>.
21437. Scripts for two of David MacGregor's comedies ("The Adventure of the Elusive Ear" and "The Adventure of the Fallen Soufflé") have been published by TRW Plays <www.trwplays.com/david-macgregor> ($12.95 each for print and $9.00 for digital). His third comedy ("Sherlock Holmes and the Ghost Machine") is due later this year, and he has fun with Holmes and Watson and Irene Adler (who has moved into 221B Baker Street and is pretending to be Mrs. Hudson for the sake of propriety).
21438. Roger Angell died on May 20. He began contributing to The New Yorker in 1944, became its fiction editor in 1956, and had a legendary career over decades at the magazine, writing about baseball and anything else that interested him. His "Turtletaub and the Foul Distemper" (May 30, 1970) had many Sherlockian references (including an evil air pilot named Col. Sebastian Moran).
21439. "I Always Feel Like Somebody's Watching Me: The World of Sherlock Holmes Statues" is the title of Howard Ostrom's newly-revised and expanded (and well-illustrated) essay about more than 50 statues of Sherlock Holmes; you can read (and download) the essay at <www.tinyurl.com/2p8dc6vy>. And his essay on "Holmes Was a Dummy" (about Sherlock Holmes puppetry) is available at <www.tinyurl.com/z7ji4az6>.

21440. It was the geologist/astronaut Jack Schmidt who named Sherlock Crater on the Moon in recognition of Sherlock Holmes as a geologist, but the mission didn't include a visit to the crater. But there's now the Artemis Project, and plans to send astronauts to the Moon again in 2025, recently discussed in GEO ExPro <www.tinyurl.com/mr2m3dee>. One can only hope that at long last they'll be able to visit Sherlock Crater.
21441. The copy of a later edition of The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, signed and inscribed by Conan Doyle to Lady Sackville-West, at auction on July 6 with an estimate of €400-€500 (June 22 #6), sold for €4,423 (including the buyer's premium).
21442. Reported: a new (and revised) edition of David Stuart Davies' Bending the Willow: Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes due on Sept. 1 from TV Brain but available for pre-order now (£22.99) <www.tvbrain.info/shop>; first published in 1996 (March 97 #2).
21443. If you want a copy of the first printing of the splendid catalog for the "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker" exhibition at the Grolier Club in New York, there may be few copies still available at the Mysterious Bookshop ($60.00) <www.tinyurl.com/bdfzrfpk>. The exhibition next will be at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., August 1-Dec. 15, and there will be a second printing available there ($80.00). The exhibition's excellent web-site's at <www.sherlockin221objects.org>.
21444. "Albatross" (2011) is an interesting British coming-of-age film that stars Jessica Brown Findlay as Emilia, who introduces herself as a descendant of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and wants to be a writer; the film has quite a few Doylean (and some Sherlockian) touches.
21445. "The Fires of Fate" (1923) is one of many lost silent films; it was dramatized from Conan Doyle's "The Tragedy of the Korosko" and released in the U.S. as "The Desert Sheik" (1924), and a colorful lithograph-on-linen poster for the film was sold at Heritage Auctions on July 15 for $2,160 (including the buyer's premium) <www.tinyurl.com/mtj6uf9j>. It's interesting to consider the title change: one might suspect that the distributor hoped that people would think they were going to see Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik" (1921).
21446. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder had a nice interview with Paul Eckrich and Rob Nunn, the editors of The Finest Assorted Collection: Essays on Collecting Sherlock Holmes (January 22 #2), discussing collectors and their collections, at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/bden49yp>.
21447. Late-breaking news: Rebecca Romney is helping Curtis Armstrong deaccession his Sherlockian collection: about 25 boxes of material collected over more than 40 years, with more than one thousand items. Her rare-book company, Type Punch Matrix, is creating a special mailing list for Sherlockians who would like to have first crack at the material; if you'd like to be on her mailing list, you can contact her at <info@typepunchmatrix.com>.

July 22 #6

21448. The manuscript of "The Greek Interpreter" (owned by the late David Karpeles) was sold at Heritage Auctions on July 16, for $350,000 (including the buyer's premium), almost setting a new record for a manuscript of a Sherlock Holmes short story ("The Sussex Vampire" sold for $399,500 in 2004). The new owner is Glen Miranker, who now owns more Sherlockian manuscripts than any living collector. Randall Stock's manuscripts web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc79d8j8> has more information. Auction results are often interesting: a single page from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" sold for $423,000 last year (November 21 #5).
21450. The August Derleth Society <www.augustderleth.org> was founded in the late 1970s and continues to celebrate the many-faceted literary career of the creator of Solar Pons. Membership costs $25.00 a year and includes their quarterly newsletter Sage of Sac Prairie; the latest issue offers a nicely illustrated article by Derrick Belanger on "The Science Fiction of August Derleth" (some of which was Pontine). The society's postal address is Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583, and their web-site's at <www.augustderleth.org>.
21451. An oil-on-canvas painting by Sidney Paget of a "Highland River Landscape" was at auction this month <www.tinyurl.com/543vbb3u>, estimated at £500-£700; bidding didn't reach the reserve, and the painting wasn't sold.
21452. Theater news: Neill Hartley will perform his one-man show "Sherlock Holmes & the Speckled Band" at Pennypacker Mills in Schwencksville, Pa., on Aug. 20 <www.montcopa.org/928/Pennypacker-Mills>.
21453. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Riverfall Way" has been scheduled by the Elite Arts Company at the Bullard Creek Auditorium in Midland, Mich., on Aug. 20 <www.tinyurl.com/2vxxksxb>.

21454. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Blue Moon Theatre in Woodstown, N.J., Sept. 16-25; their web-site's at <www.thebluemoontheatre.com>
21455. K. C. Brown's "Sherlock's Veiled Secret" is due at the Bernie Legge Theatre in New Westminster, B.C., Oct. 6-22 <www.vagabondplayers.ca>.
21456. David MacGregor's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Ghost Machine" will be performed at the Toledo Repertoire Theatre, Oct. 21-39; web-site at <www.toledorep.org>.
21457. John Nicholson and Steven Canny's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Carver Theatre in Stockport, Cheshire, Nov. 11-19; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/46pbywp2>.

August 22 #1

21458. This year's Baker Street Irregulars Trust annual webinar lecture will be given by Ray Betzner on Sept. 17 on "The Story of a Sherlockian Sonnet"; Ray's a fervent admirer of, and an expert on, the sonnet's author, Vincent Starrett <www.bsitrust.org/2022/08/register-2022-lecture.html>. The lecture will be free via Zoom, but space may be limited, and early registration is recommended.
21459. The BSI conference on "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" at the Bear Mountain Inn went very well and was great fun. The conference proceedings will be published by the BSI, but if you weren't there, and would like to see what you missed, there's a short report, with nice photographs, at the BSI web-site <www.tinyurl.com/f3xrvnm4>. There's also a link to Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" report (with some interviews) on what went on.
21460. Some of the old hands who were at the conference recalled the years when Bob Thomalen's "Autumn in Baker Street" was held at the Bear Mountain Inn, which then was far less fancy than it is now. But even then it was nicer than what the state of New York originally planned to build at the site: Sing Sing Prison.
21461. If you are going to be at Bouchercon in Minneapolis: Dick Sveum will moderate a Sherlock Holmes morning panel on Sept. 10, with Dana Cameron, Laurie R. King, Leslie S. Klinger, and Liese Sherwood-Fabre.
21462. According to Variety <www.tinyurl.com/yjavytp3>, Millie Bobby Brown will receive $10 million for her appearance in "Enola Holmes 2", and according to People/Entertainment Weekly <www.tinyurl.com/2cz2us9u>, the film will debut on Netflix on Nov. 4 (the story has some images from the film).
21463. Peter McIntyre has reported that Dr. Doyle (a bay gelding) finished first at Monmouth Park, N.J., on July 31; he was the favorite and the payout was $7.20/$4.80/$2.60.
21464. The ACD Society has published a "terrifying update" on its continuing on-line annotated version of the manuscript of "The Terror of Blue John Gap", edited by Margie Deck and Nancy Holder <www.acdsociety.com>. It's a fine example of what on-line scholarship has to offer to anyone with access to the Internet.
21465. It should be noted that Margie Deck does far more than perform as half of the ACD Society's "terror team"; her interesting "Dotings on Doyle" blog ("Reading & Writing with Arthur Conan Doyle & Sherlock Holmes") is on-line at <www.margiedeck.blogspot.com>.
21466. Steve Doyle's Fortnightly Dispatch ended its current season with his interview with Ray Betzner and Steve Rothman, and a discussion of Alexander Woollcott, his relationship with and membership in the Baker Street Irregulars <www.youtube.com/watch?v=v50i6TTY19A>. Steve's next season will begin after a summer break.

21467. Emiel Van Wezel has reported Amanda Williams' interesting web-site <www.buzzaboutbees.net> devoted to "the wonderful world of bees," and a post about "Sherlock Holmes and Bees: Arthur Conan Doyle and the Retirement of His Famous Detective" that offers some interesting Sherlockian and Doylean clippings from various Australian newspapers, at <www.tinyurl.com/muc7w7wf>.
21468. The Beacon Society continues to publish its "quarterly gazette for younger Sherlockians everywhere," and the summer issue of Sherlock's Spotlight is available at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>; the contents include material both by and for younger followers of the Great Detective.
21469. Snoopy appears in Sherlockian costume in two production cels from "It's a Mystery, Charlie Brown" (1974) up for bids at Heritage Auctions on Sept. 23-25 <www.tinyurl.com/35rbyrj8?>.
21470. Maggie Fox died on Mar. 21. She acted on film and television in Britain, but was best known for her many performances with her LipService partner Sue Ryding in parodies such as "Move Over Moriarty" (1996), in which she played Sherlock Holmes on tour for years in Britain and at least once in the U.S.
21471. "I'm sitting low in a Watsonian basket, bolted securely to the side of Simon's burnished-red Royal Enfield Interceptor 650 motorcycle," Anna Hartley wrote in an article in the travel section of the Washington Post (August. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/mr2f5wu8>. One often sees the word Sherlockian, but the word Watsonian not so much; it's in the Oxford English Dictionary (and first noted as used by E. C. Bentley in Those Days (1940).
21472. On the other hand (thanks to Roger Johnson, who knows more about what is going on in Britain): T. F. Watson, a Birmingham builder, patented a design for a folding sidecar, and Watsonian Squire still offers a wide variety of sidecars <www.watsonian-squire.com>.
21473. "Dröol over the personal bookplates of 18 famous writers" was the headline on Emily Temple's post <www.tinyurl.com/yc3uvnwd> to the Literary Hub web-site on July 19; one of the famous writers is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but the bookplate isn't his. The bookplate displays the ornate family coat of arms obtained by Adrian Conan Doyle from the Dublin Herald; Adrian placed in all of the books in his father's library when Adrian moved into the Château de Lucens.
21474. So Far Down Queer Street is a new on-line journal that focuses on "Aspects of Sherlock Holmes Canon and Adaptations Not Usually Covered" and its web-site's at <www.downqueerstreet.com>; click on the menu (at upper right) to find a link to the first issue.
21475. The Hudson Valley Scionists will celebrate their Fiftieth Anniversary on Sept. 18, with cocktails and dinner at the Vassar College Alumnae House in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. (with some of its founding members on hand for the festivities). Additional information is available from Lou Lewis (510 Haight Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <llewis@lewisgreer.com>.

21476. Adrienne Mayor's Flying Snakes & Griffin Claws (Princeton University Press, 2022; 430 pp, $18.95) is a wide-ranging and entertaining exploration of "classical myths, historical oddities, and scientific curiosities" that includes a chapter on "Sea Monsters and Mer-People of the Mediterranean" (and mention of Conan Doyle's account of having seen what he believed to be a young plesiosaur off the coast of the Greek island Aegina in 1928).
21477. June Thomson died on July 26. She was a featured speaker at the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner in 2008, and a prolific author, credited with 24 novels, six collections of imaginative Sherlockian pastiches, and a fine biography of Sherlock Holmes.

21479. Anyone who owns a copy of The Sherlock Holmes Hexalogy, which was letter-press printed and hand-bound at the Thornwillow Press (October 17 #2), will be aware of the fine work they do. You can see what else they have done (and are still doing) by exploring their web-site <www.thornwillow.com>. Copies of the Hexalogy still are available.
21480. It has been said that Sherlockian chronology is the most abstract and confusing and contradictory aspect of the grand game that Sherlockians enjoy playing, and there's plenty of evidence for that in the electronic newsletter of the Sherlockian Chronologist Guild, founded by Brad Keefauver in 2021. Bruce Harris, is one of its members, and he believes that the best thing about Canonical chronology is that there are no right or wrong answers, but in his new It's Not Always 1895: A Sherlockian Chronology (124 pp., $9.95 at Amazon) he offers his own dates for all sixty stories and an excellent look at what can be done with and to the Canon.
21481. Jennie Paton has discovered an advertisement for Sherlock Home (A House of Conundrums) in San Antonio, Tex. <www.tinyurl.com/ymhxxz63>; the Airbnb is described as "a unique immersive overnight experience" in a house designed as an entire evening of game-play for 2-5 guests. "Become Sherlock Holmes surrounded by a Victorian/steampunk setting filled with escape-room-like puzzles and conundrums to solve while you stay."
21482. Hank Ketcham's "Dennis the Menace" comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on July 17 <www.comicskingdom.com/dennis-the-menace>.
21483. There was active bidding for the Sherlockiana and Doyleana in the Heritage Auctions sale 6253 last month (June 22 #5); a copy of Collier's Once a Week Library (1891, the first American edition of "The Sign of the Four") sold for $13,570 (including the buyer's premium), and the three-volume set of Dreamland and Ghostland (1887, with five of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories, his first appearance in a book in Britain) went for $2,250.

21484. Emma McGill has won the 2022 Irene Adler Prize: a $1,000 scholarship for a woman pursuing a degree in journalism, creative writing, or literature. Established in 2017 by Lucas Aykroyd, an award-winning writer and public speaker in Vancouver, B.C.; it is indeed named for the heroine of "A Scandal in Bohemia". You can learn more about the prize, and read the winning essay, at <www.lucasaykroyd.com/scholarships>.
21485. Peter Bowles died on Mar. 17. He had a long career on stage, screen, and television, with starring roles in the BBC series "Rumpole of the Bailey" (1978), "To the Manor Born" (1979), and "The Irish R.M." (1983). He also played Harvey Deacon in a BBC dramatization of Conan Doyle's "Playing with Fire" (1967) and Joseph Harrison in the BBC's "The Naval Treaty" (1968).
21486. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere." This one (noted by Jennie Paton) is in Chester, Conn., and available for only $32,900 <www.tinyurl.com/3fh66jj4>.
21487. The ten-episode audio mini-series "Moriarty: The Devil's Game" (June 22 #4) is featured at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog, where Scott Monty and Burt Wolder interviewed Charles Kindinger, who wrote the script. He first encountered Sherlock Holmes watching "Wishbone" and went on to read all the stories and enjoy creating the mini-series.
21488. Russian artist Margaryta Yermolayeva (now living in the U.S.) creates colorful canvas prints that include a "Sherlock Holmes" scene inspired by the Russian "Baskerville Dog" television program she watched while growing up <www.tinyurl.com/54scytwx>.
21489. Publishers Weekly has reported that HarperCollins has bought, "in a six-figure preempt," Ali Standish's The Improbable Tales of Baskerville Hall; it's a three-book middle-grade series in which "a young Arthur Conan Doyle is selected to attend Baskerville Hall, a school for the extraordinarily gifted." The first book is due in fall 2023.
21490. "The Store for All Sorts: Half Price Books Turns 50" is the headline on a grand story in D Magazine (July 15) <www.tinyurl.com/yc3mywk2> (forwarded by Bill Seil) about why the store (in Dallas, Tex.) has survived so long (now with more than 120 stores in 19 states); they also sell books on-line <www.hpb.com>.
21491. What do you call a squirrel that solves crimes? Jennie Paton has reported a video: <www.youtube.com/watch?v=WzB2YVNU9e0>.
21492. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., this fall will feature a new play "Send in the Clowns" (Oct. 14-16 and 21-23) and performances of Gayle Stahlhuth's "Sherlock Holmes' Adventure of the Norwood Builder" by the Cape May Players (Oct. 21-22) <www.tinyurl.com/28ex38fa>.
21493. Reported: Martin Edwards' new anthology Murder by the Book: Mysteries for Bibliophiles (Poisoned Pen, $14.99) includes a reprint of S. C. Roberts' classic pastiche "The Strange Case of the Megatherium Thefts". It's also available at Audible, read by Ben Onwukwe; you can sample the recording at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/36kha84c>.

21494. When in Barbados: you can visit the Chase Vault in the cemetery of Christ Church Parish, which Conan Doyle believed was haunted. The vault is empty now, and open to any visitors brave enough to step inside, according to a story <www.tinyurl.com/3ja2r8t4> in the Daily Mirror (Aug. 8). You can read what Conan Doyle had to say about the vault in his article "The Law of the Ghost" (1919), reprinted in The Edge of the Unknown (1930).
21495. Conan Doyle Walk in Swindon is in the news (again). Five years ago, when John Blick lived there, he was charged with three counts of assault (August 17 #4). Now the Swindon Advertiser <www.tinyurl.com/5xsehcjz> has reported that James Dean Webdell, also a resident of Conan Doyle Walk, has been charged with brandishing a taser in a brawl in a local pub.
21496. There was much more to the Festival of Britain in 1951 than the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House (some of the items on display there still can be seen at The Sherlock Holmes pub in Northumberland Street); there is a colorful commemoration of the Festival at the National Archives web-site <www.tinyurl.com/c5pffptc>.
21497. David Warner died on July 24. His began acting on stage in 1962, and went on to play Hamlet with the Royal Shakespeare Company, and then had a long career in film, radio, and television, including a performance as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the TV movie "Houdini" (1998).
21498. Henye Meyer's Detective by Design (Brooklyn: Menucha Publishers, 2022; 245 pp., $28.49) offers an answer to the question "what if Sherlock Holmes had been a Jewish woman?" The book is an homage rather than a pastiche: Mrs. Rosa Adler is the detective, in Victorian London, and is adept at observation and deduction.
21499. Jem Belcher will be found in Rodney Stone ("Say 'sir' when you speak to a genelman," said Belcher, and with a sudden tilt of the table he sent Berks flying almost into my uncle's arms.) and he's mentioned in "The Forbidden Subject" in Three of Them. A new film "Prizefighter: The Life of Jim Belcher" (2022) has an official trailer <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Viv3fOgxae> and was reviewed at Boxing Social on July 24 <www.tinyurl.com/2p8dem6d>; it's now streaming on Amazon Prime.
21500. The BBC is celebrating its centenary this year with an interesting web-site that features 100 important objects <www.tinyurl.com/8wrkad3x> that include the "iconic Belstaff Milford coat worn by Benedict Cumberbatch on the BBC's "Sherlock" series.

21501. Ken Greenwald died on May 14. A dedicated enthusiast old-time radio, he was the mastermind behind a company he called 221 "A" Baker Street Associates; in the 1980s and 1990s he produced a long series of audiocassettes with Sherlock Holmes radio programs he rescued from original transcription disks. He also adapted some of the Rathbone/Bruce scripts as short stories in The Lost Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (1989). You can listen to a warm tribute to Ken by John Tefteller (with two non-Sherlockian shows) at his "The Good Old Days of Radio Show" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/54tan9t7>.

21503. Jennie Paton has found "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1937) on-line at You-Tube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kVh9KBpernQ>. The film that starred Bruno Güttner as Holmes and Fritz Odemar as Watson, and a copy of the film was found by Allied troops in Adolph Hitler's private film library at Berchtesgaden (Edgar W. Smith reported this in the Apr. 1948 issue of the Baker Street Journal). Alas: there are no subtitles, so you'll need some German to understand everything.
21504. Candidates for "favorite first lines" can be interesting indeed, and great fun. Janet Rudolph (edited of Mystery Scene) suggests "There's a time and place for erect nipples, but the back of a Seattle police car definitely isn't it." That's the opening of Jennifer Hillier's Things We Do in the Dark (Minotaur Books, July 2022).
21505. Something new in Sherlockian scholarship: Anna Brindisi-Behrens' article "A Study in Speech: The Use of Lisps in the Sherlock Holmes Canon and Beyond" will be found in the summer issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto, always with news of Sherlockian goings-on in Canada. $30.00 a year (US or CA); single issues cost $12.00 <www.torontobootmakers.com>. The issue also includes Ross Davies' discussion of "A Well-Armed, Whistful Colonel" [that's not a typo].
21506. Simon Trelawney's Sherlock Holmes and the Ciphered List (Cambridge: Breese Books, 2022; 339 pp., $15.50) opens with Holmes agreeing to assist a lady who explains that she has accidentally killed a man who was blackmailing her, and quickly becoming involved in a battle against German spies; Watson is far more adventurous in this pastiche than in the Canon, but of course all's well at the end.
21507. "There have been numerous allusions over the years of Clive Reston's rather infamous family tree. His father, though never referenced by name, is British secret agent, James Bond. His great-uncle is London's most notorious detective, Sherlock Holmes. Due to licensing rights, Marvel Comics has never directly stated that either of these literary figures are related to Clive Reston, but the various implications leave little doubt as to their true identities." Yes, that would make Mycroft Holmes the father of James Bond and the grandfather of Clive Reston, who is a character in the Marvel comic-book series "Master of Kung Fu"; you can read all about this genealogy at the PageLagi web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yp9cc2zf> reported by Jennie Paton.

21508. The Long Beach Shakespeare Company continues to offer excellent live radio productions, and has kindly made some of their older recordings available at no charge <www.tinyurl.com/2p9xjr48>. You can listen to their versions of "A Scandal in Bohemia", "The Final Problem", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (and many other non-Sherlockian shows).
21509. In case you don't already have the two-volume The Complete Sherlock Holmes (1953) signed by Conan Doyle, there's a copy at auction at PBA Galleries in San Francisco <www.tinyurl.com/38smpbjd> on Sept. 9, with an estimate of $10,000-$15,00 and an opening bid of $5,000.
21511. Agatha Christie: Marple: Twelve New Mysteries (New York: William Morrow, 2022; 370 pp., $28.99) is an anthology of stories featuring Miss Marple, not written by Christie but rather by a dozen authors whose work will be enjoyed by admirers of Jane Marple. Val McDermid and others do very well in the world of Miss Marple, in St. Mary Mead and elsewhere (including New York and a cruise ship on its way to Hong Kong).
21512. Howard Ostrom reports a new addition to the list of people who have played both Holmes and Moriarty (sort of): Vincent Price, whose Ratigan in "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986) was modeled on the evil professor, is seen in Sherlockian costume in "Elvira Meets Vincent Price #5" in the Dynamite Comics mini-series <www.tinyurl.com/yphfm6bm>.
21513. Josephine Tewson died on Aug. 18. She had a long career on stage and in television in Britain, perhaps best known for her supporting role as the neighbor in "Keeping Up Appearances". She had supporting roles in "Elementary My Dear Watson" on Comedy Playhouse (1973), "The Strange Case of the End of Civilisation as We Know It" (1977), and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978).
21514. Travis McDade's article "The Inside Story of the $8 Million Heist from the Carnegie Library" ran in Smithsonian magazine in Sept. 2020; it recently appeared again at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ypa3cmdz>, and is well worth reading by anyone interested in the world of rare books, even if it doesn't mention Holmes or Conan Doyle.
21515. Conan Doyle is not forgotten in Edinburgh: there's the statue of Sherlock Holmes, not far from the Conan Doyle Pub near Picardy Place, where Conan Doyle was born, and the Dunedin School now in Liberton Bank House, where he lived as a child, and the Conan Doyle Medical Center just next door at 4 Nether Liberton Lane <www.portobello-conandoylesurgery.co.uk>. According to the Edinburgh Evening News (Aug. 2) <www.tinyurl.com/38yjej628>, Dr. A. Comiskey and Partners at the Conan Doyle Center were ranked second in a Scottish government health and care survey.
21516. August 22 #8 Exploits and Adventures of Brigadier Gerard, with a fine introduction by George MacDonald Fraser (New York Review Books, 2001; 417 pp., $18.95), collects all of the short stories about the Brigadier, and offers a chance to see just how good a story-teller Conan Doyle was (Fraser suggests that Conan Doyle "was touched with genius," and does a grand job of explaining why).
21517. The Sewing Crow-Bees <www.sewingcrowbees.org> aren't a Sherlockian society, but they are based in Crowborough (where Conan Doyle lived at Windlesham), and they work hard at supporting local and national charities.
21518. Our postage rates have gone up again: 60¢ for the first ounce and 24¢ each for additional ounces within the U.S., and $1.40 for the first ounce outside the U.S. It cost me 3¢ when I wrote my first letter, and I remember the complaints when the rate rose to 4¢ in 1958.

21519. Theatrics: Peter Colley's new play "The Real Sherlock Holmes" is running at the Lighthouse Theatre in Port Dover, Ont., through Sept. 3, and then will be at the Colborne Theatre in Colborne, Ont. Sept. 7-18' web-site at <www.lighthouseattheatre.com/event/the-real-sherlock>.
21520. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes Returns" is on at the Lifeline Theatre in Chicago, Ill., through Oct. 16 <www.lifelinetheatre.com>.
21521. Paul Gosling's new "The Casebook of Dr. Watson (A Sherlock Holmes Parody)" will be produced at the Sue Townsend Theatre in Leicester, Leics., Sept. 8-9 <www.tinyurl.com/5ee8kjp>.
21522. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is due at the White Rock Players' Club in White Rock, B.C., Sept. 29-Oct. 16 <www.whiterockplayers.ca>; at the Westchester Playhouse in Los Angeles, Calif., Mar. 17-Apr. 8, 2023 <www.kentwoodplayers.org>; and at the freeFall Theatre in St. Petersburg, Fla., Mar. 23-Apr. 23; web-site at <www.freefalltheatre.com>.
21523. Owen Thomas' "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (with Nigel Miles-Thomas as Holmes) has completed its run at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, and is set for an extensive tour: at the Shangri-La Chang Mai (Thailand), Sept. 30-31; at the Continental Hotel in Saigon (Viet Nam), Oct. 7-8; at the Sukhothai hotel in Bangkok (Thailand), Oct. 21-23; and at the Marriott Hotel in Phuket (Thailand), Oct. 27-29.
21524. Eric Coble's "The Baker Street Irregulars" is due at the Trinity Preparatory School in Winter Park, Fla., Oct. 7-8 <www.cfcartr.com/sherlock>.
21525. Richard James' "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery at Mallen Hall" is to be performed at the Ritchie Memorial Hall in Eastleigh, Hants., on Oct. 27-29 <www.chameleonthatre.co.uk>.

21526. The Baker Street Almanac 2022, edited by Ross E. Davies, Jayantika Ganguly, Ira Brad Matetsky, and Monica Schmidt, is now available in print for $30.00 postpaid <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/2022.html> or from The Green Bag, 6600 Barnaby Street NW, Washington, DC 20015), with a copiously-annotated edition of "The Abbey Grange" (and much more about the Sherlockian world); it's modestly described as an "annual capsule of a timeless past and future," and this year offers 372 pages of thoroughly enjoyable reading. Almanacs for previous years are available on-line (free) as PDFs at <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/bsa.html>.
21527. "London Plaques to People Who Never Existed" is the headline on a recent post at the Londonist web-site <www.tinyurl.com/bdfvh79f> that begins with "A Pair of Sherlocks, Smithfield and Piccadilly" and shows the plaques inside Barts, installed in 1953, and the Criterion (now Granaio), installed in 1981.
21528. Howard Ostrom's newly revised "A-Z List of Sherlock Holmes Performers" has been posted at <www.nplh.co.uk/a-z-index.html>; it now has 8,250 entries (and 17,000 images) from stage, screen, radio, television, fashion, advertising, cosplay, music, fandom, and the Internet. "You must see this to believe it," according to Howard, and he's right. He also asks you to let him know about anyone he has missed <howardostrom@gmail.com>.
21529. Reported: Long Memories and Other Writings, by Peter Cannon (Hippocampus, 2022) includes a reprint of his novella Pulptime: Being a Singular Adventure of Sherlock Holmes, H. P. Lovecraft, and the Kalem Club as If Narrated by Frank Belknap Long, Jr. (1984).
21530. "...of all characters in recent literature, as a matter of personal preference, I would choose to have been the creator of Sherlock Holmes." From a letter written by E. Phillips Oppenheim in 1927, with a long paragraph explaining the major reasons for his choice, offered by the Mysterious Bookshop in August for $100.00. The letter was published in the Strand Magazine (Dec. 1927) in a symposium on "The Great Characters of Fiction: Which Should I Most Like to Have Created?"
21531. Conan Doyle's response to that question was, "I think Colonel Newcome, as the ideal English gentleman, would have my vote." The late Ted Schulz reported this back in 1983, and if you're wondering who Colonel Newcome was, Marsha Pollak quickly identified him as the principal character in William Makepeace Thackeray's The Newcomes (1853). If you would like to know more about the colonel, the book's readily available on-line (and free) at Project Gutenberg.
21532. "This Map Lets You Plug in Your Address to See How It's Changed Over the Past 750 Million Years" is the headline on a story at the Smithsonian web-site about a new interactive map that's a grand demonstration of how modern technology has made geology so interesting; Sherlockians are welcome to see how London (well, the location of London) has changed over millions of years, or you can track your own home town <www.tinyurl.com/mrywj4wx>.

21533. "The Jewel in the Canon" is the next expedition planned by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London for Mar. 11-Apr. 2: a three-week trip to India, tailored for the Society and described as the "tour of a lifetime." You'll find the details, and an opportunity to register for more information about the tour, at <www.tinyurl.com/yrca5dsw>.
21534. Nicholas Utechin ("The Ancient British Barrow") died on Aug. 17. He was a senior producer at BBC Radio 4, a dedicated Sherlockian scholar, a champion of Oxford in what he called "the controversy" over where Holmes was at college, the editor of the Sherlock Holmes Journal for thirty years, an honorary member of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and an energetic contributor to the writings about the writings on both sides of the Atlantic. The Baker Street Irregulars awarded his Investiture to Nick in 1975. If you want to see him in action, you can watch his (virtual) presentation about "British Beginnings" at a 2020 meeting of the Red Circle of Washington <www.youtube.com/watch?v=pPCoQU-VfRs>.
21535. "Was This Letter Written by Sherlock Holmes?" was the headline on a story in Atlas Obscura (Sept. 15) <www.tinyurl.com/2p8zjyn8>; there's more at the Lilly Library now than Glen Miranker's exhibition "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects" <www.sherlockin221objects.org>.
21536. The late W. T. Rabe is still remembered fondly: Bill Castanier tells some nice stories about Bill (and quotes his epitaph) in the Lansing City Pulse (Jan. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/4y36mvm>.
21537. David Corbett's "The Murderer's Paradox" was published in the anthology In League with Sherlock Holmes (2020), and he had some interesting things to say about writing the pastiche, in his post to the Writer Unboxed blog on Dec. 11, 2020 <www.tinyurl.com/ae256n4z>. He quotes James N. Frey imaginative "Ten Rules of Writing" and you can read what Frey said about them at his web-site <www.jamesnfrey.com/articles/tenrules.html>.
21538. Time for a trivia question, courtesy of Howard Ostrom: name the only known father and son who both played Sherlock Holmes.
21539. "You don't happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?" asked Sherlock Holmes (in "The Three Gables"). A copy of the First Folio offered at Sotheby's on July 21 sold for $2,470,000 (including the buyer's premium) <www.tinyurl.com/mvaj5774>.
21540. Mary Burke has forwarded the Babylon Bee's recent report from Dr. Sherlock Bones <www.tinyurl.com/mpds2cen>; the Babylon Bee's motto is "Fake news you can trust."
21541. The Conan Doyle Collection lecture series in Portsmouth earlier this year (May 22 #4) included David Gigauro's lecture (via Zoom) about "Conan Doyle and the Magnificent Mdivani". There were five Mdivani children, sometimes called "the marrying Mdivanis" (the boys were known as "the million dollar studs"). One of Nina's husbands was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's son Denis, and in 1975 she was honored by the Baker Street Irregulars as The Woman. You can watch Gigauri's lecture on-line at www.vimeo.com/714028872.

21542. "The Princess's explorations in the field of English literature are of greater interest and perhaps of greater significance," Wilson Harris wrote in his article "The Education of a Queen" in the Atlantic Monthly (Dec. 1943). The princess was 17-year-old Elizabeth (now Elizabeth II), and Harris noted that "in lighter moments she turns to Conan Doyle (I hope The White Company as well as Sherlock Holmes)." The entire article is available on-line at www.tinyurl.com/2t94zjd4.
21543. Name the only father and son who both played Sherlock Holmes. Ian Richardson played Holmes on television in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (1993), and Miles (his son) played Holmes on stage in "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure at Sir Arthur Sullivan's" (1994).
21544. "Now that Wayne had broken through, he was keen to expand his big-screen horizons. When asked by Olive Carey, the wife of Western actor Harry Carey, what he'd like to do next, he said he'd like to play Edward the Black Prince in an adaptation of Arthur Conan Doyle's Hundred Years' War adventure, 'The White Company'." That's according to Jeremy Smith, who posted to Slash Film (Aug. 30), "Without a Bit of Blunt Advice, John Wayne Might Have Left Westerns Behind." www.tinyurl.com/2p8ddtpy. That would have been an adaptation by John Ford; read the post to see what Olive Carey's blunt advice was.
21545. The Cohen Media Group www.cohenmedia.net offers a variety of high-quality 4K restorations of old films, including Buster Keaton's "Sherlock Jr." (1924); there's also his "Battling Butler" (1926), a non-Sherlockian film in which he's seen wearing a deerstalker, and you can see trailers for all of their films at their web-site.
21546. Arthur Liebman ("Vamberry, the Wine Merchant") died on Aug. 18. He taught graduate-level courses in Mystery, Detective, and Gothic Fiction at Hofstra University and the State University of New York at Stony Brook, performed a popular one-man show "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes". He also organized "Sherlock Holmes Mystery Cruises" for the Holland-America Line, and wrote The Biographical Sherlock Holmes: An Anthology/Handbook (1984). He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
21547. An oil-on-academy-board painting of "Cascade Inferieure du Reichenbach" by the Swiss landscape artist Alexandre Calame (1810-1864) was available at Thomaston Place Auction Galleries on Aug. 27, with an estimate of $8,000- $12,000; bidding didn't meet the reserve, and the painting didn't sell.
21548. Nancy Springer's Enola Holmes and the Elegant Escapade (New York: Wednesday Books, 2022; 232 pp, $18.95), the eighth in her series about the sister of Sherlock Holmes, has Enola now living independently in London and working as a scientific perditioner, working hard to rescue a young girl from a brutish and evil father. Springer has won four Edgar Awards from the Mystery Writers of America, two of them for earlier books in the series, and it's nice see Enola back in action again. And there's no need to worry about spoilers: the new "Enola Holmes 2" film, coming up on Netflix on Nov. 4, has an entirely different plot. There's a trailer for the new film at www.youtube.com/watch?v=KXNmYoPxo0.

21549. Two Parts Sugar, One Part Murder, by Valerie Burns (New York: Kensington, 2022; 266 pp., $16.95) is an interesting example of how Sherlock Holmes has become part of the cultural literacy; it's not a pastiche, but rather a sprightly murder mystery featuring Maddy Montgomery, a social-media devotee who inherits a small-town Michigan bakery from a great-aunt who may or may not have been murdered, and who has read Sherlock Holmes and is assisted by local residents she calls her Baker Street Irregulars.
21550. The Hotel Rosenblau www.rosenblau.ch is a refuge for those who want to get away from modern digital distractions: "The common rooms offer reading materials, games, and plenty of room for discussions. TV, radio, and Internet connections are not available. The hotel has limited reception for mobile phones." It's also possible that Sherlock Holmes stayed there after his battle with Moriarty at the Reichenbach.
21551. It's not the Mazarin Stone (a 77-carat yellow diamond never owned by the Cardinal), but the spectacular Williamson Pink Star will be at auction at Sotheby's in Hong Kong on October 5 www.tinyurl.com/vrhms2e5. If you'd like to know more about that 77-carat yellow diamond, see the article "In Memoriam: Muzaffar ad-Din" in the Baker Street Journal (Sept. 1974).
21552. "I keep a bull pup," Watson said (in "A Study n Scarlet"), and Sherlockian scholars have spilled a great deal of ink over the years trying to explain just what that bull pup was and what happened to it. James C. O'Leary has written about this for Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog www.tinyurl.com/yerabyan and concludes with an interesting answer to the question.
21553. Johanna Draper Carlson's "Sherlock Holmes in Comics" web-site covers comics, graphic novels, and manga (February 22 #7), and she recently posted a 45- minute colorful video tour www.tinyurl.com/34ezr3b8 of what she does and how her web-site works.
21554. Richard A. Wein ("Silver Blaze") died on Sept. 9. He worked as a tax manager for a CPA firm and was a dedicated Sherlockian. He was a member of the Three Garridebs for forty years, and active in many other societies. Richard co-hosted several runnings of The Silver Blaze at Belmont Park in the 1980s, acted in Sherlockian skits, and enjoyed wearing a shoulder sash on which he displayed his collection of Sherlockian pins. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1986.
21555. Those who still use fountain pens and real ink will find that De Atramentis www.de-atramentis.com/en offers a wide variety of inks, including a Sherlock Holmes ink. Jennie Paton found an in-depth review of their Sherlock Holmes ink at YouTube www.youtube.com/watch?v=7MJjxYZ95QY.
21556. Bill Seil has forwarded a Publishers Weekly report that the British publisher Angry Robot Books has launched a new crime-fiction imprint, Datura Books www.publishersweekly.com/pw/newsbrief/index.html?record=3899; it's an intriguing choice of a name www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Datura that may be familiar to Agatha Christie fans www.tinyurl.com/24u3fx93.

21557. Her Royal Highness Queen Elizabeth II died on Sept. 8 at Balmoral. Her son, now King Charles III, performed as Sir Cummerbund Overspill in 1969 in "The Hound of the Overspills" (a short skit included in an annual revue produced by the Dryden Society of Trinity College, Cambridge University). Alas, there is no photograph of him in the role, but the script for the skit was published by Bill Rabe in the Commonplace Book, June 1969.
21558. Daniel Craig's "Knives Out" (2019) was a delightful blend of mystery and comedy and excellent acting, with a few imaginative Canonical allusions, and "Glass Onion: A Knives Out Mystery" will debut on Netflix on Dec. 23. You can read a spoiler-free review at www.tinyurl.com/57t6xsdb.
21559. "Timeshift: How to Be Sherlock Holmes: The Many Faces of a Master Detective" is a delightful television program that was broadcast by the BBC in 2014, and Jennie Paton has reported that it's now available at YouTube at www.youtube.com/watch?v=YPsB2u_UeDg.

21560. Bonnie MacBird's What Child Is This? (New York: Collins Crime Club, 2022; 225 pp., $26.99), the fifth in her series of novels about Holmes and Watson, offers her readers a "Sherlock Holmes Christmas Adventure" that finds them involved in two cases, dark rather than festive, with attractive artwork by Frank Cho, and a chance to see Holmes in a mellower seasonal mood than in the familiar Canon.
21561. SHERLOC is alive and well and working hard on Mars, and you can read about it at the Debrief web-site (Sept 15) <www.tinyurl.com/3hx5type>. There's even a nice Canonical quote (and they didn't believe they needed to tell their readers who said it).
21562. Lloyd Fradkin presides over Lloyd's Beware the Blog: A Motion Picture and Television History Blog, and Sean Wright has noted a post about Jay Ward and Alex Anderson <www.tinyurl.com/muhzzr4n>; in 1947 they created Hamhock Jones, who fights his arch enemy, a Siamese twin; the problem is: one twin is good and the other the evil mastermind, but which is which? The post includes some of the artwork for the never-produced television animation. Some of their other creations did get made: Crusader Rabbit and Dudley Do-Right. You can also see a few minutes of Hamhock Jones, thanks to Burt Wolder, who found some footage at Vimeo <www.vimeo.com/155887788>.
21563. Reported by Badre Bally: a new Blu-ray edition of "Sherlock Hound" (the delightful 1984 Japanese television series), remastered, with English subtitles and some added features, due at the end of November from Discotek <www.rightstufanime.com/Sherlock-Hound-Blu-ray>. Scott Monty's discussion of the series can be read on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/mr2vyzww>.

21565. William Meikle's Inspector Lestrade: The Black Temple and Other Stories (Central Point: Weird House, 2022; 243 pp., $45.00) is a collection of twelve stories that involve the Inspector in a series of supernatural cases, with atmospheric illustrations by M. Wayne Miller; Lestrade is competent and conscientious.
21566. J. R. Campbell's Improbable Remains: The Bizarre and Unconventional Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (2022; 288 pp., $45.00) is a similar collection of eleven stories (six reprints and five new) featuring Holmes and Watson in well-told tales in the horror genre. Both books are limited editions, hard-bound and signed, and the publisher is at <www.weirdhousepress.com>; click on [our books] to see all their "Sherlock Holmes Adventures". Campbell was interviewed recently at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/3kf2bn6x>.
21567. It can be interesting to read book reviews written by an expert (such as a review of Moby Dick written by a cetologist, or The Lost World by a paleontologist): Rene Schweitzer has recently reviewed three mysteries at the Trains web-site, one of them being Barry Roberts' Sherlock Holmes and the Railway Maniac (1994) <<https://tinyurl.com/yk2hxzv6>>.
21568. One of the many animation characters to appear in Sherlockian costume was Roquefort ("the big cheese detective"), in "The Aristocats" (1970); a production cel from the film <www.tinyurl.com/yjw5czma> brought $129 (including the buyer's premium) at Heritage Auctions on Sept. 21.
21571. There's all sorts of interesting Sherlockian music to be found on the Internet, and Jennie Paton turned up the acapella group MayTree's version of the "Sherlock" theme music <www.youtube.com/watch?v=li_XYcNeBa4>. If you would like to see what else they can do, they have their own YouTube channel at <www.youtube.com/channel/UC3mY2SKYhPqImltBBXsR6_Q>.
21572. The impressive International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition opens at the Minnesota History Center in St Paul on Oct. 20 <www.mnhs.org/historycenter>, and the Norwegian Explorers and the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota will host a mini-conference on "The Timeless Sherlock Holmes" on Oct. 22 with some distinguished visiting and local speakers <www.tinyurl.com/29kxnum9>.

21573. David Warner's Over My Dead Body (Fremantle: Fremantle Press, 2022; 258 pp., $19.95), a thriller as well as a mystery, features Georgette Watson (his great-great-granddaughter), a cryogenicist who freelances for the New York police department and finds that her ancestor preserved Holmes' frozen body after the battle at the Reichenbach. So she thaws him out, and they quickly are involved in pursuing a vicious serial killer. The story's well told, with interesting supporting characters and some nice twists and turns.
21574. The two-page manuscript for Conan Doyle's "The Argument from Necromancy" will be offered at Potter & Potter Auctions on Oct. 20, with an estimate of $6,000-$8,000 <www.tinyurl.com/bde8tsve>.
21575. Olivia Rutigliano's series of "Little Essays on Sherlock Holmes" appears at the CrimeReads web-site, began with a close reading of what she called "one of the strangest Holmes stories" <www.tinyurl.com/bdfbe7zp> (that's "The Engineer's Thumb"), and continues with "The Boscombe Valley Mystery" <www.tinyurl.com/2sc6cumd>.
21576. Paul Forster's one-man show "Conjuring the Dead" (about a séance that Houdini and Conan Doyle attended in Harrogate. N. Yorks.) premiered in July during the Durham Fringe Festival, and it will be presented at the Crown Hotel in Harrogate, on Oct. 28-30 <www.tinyurl.com/mv5euy5d>. There's an audio interview with Forster at <www.tinyurl.com/33h2k63r>.
21577. Sherlockian's who enjoy maps will welcome Leslie Katz's new essay "'A Map Is Not the Territory': Sherlock Holmes' Use of Maps"; it's available on-line at <www.papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=4217901>.
21578. The Mini-Tonga Scion Society may be inactive, but people still are having fun creating Sherlockian miniatures: Jennie Paton has noted Betty Stein's miniature diorama at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=x4eAtCvDtDk>.
21579. Peter Brooks' Seduced by Story: The Use and Abuse of Narrative (New York: New York Review Books, 2022; 173 pp., $17.95) is a scholarly sequel to his Reading for the Plot: Design and Intention in Narrative (1984); he begins with a quote from "Game of Thrones" television series ("There's nothing in the world more powerful than a good story. Nothing can stop it. No enemy can defeat it.") and cites the Canon as one of many examples of the power of narrative. He also explains how narrative can be (and is) used to deceive readers and listeners, and warns of the dangers involved in what he calls the storification of reality.

21580. Kenneth W. Starr died on Sept. 13. He was an American lawyer and judge, best known for the Communication from Kenneth W. Starr, Independent Counsel, Transmitting a Referral to the United States House of Representatives Filed in Conformity with the Requirements of Title 28, United States Code, Section 595(c); the Starr Report led to the impeachment of President Clinton, and it stated (on p. 158) that “Ms. Lewinsky testified that that she gave the President a number of additional gifts,” and that “these included a Sherlock Holmes game sometime after Christmas 1996.”

21595. Sherlockians will gather in New York on Jan. 4-8 to honor Sherlock Holmes’ 169th birthday, and planning for almost all of the traditional events is afoot. There’s a “Plans for BSI Weekend” page at the Baker Street Irregulars web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com> that has information on BSI and non-BSI events; most of the events are open to everyone, and there always is much more going on than anyone with reasonable sense or stamina is able to deal with. There also will be information available in mid-November at Scott Monty’s excellent web-site <www.bsiweekend.com>; his helpful “Here Are Your #BSIWeekend Tips” will be found at <ihose.co/bsi2023tips> in December. It’s also a good idea to sign up for News from the BSI to hear about Weekend news and when public registration opens for the festivities <www.tinyurl.com/yc5tsz27>.
21597. On location with Buster Keaton: John Bengtson (“the great detective of silent film locations,” according to the N.Y. Times) has an interesting YouTube channel where he takes you on a tour of locations for Buster Keaton’s “Sherlock Jr.” (1924) <www.youtube.com/watch?v=tDQdOmnBGw&t=76s>. Kindly reported by Jennie Paton.
21598. For all of the fans of professional hockey: Alex Ovechkin, left winger and captain of Washington Capitals, likes to dress in costume for Russian television commercials, and Jennie Paton has spotted him in Sherlockian costume at the RMNB [Russian Machine Never Breaks] web-site in a commercial for Russia’s PSB bank <www.tinyurl.com/43b8bx6k>.
21599. Barbara Peters and Patrick Millikin welcomed Les Klinger to the Poisoned Pen Bookstore in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Oct. 6 for a discussion of his The New Annotated Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (just published by the Mysterious Press), and much more, and you can watch the goings-on at their YouTube channel <www.youtube.com/watch?v=WVENiQKyUxo>.
21600. Tim Johnson has reported a new 26-minute film from the Mayo Clinic (“Finding Substance X: The Team That Created Cortisone”) that features Dr. Philip S. Hench, who shared a Nobel Prize for the results of his research, and with his wife Mary put together the magnificent collection that’s a cornerstone of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota <www.tinyurl.com/3pusytk6>.
21601. “Holmes and Yoyo” was a 1976 television series that was Sherlockian only for starring Richard Shull (a member of the Baker Street Irregulars) as Det. Sgt. Alexander Holmes, who is partnered with Det. Sgt. Gregory “Yoyo” Yoyonovich, who turns out to be an android. All these years later, Paul Thomas Miller offers a video of “Holmesian Yo-Yo Tricks” (recently noted by Jennie Paton).

21602. There were some interesting Sherlockiana and Doyleana offered at a sale of rare books and manuscripts in New York on Oct. 6, including four non-Sherlockian manuscripts; Randall Stock has posted detailed information (and images) at his “The Best of Sherlock Holmes” web-site <www.tinyurl.com/xifyma2s>. The highlight of the sale, for Sherlockians, certainly, was the rare inscribed copy of the first Spencer Blackett edition of The Sign of Four (1890); the estimate was $20,000-$30,000 and it sold for $201,600 (including the buyer’s premium).
21603. The spectacular Williamson Pink Star <www.tinyurl.com/vrhms2e5> did very well at Sotheby’s in Hong Kong on Oct. 5; the 11.15-carat diamond sold for $57,736,078 (including the buyer’s premium) and set a new record for price per carat for any diamond or gemstone. It’s also the second most valuable jewel or gemstone ever sold at auction.

21604. In case you don't know about the most valuable jewel or gemstone ever sold at auction, it's the 59.60-carat Pink Star that was sold at Sotheby's in 2017 for $71.2 million <www.tinyurl.com/3vpj922y>; it weighed 132.50 carats uncut when it was mined by De Beers in 1999, and took two years to cut and polish.
21605. Plan ahead: The Legion of Zoom will hold its second annual virtual conference (exploring "The Sitting Zoom at 221b Baker Street") at 2:00 pm (eastern) on Feb. 19, 2023; more information, and a registration button, can be found at <www.tinyurl.com/ycpru7mt>.
21606. "Greetings, old friends," is a phrase that will please fans of "Star Trek: The Next Generation". It's a lovely preview of things to come, in a teaser <www.youtube.com/watch?v=wo2V1cSVj-w> for the ten-episode third season of "Star Trek: Picard" that will be streamed on Paramount+ beginning Feb. 16.
21607. Spoiler alert: those fateful words are spoken by Daniel Davis, who's back as Moriarty, who was featured in two episodes of the original series: "Elementary, Dear Data" (1988) and "Ship in a Bottle" (1993). If you want to know (much) more about the series, and the episodes, Wikipedia has a helpful entry <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Star_Trek:_The_Next_Generation>.
21609. Robert J. Harris' The Devil's Blaze: Sherlock Holmes 1943 (New York: Pegasus Crime, 2022; 276 pp., $26.00) is his second pastiche inspired by the Universal series of films that brought Holmes and Watson into the 1940s; they're in war-time Britain, investigating a series of grotesque murders, pursuing Professor Moriarty and hard at work preventing a German victory. The author's web-site is at <www.harris-authors.com>.

21610. Steve Mason wonders why this (non-Sherlockian) sentence is unusual (October 22 #2): it's a palindrome, provided by Steve in the October issue of The Bilge Pump, the monthly newsletter of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star (the Sherlockian society in Dallas/Fort Worth); the issue is conveniently available at their web-site <www.dfw-sherlock.org>. Actually, you can read all the issues of their newsletter, which was launched in June 2013, since they're archived at the web-site, along with much more of interest. There are (so far) a few other societies that archive their newsletters on-line; it's a wonderful way to make Sherlockian scholarship available to everyone.
21611. At last! Jennie Paton has discovered that The Russian television series "Sherlock: The Russian Chronicles" (with Maxim Matveev as Holmes) (Apr. 20 #6) will soon be available on DVDs. That's the good news. The bad news is that the DVDs will be in European PAL format, in Russian with subtitles only in French <www.tinyurl.com/3rk4c6nu>. Sherlock Holmes is in St. Petersburg, following the trail of Jack the Ripper (who has fled to Russia), and you can see a trailer at <www.start.ru/watch/sherlok-v-rossii>.
21612. Japan Today had a colorful report on Oct. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/5n8e3frj> on the new Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at the British Antique Museum in Kamakura; the museum's web-site's at <www.bam-kamakura.com>.
21613. The Blackeyed Theatre's tour of Nick Lane's new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear" began in Britain on Sept. 14, but you won't need to travel to Britain to see it: it's being streamed on-line through Jan. 22, and is well worth watching <www.tinyurl.com/mry6sxz5>.
21614. Daniel Stashower's American Demon: Eliot Ness and the Hunt for America's Jack the Ripper (New York: Minotaur, 2022; 342 pp., $29.99) is his latest non-fiction book, about the man who helped bring down Al Capone in Chicago and then found himself in Cleveland, attempting to solve a series of brutal murders; there are passing mentions of Sherlock Holmes (Dan knows this is important in persuading Sherlockians to read his books), and the book's great fun.
21615. Why would you want to read a book? Jennie Paton found an amusing commentary on that question, on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=F2GERJ38Zvk>.
21616. "Musings on Amusements in the Canon" is the title of the next conference scheduled by the Reichenbach Irregulars in Leukerbad, Switzerland, on June 1-4, 2023 <www.tinyurl.com/25zphw74>; planning for the conference continues, and visitors from far and near are welcome to participate in the festivities.
21617. The Christopher Morley Knothole Association is hosting an illustrated lecture on one of his favorite topics: the Long Island Railroad. David Morrison will talk about steam trains, and the LIRR from its inception to the time when Morley rode the rails from the 1930s to the 1950s, at the Bryant Library in Roslyn, N.Y., on Nov. 3, at 6:30 pm. The meeting is free, and open to the public; more information about the event, and the Knothole Association, is available from Peter Cohn <apacohn@aol.com>.

21618. Nights of Plague, by Orhan Pamuk (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2022; 683 pp., $34.00), published in Turkey last year and now available in an English translation, is a novel disguised as a history of the fictional island of Mingheria, ruled by the Abdul Hamid II, Sultan of the Ottoman Empire; in 1901 the island is beset by virulent bubonic plague that ravishes the Christian Greeks and Muslim Turks who live there. The Sultan, in the novel and in fact an admirer of the Sherlock Holmes stories, sends an epidemiologist to the island, instructed to use Sherlockian deduction to solve a murder. Pamuk also notes that when Conan Doyle visited Turkey in 1907, he received the Order of the Mecidiye from Abdul Hamid, who was deposed in 1909. Not in the novel but widely reported: Hamid, on his last night as Sultan listened to a courtier read a translation of a Sherlock Holmes story in an issue of The Strand Magazine. Nick Hilden's interview with Pamuk, about the book and much more, was published in the Washington Post (Book World) on Oct. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/45hmksdk>.
21619. There's a fine slide show of treasures in the cases at the splendid exhibition of "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker" (at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., through Dec. 16) at the exhibition web-site <www.sherlockin221objects.org/the-lilly-library>.
21620. Canonical Cameos, by the late Donald A. Redmond, is a collection of entertaining poems he wrote in 1976, now published for the first time in a 16-page pamphlet that was a souvenir prepared by his son Christopher Redmond for the recent "Jubilee@221B" conference in Toronto; copies are available from Chris for $5.00 postpaid via PayPal at <redmond2@execulink.com>.
21621. There was a nice article by Steve Marsh about the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota at the Mpls.St.Paul magazine web-site on Oct. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/mr2efnj5>. Tim Johnson, librarian and curator of the collections, explained that "we still have archiving to do. I call it job security."
21622. The Deadline web-site noted on Oct. 3 <www.tinyurl.com/4vbtvxz> that work has begun on a new mystery series for CBS-TV. Craig Sweeney, who worked on the "Elementary" series for five years, most of them as executive producer, will write the new series, which features Dr. Watson, back in practice a year after the death of Holmes at the hands of Moriarty. The new series isn't even "in development" yet, so don't hold your breath.

21624. Don Hobbs has added language #113 to his data-base of translations of the Canon, thanks to Marsha Pollak who found a Khmer translation at the International Book Center in Phnom Penh in 2018 (Khmer is the official and national language of Cambodia). Don's massive (and colorfully-illustrated) data-base (which he calls "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes") is available on-line at <www.dfw-sherlock.org/galactic-sherlock-holmes.html>.

21625. "Boss of Sherlock Holmes Museum Continues 'Bitter' High Court Battle with His Little Brother Who Is Refusing to Move out of £1 million House Which Has Been His Home for 25 Years" was the headline on an article in the Daily Mail (on Oct. 17) <www.tinyurl.com/dkkr9hn3> about the seemingly perpetual lawyering among John Aidiniantz and members of his family, who have "racked up more than £2.5 million in costs and court orders" in a decade-long battle over profits from the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 221B Baker Street.
21626. Angela Lansbury died on Oct. 11. She had a long and distinguished career acting on screen and stage and television, and became a household name as Jessica Fletcher on "Murder, She Wrote" which ran for 12 seasons on CBS-TV from 1984 to 1996. The pilot episode for the series ("The Murder of Sherlock Holmes") is discussed in detail at <www.vimeo.com/115878284>.
21627. The Dramatic Publishing Co. <www.dramaticpublishing.com> offers a wide variety of scripts (16 in all) for regional and school productions of Sherlock Holmes plays.
21628. Daniel Monaghan (who stars in the title role in Treefort Media's ten-episode audio mini-series "Moriarty: The Devil's Game") gave an interesting interview to the Sydney Morning Herald <www.tinyurl.com/3stmn52k> on Oct. 19, talking about the mini-series and much more. You can sample the mini-series <www.audible.com/pd/Moriarty-Podcast/B0B2DZBVRR>; Phil LaMarr stars as Sherlock Holmes.
21629. Owen Thomas' "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (with Nigel Miles-Thomas as Holmes and Daniel Foley as Watson) continues its tour in Asia, and there's a nice review of the show at Ben's Theater in Jomtien, Thailand, published in the Pattaya Mail on Oct. 19 <www.tinyurl.com/ya2akckb>.
21630. Original production cels from the classic animated film "Deduce, You Say!" (1956) aren't easy to find. Teresa Rettig reports that one is available from the Chuck Jones Gallery for $5,950 <www.tinyurl.com/ydsfn5r8>. They weren't nearly as expensive in 2009, when one sold for $3,585 at Heritage Auctions <www.tinyurl.com/ymspzksx>. Of course you can settle for limited edition cels that are made for collectors and cost much less.
21631. "A Doctor, a Deduction, and Death Averted" is an interesting essay on "how doctor and writer Simon Stephenson's love for Sherlock Holmes helped him save his mother's life", published at the CrimeReads web-site on Oct. 19 <www.crimereads.com/a-doctor-a-deduction-and-a-death-averted>. Stephenson explains that he was born in the same hospital as Sherlock Holmes, and has a good story to tell.
21632. When in Whitstable (in Kent): you can visit the Whitstable Community Museum and Gallery, to see its exhibition honoring the late Peter Cushing, who lived there for 35 years <www.whitstablemuseum.org/exhibit/peter-cushing>. Howard Ostrom has found a video tour of the exhibition, when it opened in 2013 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vEtpEfts8k>; the exhibits include costumes he wore as Sherlock Holmes (Cushing played Holmes many times on screen and on television, and Conan Doyle once on television).

21633. "A Sherlockian Semiquincentennial" is the title of the 250th episode of "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" audio show that was launched in 2007 by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder; it's still going strong, and offers a search engine and a complete archive of 15 years of discussions and interviews that are well worth investigating.
21634. And yes indeed, semiquincentennial is a real word, not recognized by the Word spell-checker but nevertheless in dictionaries. You can also celebrate sestercentennials and quarter millenniums, and you can expect to see all of those words on July 4, 2026, the 250th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence of the 13 colonies that became the United States of America.
21635. Leslie Katz has written many papers on Canonical topics, and all of them are conveniently available at <www.ssrn.com/author=1164057>; his latest is "Thrills and Chills and Postage and Wills: A Look at a Few Aspects of 'The Five Orange Pips'".
21636. Andy Lane who has written eight novels in his "Young Sherlock" series and two in his "Lost World" series, and many more in non-Sherlockian and non-Doylean genres, was interviewed at length recently at the Time Scales web-site <www.youtube.com/watch?v=xcxmJ_WmNtA>, kindly reported by Jennie Paton.
21637. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the State Theater in Olympia, Wash., Jan. 27-Feb. 11; web-site at <www.harlequinproductions.org>. Also at Cheney Hall in Manchester, Conn., Feb. 3-19 <www.cheneyhall.org>; and the Amelia Community Theatre in Fernandina Beach, Fla., June 9 to 24 <www.ameliacommunitytheatre.org>; and the Totem Pole Playhouse in Fayetteville, Pa., June 16-July 2 <www.totempoleplayhouse.org>.
21638. "William Gillette's Legacy Shines a Bit Brighter at Farmington Cemetery" was the headline on a story <www.tinyurl.com/49mhv35y> in the Middletown Press (Oct. 11) about the restoration of the headstones at the graves of William and Helen Gillette, with a photograph that includes the Gillettes (impersonated by Tyke and Teddie Niver).
21639. Theatrics: Tad Aviezer's "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Red-Headed League" is scheduled at the Lyndhurst Mansion in Tarrytown, N.Y., Nov. 4-Dec. 4 <www.lyndhurst.org>.
21640. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Genesian Theatre in Sydney, N.S.W., Nov. 4 through Dec. 10 <www.genesiantheatre.com/au>.
21641. Jon Jory's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at Mount Vernon Nazarene University in Mount Vernon, Ohio, Nov. 10-12; web-site at <www.mvnu.edu/events/fall-play-22?date=2022-11-10>.

21642. You can see "What Edinburgh's Picardy Place Will Look Like When '20 Years of Roadworks' End Next Year" in a story posted at the Edinburgh Live web-site on Oct. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/yc55cn89>. At long last locals and tourists will be able to see the statue of Sherlock Holmes that was unveiled there in 1991, honoring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who was born at 11 Picardy Place in 1859. The story says that it's a statue of Conan Doyle, but that mistake likely will be corrected by the time you get to the web-site.
21643. Edward Gorey was a talented author and artist, famous for his macabre non-Sherlockian and Sherlockian work; you've seen some of his artwork at the beginning of "Masterpiece" mysteries on PBS-TV, and you can read about him (and see a fine slide show of his house, which you can still visit in Yarmouth Port, Mass.) at <www.tinyurl.com/2p9cd8x3>.

21644. Some readers of this newsletter are old enough to remember the “Mystery!” era of PBS-TV, not only the wonderful opening animation based on the art of Edward Gorey, but also Vincent Price presiding over each program. You can time-travel back, or see for the first time, his 1985 introduction to Granada’s “A Scandal in Bohemia” at <www.tinyurl.com/2yfryu76>, thanks to Bill Young’s post on Oct. 31 to the “Tellyspotting” blog at the web-site of KERA-TV (Dallas/Fort Worth).
21645. “Sherlock Proved Too Good for His Rivals at Ashburton and Scored a Fighting Win” <www.facebook.com/watch/?v=439691821630285>, as reported by Jennie Paton.
21646. You can have your cake and not want to eat it: Jennie Paton has reported the CakeDecor web-site <www.cakdecor.com>; search for [sherlock holmes] to find two pages of attractive edibles. And there are many more attractive ideas at <www.hotcore.info/babki/sherlock-birthday-cake.htm>.
21647. The Washington Post had a nice report (Oct. 31) <www.tinyurl.com/29d9j7rm> about the first time Anne Rice’s Vampire Lestat Fan Club held its annual ball without its namesake, who died last year (December 21 #5). It was grand New Orleans celebration that included a costume party, all in honor of the author who dedicated her novel The Mummy, or Ramses the Damned (1989) “to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for his great mummy stories ‘Lot No. 249’ and ‘The Ring of Thoth’”.
21648. “Sherlock Holmes: Silenced Night” is being presented by the WhoDunnit Murder Mystery Theater at the Bristol Bar & Grille in Louisville, Ky., with 4 performances in December and one in January <www.tinyurl.com/m9ex37dp>.
21649. “Slylock Fox & Comics for Kids” is a comic strip launched by Bob Weber Jr. on Mar. 29, 1987, and it’s still going strong <www.slylockfox.com>. Seen in nearly 400 newspapers with a combined readership of more than 30 million, the strip has its own Facebook page <www.facebook.com/SlylockFox>, and Slylock is a fine example of how Sherlockian costume is used to identify a detective.

21651. Cliff Goldfarb has reported that two of the talks at the Jubilee@221B conference in Toronto are available on-line: Nicholas Meyer’s keynote presentation (“The Philosophy of Composition”) at <www.tinyurl.com/9bkf3a22> and Douglas Kerr’s Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture (“Editing Conan Doyle”) at <www.tinyurl.com/59fch9d6>. The YouTube channel of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection <www.tinyurl.com/47s28rar> has video from previous years, and you’ll find information about the Friends and their publications at <www.acdfriends.org>.
21652. Bonnie MacBird was interviewed at the on-line London Writers’ Salon this month, talking about her latest Sherlockian pastiche What Child Is This? and much more, and you can listen to it all at <www.tinyurl.com/4sv8ccw2>. She also was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for the “I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere” blog this month <www.tinyurl.com/2p95nraj>.
21653. It has taken a while, but the U.S. Mint has started shipping the new Anna May Wong quarter (January 22 #7) <www.tinyurl.com/2p94m498>. She played Mrs. Pyke in Reginald Owen’s “A Study in Scarlet” (1933), and she also appeared in the title of “Herlock Sholmes in Be-a-Live Crook, or Anna Went Wrong” (1930), the British marionette burlesque of Clive Brook’s film “The Return of Sherlock Holmes” (1929).
21654. Evy Harzog has reported on Macado’s, a restaurant chain that has many locations from Virginia south to North Carolina <www.macados.net>, as well as a menu with a wide variety of sandwiches named in honor of famous people, including Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
21655. George Booth died on Nov. 1. He was a stellar cartoonist who began drawing single-panel cartoons and occasional covers for The New Yorker in the late 1960s, became its oldest active contributor, and never retired. You can see his one Sherlockian cartoon (Jan. 9, 1971, p. 34) in the on-line archive of The New Yorker (you need to be a subscriber or know someone who is), and reprinted in his Think Good Thoughts About a Pussycat (1975).
21656. “Enola Holmes 2” had limited release in theaters, and now is streaming on Netflix. Presumably you’ve all seen it, or are planning to, or are planning not to see it, but there’s a sting at the end, after the start of the closing credits, that suggests we might see a third film in the franchise. The Box Office Mojo web-site has no information about the film (possibly because it had only a limited theater release), but it scored well at the Rotten Tomatoes web-site, with a rating of 94% (reviews) and 78% (audience score); the first film was rated 91% and 70%.

21657. A story about spiritualism posted at the Mental Floss web-site (on Oct. 27) <www.mentalfloss.com/posts/vintage-seance-video> featured video of a British Movietone newsreel that was filmed at a séance held by Mrs. Meurig Morris, with Lady Jean Conan Doyle and her son Denis Conan Doyle as witnesses to the performance. There’s much more about Mrs. Morris (and Lady Doyle) in a post to the Kilburn and West Hampstead blog on June 22, 2020 <www.tinyurl.com/25zmy2ec>.
21658. “How Well Do You Know Sherlock’s London?” J. D. Biersdorfer asked in the N.Y. Times’ on-line weekly Book Review Quiz Bowl on Nov. 4; the Quiz Bowl is a weekly interactive feature with five multiple-choice questions, and a chance to explore more information about the locations and the literature <www.tinyurl.com/ywukk9rc>.
21659. Bignell Wood, the country home that Conan Doyle bought as a birthday present for his wife Jean in 1924, is for sale <www.tinyurl.com/2f73mewf>; the asking price is £2,950,000. Read all about it at the realtor’s web-site, which includes a downloadable and colorful brochure.
21660. “All Mortal Greatness Is But Disease” is the title of the exhibition now open at the Scottish Maritime Museum in Irvine <www.tinyurl.com/2p876k97> through Feb. 19; the museum’s web-site has a content warning: “This exhibition features images and content of animal cruelty, blood and gore, including hunting, killing, and cutting whales.” An article about the exhibition at the Yahoo Sport web-site (Nov. 6) <www.tinyurl.com/3rbkjhuh> opened with a discussion of Conan Doyle’s voyage on the Peterhead whaler Hope in 1880.
21661. A bit more about “Enola Holmes 2”: it isn’t based on any of Nancy Springer’s books, but there’s some actual history involved. Sarah Chapman was a real person, and you can read about her, and what she accomplished, in her entry at Wikipedia, and see how her story inspired Jack Thorne’s screenplay for the film.
21662. The summer issue of The Magic Door (published by the friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) offers an article by Laurny E. Collins (on “Popular Publishing and Gothic Sensation”, Clifford Goldfarb’s account of the early history of this newsletter, news from the Library and the Collection, and much more. Copies of the newsletter are available from Cliff Goldfarb, Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.

21663. My Dear Watson, by L. A. Fields (Maple Shade: Lethe Press, 2013; 276 pp., $18.00), is an account of the relationship between Holmes and Watson, case by case, told by Watson's second wife in 1919; the relationship was homosexual, and the story's nicely told, romantically rather than erotically. Mrs. Watson returns, along with Holmes and Watson, in Fields' Mrs. Watson: Untold Stories (2021; 184 pp., $15.00), in diary entries written from 1921 to 1939, with considerable discussion of the many literary, political, and royal historical figures who were homosexuals. The publisher's web-site is at <www.lethepressbooks.com>.

21664. A "wooden-framed slate filled with an apparent spirit communication channeled by Laura Pruden" <www.tinyurl.com/2sw8cvjk> was sold last month from the late Ken Klosterman's magic collection, and it brought $1,800 (including the buyer's premium). Conan Doyle considered her "one of the greatest mediums of the world," and you can watch a video tour of Klosterman's collection at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=SupYJ1anYnE>.
21665. Naomi Fry posted a warm tribute to "The Muppet Show" at The New Yorker's web-site on Apr. 17, 2021 <www.tinyurl.com/yy8a544e>. The series ran on PBS-TV (1976-1981), and is now available on Disney+, and its target audience included adults as well as children; Baskerville the Hound appeared in the series, along with other Sherlockian characters. There's an interesting Muppet web-site at <www.muppetcentral.com>.
21666. Joanne Alberstat writes about "The Poisonous Atmosphere of the Sherlockian Canon" and Mark Jones and Robert S. Katz discuss "Canonical Cholecistitis" in the fall issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published quarterly by the Bootmakers of Toronto, and also offers reports on Sherlockian goings-on in Canada. A subscription costs $40.00 a year (US or CA); single issues cost $12.00 postpaid <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
21667. Something new for numismatists (and other collectors): a Sherlock Holmes "Typefaces" 1oz silver 5$ coin will be issued by (well, for) the Cook Islands early next year; the coin will be minted by Gold and Silver Bullion Canada, and is offered by them for CA$165.95 <www.tinyurl.com/3v9ns59d>; their web-site has colorful images and video, and you're welcome to pre-order now. The mintage will be 1,887 pieces (someone obviously knew the importance of that number). The Cook Islands actually use the New Zealand dollar, but various companies seem to have been minting collectable coins for them for years.
21668. It's not Sherlockian, but if you've never read Charlotte Perkins Gilman's short story "The Yellow Wallpaper" (1892), it's available at Project Gutenberg <www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/1952>. After you've read the story, you can read a Public Domain Review article about a truly unusual and extremely rare (for good reason) book: R. C. Kedzie's Shadows from the Walls of Death (1874) <www.publicdomainreview.org/collection/kedzie-shadows>.
21669. "It was twenty-five to eight as we passed Big Ben, and eight struck as we tore down the Brixton Road, Watson wrote (in "Lady Francis Carfax"). The Great Bell, weighing more than 15 tons, has been silent since 2017, except for special occasions, while the Westminster tower and clock were undergoing repair, returned to service on Remembrance Sunday (Nov. 13). You can hear Big Ben perform at <www.tinyurl.com/45yfamkh>.
21670. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, which is now edited by Phillip Bergem, has Jim Hawkins' "Reminiscences of John Bennett Shaw", Gary Thaden's tribute to Nate the Great, and more news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Timothy Johnson, #15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <johns976@umn.com>.

21671. Britain's current financial problems threaten "painful cuts" at Dartmoor National Park, and may require closure of the Visitors Centre in Princetown, according to a report posted on BBC News (Nov. 9) <www.tinyurl.com/22k9sxjc>. The Dartmoor National Park Authority will need to find savings of £898,000 in the next three years, and there may be more cuts to its budget; the Authority is considering a proposal to close the Visitors Centre, which now has 80,000 visitors a year. A final decision on the proposal will be made early next year. The Visitors Centre, which was the Duchy Hotel in years past <www.tinyurl.com/5cpdtttd>, says that the hotel was "once home to Conan Doyle as he wrote the Hound of the Baskervilles."
21672. The two-page manuscript for Conan Doyle's "The Argument from Necromancy" offered at Potter & Potter Auctions on Oct. 20 with an estimate of $6,000-$8,000 <www.tinyurl.com/bde8tsve> did not sell. But a nice dust-jacketed copy of the first American edition of The Vital Message was sold, for $150 (including the buyer's premium) <www.tinyurl.com/yc792c3f>.
21673. The Beacon Society continues to publish its "quarterly gazette for younger Sherlockians everywhere," and the autumn issue of Sherlock's Spotlight is available at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>; the contents include material both by and for younger followers of the Great Detective.
21674. If you've not yet ordered a Sherlockian calendar for 2023, here's a link to one offered by the Strand Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/4x3rc5ud>.
21675. Heritage Auctions will have a "The Art of All Things Disney Animation Art Signature Auction on Dec. 9-12 <www.tinyurl.com/2uyjt5xn>, offering a wide variety of production cels and animations drawings showing Basil of Baker Street and other characters from "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986).
21676. This is an era of gender-blind casting, and we have seen Holmes and Watson played by women on stage and television. But not, apparently, on film or radio.
21677. The Beacon Society has announced its 2023 R. Joel Senter Sr. Memorial Essay Contest for students in grades 4 through 12; the deadline for submissions is Mar. 1, and details on the contest (and its history) can be found at <www.beaconsociety.com/joel-senter-essay-contest.html>.
21678. Helena Bonham Carter has been confirmed as the next president of the 181-year-old London Library <www.tinyurl.com/2c2e4naw>. We know that Dr. Watson visited the London Library (in "The Illustrious Client"), and it will be interesting to see whether Eudoria Holmes, played by Bonham Carter in the first two "Enola Holmes" films, visits the London Library in the next film.
21679. Robin Parkinson died on May 7. He made his stage debut in England in 1957 and appeared in his first film in 1959; his many credits included appearing as a shipping clerk in Douglas Wilmer's "The Man with a Twisted Lip" (1965), and as Albert Neale in "Murder on a Midsummer's Eve" in Geoffrey Whitehead's "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1979).

21680. Type Punch Matrix, the rare book firm founded by Rebecca Romney and Brian Cassidy <www.typepunchmatrix.com> continues to publish interesting catalogues and offer interesting books; search their web-site for [conan doyle], [sherlock holmes], [sherlockiana], and [vincent starrett] to see some of the nice items on their shelves, and take a look at Print Catalogue Four and its descriptions of two spectacular items no longer available: "Lestrade Before Lestrade" and "A Legendary Sherlockian Rarity with Excellent Provenance".
21681. Bill Seil has reported that a host of comic-strip artists celebrated what would have the 100th birthday of Charles M. Schulz on Nov. 26, and you can see what they did at <www.schulzmuseum.org/tribute> (there's a mention of Sherlock Holmes in Stephan Patis' "Pearls Before Swine").

21682. The Case of the Disappearing Beaune, by J. Lawrence Matthews (Naples: East Dean Press, 2022; 92 pp., $6.99) is “a Sherlock Holmes Christmas Mystery” reprinted from a recent anthology edited by David Marcum, and an imaginative pastiche nicely timed for the season.

21685. Ken Ludwig’s “The Game’s Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays” is due at the Tower Fine Arts Center in Brockport, N.Y., Dec. 2-10; their web-site’s at <www.brockportarts.universitytickets.com>. Also at the Farmington Players Barn in Farmington Hills, Mich., Dec. 2-17 <www.farmingtonplayers.org>.
21686. The Baker Street Players have scheduled “Sherlock Holmes and the Night Before Christmas” (two radio plays) at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., Dec. 2-11 <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
21687. Brenda Rossini’s dramatization of “The Adventure of the Engineer’s Thumb” will be performed by the CriBar Thespians at the Centuries & Sleuths Bookstore in Forest Park, Ill., on Mar. 18 <agrrtig@aol.com>.
21688. Jeffrey Hatcher’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club” will be performed at the Paris Community Theatre in Paris, Texas, Mar. 24-Apr. 2 <www.pctonstage.com>.

December 22 #1

21689. If you’ve seen the Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects catalog that accompanies the exhibition of material from Glen Miranker’s collection, you will know what excellent work Hemlock Printers does. The company won nine trophies (including “best in show” for the catalog) and many honorable mentions at the Canadian Printers Awards this month. Details are available Hemlock’s blog at <www.tinyurl.com/y6nk55ha>.
21690. The exhibition’s run at the Lilly Library in Bloomington, Ind., ended on Dec. 16, but it soon will be on view at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, Feb. 13-May 5.
21691. The documentary “House of the Gods” (July 22 #2) is now available at Amazon Prime UK <www.tinyurl.com/yjr7urmv>. It’s the story of an expedition to Roraima (the Venezuelan tepui considered by many to have been the inspiration for “The Lost World”) <www.tinyurl.com/4axattse>.
21692. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star has now published six anthologies of pastiches written by members of the society from 2017 to 2022; they’re available as PDF files at the society’s web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/5n75p87t>, and (for those who would like to have actual books on their shelves) they now are available at Barnes & Noble <www.tinyurl.com/32ncure4>, priced at cost (the Crew receives no proceeds from the sales).
21694. Deadline reported on Nov. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/3bsw9x9w> on planning for a “The Boy Sherlock” television series based on the first book in the young-adult series written by Shane Peacock <www.shanepeacock.ca>; the six-book series began with Eye of the Crow (2007).
21695. The six-episode series “Magpie Murders” (adapted by Anthony Horowitz from his novel) is well worth watching; it was broadcast on Britbox in the U.K. last February and on PBS-TV in the U.S. in October, and has many Sherlockian allusions in the plot and in the dialogue. Horowitz also frequently mentions Holmes and Conan Doyle in his post-episode comments, and you can enjoy looking for cryptic messages in the closing credits (watch for the red letters).
21696. Agatha Christie’s play “The Mousetrap” isn’t Sherlockian, but it holds the record for the longest-running play in history: 70 years, with more than 28,000 performances for more than 10 million audience members, and according to the Smithsonian web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mrymykwu> there are plans for a production on Broadway in 2023. The play will continue its run at the St. Martin’s Theatre in London, of course, but the mantelpiece clock, the only surviving piece of the original set, will be loaned from the London production for the Broadway run <www.mousetrapbroadway.com>.

21697. Every ten years the British magazine Sight and Sound conducts a poll to name the greatest films of all time, and this year 1,639 critics, programmers, curators, archivists, and academics submitted their top-ten ballots. Alan Rettig has noted that Buster Keaton’s “Sherlock Jr.” (1924) was tied for #54, and you can see all of the results of the poll at <www.bfi.org.uk/sight-and-sound/greatest-films-all-time>.
21698. “Attention for Andaman” was the headline on a story at the GEO ExPro web-site on Nov. 29 <www.tinyurl.com/bdh8xr7v>, detailing increased interest in possible petroleum resources offshore from the Andaman Islands; an earlier article at the Lowy Institute web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ycx8whe9> explains additional reasons for increasing interest in the Andamans.
21699. The Norwegian Explorers have just published Ruth Berman’s “Sherlock Holmes in Oz” and Others: The Sherlockian Writings of Ruth Berman; the 110-page book is available for $11.00 postpaid from Phillip Bergem (3829 172nd Avenue SW, Andover, MN 55304), checks payable to Norwegian Explorers, please; or via PayPal, with payment to <norexpay@gmail.com>.
21700. Nick Fisher died on Nov. 17. He was an accomplished writer for stage, radio, and television in Britain; his “Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles” was produced at the Salisbury Playhouse in 1991.
21701. The new “30th anniversary edition” of Kim Newman’s Anno Dracula (London: Titan Books, 2022; 519 pp., £17.99/$24.95) is signed by the author, with a new Introduction by Neil Gaiman and a new novella “Anno Dracula 1902: The Chances of Anything Coming from Mars” (a reprint from the Reminiscences of Col. Sebastian Moran). The book launched a splendid series of alternate-universe novels and stories with a multitude of Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) cross-overs. Newman was the distinguished speaker at the Baker Street Irregulars’ birthday festivities in 2013, and he has a web-site at <www.johnnyalucard.com>.
21702. The Mini-Tonga Scion Society has been inactive for many years, but there still are Sherlockians who collect or make miniatures. Jennie Paton notes an attractive (and expensive) 1/12-scale Sherlock Holmes Writing Desk on offer at eBay <www.tinyurl.com/5n8pbcws>.
21703. Randall Stock has reported that the 27-page manuscript for Conan Doyle’s short story “The Bully of Brocas Court” is advertised by a dealer in Austria for €75,000 <www.inlibris.com/item/bn60378>; it’s also available at AbeBooks for $81,088.68. According to Randall Stock’s page on the manuscript

<www.tinyurl.com/2p868vrn> it was sold for $23,940 (including the buyer's premium) at Christie's in New York on Oct. 6; it's likely that the dealer will be prepared to bargain.

21704. Sean Wright has noted that "The Perfect Crime" (an episode in the "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" television series that aired in 1957) is conveniently available on-line <www.dailymotion.com/video/x54o1iv>; the program stars Vincent Prince, who always is well worth watching, and there's mention of a great detective in London, and a delightfully Sherlockian introduction by Alfred Hitchcock.

December 22 #3

21705. Greg Bear died on Nov. 19. He began his professional writing career as a teen-ager in 1967, and in 1970 was a co-founder of San Diego Comic-Con (there were 300 attendees at the first Con, and more than 135,000 at this year's gathering); he went on to write more than 50 science-fiction and fantasy books, including Dinosaur Summer (1998), a delightful alternate history: Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" was a factual account of the Challenger expedition, but in 1947 nobody cares about dinosaurs, the last dinosaur circus in America is closing and the National Geographic funds an expedition to return the surviving dinosaurs to Venezuela (Willis O'Brien and Ray Harryhausen come along for the fun and games, and of course the expedition is stranded on the plateau).
21706. London isn't the only city with a pub called The Sherlock Holmes. There's also one in Bordeaux (France) <www.sherlockholmespub.fr>. And another in Melbourne (Australia) <www.thesherlockholmes.com.au>. And two more in Edmonton (Canada) <www.thesherlockspubs.ca>.
21707. Jennie Paton has reported something new in the wide range of Sherlockian collectibles: a Sherlock Holmes Door Skateboard Deck ($81.99) available at <www.koelcase.com/products/sherlock-holmes-door-skateboard-decks>; in case you're not a skateboarder, a skateboard deck is the wooden platform where riders place their feet, and to which other parts are attached. And are there any Sherlockian skateboarders?
21708. Dark Regions Press has announced plans to publish Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of a Dozen Favourites in two limited editions: the Detective Edition ($635.00) and the Library Edition ($215.00) will feature both fine binding and attractive artwork; details at <www.darkregions.com/sherlock>.
21709. Peter Lovesey's Reader, I Buried Them, and Other Stories (New York: Soho Crime, 2022; 372 pp., $27.95) honors the award-winning author of an extensive list of novels and short stories; the collection includes the imaginative and nicely Sherlockian poem "A Monologue for Mystery Lovers" (first published in the Feb. 1999 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine), and more than a dozen excellent short stories (three of them new).
21711. Ross Davies reports that the 2023 Baker Street Almanac will be available early next year. The Almanac ("a modest capsule of a timeless past & future") is far more than a mere almanac, as you can see at its web-site at <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/html>, where you can download free copies of the 2018-2021 almanac, purchase the 2022 almanac, and pre-order the 2023 almanac.
21712. Jennie Paton has noted Greg Wagland's reading of Bret Hart's parody "The Stolen Cigar Case" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=irvNrWkleo> at Magpie Audio's YouTube channel, where you'll find much more of interest: readings of the Canon, pastiches, and many of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories.

21713. For those not absolutely up to date in this computer age, AI is the abbreviation for Artificial Intelligence, and OpenAI is a company that has created a program called ChatGPT (GPT is an abbreviation for Generative Pre-trained Transformer), and there's a lot more about that in its Wikipedia entry <www.tinyurl.com/yjp9px2e>. Megan McArdle's Washington Post column (Dec. 9) <www.tinyurl.com/5cyusxa> was interesting, but not as interesting as what seems to be the first use of ChatGPT by Sherlockians: Mattias Boström and Jim Ballinger offer "Sherlock Holmes and Hedgehog Watson" at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=b1shLHI-v4U>. It's easy to try out ChatGPT for yourself at <www.openai.com/blog/chatgpt>.
21714. Do you own your books, or do your books own you? That's a question for just about everyone who has more than one bookshelf, and Karen Heller had an excellent article in the Washington Post (Dec. 19) that provides help for those pursuing an answer <www.tinyurl.com/yc5j8zu2>.
21715. The Stradivarius that was offered at auction in June (May 22 #5) sold for $15.34 million, making it the world's second most expensive violin; Sherlock Holmes paid 55 shillings for his. Antonio Stradivari was described as "the ultimate craftsman" in an interesting article in the Smithsonian magazine (Nov./Dec. 2022) <www.tinyurl.com/2mf4udkk>.
21716. Feel free to wish a Happy New Year to The Complete Sherlock Holmes. As of Jan. 1, 2023, all of the Sherlock Holmes stories now are in the public domain in the U.S. (where copyright protection ran for 95 years from the end of the year they were first published).
21717. Fans of MSFK3 [Mystery Science Theater 3000] may not be familiar with the similar RiffTrax series, also created by and for the people who don't take films seriously <www.rifftrax.com>; Matthew Elliott has noted that "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (1962) is one of six Sherlock Holmes films you can purchase and download.
21718. This year is the 100th anniversary of the classic silent film "Nosferatu" (inspired by Bram Stoker's Dracula); on-line celebrations have included an amusing Sherlockian video <www.youtube.com/watch?v=uk2Yx9izr3s> created by Nick Hilligoss and kindly reported by Howard Ostrom.
21719. "Letters from Watson" <www.lettersfromwatson.substack.com> is an on-line project (noted by Nea Dodson) that will launch in January and will involve e-mail versions of all the short stories; you can click on [some preliminary notes] and scroll down for information about the project's lapel pin and how to order it.
21720. It was 50 years ago this month that geologist/astronaut Jack Schmitt was the first (and still the only) scientist to set foot on the Moon, and the December issue of the AAPG Explorer has a colorful illustrated article on "Apollo to Artemis: An Epic of 50 Years" <www.tinyurl.com/4ywzr8xv>. He also named Sherlock Crater in honor of Sherlock Holmes as a geologist, and had the longest-distance Sherlockian conversation ever, with Joe Allen at CAPCOM in Houston. There is a bit more about this in the March 1973 issue of the Baker Street Journal.

21721. Fake news is nothing new: there was plenty of it in the 18th century: <www.tinyurl.com/m7kssbwf>. And yes, there has been Sherlockian fake news: Scott Monty was the perpetrator, at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog back in 2007 <www.tinyurl.com/yerb2fn4>. Quite a few people never bothered to click on the "Background info" link at the end of the piece, and the story quickly caught attention and circulation on the Internet <www.tinyurl.com/2p8zed4u>.
21722. The Daily Mail reported on Dec. 19 on the will of Beryl Vertue, who died earlier this year (February 22 #5); Benedict Cumberbatch called her "Sherlock's godmother," and her bequests show that she had a wonderful sense of humor
21723. <www.tinyurl.com/42jtnpyc>.

21725. The Marco Navas Studio has released its second set of “A Study in Scarlet” 1/32-scale figurines (hand-crafted in resin and hand-painted) showing another scene from the story <www.tinyurl.com/3zan9bmx>.
21726. It’s time for another trivia question: can you name three actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and James Bond?
21728. Michael Harrison was a knowledgeable and entertaining writer, well known for his many books about the world of Sherlock Holmes, but he wrote about many other things, including what he called “the golden age of whoredom” in Fanfare of Strumpets (1971). The book does have a passing mention of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes, but has much more to say about women such as Cora Pearl (whose entry at Wikipedia you’re welcome to consult); an interesting letter from her (to a gentleman she did not know but who obviously wanted to know her) will be at auction on Jan. 12, with an estimate of €500-€600 <www.tinyurl.com/2kje4xt3>
21729. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London’s excursion to India (September 22 #2) has been postponed. Information still is available at the Society’s web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/to-india-with-sherlock-holmes>; stay tuned for an announcement of new dates for “The Jewel in the Canon”.
21730. “Arsène Lupin contre Herlock Sholmes” was a four-act play written by Victor Darlay and Henri de Gorsse, based on the novel by Maurice Leblanc; it was first produced in Paris in 1910, and is now available as Arsène Lupin vs. Sherlock Holmes: The Stage Play (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2005; 248 pp., $20.95) adapted into English by Frank J. Morlock. It’s grand to see what French theater was like all those years ago, and great fun to see Lupin and Holmes (and Holmes’ son Frederick) in action. There’s also a new Sherlockian playlet by Morlock as an afterword.

21731. Were you able to name three actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and James Bond? They are Roger Moore, David Niven, and Armand Kautzky. Armand Kautzky? He’s a well-regarded Hungarian actor who played Sherlock Holmes in “The Curious Case of Sherlock Holmes and the Orphan of Europe” on Hungarian radio in 2021, and dubbed Bond’s voice in Pierce Brosnan’s films. Adrien Fray reports that he has agreed to be the new president of the Sherlock Holmes Club of Hungary. He also dubbed Ralph Fiennes’ Professor Moriarty in “Holmes and Watson” (2018).
21732. David Stuart Davies was interviewed recently about “Resurrecting Sherlock Holmes” and much more on the Dark Fantastic Network audio channel at You-Tube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=NDXN8KXYUIY>.
21733. You can add one more name to the list of actors who have played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes. The BBC has recorded Neil Brand’s 90-minute dramatization of “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (with Mark Gatiss as Holmes and Sanjeev Bhaskar as Watson) for broadcast on BBC Radio 3 beginning Jan. 22; the performance also was filmed for future broadcast on BBC Four.
21734. The Blackeyed Theatre’s tour of Nick Lane’s “The Valley of Fear” in Britain has been extended into 2023 <www.tinyurl.com/yphkntay>; the play also is being streamed on-line through Jan. 22 <www.tinyurl.com/mry6sxz5>, and is well worth watching.
21735. A parody murder-mystery dinner-theater production of “The Big Dog of the Baskerton” is due at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn, N.J., Jan. 13-29 <www.papermill.org/purchase-tickets>.
21736. Kate Hamill’s “Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson” will be performed at the U.S. Bank Main Stage in Portland, Ore., Jan. 14-Feb. 12 <www.pcs.org>. It also will be performed at the B Street Theatre in Sacramento, Calif., Mar. 8-Apr. 16 <www.bstreettheatre.org>.
21737. Ken Ludwig’s “Baskerville” will be performed at Cheney Hall in Manchester, Conn., Feb. 3-19 <www.cheneyhall.org>, and at the Theatre in a Garden in Fish Creek, Mich., Sept. 6-Oct. 15 <www.peninsulaplayers.com>.
21738. Richard James’ “Sherlock Holmes and Mystery at Mallen Hall” will be performed at St. Peter’s Church Hall in Netherton, West Midlands, Mar. 16-19 <www.dudleylittletheatre.org>.
21739. “Sherlock Holmes: The Strange Case of Miss Alice Faulkner” has been scheduled by the Long Beach Shakespeare Company (as a radio play) at the Helen Borgers Theatre in Long Beach, Calif., Mar. 24-Apr. 2; their web-site’s at <www.lbshakespeare.org>.
21740. Rick Robinson’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Final Problem” will be performed at the Great American Melodrama Theatre in Oceano, Calif., Mar. 31-May 21 <www.americanmelodrama.com>.

21742. Locals and early arrivals enjoyed the ASH Wednesday dinner, and on Thursday morning the ACD Society’s Doylean Awards Ceremony and a running of Wessex Cup were held at the Mysterious Bookshop; the society’s web-site is at <www.acdsociety.com>. The BSI’s Distinguished Speaker that evening was Dr. Lakshmi Krishnan, who suggested that the medical practice of diagnosis cannot be understood without examining its linkage with detective fiction; her paper will be published in the Baker Street Journal, and her book The Doctor and the Detective will be published this year.
21743. On Friday the well-attended William Gillette Memorial Luncheon featured a performance of William Gillette’s curtain-raiser “The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes”, and the presentation of the annual Susan Rice Mentorship Award (recognizing “commitment to mentoring Sherlockians as a means of keeping green the memory of Sherlock Holmes”) to Evelyn Herzog.
21744. Then Irregulars and guests gathered for dinner at the Yale Club, where Lou Lewis offered the first toast to Joan Blankenstein as The Woman. The dinner agenda included the usual toasts, and rituals, and spectacular presentations by Betsy Rosenblatt and Dan Stashower. The annual Morley-Montgomery Award went posthumously to Nicholas Utechin, and Mike Kean announced that Steve Rothman was retiring after a record 23 years as the editor of the Baker Street Journal; the new editor of the BSI is Dan Andriacco, and Steve will be the editor emeritus.
21745. The BSI’s new Birthday Honours were awarded to Cindy Brown (“Sam Brown”), Elaine Coppola (“Syracuse”), Erika Dowell (“A First Folio Shakespeare”), Takahiko Endo (“James Armitage”), David Harnois (“James Boswell”), Palle Schantz Lauridsen (“The Royal Family of Scandinavia”), Dore Nash (“The Three Garridebs”), James O’Leary (“James, the Son of the Grimpen Postmas-ter”), Roberta Pearson (“Nottingham”), Lee Shackelford (“Woodman’s Lee”), and John Sherwood (“The Imperial Theatre”). And the BSI’s prestigious Two-Shilling Award was bestowed on Greg Ruby.
21746. On Saturday morning Covent Garden West offered the traditional opportunity for dealers to help people who wanted to add to their collections, and at the Saturday luncheon and reception the Dr. John H. Watson Fund’s auction attracted enthusiastic bidders; the raffle prize was an etched glass salver with matching glasses and coasters, created by Danna Mancini.

21747. The second annual meeting of the Literary Agents was held via Zoom on Sun-day morning; you are welcome to watch video of the proceedings at the "Doings of Doyle" page at Facebook <www.tinyurl.com/3ncb9h2w>. And for those who lasted that long, the last event of the birthday festivities was the Adventuresses' Brunch on Sunday.

21748. There's more about the festivities at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/5284d3rf>. Scott and Burt Wolder also discuss the goings-on at <www.tinyurl.com/bp7386rm>. And you can plan ahead: the next annual dinner will be on Jan. 12, 2024, celebrating Sherlock Holmes' 170th birthday and the 90th (granite) anniversary of the founding of the BSI. Anyone who would like to have information about future events (and much more) is welcome to sign up for "News from the BSI" at <www.tinyurl.com/yc5tsz27>.
21749. The Baker Street Irregulars Press has published two new titles: The Haven Horror is the newest addition to the Manuscript Series (211 pp., $39.95); edited by Phillip Bergem, it offers a facsimile of the manuscript of "The Retired Colourman", with an annotated transcription and scholarly commentary on the manuscript and on various aspects of the story (the Manuscript Series continues to offer readers an opportunity to come close to the moment when the stories were written, and the commentary is delightful).
21750. Stimulating Medicine, edited by Robert S. Katz and Andrew L. Solberg (225 pp., $39.95), is subtitled "More Nerve and Knowledge: Doctors, Medicine, and the Sherlockian Canon"; it's the next title in the BSI's Professions Series, and a second volume, so to speak, accompanying their first title in the series, and the anthology continues to explore the many medical aspects of the Canon. Both of the new titles (and many others) can be ordered at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/books>.
21751. Don't delay: Neil Brand's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" with Mark Gatiss as Sherlock Holmes (Dec 22 #6) will be available at the BBC Radio 3 web-site <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m001h56s> only until Feb. 20 (and it's nicely done indeed).
21752. As noted in last month's issue, all of the Sherlock Holmes stories now are in the public domain. You can visit Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/2s4ck3s4> to listen to them interview Les Klinger, Betsy Rosenblatt, and Ashley Polasek about the significance of the end of Canonical copyright protection.
21753. Radio Times reported on Jan. 19 <www.tinyurl.com/257fh4ks> on the new Audible radio drama "The Baker Street Four" (based on the graphic-novel series Les Quatre de Baker Street), with Peterson Joseph as Sherlock Holmes and Bill Nighy as the Baker Street Irregulars' faithful cat Watson. You can listen to a sample from the recording at <www.tinyurl.com/mr3nnkrb>.
21754. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> kindly offers (via e-mail) his new edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses are Investitured Irregulars).
21755. Further to the discussion of ChatGPT (Dec 22 #4), Dave Taylor, who has an interesting technology blog at <www.askdavetaylor.com>, asks his readers, "If you read every book Arthur Conan Doyle ever wrote and remembered every single sentence, do you think you could write new Sherlock Holmes stories in his style?" <www.tinyurl.com/2yuu4dbw>. And provides some intriguing insight for people who pursue pastiches.

21756. The script for David MacGregor's comedy "The Adventure of the Ghost Machine" is now available from TRW Plays ($12.95 print/ $9.00 digital) <www.trwplays.com/david-macgregor>; MacGregor has great fun with Holmes, Watson, and Irene Adler (who has moved into 221B Baker Street and is pretending to be Mrs. Hudson for the sake of propriety). This time they're involved with Nikola Tesla and Thomas Alva Edison, and (again) the villainous daughter of Prof. Moriarty.
21757. Reginald Goodman's The Willesden Harpooning: A Holmes Before Watson Novel (2022; 224 pp., $7.81) offers a look at Holmes when he was trying to find his vocation as a consulting detective, finding he had a lot to learn before he could establish himself; he solves one mystery easily, and then is confronted with another that is far more difficult.
21758. "Why write a Victorian mystery?" is the question answered by Will Thomas, author of the series of novels about Cyrus Barker and Thomas Llewelyn in a post at Criminal Element (Jan. 3) <www.tinyurl.com/3rzfuvck>; Heart of the Nile, the latest in the long series, is due from Minotaur in the spring.
21759. The fall issue of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust's electronic newsletter For the Sake of the Trust has been uploaded to the Trust's web-site at <www.bsitrust.org>. with news about the Trust's activities. You're more than welcome to explore the Trust's web-site to read past issues.
21760. "Don't judge a book by its cover," someone once said. Karen Murdock has noted a new digital edition of A Study in Scarlet offered at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/v69zdx5> for only $3.00. One does wonder: Alice Charpentier? Lucy Ferrier?
21761. I've noted described this newsletter as "six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean." If you would like to run a word-search on a large file with all of the text since March 1985 (that's when I entered the computer age) you can now do that easily, thanks to Steve Mason, who provides an updated compilation each month and makes it available to one and all at the Beacon Society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ys63328a>.
21762. The Jan.-Feb. issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine offers its annual tribute to Sherlock Holmes: a Sherlockian cover; Elizabeth Elwood's mystery involving a Sherlockian theater production; Steve Steinbock's reviews of some Sherlockian (and other) books, Dean Jobb's "Stranger Than Fiction" column about a mystery that intrigued Conan Doyle; John Shen Yen Nee and S. J. Rozan's pastiche "The Killing of Henry Davenport"; an editorial happy birthday from Janet Hutchins; Terence Faherty's parody of "The Reigate Squires"; and an Amlingmeyer Brothers story "Can the Cat Catch the Rat?" by Steve Hockensmith.
21763. What do Frankenstein, Sherlock Holmes, Dracula, Tarzan, the Count of Monte Cristo, and Pinocchio have in common? They are primordial literary myths, according to the novelist Gabriel García Márquez, quoted in an article in the Wall Street Journal (Dec. 27), noted by Karen Murdock. Can you name the authors who created all of those primordial literary myths?

21764. When in Norway: you can stay at the Union Hotel in Øye, where you can "step inside a world treasuring the olden times, when traveling meant introspective discovery, long days of reading and hiking adventures in tweed" <www.unionoye.no>. The hotel boasts that Conan Doyle was one of many celebrities who stayed there, and "fell in love with our country right here, within these walls." It's certainly picturesque, but easy to get to only if you're on a ship cruising in the Hjørundfjord.
21765. Jules Tasca's play "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" was first performed in 2014 and has had many local productions since then; the script's available from Dramatic Publishing ($10.95) <www.dramaticpublishing.com>. The evening consists of one-act dramatizations of two Canonical stories ("The Noble Bachelor" and "Charles Augustus Milverton") and his new one-act play "The Disappearance of Adam" (which is nicely imaginative and far more than a mere pastiche). The publisher offers many other Sherlockian plays.

21767. For those who like word-search puzzles: Brain Games: Sherlock Holmes Word Search (Morton Grove: Publications International, 2018; 192 pp. $12.98).
21769. "Pulp Friction" is how Heritage Auctions described what they called "one of the sauciest (and spiciest!) troves of pulp magazines ever assembled" <www.tinyurl.com/55zsrapa8>; there may not be any Sherlockian pulps in the upcoming auctions, but do take a look at some of the covers.
21770. The Beacon Society continues to administer the Fortescue Scholarship Honours Program, and more than 120 people have completed all three exams and have received their Doctorate in Sherlockiana. There also are annual Re-Certification exams for those who want to continue on, and there is more information about the Program at <www.tinyurl.com/4s6jtn35>.
21771. The December issue of the Beacon Society's Not-So-Quarterly Newsletter now is available at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>, with the latest news from and about the society and its efforts to offer "teachers, librarians, children's museums, and children's theaters with local resources to bring the magic of Sherlock Holmes to life."

January 23 #5

21772. J. Allen St. John was an author, artist, and illustrator, perhaps best known for his illustration of Edgar Rice Burroughs' novels, but he also created a spectacular image of Holmes and Watson for the Chicago Sunday Tribune's Magazine of Books (Feb. 13, 1949) to accompany Vincent Starrett's review of John Dickson Carr's The Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle <www.pinterest.com/pin/338332990729622515>. Lauren Stump at Shasta/Phoenix offers some of his (non-Sherlockian) original artwork at <www.shastaphoenixart.com/availableartwork>, and Stephen D. Korshak's The Paintings of J. Allen St. John: Grand Master of Fantasy.
21773. St. John earlier illustrated "A Scandal in Bohemia" for the anthology With All My Love (1945); that artwork can be found on the cover of Baker Street Miscellanea (autumn 1982) and in an article in the winter 1982 issue.
21774. Regulation & Imagination: Legal & Literary Perspectives on Fox-Hunting is the thoroughly misleading title of a delightful book edited by Ross E. Davies (Washington: Green Bag Press, 2021; 131 pp., $65.00). It's actually an exploration of Conan Doyle's "The King of the Foxes" and offers a full-color reprint of the first publication of the story in The Windsor Magazine, a facsimile of the manuscript with a transcription and annotations, and essays about the history of the manuscript, illustrators, fox-hunting, and much more, by Doylean scholars and enthusiasts; do not neglect the illustrations on the front and back of the dust jacket, explained in detail on the jacket flaps. The publisher's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3v8ahmyw> has links to two of the essays, and information on how to order the book.
21775. The next 221B Con (A Fan Con for All Things Sherlock Holmes) will be held in Atlanta, Ga., on Apr. 14-16 <www.221bcon.com>, and you are welcome to apply to be on one or more of their panels <www.221bcon.com/panels>.
21776. It would be nice indeed if the U.S. Postal Service were to issue a stamp to honor the new book about "The King of the Foxes", but in fact it's only a nice coincidence that a new 40¢ stamp shows a red fox. That's the rate for bulk mail (pre-sorted circulars, newsletters, and catalogs), and the stamps available in rolls of 3,000 and 10,000; it will be difficult to find them in post offices, but the Postal Service is well aware that there still are some people who collect stamps, and you can purchase 20-stamp sheets at the USPS web-site <www.tinyurl.com/36puatuf>.
21777. "Tide: For Detectives with Sensitive Skin" is a new television commercial <www.youtube.com/watch?v=nxPyxgh9xgA> reported by Jerry Margolin and found on-line by Jennie Paton.
21778. Further to the recommendation of Anthony Horowitz's "Magpie Murders" television series (Dec 22 #1), the book from which he adapted the series also is nicely done; the solutions to the murders are the same, but it's interesting to see what Horowitz did when he adapted the book for television.
21779. Jerry Margolin has reported a nicely Sherlockian (and affordable) collectible available in Oregon <www.oregonlottery.org/scratch-its/cash-hunt>; the question for collectors is: do you keep it in mint condition?

January 23 #6

21780. The Norwegian Explorers' Christmas Annual for 2022 takes "International Holmes" as its theme, with a nice mix of essays, articles, pastiches, poetry, and a puzzle; only a few copies of the 107-page booklet, edited by Ray Riethmeier and Phillip Bergem, are available ($11.00 postpaid); ask Phillip <pgbergem@gmail.com> if you're in time to order, and he'll tell you how to pay. Back issues for some earlier years, and conference books, also are available.
21781. Gillette Castle is currently closed for tours, and work is underway on renovating the castle's terrace; tours will resume on May 27. In the meantime, Susan Dahlinger reports, there's a virtual tour available on-line at the Gillette Castle State Park web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc38p73j>. The web-site of the Friends of Gillette Castle State Park also is well worth exploring <www.gillettecastlefriends.org>.
21782. The Parallel Case of St. Louis has announced their "Holmes in the Heartland" conference on July 28-30; more information is available at their web-site <www.parallelcasestl.wixsite.com/home/holmes-in-the-heartland>.
21783. The fall issue of The Magic Door (published by the friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) offers full reports on the Jubilee@221B conference, news from the Library and the Collection, and much more. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb (Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
21784. Maurice Breslow's Full Circle: Sherlock Holmes's Greatest Challenge Ever (Altona: Friesen Press, 2022; 115 pp., $14.99) presents Holmes with a dire problem: Conan Doyle has decided to dispose of Holmes at the Reichenbach. Their worlds collide, and overlap, and the novella provides an intriguing solution.
21785. Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle in the Newspapers, Volume 6, October 1894, edited and annotated by Mattias Boström and Mark Alberstat (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2023; 258 pp., $38.95), continues the series launched in 2015; the first volume covered ten years, and this one reprints only some of the articles published in the month that saw Conan Doyle on his highly-publicized tour in the United States.

21786. Also from Gasogene: You Know My Methods, Watson, edited by Andy and Shelly Gage (Indianapolis: Illustrious Clients, 2023; 113 pp., $19.99) is the society's third case-notes, offering a fine mix of articles, toasts, poetry, drama, and explorations of the history of the Clients. The Sherlock Holmes Review: 2022 Sherlockian Annual (78 pp., $24.95) has a wide variety of new articles and reminiscences, Canonical and Sherlockian interesting (Steve Doyle has an especially nice story in the Collectors' Corner.) And while it's not new, Christopher Redmond's A Quick Succession of Subjects (2016; 276 pp., $19.95), a collection of lectures and speeches from 1978 to 2015, includes "Advice from Professor Moriarty on the Presentation of Sherlockian Papers" (which will be of interest and value to anyone who is considering speechifying about Sherlock Holmes). Gasogene's books can be ordered at <www.gasogenebooks.com>.

21787. Do you think copyright protection in the U.S. is complicated? Canada has just changed its regulations to provide protection for 70 (rather than 50) years from the death of the author. Fear not: Conan Doyle's works went into public domain in Canada in 1980, and even if the new regulations were retroaction, his protection would have ended in 2000. The CBC explained it all on Jan. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/mr2zz5cp>.
21788. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, offers de-tailed reports on the International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes (at the Minnesota History Center in St. Paul through Apr. 2) and the mini-conference held last October), celebrations of A. A. Milne and D. Martin Dakin, and news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Timothy Johnson, #15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <johns976@umn.com>. Planning's underway for a full-scale conference in Minneapolis in 2024.
21789. Linda Bailey's Arthur Who Wrote Sherlock (Tundra Book Group, 2022; 56 pp., $18.99) is written for children aged 5-9 years, and it's a delightful introduction to the life and work of Conan Doyle, enhanced by Isabelle Follath's colorful artwork.
21790. A recent article in The Times reported on "the 22 poshest villages in the UK," and one of them was Forest Row, which was described as "a beacon of progressiveness" and "a posh hippy enclave sloshing with private wealth." Obviously it has changed since Holmes and Watson stayed at the Brambletye Hotel in Forest Row (in "Black Peter").
21791. Howard Ostrom's "Silent Doyle: Non-Sherlockian Conan Doyle and the Silent Film Era" <www.nplh.co.uk/silentdoyle.html> is an informative and nicely-illustrated discussion of the subject; it is unfortunate that most of the films are not known to have survived.
21792. It is getting harder and harder to find open-stack libraries, in which it is possible to browse the shelves, but one of the best and largest is the Mui Ho Fine Arts Library at Cornell University <www.tinyurl.com/55npb48y>.
21793. Piers Haggard died on Jan. 11. He began his theatrical career in Britain in 1960 as an assistant director at the Royal Court, then moved to film and television, and was awarded an OBE in the New Year Honours in 2016; he directed the "Madame Sara" episode of the ITV series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971).
21794. The Baker Street Irregulars in Oxfordshire: they were the Special Operations Executive (SOE), who called themselves the Baker Street Irregulars because during WW2 their headquarters were at 64 Baker Street. They were also called "the Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare" and sometimes it was said that SOE stood for "Stately 'omes of England" after the many country homes and estates they used during the war. One of those stately homes was still used by the intelligence services until the 1970s, when it was sold and carefully restored; it's now on the market again (at £6,000,000), and you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/djvaz7vc>.

21795. Will Thomas' Fierce Poison (New York: Minotaur, 2022; 294 pp., $27.99) is the next in his grand series that stars private enquiry agents Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and (now) partner Thomas Llewelyn; it's 1893, and the story puts them and their friends in dire peril at the hands of a mysterious poisoner. The tale's well told, and the supporting characters are as interesting as the stars; the book is an excellent addition to the series.
21796. The last Sherlock Holmes stories aren't the only things to enter the public domain this year. Here's something you may not have thought was protected by copyright: <www.tinyurl.com/sxtbbfmr>.
21797. "The only thing needed to be a Sherlockian is a curious mind and the free edition of The Complete Sherlock Holmes – Nick Martorelli, interviewed by Robb Nunn on his "Interesting Though Elementary" blog, which continues to offer a fine mix of essays and interviews <www.tinyurl.com/5ym74vsk>.
21798. Theatrical news: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Reno Little Theater in Reno, Nev., through Feb. 12 <www.renolittletheater.org>. It's also due at the Theatre Off The Square in Weatherford, Tex., on Feb. 3-19 <www.theatreoffthesquare.org>; and at the Olathe West Theatre in Olathe, Kan., Mar. 3-4 <www.owtheatre.com>.
21799. The new musical "Sherlock Holmes and the Poisonwood" will be performed at the Other Palace in London, Feb. 2-4 <www.theturbinetheatre.com>.
21800. Joshua L. Peugh's new musical "My Dear Watson" was performed at The Grandel in St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 27-28, and it will be streamed on-line, Feb. 3-5 <www.kranzbergartsfoundation.org/the-grandel>.
21801. The Red Throated League (of the Norwegian Explorers) will perform "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Heiress" at the Minnesota History Center in St. Paul, Minn., on Feb. 4 <www.mnhs.org/event/9630>.
21802. Lesley Hart will discuss her "Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Lipstick, Ketchup and Blood" (with excerpts performed by Deirde Davis) at the Pitlochry Festival Theatre in Pitlochry, Perthshire, on Feb. 12 (it's her adaptation of "A Study in Scarlet") <www.pitlochryfestivaltheatre.com>.
21803. Samuel Safa's "Sherlock Holmes: l'Aventure Musicale" will be performed at the 13eme Art theater in Paris, Feb. 18-Mar. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/2s4dwcdx>.
21804. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" will be performed at the Lakeland Cultural Arts Center in Littleton, N.C., Mar. 24-Apr. 1 <www.lakelandcac.org>.
21805. "Baker Street Irregulars" (by Flip Kobler and Cindy Marcus) is to be performed at the Kettering Children's Theatre in Kettering, Ohio, from Mar. 24 to Apr. 2 <www.playkettering.org>.

21806. The splendid exhibition of "Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects" from the collection of Glen Miranker opened with suitable fanfare at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis on Feb. 13, and it will be on display until May 5. Special events are scheduled for Mar. 16 and Apr. 20, and you can watch Tim Johnson interviewing Glen about the exhibition at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=jprpshwYQrg>.
21807. There's still time to visit Moscow to see the State Museum of the History of Russian Literature's exhibition "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in Russia" <www.tinyurl.com/4n8yy2nm>, which closes on Mar. 26. There's more information about the exhibition at <www.goslitmuz.ru/poster/16438>. And if you can't get to Moscow, Howard Ostrom has noted that there is a nice video tour at <www.tinyurl.com/bdmmhax>.

21808. If you'd like to know more about the life and work of the late Nick Utechin, you can listen to his interview at the Baker Street Irregulars Trust oral-history project at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3whrpkt2>.
21809. Bookforum, launched in 1994 as a literary supplement to Artforum magazine and considered by some as "the cool-kid sibling of older publication like the N.Y. Review of Books," has ceased publication. There still is an on-line archive, where you can read articles such as Audrey Woolen's "Neither Fairy nor Foul" about the Cottingley photographs in the June/July/August issue <www.tinyurl.com/394frz56>.
21810. The Massachusetts Department of Transportation reported (on Jan. 20) the twelve winners of their "name a snowplow" competition; they included "The Blizzard of Oz", "Luke Snowwalker", and "Sherlock Snowmes". See them all at <www.tinyurl.com/y9h973dv>.
21811. "A Study in Sherlock" is the title of an auction due on Apr. 20 at Potter & Potter <www.potterauctions.com>; it's "the first sale from Robert Hess' collection of Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle" including original illustration art, first editions, signed photos, letters, movie posters, items from the Jeremy Brett Estate, an original street sign from Baker Street, and much more.
21812. "Boss of Sherlock Holmes Museum Wins Fight to Evict Brother from £1m Home in 10-Year Feud" was the headline on a story in the Daily Mirror (Feb. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/bdfwjbm>. John Aidiniantz, who now controls the Sherlock Holmes Museum in London, has won the latest lawsuit in a decade-long feud that has involved more than 100 court appearance and resulted in more than £2.5 million in costs and court orders in a legal war that started as a battle over profits from the Museum, which continues to claim that it's at 221B Baker Street.
21813. John Cleese starred as Sherlock Holmes (with William Rushton as Dr. Watson) in "Elementary, My Dear Watson" (a 30-minute program in the BBC-1's "Comedy Playhouse", broadcast in 1973); you can watch their antics on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/2v5n565m> (kindly reported by Jennie Paton).

21814. Demolition has begun at the Lyndhurst Park Hotel, a local paper reported on Nov. 24, 2022 <www.tinyurl.com/3xx7cfts>. Conan Doyle is said to have designed both the entrance of the hotel and its battlement-style terraces in 1912, and the Daily Telegraph noted on Mar. 20, 2021, that a local historian had found a sketch that showed that Sir Arthur's design for the front façade "was based on the spiritual view of the journey of the soul."
21815. Why should presidents and former presidents and vice presidents be the only ones to have fun? Now you all can join the the club.
21816. "When Katherine Mansfield died everybody said, 'We have lost a writer of exquisite short stories,' and so we did. We have still, fortunately, other writers not less good, and one thinks of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his 'Sherlock Holmes,' or, again, of Mr. Perceval Gibbon and of Mr. Stacy Aumonier, whose extraordinary lightness of touch gives readability to everything he writes." A quote from the chapter on "Short Stories of Quality" in James Milne's A London Book Window (1924), kindly reported by Mattias Boström; the book's on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ez8w6hjc>. And one wonders; has anyone actually read a short story written by more than one of those four authors?
21817. The winter 2022/2023 issue of Canadian Holmes is a special issue honoring the late Peter Calamai, reprinting eight of his delightful contributions to our pseudo-scholarship. A subscription costs $40.00 a year (US or CA); single issues cost $12.00 postpaid <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
21818. Bob Coghill on vacation in New Zealand, found the Holmes Café in Waitara <www.facebook.com/SHolmes-Coffee-More-309768106026323>; it was closed at the time, so he didn't get to sample the food and drinks.
21819. Five Miles to Anywhere is a Sherlockian society that holds monthly on-line discussions, and makes recordings of their meetings available at Derrick Belanger's YouTube, where you can see both their interesting speakers, and how much fun they have <www.youtube.com/channel/UC0msAhK3Awcs5cpXOj4zJ4A>. The society also has a Facebook page, but doesn't yet have a theme song; they might want to adopt <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vaD_B_C2RwI>.
21820. Howard Ostrom has reported S. V. Mukhin's interesting Conan Doyle web-site <www.conan-doyle.narod.ru>; it's in Russian (Google Translate can be quite helpful), and is an excellent example of what people are doing to make Conan Doyle and Holmes available in other languages.
21821. Moriarty has returned: Daniel Davis, who played Moriarty in two episodes of "Star Trek: The Next Generation" will be seen in the role again in the third season of "Picard" (which began streaming on Paramount+ beginning on Feb. 16); Robert Ryan reported on the new season of the series on the Inverse web-site (Jan. 25) <www.tinyurl.com/mwby8hj6>.

21822. The portable Goyard writing desk designed for Conan Doyle (Aug 18 #1) has been advertised yet again, discounted to $106,720 (plus shipping from Hong Kong) <www.tinyurl.com/59zd5sae>. It's not the desk actually owned by Conan Doyle, but rather one of the additional six made by Goyard; Scott Montgomery's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog offers a detailed and illustrated report on the desk <www.tinyurl.com/ywnn6yc4>.
21823. KD Sherrinford's Song for Someone (Extasy Books, 2022; 369 pp., $13.25) is the first in her "Sherlock Holmes and Irene Adler" series; it's a romantic novel, with young Charlotte Saporì reading diaries kept by her mother and father and discovering that she's the daughter of Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes, and learning about the complicated history of their relationship. The story continues in Christmas at the Saporìs (2022; 82 pp., $7.00) with Mycroft on hand to complicate things. Sherrinford has a Facebook page at <www.tinyurl.com/mr2d9scf>, and you can read more about the author and her two books at <www.tinyurl.com/35hpeyhw>.
21824. "The Great MLB Jersey Caper" was the headline on a story at the Sports Illustrated web-site on Feb. 27 <www.tinyurl.com/yc73bhjd>, kindly forwarded by Ross Davies. According to the colorful and detailed re-Port, "Baseball had somehow stumbled into a locked-room mystery, more Agatha Christie than Christy Mathewson, more Sherlock Holmes than Homer Bailey," and it's a grand mystery indeed, not just because the missing jerseys cost $250 each.
21825. Due on CBS-TV (perhaps): "Shortly after the death of his friend and partner Sherlock Holmes at the hands of Moriarty, Dr. John Watson resumes his medical career as the head of a clinic dedicated to treating rare genetic disorders, only to uncover a startling secret that puts him in the cross-hairs of Moriarty once again." CBS has opened a writers room for a series proposed by Craig Sweeney, who worked on the network's "Elementary" series for five years, most of them as executive producer, and targeted for the 2024-2025 season. Opening a writers room means that the network wants to see scripts before approving a pilot.
21826. "September, 1925. Russell and Holmes cross Europe to the village outside Paris where his son, Damian Adler, has settled to paint. But Damian has fled, and while Holmes goes after him, Russell begins to look into the secrets of Holmes' own past, beginning with an intriguing lantern with figures that seem to dance." If you want to know more, you'll need to read Laurie R. King's next novel The Lantern's Dance, due early next year.
21827. Memories and Adventures, edited by Douglas Kerr (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022; 342 pp., £150.00/$230.00), is the first volume in The Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle, which will offer the text of the books; detailed introductions; comparisons of the manuscripts (if available), first serial appearances, and first editions; explanatory notes; and (for Memories and Adventures) occasional corrections of errors made by Conan Doyle in remembering his life and work. It's a grand project indeed, and Memories and Adventures is a splendid start. The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes is due next, to be followed by Round the Red Lamp.

21828. The imaginative life-size bronze sculpture by Irena Sedlecká that shows Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the spirit of Sherlock Holmes <www.tinyurl.com/y2sevea2>, on display in the Garden of Heroes and Villains created by the late Felix Dennis in Dorsington, Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warwickshire, is not easy to see, but the Garden will be open to the public during a guided walk on Aug. 2 <www.tinyurl.com/yd7tjmph>.
21829. Jennie Paton reports an update to the video "Evolution of Sherlock Holmes Games" which now covers 2002-2023 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=lUnD5sYGJTM>.
21830. Mark Godburn advertised (it has been sold) a "rare Victorian book, in its dust jacket, a book that reportedly introduced the first non-white detective in Victorian fiction." The book is Headon Hill's The Divinations of Kala Persad (Ward, Lock & Bowden, 1895), a first edition, in a dust jacket, with advertising on the jacket flaps that includes A Study in Scarlet (possibly the earliest surviving reference to the book on a dust jacket). Does anyone know of an earlier dust jacket with Canonical advertising?
21831. Mark buys, sells, and collects and researches early dust jackets, and is the author of Nineteenth-Century Dust-Jackets (2016) (still available from the Oak Knoll Press <www.oakknoll.com>. He'd be glad to hear from anyone who shares his enthusiasm, at <markrgodburn@gmail.com>.
21832. The late Jim French's "Imagination Theatre" radio series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" began 25 years ago, and is still on the air. Larry Albert has played Dr. Watson on every program, and you can hear recent shows at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/2p88z22j>. You can also purchase MP3 downloads of the "Further Adventures" (and all of the Canonical stories as "The Classic Adventures") at <www.tinyurl.com/28a8tfj6>. M. J. Elliott has been writing scripts for about 20 years, and has done the entire Canon, as well as many other stories.
21833. "Brian and Charles" (2002) is a splendid and amusing film about Brian (a lonely inventor) and Charles (his robot); Charles appears in Sherlockian costume in about ten minutes of the film, Howard Ostrom reports, and you get a very brief glimpse of him in the trailer <www.youtube.com/4hzvcmzx>. It's available on Amazon Prime and on Blu-ray in the U.S., and on DVD only in the U.K.
21834. "Workplace Return Should Be Elementary, My Dear Prime Minister" read the headline on Matthew Lau's column in the [Toronto] Financial Post on Feb. 22 <www.tinyurl.com/w5vbf39n>, kindly reported by Cliff Goldfarb. And the column's nicely Sherlockian.
21835. Graeme Malcolm died on Jan. 10. Born in Scotland, he moved to the U.S. in his early twenties and began recording for the American Federation for the Blind's talking-books program; he went on to record 168 audiobooks, and to act on stage and in television and films. Malcolm also was an understudy for Frank Langella as Sherlock Holmes in a 1987 production of Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case", and his recordings include the anthology Sherlock Holmes in America and two Canonical stories (all of them now available from Audible, where you can hear samples at <www.audible.com>.

21836. Joe Coppola reports that amateur radio operators holding extra-class licenses can ask the Federal Communications Commission for vanity call signs, and he has just been authorized to use K1BSI. K3BSI may still be available from the FCC. If you would like to join the Sherlock Holmes Wireless Society (for licensed amateur radio operators), you can contact Ron Fish at <ronf404@aol.com>.
21837. Max Alvarez has noted an interesting web-site <www.movie-locations.com>, where searches for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] turn up some hits.
21838. Bibliotopos continues to offer important and (unusual) material at their web-site, and their current offers include a complete run of single issues of the Strand Magazine with all 58 stories published in the magazine (for $85,000) <www.tinyurl.com/2cwbwwys>. They recently offered the manuscript of "His Last Bow" (for $200,000) <www.tinyurl.com/236uh9wp>, and while it sold quickly, they've kept the description up at the web-site. Mark Hime, who founded the company in the mid-1970s, still presides over the catalog descriptions ("blame no one else," he says), and it's well worth reading what he writes, about his offers, his philosophy, and more.
21839. "The Terror of Blue John Gap" continues to entertain geologists who admire Conan Doyle's fiction, because it includes both an interesting mineral and a monster that turns out to be a Pleistocene cave bear. Dana Martin Batory and William A. S. Sarjeant suggested in 1994 that the Terror was not, in fact, a cave bear, but rather a great scimitar cat, and it's nice that the Royal Mail issued a set of stamps in 2006 honoring Ice Age Animals that included both a cave bear and a sabre-tooth cat.
21840. Marian Misters and JD Singh have announced that they are going to retire, and will soon be closing the Sleuth of Baker Street in Toronto after 40 years of service to readers all over the world from one of the last remaining mystery-specialist bookstores; you can read the latest (and last) issue of their newsletter Merchant of Menace on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/mryjtv8e>.
21841. Southsea Stories and Beyond, edited by Matt Wingett (Portsmouth: Life Is Amazing, 2022; 447 pp., £25.00 hardback/£15.00 paperback), offers a preface by Andrew Lycett and reprints of all the short stories not included in collections during Conan Doyle's lifetime; it has two additional stories ("The Haunted Grange of Goresthorpe" and "The Blood-Stone Tragedy") that are not in Uncollected Stories (edited by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green in 1982), and Wingett's added commentary discusses the many echoes of Southsea and Portsmouth found in the stories. The best price is available at the publisher's web-site at <www.lifeisamazing.co.uk>.
21842. There's an amusing story about Wingett's book: because of the deep rivalry between the Portsmouth (blue) and Southsea (red) football teams, some of the shopkeepers in Portsmouth said their customers refused to purchase the book in its red dust jacket, so he made up a small supply in blue jackets, and you're welcome to order either or both.

21843. The Perseverance rover entered its extended-mission phase on Mars on Jan. 7. Designed to last one Martian year (687 Earth days), the rover reached that milestone on Jan. 6, and is still exploring Jezero Crater. SHERLOC also is continuing to perform well; it has its own entry at Wikipedia (with a mention of WATSON) <www.tinyurl.com/5f6xnrwx> and <www.tinyurl.com/2p9xteja>.
21844. "Sherlock Holmes was the first fictional sleuth to use a magnifying glass" (according to a recent post to the Mental Floss web-site from Jake Rossen and Kat Long) <www.tinyurl.com/42v6vjfx>. That might even be true. Can anyone cite an earlier magnifying glass used by a fictional sleuth?
21845. Mark Jones and Paul M. 21847. The Lord Chamberlain's Office is where the script for Conan Doyle's play "The Crown Diamond" was discovered (he eventually turned it into the short story "The Mazarin Stone"); British plays no longer are required to be licensed by the Lord Chamberlain, and the British Library now has all of the new plays performed in Britain from 1824 to 1968 as submitted to the Lord Chamberlain. They're now available to researchers, and you can read more about it at <www.tinyurl.com/yc8dcfdk>.
21848. Sherlock has been granted a patent by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. That's Sherlock Biosciences, and the company says that it's now the leader in CRISPR-based diagnostics. CRISPR and SHERLOCK are acronyms (May 20 #4), and the company's press release is at <www.tinyurl.com/n86zb2dk>. An article in GEN Edge (Feb. 22) may or may not be helpful in explaining all of this.
21849. Frank Emerson's Sherlock Holmes and the Unmasking of the Whitechapel Horror (London: MX Publishing, 2023; 166 pp., $12.95) has Holmes and Watson pursuing the Ripper, assisted by Chief Inspector Abberline, and after 15 years they track the Ripper down and bring him to justice and the gallows.

21851. "After getting a taste for blood, Winnie-the-Pooh and Piglet set off to find a new source for food. It's not long before their bloody rampage begins." That's the premise of the new film "Winnie the Pooh: Blood and Honey" that was quick to take advantage of the end of copyright protection for A. A. Milne's iconic characters. A detailed report on the film in Variety (Feb. 7) <www.tinyurl.com/2ayn2z4h> notes that at one point a horror Sherlock Holmes film was considered, but that seems to have been shelved: the company's next project is described as "Jurassic Park" meets "Bambi".
21852. An excellent way to add good books to your library while saving money is patronize discounters who specialize in publishers' remainders: Daedalus Books <www.daedalusbooks.com> is one of them: a recent search for [sherlock holmes] turned up Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle's Wide World: Sherlock Holmes and Beyond ($9.98) and Mike Ashley's Adventures in the Strand: Arthur Conan Doyle & The Strand Magazine ($5.98), among others.
21853. William Crick has launched a new on-line "Sherlock Holmes Forum" available at <www.sherlockholmesforum.org>, and welcomes one and all.
21854. I hear of Sherlock everywhere: Howard Ostrom found an image of the F-86E Sabre flown by Maj. James Robinson Risner with the 366th Squadron in Korea in Jan. 1953, with artwork that shows Bugs Bunny looking for a discharge. He retired as a Brigadier General after serving in three wars, and his entry at Wikipedia is well worth reading.
21855. One of the (few) nice things about the pandemic is the opportunity to attend meetings of distant Sherlockian societies via the Internet and YouTube: some societies have posted their virtual meetings on YouTube channels. One of those societies is the Sydney Passengers (posting from Australia) <www.youtube.com/@sydneypassengers3476>. The Red Circle of Washington also has a YouTube channel <www.tinyurl.com/nhfvaysp>; other societies are welcome to let me know about their meeting videos.
21856. Alexander Orlov has noted that there is a Moriarty Hotel in Krasnodar (in southern Russia). And a Sherlock Holmes Hostel. So it's more expensive for admirers of the Professor.
21857. The August Derleth Society was founded in the late 1970s and continues to celebrate the many-faceted literary career of the creator of Solar Pons. Membership costs $25.00 a year and includes four issues of their newsletter Sage of Sac Prairie; the latest issue offers Derrick Belanger's article about the first annual Luther Norris PSI Dinner, held during the January birthday festivities in New York, to honor the founder of the Praed Street Irregulars. You can find Derrick at <www.belangerbooks.com>, and the August Derleth Society at <www.augustderleth.org>. Luther founded the PSI in 1966, edited and published the Pontine Dossier, and held delightful annual dinners in Los Angeles (attended by some people who are willing and able to tell stories about those festivities).

21859. "Baker Street Elementary" is a long-running on-line comic strip created by Joe Faye, Rusty Mason, and Steve Mason, now in its ninth year, and all of their amusing strips (and their six comic books) are available at the web-site of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star <www.tinyurl.com/ms76ytj8>.
21860. "Emmerdale Star Dominic Brunt Thought He Saw a Cottingley Fairy" was the headline on a Yahoo! News story (Jan. 30) <www.tinyurl.com/mr3t3n5e>. The actor lived at Cottingley Beck in Bradford, where Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths took five photographs of what appeared to be real fairies. According to Brunt, when he lived at the Cottingley Fairies house, he looked out a window and thought he saw a fairy, and "my heart stopped. But when I looked closer it was a dragonfly!"
21861. Larry Millett's The Disappearance of Sherlock Holmes, published in 2002, was the fifth in his series of pastiches about Sherlock Holmes in Minnesota; he was interviewed on WYSO-FM that year <www.tinyurl.com/y5pttskp>.
21862. And now for some theatrical news: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Mantorville Opera House in Mantorville, Minn., Mar. 17-Apr. 2 <www.mantorvilletheatrecompany.com>; also at the Thousand Islands Playhouse in Gananoque, Ont., June 2-24 <1000islandsplayhouse.com>; the John Goodman Amphitheatre at Missouri State University in Springfield, Mo., on July 7-14 <www.tenttheatre.missouristate.edu>; and at the Milam Community Theater in Cameron, Tex., July 22-30 <www.milamcommunitytheater.com> and the Cedar Street Playhouse in Rolla, Mo., July 27-Aug. 6 (that web-site's at <www.ozarkactorstheatre.org>).
21863. David Stuart Davies' "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act" will be performed at The White Bear Theatre in London, Mar. 21-25 <www.whitebeartheatre.co.uk> by Nigel Miles-Thomas; it's then due at the Hollywood Fringe Festival in June. The two-act one-man play was written by Davies for Roger Llewellyn, who toured the play in many countries after it debuted in 1999; he died in 2019, and the play has now been revived by Miles-Thomas.
21864. Jon Jory's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is due at the Way Off Broadway Theatre in Prattville, Ala., Apr.13-30 <www.facebook.com/prattvillewobt>.

21867. There's still a lot of interest in movie posters: the Ricky Jay Collection offered at Potter & Potter Auctions on Feb. 25 included a rare (and colorful) one-sheet poster <www.tinyurl.com/5bmt5dyb> for the 1923 two-reel and long-lost silent film "Is Conan Doyle Right?" (an expose of fraudulent mediums); it sold for $9,600 (including the buyer's premium).
21868. The British dealer Brought to Book is offering the bound first volume of The Strand Magazine in a dust jacket (£15,000); the first volume contains a non-Sherlockian story by Conan Doyle ("The Voice of Science"), but it's the dust jacket that's truly rare <www.tinyurl.com/2p8yeu34>; early volume of the magazine in dust jackets have been reported, but here's an opportunity to see what one looks like.
21869. Russell Merritt ("The Trepoff Murder") died on Mar. 3. He was a film historian and scholar who taught for many years in the Film Studies and Media Department at the University of California in Berkeley, and was the last person alive who read his first Sherlock Holmes story ("A Study in Scarlet") in a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887. You can learn much more about his life and career by listening to his interview for the Baker Street Irregulars Oral History Program at <www.tinyurl.com/59x5tydd>. He received his Investiture from the BSI in 1960.
21870. If you'd like to see how much fun Russell had as a film historian, watch his talk about "How Movies Coped When the Wrong People Went to See Them" <www.nitrateville.com/viewtopic.php?f=1&p=273753>. You might also want to watch his interview on Steve Doyle's podcast The Fortnightly Dispatch, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kWZTc8Nyxss>.
21871. Leonard Goldberg's The Wayward Prince (New York: Minotaur Books, 2023; 336 pp., $28.00), the seventh title in his series that stars Sherlock Holmes' daughter Joanna Blalock, who learned much from her father and is working with Dr. John H. Watson and his son (and her husband) Dr. John H. Watson Jr., is set during the Great War, and they are tasked with finding a royal prince who has vanished in the midst of London and may have been kidnapped by the Germans. The author's web-site is at <www.leonardgoldberg.com>.
21873. Derrick Belanger has reported that the Praed Street Irregulars will hold a Zoom meeting on June 3; the PSI, founded many years ago by Luther Norris for admirers of August Derleth's writings about Solar Pons, is of course an homage to the Baker Street Irregulars, in the same way Pons was an homage to Holmes. If you'd like to attend the meeting, just send a message to Derrick at <derrick@belangerbooks.com>; you can also ask to join his Solar Pons e-mail list.

21874. Will Thomas' Heart of the Nile (New York: Minotaur, 2022; 320 pp., $27.99) is the latest in the fine series that stars private enquiry agents Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and (now) partner Thomas Llewelyn; the mystery begins in the British Museum in 1893, with the murder of a volunteer researcher who has found a treasure in what may be Cleopatra's mummy. It's an excellent addition to the series, which offers interesting problems and strong characters, and while it's not really Sherlockian, it's all great fun.
21875. "Two Pipe Problems" was a delightful British radio series broadcast by BBC Radio 4, that starred Richard Briers as William Parnes/Sherlock Holmes and Stanley Baxter as Sandy Boyle/Dr. Watson. "Feisty thespians William and Stanley, the self-styled Holmes and Watson of their retirement community, galvanize the other inmates of The Old Beeches, home for terminally resting members of the entertainment community, as they leave no commode unconquered in their quest to solve their own 'two pipe problems.'" Howard Ostrom has reported two episodes ("Marriage at The Old Beeches" and "Have You Come Far?") on-line at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=agie8ZsCVsk> (they first aired on Apr. 27 and 28, 2009).
21876. An interesting Sherlockian book was offered at auction at PBS Galleries this month: Basil Rathbone's copy of the Trilogy Dinner first edition of Profile by Gaslight, edited by Edgar W. Smith (1944); it was estimated at $500-$800, and it sold for $600 ($750 including the buyer's premium).
21877. Sherlock Holmes: Das letzte Problem (2022) was an impressive graphic novel for younger readers, illustrated by Hans Binder, who also adapted the story into German for publication in Switzerland, and it is now available in English as Sherlock Holmes: The Final Problem (New York: NorthSouth Books, 2023; 56 pp., $18.95) <www.northsouth.com>.
21878. The Beacon Society (created in 2003 to support teaching Sherlock Holmes to young people) has published a new issue of its "not-so-quarterly newsletter" <www.tinyurl.com/nhepfkcf> (scroll down to "Society Newsletter") with reports on current activities.
21879. Ian Jarvis' Cat Flap (London: MX Publishing, 2016; 335 pp., $18.95) features Bernard Quist, a modern-day consulting detective, and a variety of names (for characters and places) taken from the Canon; otherwise it's not Sherlockian, and it's more a thriller than a mystery, with many twists and turns and evil villains.
21880. One of the many nice things that make the N.Y. Times a great newspaper is their "Overlooked" feature ("a series of obituaries about remarkable people whose deaths, beginning in 1851 went unreported in The Times"), and on Mar. 13 they had a delightful remembrance for Dilys Winn, who died in 2016 <www.tinyurl.com/2njr69xn> (in case you can get through their pay-wall).
21881. In 1972 she opened Murder Ink, the world's first bookshop devoted solely to mystery fiction, in New York went on to edit Murder Ink: A Mystery Lover's Companion, which won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1978. She appeared on the television series "To Tell the Truth" in 1972, and you can see the program on YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/jqi7spy>.

21882. Sherry Thomas' A Tempest at Sea (New York: Berkley, 2023; 249 pp., $17.00), the seventh in her "Lady Sherlock" series about the exploits of Charlotte Holmes, no longer pretending to be the sister of the non-existent Sherlock Holmes but now in hiding after faking her death in order to escape from Prof. Moriarty; she's now carefully disguised as an elderly lady, at sea on her way to Gibraltar, hoping to recover a document stolen by German spies, and forced to solve two murders while avoiding Moriarty's minions. The author's web-site (offering a sample from the book) is at <www.sherrythomas.com>.
21885. There's no longer a legal right to wild camp on Dartmoor, the last place in England and Wales where people had the right to "freely sleep beneath the stars," the National Geographic reported (Mar. 14) <www.tinyurl.com/yc588zyw>. Wild camping is "pitching your tent away from all infrastructure, carrying all of your equipment, and leaving no trace,” essentially what Sherlock Holmes did in “The Hound of the Baskervilles” (except that he didn’t have a tent). The High Court has ruled in a legal challenge brought by a hedge-fund manager who is Dartmoor’s sixth-largest land-owner that “open-air recreation” includes riding horses and hiking, but not camping. The Dartmoor National Park authority already has spent £100,000 fighting the court case, and is considering an appeal that might cost that much more again.

21886. Ray Betzner’s latest exploration in his “Studies in Starrett” blog is an examination of “Rathbone, Eliot, and Woodworth (But Not in That Order)”, inspired by his pursuit of the Brothers of the Book; it’s a grand example of the strange things one can turn up when research is involved. Read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/mr424spe>.
21887. The Sherlockian Chronologist Guild provides a safe haven for those devoted to determining the dates of Sherlock Holmes’ cases; Bruce Harris is one of the Guild’s most active members, and in his new The Duration Debate (2023; 120 pp., $9.95 at Amazon) he has turned his attention to how long it took Holmes to solve each of the sixty Canonical cases, reviewing and commenting on the conclusions of nine earlier chronologists, and occasionally revising his previous datings. If you’d like to know more about the Guild, their web-site’s at <www.bkeefauver5.wixsite.com/sherlockchronoguild>.

21888. There’s a wide variety of Sherlockian playing cards available now, including a deck issued by Laurence King in the U.K. last year, with artwork by Doug John Miller and a booklet written by Nicholas Utechin (£12.99); details at <www.tinyurl.com/mdt8xdy5>. It’s also available in the U.S. ($14.99) from PBS <www.shop.pbs.org/WE5242.html>, among other sources; kindly reported by John Garcia.
21890. The latest issue (#31) of the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Magazine offers the usual nice selection of Sherlockian articles and non-Sherlockian fiction, and Kim Newman’s continuing “Screen of the Crime” reviews of some of the more unusual Sherlockian film and television available on YouTube, as well as striking cover art by Estevan; $13.00 (or $39.99 for four issues) from the Wildside Press <www.wildsidepress.com>.
21891. The Bilge Pump, the newsletter edited by Steve Mason for the Crew of the Barque Lone Star, recently offered Denny Dobry’s delightful contribution “You Might Be a Sherlockian If ...” in the March issue, which you can read on-line at <www.dfw-sherlock.org/the-bilge-pump-newsletter.html>.
21892. Thomas Wixon, having lost his library to Hurricane Katrina, has decided to focus on something more portable: bookplates. He is trying to assemble a complete set of Vincent Starrett’s bookplates, and you’re welcome to contact him <twixon@gmail.com> to see what he has, in case you have a duplicate of a bookplate he doesn’t.
21893. The “Sherlock Holmes Weekend” in Cape May, N.J., will feature a new play “Send in the Clowns” at the La Mer Beachfront Resort on Apr. 14-16. The next weekend will include “The Other Consulting Detective” on Nov. 3-5 and 10-12 <www.tinyurl.com/yckscvvu>.
21894. Steve Doyle’s “The Fortnightly Dispatch” has returned for its fourth season, with a program about the public Sherlock Holmes collections in North America, interviewing Erika Dowell (the Lilly Library), Tim Johnson (the University of Minnesota), and Jessie Amaolo (the Toronto Public Library); it’s all on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=EG_b4dpq3sE>.
21895. The Baker Street Journal’s 2023 Christmas Annual will be a tribute to John Bennett Shaw. The Annual is included in subscriptions to the BSJ, and not available otherwise; you can read all about (and subscribe to) the BSJ at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/the-baker-street-journal>.
21896. There has been next to no publicity in English for “Mademoiselle Holmes” (and not much in French); it’s a French television mini-series going into production for broadcast on TF1, with six 52-minute episodes. The stars of the series are Lola Dewaere as Charlie Holmes (descended from Sherlock Holmes) and Tom Villa as her Watson.

21897. The catalog for “A Study in Scarlet: The Curious Collection of Robert Hess” at auction Potter & Potter on Apr. 20, is now on-line at their web-site <www.potteructions.com> as a full-color PDF. The 281 lots are only the first part of his collection, which is spectacular. The items also are on-line at Invaluable <www.tinyurl.com/bdcvf84a>, and it is grand to be able to explore his original illustration art, first editions, signed photos, letters, movie posters, items from the Jeremy Brett Estate, an original street sign from Baker Street, and much more. And of course to have a chance to bid on things.
21898. Fans of the late MSFK3 [Mystery Science Theater 3000] will enjoy the work of Bridget Nelson and Mary Jo Pohl at RiffTrax <www.rifftrax.com>; the latest Sherlockian film they have parodied is “The Scarlet Claw” (1944).
21899. The splendid exhibition of “Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects” from the collection of Glen Miranker, on display at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, closes on May 5, when it will return to Glen’s shelves in San Francisco. You can watch and (listen to) Glen interviewed by Richard Sveum at <www.tinyurl.com/2htx83pa>.
21900. “Holmes, Miss Marple, and Poe follows Brendan Holmes, Margaret Marple, and August Poe, who have formed the most in-demand private investigating firm in present-day New York City. They make a formidable team with differing approaches to crime-solving,” the Deadline web-site noted on Mar. 21, “and each claims to be distantly related to three of the greatest mystery writers of all time—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, and Edgar Allan Poe. But who are they really?” <www.tinyurl.com/y4a9fb29>. Best-selling author James Patterson has signed a first-look deal with Skydance Television that includes a possible television series based on a soon-to-be published book (that’s not yet forecast at Amazon).
21901. Heritage Auctions is offering some original artwork by James Allen St. John on Apr. 25 <www.tinyurl.com/mtemcm29>, stating that it shows Holmes and Watson, and that it was published as an illustration in the Baker Street Irregulars edition of The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle (1948). That’s not correct: it wasn’t, and it’s unlikely that it shows Holmes and Watson. But does anyone know whether, and when and where, it actually was published?
21902. “Trichy cigars were once a Churchill favourite. Now, it’s choked by taxes in a room of 3,” according to the Indian web-site ThePrint, posted on Mar. 22 <www.tinyurl.com/5n8h2heu>, with mention of Sherlock Holmes. There is more about Trichinopoly cigars, and the Canon, at a different Indian web-site <www.beyonder.travel/india/trichinopoly-cigar-india>.
21903. A. J. Low’s Sherlock Sam and the Missing Heirloom in Katong, published in Singapore in 2012, was the first in a long series about Singapore’s greatest kid detective, assisted by a robot Watson (Mar 13 #2), with a blog at <www.sherlocksam.wordpress.com>. There’s now “Sherlock Sam: The Musical!” (with script by Jo Tan and score by Elaine Chan), due at the Capitol Theatre in Singapore on May 11-20 <www.tinyurl.com/bdh2yjpw>.

21908. R Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the American Problem" will be performed at Baker Street West in Jackson, Calif., May 5-28; web-site at <www.bakerstreetwest.com>.
21909. "Sherlock Holmes Showcase" (Tal Aviezer's dramatizations of "The Dancing Men" and "The Dying Detective") will be performed at the Elmwood Playhouse in Nyack, N.Y., on July 16 <www.elmwoodplayhouse.com>.
21910. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson--Apt. 2B" is scheduled at the Dorset Playhouse in Dorset, Vt., Aug. 11-26 <www.dorsettheatrefestival.org>.
21911. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is due at the Cape Cod Center for the Arts in Dennis, Mass., Aug. 30-Sept. 9 <www.capeplayhouse.com>; and at the Omaha Community Playhouse in Omaha, Neb., Mar. 8-38 <www.omahaplayhouse.com>.
21912. Mark Shanahan's "A Sherlock Carol" will be performed at the Historic Arcade Theatre in Fort Myers, Fla., Nov. 28-Dec. 17 <www.floridarep.org>.

21914. "The Pepsodent Show Starring Bob Hope" (broadcast by NBC) was one of the most listened-to series during World War II, and Howard Ostrom has found on-line <www.youtube.com/watch?v=aiZ_LMteFYy> the program that was broadcast on Jan. 28, 1941, when Hope played straight man to guest star Basil Rathbone, who can be heard in a (non-Sherlockian) skit at 7:50.
21915. Jennie Paton has reported an interesting video in which Anthony Horowitz explains that he was inspired to be a mystery writer by reading a collection of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and then goes on to discuss "The Art of the Murder Mystery Twist" <www.tinyurl.com/sry3a3sk>.
21916. Steve Doyle's new season of "The Fortnightly Dispatch" continues with his interview with Terence Faherty, discussing the Sherlockian films of Basil Rathbone; it's on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dm0GB99iudE>.
21917. Save the date: the next major event in Minneapolis will be a conference on July 26-28, 2024, celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota. If you would like to enroll on their mailing list, contact Dick Sveum <sveumr@gmail.com>.
21918. Geri Schear's Sherlock Holmes and the Other Woman (London: MX Publishing, 2015; 325 pp., $16.95) is her second pastiche told by Sherlock Holmes, who with his wife Beatrice (a god-daughter of Her Majesty) becomes involved in a desperate (and complicated) battle against a malevolent enemy in 1898. Return to Reichenbach (2016; 330 pp., $16.95), the next in the series, has Holmes and Watson and Beatrice pitted against a mysterious villain who may have supernatural powers, in a dire and bitter contest that brings Holmes back to the scene of his battle with Moriarty. The author has a web-site at <www.rycardus.wordpress.com>.
21919. When in Chicago: you can visit the Claudia restaurant, named by chef Trevor Teich in honor of his mother, and work your way through the bar menu, which offers seven fancy (and expensive) cocktails that he has named for Sherlock Holmes stories <www.claudiarestaurant.com/menu-1>. Claudia's one of seven restaurants named for women that were reviewed by Nicole Schnitzler in the Chicago Tribune (Mar. 28) <www.inyurl.com/mreurddd>.
21920. "Have you ever heard a conch shell trumpet, Queen Victoria's voice, or the call of the bare-faced go-away-bird?" That's the question posed at British Library's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yckwry9w>, to introduce people to their new "Sounds" web-site, where you can listen to "Conan Doyle Speaking" (the recording made in London by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for His Master's Voice on May 14, 1930) <www.tinyurl.com/2p9bzhf2>.
21921. Randall Stock came in first with an identification of the artwork by James Allen St. John at Heritage Auctions on Apr. 25 <www.tinyurl.com/mtmemcm29> (Mar 23 #5): it's from the anthology Favorite Mystery Stories, edited by Marjorie Barrows (Chicago: Spencer Press, 1953), which included "The Blue Carbuncle" and "The Red-Headed League", both illustrated by St. John. It is cited by Ron De Waal in The Universal Sherlock Holmes.

21922. The Oxford University Press has announced its new nine-volume Oxford World's Classics edition of the Sherlock Holmes stories with a video webinar with four of the editors <www.tinyurl.com/ykvvfjah>. The first four volumes (A Study in Scarlet, The Hound of the Baskervilles, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, and The Return of Sherlock Holmes) are due for release in May. This will be a new edition, rather than a reprint of The Oxford Sherlock Holmes (1993.)
21923. "Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened" is the latest video game from Frogwares, with a trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=J18lzTVgmn4>. Gamers will find plenty of reviews on the Internet, by people who play such games. It has been described as a blend of Conan Doyle and Lovecraft, and there's more information at the Frogwares web-site <www.frogwares.com>.
21924. Bill Amend's Encyclopedias Brown and White (from Andrews McMeel, 2001) offers a collection of his "Foxtrot" comic strips, with Jason Fox in colorful Sherlockian costume on the cover, and as an investigator in amusing sequence. It's out of print, of course. but copies are available on-line. Other Sherlockian strips will be found Amend's May the Force Be with Us, Please (1994) and his Take Us to Your Mall (1995).
21925. Reported: Jonathan Payne's Citizen Orlov (CamCat, 2023) is set in an unnamed Central European kingdom at the end of WWI (according to the review in Publishers Weekly, Apr. 24), and "the blend of action and picaresque buffoonery flatteringly calls Conan Doyle's Brigadier Gerard tales to mind." It is nice indeed to see that one of Conan Doyle's other delightful characters is not forgotten.
21926. A more recent Sherlockian comic strip was Lincoln Peirce's "Big Nate" on Apr. 9 <www.gocomics.com/bignate/2023/04/09>.
21927. And Charles Schultz's "Peanuts" (now in reruns) was Sherlockian on Apr. 13 <www.peanuts.com>; it's a reprint from Apr. 15, 1976.
21928. Mark your calendar for Sept. 23, when Denny Dobry will be holding an open house at his home in Reading, Pa., where visitors can enter (and play in) his splendid recreation of the sitting-room, and browse the shelves in his book fair, where he will be selling Sherlockiana that has been donated to the Baker Street Irregulars Trust (prices will be modest indeed) and publications of the BSI Press. It is well worth a visit, and directions are available from Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>. You can see colorful images at <www.bsitrust.org/2021/06/book-fair-2021.html> from his similar event in 2021.

21929. John Kelly wrote in his Washington Post column on Oct. 28, 2004, that “As we narrow down all the don’ts, as Sherlock Holmes said, ‘We’re left with the answer.’” <www.tinyurl.com/mraafeuz>. So: where and when did Sherlock Holmes say that? Not in the Canon, but possibly in a pastiche or play or film; does anyone recognize the quote?

21930. The PeepingMoon web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2p84nk45> reported on plans for a Bollywood adaptation of the BBC “Sherlock” television series, “contextualized for Indian culture and milieu” and set in present-day Kolkata and Bihar, starring Kay Kay Menon as Holmes and Ranvi Shorey as Watson; the series has been greenlit by BBC Studios (the principal commercial subsidiary of the BBC) and was scheduled to go into production on Apr. 3. Jennie Paton found a television news report (in Bengali) about the series at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=VDT536mrDU>.
21931. The question (Feb 23 #2) was whether anyone has read stories by more than one of four authors (Katherine Mansfield, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Perceval Gibbon, and Stacy Aumonier). Yes, Otto Penzler notes, he has read stories by them all, because he was reading stories that might be included in one of his many anthologies. “They weren’t bad,” he reports.
21932. Howard Ostrom recently revised his essay on “The World of Sherlock Holmes Statues” to include a status of Holmes made from twigs, discovered by Alison Corbett in a “Story Stroll” in Rozelle Park in Ayr, Scotland. You can read his illustrated essay at <www.nplh.co.uk/sherlock-statues.html>.
21933. “The Carlton Club will find me,” Sir James Damery said (in “The Illustrious Client”); you can read about the nearby Reform Club in a nicely illustrated article at the Country Life web-site <www.tinyurl.com/24k5cywm>.
21934. David Timson, a British actor credited with more than a thousand programs for BBC Radio Drama, has recorded the entire Canon for Naxos Audiobooks, was featured in a recent BlogCritics interview that includes video from one of his recording sessions <www.tinyurl.com/4rr94pyb>.
21935. For the completist: there’s yet another fancy gift edition of the Canon: The Complete Sherlock Holmes Collection (London: Welbeck Publishing Group, 2022, 1095 pp., $34.95), with an introduction by Ryan Callander (for The Sherlock Holmes Museum) and illustrations by Patrick Knowles, available in the U.S. apparently only from Barnes & Noble <www.tinyurl.com/4a2pee7d>.
21936. The introduction gives some interesting (to say the least) history of 221B Baker Street, noting that it “stands today exactly as Sherlock Holmes left it in 1904,” and that “it is due to tremendous fortune and the fortitude of hard-working people that this building has been preserved as a monument to both a cultural giant and a way of life from days gone by.” And 221B operated as a lodging house “even after the first incarnation of The Sherlock Holmes Museum opened in the late 1930s” and then “the landlady would show the study and the adjacent bedroom as the Museum, while tenants still lived upstairs.”
21937. Actually, it was on June 4, 1989, that Martin Bailey reported in the Observer that John Aidiniantz had asked the Westminster City Council to reallocate the address to the house at 239 Baker Street, where he wanted to set up a “Sherlock Holmes Centre”. He had earlier advertised in Country Life: “Investor/sleeping partner required with £2.5 million. World famous London landmark for sale. May suit titled person with cultural and historical interests.”

21938. Jeremy Brett made his television debut as Sherlock Holmes in “A Scandal in Bohemia” on Apr. 24, 1984, not all that long after he appeared as Ernest Finley in the “Ace’s Valet” segment of an episode of “The Love Boat” that aired on Feb. 25, 1984. Jennie Paton has found brief footage from the segment at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=M3oBdA7pJQ>; you can watch the entire episode at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=DQf4FolcQf0>.
21939. There were many interesting items offered in the auction of Bob Hess’ collection (“A Study in Sherlock”) at Potter & Potter Auctions in Chicago on Apr. 20, including a note written by Conan Doyle on his calling card; estimated at $600-$800, it sold for $1,100 (plus a 20% buyer’s premium and sales tax). There was spirited bidding by dealers and collectors, and you can explore the catalog at <www.potterauctions.com>; the prices realized should be posted soon.
21940. This year’s annual meeting of the American Library Association (in Chicago) will include a gathering of the Sub-Librarians Scion on the afternoon of Sunday, June 25 <www.tinyurl.com/2w3jpuuc>. Information about the venue will be available from Beth Gallego <bethgallego@gmail.com>.
21941. The spring issue of Canadian Holmes (the journal of the Bootmakers of Toronto) offers a previously unpublished article about cocaine (“A pathological and morbid process”) written by the late Donald A. Redmond and recently discovered in his files, Brian Clark’s in-depth discussion of fishing in the Canon, and much more. A subscription costs $40.00 a year (US/CA), and single issues cost $12.00 postpaid <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
21942. Anne Perry died on Apr. 10. She was an accomplished author of mysteries, (with book sales of 26 million copies worldwide), winner of an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 2000, and guest of honor at Bouchercon in 2013 and 2020. She contributed short stories to many Sherlockian anthologies, and an Afterword to a 2001 Signet edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles.
21943. The next Black Mountain Bluegrass Picking Weekend at Baskerville Hall will be held on June 23-25 <www.tinyurl.com/4tar8pex>. Baskerville Hall is in Powys, Wales, but their claim is that Conan Doyle was a frequent visitor, a friend of the family, and at their request moved the story to Devon to prevent the Hall being overrun with tourists.
21944. The latest “Buzz from Laurie R. King” <www.tinyurl.com/yksmhspt> reports that the first draft of The Lantern’s Dance (the next Mary Russell novel) is now in the hands of her editor, and offers a brief sample as a teaser.
21945. Heather MacKenzie’s interesting article on “Breaking the ‘Beautiful’ Mold” in the April issue of The Whaling News (the monthly on-line journal of the Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn) <www.whalingnews.wordpress.com> cites Hadar Aviram’s article on “Dainty Hands: Perceptions of Women and Crime in Sherlock Holmes Stories” in the Hastings Journal on Gender and the Law (summer 2011), also conveniently available on-line at the web-site of the journal <<https://repository.uchastings.edu/hwlj/vol22/iss2/1>>. MacKenzie focuses on Mary Morstan, but Aviram casts her net more widely.

21946. Christopher Sandford’s The Man Who Would Be Sherlock Holmes: The Real-Life Adventures of Arthur Conan Doyle (London: History Press, 2017) (New York: Thomas Dunne/St. Martin’s, 2018) is not (as the author explains) a biography of Conan Doyle, or Holmes, but rather an attempt to show how similar, and sometimes different, they were, and it’s a nicely readable examination of Conan Doyle’s work and career.
21947. Sherlock Holmes visited Windsor Castle to receive an emerald tie-pin from “a certain gracious lady” (in “The Bruce-Partington Plans”), and here’s a nicely-illustrated article about Windsor Castle as it is now at the Country Life web-site <www.tinyurl.com/yc7uen59>.
21948. Ira J. Fistell died on Sept. 26, 2022. In 1969 he was one of the founders of the Amateur Mendicant Society of Madison, Wis. (now known as the Notorious Canary Trainers). He contributed to their newsletter (the Notorious Canary-Trainers Manual), wrote The Hidden Holmes: A Sherlock Holmes Companion (Nov 20 #6), and had a long career in radio (after he moved to Los Angeles he participated in a reading of the entire Canon on KTPK-FM on Dec. 25-30, 1980).

21949. Ken Ludwig tells some stories about his new play “Moriarty” (due for its world premiere in Cleveland on May 5) in a video interview at YouTube at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=MgPDPuXilQU&t=21s>. There’s more about some of his other plays at <www.tinyurl.com/4sch5xjh>.
21950. Baker Street West (based in Jackson, Calif.) has its own YouTube channel, and has launched an “And So It Begins” video series intended to encourage people to read the Canon (beginning with “The Red Circle”).
21951. I’ve long described this newsletter as “six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean.” If you would like to run a word-search on a large file with all of the text since March 1985 (that’s when I entered the computer age), you can now do that, thanks to Steve Mason, who updates his compilation each month and has moved it to the web-site of the Beacon Society at <www.beaconsociety.com/scuttlebutt-from-the-spermacetti-press.html>.
21952. The U.S. Postal Service, which increased the cost of mailing letters last January, now proposes to increase the cost again, in July. A first-class letter will cost 66¢ for the first ounce within the U.S. and $1.50 for the first ounce outside the U.S. Subscriptions to this newsletter will cost more, and likely will cost even more next year.
21953. Almost all former subscribers have enjoyed being able to access PDFs, with artwork in full color, and live links, without charge, but there still are a few who have been willing to pay for subscriptions, possibly because it is hard to remember to go to a web-site at the beginning of each month and read the new issue, or even print it out (which, after all, is less expensive than paying for printed issues received in the mail). So there will now be a Google Group for the newsletter, which will provide everyone with a link to the PDF each month; if you would like to be in the Google Group, just let me know by e-mail <blau7103@comcast.net>.

21954. Reported: The Haycraft-Queen & Queen’s Quorum Catalogue, just published by Otto Penzler’s Mysterious Bookshop, offering More than 200 books, mostly first editions, from the definitive crime-fiction lists compiled by Howard Haycraft and Ellery Queen, with 14 pages of color photographs; $10.00 (refundable with purchase from the catalogue). And of course the Canon is included, with first editions of The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Hound of the Baskervilles, The Return of Sherlock Holmes, The Valley of Fear, and (in dust jackets) His Last Bow and The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes.
21955. Jennie Paton has found an impressive video promoting three-bedroom flats on Sherlock Mews at 98 Baker Street in London <www.vimeo.com/816819497>.
21956. Theatrical news: Ken Ludwig’s “The Game’s Afoot: Holmes for the Holidays” is being performed at the Act Two Theatre in St. Peters, Mo., through May 7 <www.acttwotheatre.com>; it’s also scheduled at the Lyric Stage Company in Boston, Mass., Nov. 10-Dec. 17 <www.lyricstage.com>.
21957. The Alley Theatre has added a week to its run of Katie Forgetting’s “Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily” in Houston, Texas, and the show will now close on May 14 <www.alleytheatre.org>.
21958. Bert Coules’ “Watson: The Final Problem” is now touring in Britain (and on Cunard’s RMS Queen Mary 2 in July) <www.smokescreenprods.com>.
21959. Bob Sturgess’ “The Curious Case of the Cow in the Spotlight” will be performed at the Milestone Center in Reading, Berks., May 18-20; web-site at <www.cavparktheatre.org.uk>. “Pantomime can be murder, as the Crouch End Ladies Thespian Society find out when their panto cow is shot dead shortly before the show is due to start.”
21960. David Stuart Davies’ “Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act” will be performed by Nigel Miles-Thomas at the Hollywood Fringe Festival in Hollywood, Calif., June 15-24 <www.hollywoodfringe.org/projects/9759>.
21962. Tim Kelly’s “The Hound of the Baskervilles” is due at the Community Centre in Churchdown, Gloucs., June 21-23 <www.churchdownplayers.com>.
21963. Madeleine George’s “The (Curious Case of the Watson) Intelligence” will be performed at the Inspired Acting Company in Walled Lake, Mich., on Apr. 5-21, 2024 <www.inspiredacting.org>; also at the Road Less Traveled Theater in Buffalo, N.Y., Apr. 18-May 19 <www.roadlesstraveled.com>.
21964. Jeffrey Hatcher’s “Holmes and Watson” is scheduled at the Laguna Playhouse in Laguna Beach, Calif., May 29-June 16 <www.lagunaplayhouse.com>.

21965. The Baker Street Almanac 2023, edited by Ross E. Davies, Jayantika Ganguly, Ira Brad Matetsky, and Monica Schmidt, and modestly described as “an annual capsule of a timeless past and future,” is now available in print for $30.00 postpaid ($50.00 postpaid outside the U.S.); you can order from the web-site at <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/2023.html> or from The Green Bag (6600 Barnaby Street NW, Washington, DC 20015). The 364 pages include a copiously-annotated edition of “The Stockbroker’s Clerk” (and much more “in the form of a formidable scrap-book of 2022, including treasures created or uncovered then, with a few other odds and ends tossed in”).
21966. Among those treasures is Davies’ definitive report on HOWW (as Jay Finlay Christ might have abbreviated Conan Doyle’s apocryphal “How Watson Learned the Trick”). Almanacs for previous years are available (free) as PDFs at <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/bsa.html>.
21967. There’s even more about HOWW at <www.tinyurl.com/ykxmj3d9>, where you’ll find his “Where Watson Learned the Trick”. It’s a Green Bag Single-Sheet Classic that maps where events in the story “take place, and where was Sherlock Holmes going to meet his dentist. This map explains. Maybe.”
21968. Ray Betzner, who does cast his net widely, discussed “Sherlock Holmes, Solar Pons, & the Coronation of King Charles III” recently in his “Studies in Starrett” blog <www.tinyurl.com/3cfj7duf>. There is indeed a connection (quite remote) to Vincent Starrett (read the blog to find out what it is).
21969. Laurence Pernet is a talented Swiss artist who won the Sherlock Holmes Society of London’s contest for their 2020 Christmas card; you can see that artwork (“One winter’s night”) and much more of her work at her web-site <www.lpernet-portfolio.ch>. When she was a student (of graphic design and then information science) she was able to work on the Conan Doyle Archives at the Bibliothèque cantonale et universitaire in Lausanne and prepared a new inventory of the Archives <www.tinyurl.com/5n7dnxyf> (it was a “dream job,” she says).
21970. The Conan Doyle Archives were bequeathed by Adrian to the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Foundation, and deposited at the Bibliothèque in 1975. They include the manuscript of “Shoscombe Old Place” and are a treasure trove of correspondence, photographs, scrapbooks, and other interesting material that will be useful to anyone writing about the Conan Doyle family.
21971. Laurence Pernet has shown how important the Archives can be, in an article (“Mourning for Holmes: More Than a Myth”) in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal, in which she has reported finding a likely source for the often-repeated (and often-doubted) story about how (after publication of “The Final Problem”), gentlemen of the City were seen wearing black arm-bands in honor of the deceased detective. The spring issue

21972. Fans of “Star Trek: The Next Generation” will recall the series’ two Sherlockian episodes: “Elementary, Dear Data” (1988) and “Ship in a Bottle” (1993), in which Daniel Davis played Moriarty. Now Moriarty has returned, in “The Bounty” (season three, episode six of “Star Trek: Picard”) now streaming on Paramount+. For anyone who came in late, Wikipedia <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Star_Trek:_Picard> offers a detailed discussion of the series; the third season is available only on Paramount+ (you can subscribe or rent or purchase programs). Davis is delightful as Moriarty, both 35 years ago and today, and you can watch a recent interview with him at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=tUSmk08u4I4>.
21973. Further to the report on a miniature version of The Hound of the Baskervilles from MiniaturbuchVerlag Leipzig (Mar 11 #1), the company offers all sixty of the Sherlock Holmes stories <www.miniboox.de>.
21974. “On the edge of a jutting pinnacle,” Conan Doyle wrote (in “A Study in Scarlet”), “three or four hundred feet above him, there stood a creature somewhat resembling a sheep in appearance, but armed with a pair of gigantic horns.” And “the big-horn—for so it is called—was acting, probably, as a guardian over a flock which were invisible to the hunter.” The U.S. Postal Service has issued a new sheet of 20 stamps to honor the 50th anniversary of the Endangered Species Act, and one of them shows a desert bighorn sheep. The images come from thousands in Joel Sartore’s “National Geographic Photo Ark” (a project intended to document every species in “human care” in all of the world’s zoos, aquariums, and wildlife sanctuaries) <www.nationalgeographic.org/projects/photo-ark>. The Photo Ark now has images of more than 13,000 species, out of an estimated 20,000 species.
21975. Michael Capuzzo’s The Murder Room: The Heirs of Sherlock Holmes Gather to Solve the World’s Most Perplexing Cold Cases was reviewed some years ago (Aug 2010 #7); the book was about the Vidocq Society and forensic psychologist and profiler Richard Walter, described by Scotland Yard (according to Capuzzo) as “the living Sherlock Holmes.” Now a story in New York magazine (Apr. 10) <www.tinyurl.com/yck2yba> has offered a detailed report on “The Case of the Fake Sherlock” that notes that Walter was “hailed as a genius,” but in reality was a fraud, and asks, “How did he get away with it for so long?”
21976. “Tide: For Detectives with Sensitive Skin” is a new and amusing 30-second television commercial <www.youtube.com/watch?v=nxPyxgh9xgA>, reported by Tim Kline.
21977. “Sherlock Holmes Uses Chinese TikTok (Douyin) to Attract New Generation of Chinese Readers” was the headline on a press release from the Phoenix Publishing Group on Apr. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/36rrnjtk>. Detective Sherlock Holmes, a new children’s book from their Yilin Press imprint, sold 10,000 copies in the first three days, thanks to a short video by an on-line influencer, and 300,000 copies in three months last year. 85% of all Chinese books are now sold on-line, according to the press release, and book sales via social media have risen by 800% over the last six years.

21978. It has been decades since Nathan L. Bengis suggested (in the Oct. 1957 issue of the Baker Street Journal) that the tie-pin Holmes received from “a certain gracious lady” (in “The Bruce-Partington Plans”) was not actually an emerald, but rather his birthstone: a (green) garnet. Bengis also suggested that Watson did not realize that there were gem-quality green garnets, and that Holmes was given a uvarovite tie-pin. There are other green garnets, including tsavorite, discovered recently in Tanzania, and the Smithsonian recently added one to its collection of gems <www.tinyurl.com/ydnabpj2>. The “Lion of Merelani” is a spectacular 116-carat stone, cut with 177 facets, roughly the size of a quarter. There’s was more more about the gem in an article in the Washington Post (Apr. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/2ffv5w8v>.
21979. Steve Doyle has two new interviews in his on-line “Fortnightly Dispatch” videos, one with Derrick and Brian Belanger, the prolific Sherlockian publishers responsible for Belanger Books <www.tinyurl.com/yc28f2n4>; and the second with Dan Andriacco, the new editor of the Baker Street Journal, who discusses what he brings to his new job, and some of things the job entails, as well as what he planning for the BSJ <www.tinyurl.com/bdzb5x6m>. You can also search YouTube for [fortnightly dispatch] and find his channel, and watch many of his earlier interviews.
21980. “Den sorte Hætte” [“The Black Hood”], produced by the Nordisk Films Kompagni in Denmark, released in 1911, and (as “The Conspiritors”) later that year in Britain and the U.S., starring Lauritz Olsen as Sherlock Holmes. Jennie Paton has found a 7-minute excerpt from the film on-line at Daily Motion <www.dailymotion.com/video/x8kdllhg>.
21981. The spring issue of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust’s electronic newsletter For the Sake of the Trust has been uploaded to the Trust’s web-site at <www.bsitrust.org>. with news of the Trust’s oral-history project and its new intern Tamara Shu, and an announcement that the next annual (on-line) lecture will be given by Steve Rothman on Sept. 9. You’re more than welcome to explore the Trust’s web-site and read past issues.
21982. “Netflix will end its DVD Service, 5.2 Billion Discs Later” was the headline on an article in the N.Y. Times (Apr. 19) <www.tinyurl.com/3msjac8f>; the company shipped its first DVD in 1998, and by 2010 had some 20 million subscribers, but viewers have moved to cable and streaming services, and Netflix will ship its last DVDs at the end of September. Commercial DVDs also have been affected: no DVDs have been released for the “Enola Holmes” films, or the series “The Irregulars” and the third season of “Star Trek: Picard” (all still available on cable and streaming services).
21983. The April issue of the quarterly newsletter from The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, offers Phil Bergem’s discussion of Conan Doyle’s travels in the U.S. and Canada 100 years ago, John Bergquist’s tribute to Michael and Mollie Hardwick 50 years ago, and much about the exhibition of “Sherlock Holmes in 221 Objects from the Collection of Glen S. Miranker”; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Timothy Johnson, #15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <johns976@umn.com>.

21984. Jack A. French died on Apr. 18. He had a long career as a special agent in the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He also was an accomplished actor, with credits on film and in television, and had a long-time interest in old-time radio. Jack was an enthusiastic Sherlockian, a member of the Red Circle of Washington, and acted in production of William Gillette’s “The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes” at Bouchercon in 1980.
21985. The original artwork by J. Allen St. John, offered at Heritage Auctions on Apr. 25, described as showing Holmes and Watson and published in the Baker Street Irregulars’ edition of The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle (1948), was estimated at $3,000-$5,000, and sold for $2,750 (including the buyer’s premium) <www.tinyurl.com/mtemcm29>. It actually shows Henry Baker (“a tall man in a Scotch bonnet”) and Dr. Watson at the entrance to the house in Baker Street, and (as Randall Stock noted) was published in the anthology Favorite Mystery Stories, edited by Marjorie Barrows (Chicago: Spencer Press, 1953). Frank Middlemass wasn’t all that tall in Granada’s program <www.youtube.com/watch?v=DBJ05EPno6k>, but he did have what he called his Scottish bonnet.

21986. Barrows' Favorite Mystery Stories also has a bit of Sherlockian artwork on the endpapers, inspired by St. John's illustration of Henry Baker and Dr. Watson.
21987. Kim Newman was the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker during the birthday festivities in 2013, and has enjoyed exploring the world of Sherlock Holmes in Anno Dracula and The Hound of the D'Urbervilles. His The Man from the Diogenes Club (from MonkeyBrain in 2005 and reprinted by Titan in 2017) is a collection of stories featuring Richard Jeperson, who in the 1970s was the Most Valued Member of the club ("the least publicized of Britain's law enforcement and intelligence agencies"). There are occasional mentions of Mycroft Holmes in the science fiction/fantasy/supernatural stories.
21989. Sherlockian wine enthusiasts may want to pursue the Enos Sherlock Holmes Blend Gran Reserva from Brazil, with a colorful label, spotted by Jennie Paton. R$190 (that's $37.63) in Brazil <www.tinyurl.com/5f24jpc5>.
21990. Otto Penzler's continuing series of reprints of excellent American Mystery Classics includes Anthony Boucher's Rocket to the Morgue (2019) ($25.95) with an introduction by F. Paul Wilson, who helpfully identifies (almost) all the Golden Age of Science Fiction writers who appear in the book with different names; thanks to the convenient "Look Inside" feature at Amazon, you can read the introduction on-line. The book also contains many thinly-veiled Canonical and Conanical references, and is great fun to read.

21991. Sherlock Holmes watches have been offered over the years, but now you can buy a "Limited Edition Hand Assembled Conan Doyle Astute Automatic Rose Black" men's wristwatch from Gamages of London (for only £720) <www.tinyurl.com/4684kx43>. There doesn't seem to be anything Doylean about the watch other than the copywriter's description, but copy-writing is an art form, as Dorothy L. Sayers believed; she is credited for creating the slogan "It pays to advertise" and you can read what she had to say about copywriting at <www.tinyurl.com/2p8swevh>.
21992. The Projection Booth <www.projectionboothpodcast.com> was founded in 2011, and recently featured four episodes (#262-265) co-hosted by David MacGregor and devoted to Sherlockian films. Well worth a look (or listen).
21995. Brad Keefauver's Holmes in an Hour or Two (2022; 178 pp., $8.95) lives up nicely to its subtitle "A Sherlock Holmes Fan's First Sherlockian Chronology, or Create Your Own Timeline of Sherlock Holmes's Life in the Shortest Time Possible." It's an expert introduction to Sherlockian chronology, a past-time that has bedeviled scholars since 1898, explaining how it works, and offering readers a chance to make their own choices.
21996. Jim Westergard's Oddballs (subtitled "The Remarkable True Stories of Forty Unique, Strange, Peculiar, Extraordinary & Generally Odd People, Told in Prose and Wood Engravings") was published in a limited edition of 30 copies by Heavenly Monkey in 2011, and reprinted by Porcupine's Quill in 2015 (104 pp., $18.95). Conan Doyle is one of the oddballs, and Westergard's wood-engraving portrait of him can be seen in an on-line offer of the limited edition ($2,500) <www.tinyurl.com/mt6hxume>.
21997. It was well worth the drive to Cleveland to see the opening night of Ken Ludwig's new play "Moriarty". Like "Baskerville", it's performed by five actors, one playing Holmes, another as Watson, and three more as everyone else (including Moriarty, Von Ormstein, Mycroft Holmes, Mrs. Barabas, Hilda Kleb, Daisy, Irene Adler, Mrs. Hudson, and Cartwright). The script is faithful both to the Canon and to William Gillette's play, and at the same time thoroughly original. No spoilers here, except to say that Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson join Irene Adler in confronting the evil Moriarty, and that there are twists and turns and surprises, right up to the finale. "Let me recommend this play," as someone almost once said; you should urge your local theaters to perform "Moriarty" (Concord Theatricals handles all of Ken Ludwig's plays) <www.concord.com>. You can also see a new trailer for the play at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ssELZ9EtI4>.

21998. "One Woman's Plot to Watch 201 Agatha Christie Movies Without Murdering the Director, Screenwriter, Cast, or Her Husband" is the amusing (and apt) sub-title of Teresa Peschel's Agatha Christie, She Watched (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2023; 427 pp., $19.95); the book includes world-wide film and television, from 1929 to 2022, copiously illustrated, and discussed in detail, with humor and insight and frequent mentions of Sherlockian and Doylean allusions in the films and television series. Her husband (Bill) had edited eight volumes in the "223B Casebook Series" of anthologies of pastiches and parodies published from 1888 to 1930, as well as other books of Sherlockian interest <www.peschelpress.com>.
21999. Note: Peschel Press books are self-published via Amazon, and the cost of printing will increase on June 20, so now's the time to purchase any and all of their books.
22000. Rupert Holmes' Murder Your Employer (New York: Avid Reader, 2023; 388 pp., $28.00) includes a passing mention of Sherlock Holmes (as is the case with so many books nowadays), but it's also a delightful account of the goings-on at the McMasters Conservatory for the Applied Arts (which all focus on the fine art of murder). Rupert Holmes (the pen name of "a man who loves to drink Rupert Knickerbocker beer and is an avid fan of ace sleuth Sherlock Holmes," according to an article in the Dallas Times Herald on June 3, 1986) has won two Edgars from the Mystery Writers of America, and has a colorful web-site at <www.rupertholmes.com>.
22001. The Roosevelt Hotel in New York, site of many events during birthday festivities in January, has been closed for the last three years, and is now open again, but not for the general public. The city is using 850 of the rooms in the hotel to house migrants who are seeking asylum in the U.S.
22002. There's an image of Sherlock Drone in a story in the Lincolnshire World on May 10 (<www.tinyurl.cm/mm5sbpp5>), one of four drones used by the county police, named by students at Ingoldmells Academy, a local primary school. Sherlock Drone will be keeping an eye out for criminals in and near Skegness.
22003. Jonny Lee Miller (who starred as Sherlock Holmes in the television series "Elementary") has told his followers on Instagram that he has now completed his "Firefighter I" five-month training course at the Suffolk County Fire Academy in New York <www.tinyurl.com/28ffacn5>, and is on his way to being qualified as a volunteer firefighter; all that he needs to do now is complete the somewhat longer "Firefighter II" training course.

22004. Penguin Random House has begun its promotion of Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel The Lantern's Dance, due in February. You read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/ntwap5np>.
22005. Howard Ostrom keeps an eye out for various animals in Sherlockian costume, and has reported a new addition to his menagerie: an anteater, used by a pest-control company <www.elementarypestmanagement.com>. And (for children) on the cover of and in Doug Cushman's Aunt Eater's Mystery Halloween (1998), out of print but readily available on-line.

22006. There's more Sherlock Holmes due on Audible: the entire Canon, with Clive Merrison and Michael Williams as Holmes and Watson broadcast by BBC Radio from 1989 to 1995. The collection will include an interview with Adrian Conan Doyle about his father, and behind-the-scenes commentary by the series' head writer Bert Coules, and will be released on Sept. 7. Audible is Amazon's audiobook subscription service.
22007. Elementary Pest Management (May 23 #6) isn't the only (or the first) such company to use a Sherlockian image. Ralph Hall (whose investiture in the Baker Street Irregulars is "Smack! Smack! Smack!") presides over a company established in 1985 <www.wisebuyingmall.com/bugdetectors> and has Sherlock Holmes displayed on his car.
22008. Conan Doyle died on May 10. In Davenport, Iowa. His parents were Donald and Jane Doyle, and he is survived by his wife Lori and their children Leanna, Justine, and Keegan <www.tinyurl.com/252y5rr7>.
22009. "Khitrovka: The Sign of the Four" is a new Russian film, reported by Alex-ander Orlov <www.tinyurl.com/2x9jkur3>. It's set in Moscow in 1902, and is inspired by (rather than an adaptation of) the Sherlock Holmes story, and the URL provides access to details and four trailers. Alexis Barquin has more images (and information about the film) at the Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mtmjyub6>.
22010. Jennie Paton spotted ten of the BBC Radio broadcasts with Carleton Hobbs and Norman Shelley as Holmes and Watson, almost all of them with nice introductions by Nicholas Utechin, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=mDnOCUMvnFU>.
22011. Mike Befeler's Old Detectives Home (Farmington: Encircle, 2022; 270 pp., $6.99) is an amusing look at a retirement home for aging detectives. The staff (mystery authors who include Dash Hammett, Rexie Stout, Dot Sayers, and Art Doyle) and residents (including Tommy and Tuppence Beresford, Auguste Dupin, Hercule Poirot, and Sherlock Holmes) are trying to solve the murder of critic Ed Wilson, and the novel has both plethora of clues and a great deal of broad humor. Befeler's web-site is at <www.mikebefelr.com>.
22012. Mary Stojak's Sissy Holmes and the Case of the Dead Hypnotist (London: Orange Pip Books, 2022; 261 pp., $14.95) may well offer a truly new version of Sherlock Holmes in the ever-expanding world of pastiches, homages, and parodies; Sissy Holmes consults a hypnotist in hopes of giving up smoking, and after the hypnotist is murdered during the session, finds that she is now the host of a reincarnated Holmes. Needless to say, they're successful in solving the crime. The author blogs at <www.mysteriesinc.org>.
22013. William Seil notes that on May 16 Bill Griffith's "Zippy" comic strip had a nice Sherlockian allusion <www.comicskingdom.com/zippy-the-pinhead>.

22015. Paul B. Kane's Nailbiters: Tales of Crime & Psychological Terror (Kent: Black Shuck Books, 2017; 256 pp., $15.65) is a collection of his short stories; one of them is a Sherlockian pastiche ("The Greatest Mystery") reprinted from the anthology Gaslight Arcanum (2011). "Psychological terror" describes all of the stories, which aren't for the faint-hearted. The author's web-site is at <www.plkane.com/bio.htm>, and the publisher is at <www.blackshuckbooks.co.uk>.
22016. The Monstrum Opus of Sherlock Holmes: A Compendium of Horrors Dr. Watson Dared Not Tell, edited by Nathaniel Barker-Harris, Brad Keefauver, and Rob Nunn (2022; 131 pp., $8.95), lives up to its subtitle: it's an anthology of essays by Sherlockians, old hands and new, who have fun shining bright light into some of the darker corners of the Canon.
22017. Theatrical news: James Barry's "Sherlock's Excellent Adventure" continues in Britain <www.ourstartheatrecompany.com>. There's a two-minute teaser at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/mryja2sz>.

22026. There doesn't appear to be a society for Sherlockian origami enthusiasts, and it's possible that there aren't enough Sherlockian origami enthusiasts to form a society, but: there is Sherlock Holmes origami, and detailed instructions can be found (in Spanish) in El libro de las máscaras de papel plegado (Madrid: Alianza Editorial, 1997). It's nice that a scan of the book is available at the Internet Archive <www.tinyurl.com/2s44pswr>, and even nicer that you can see a full-color image of the completed origami at <www.tinyurl.com/4p69uh8a>. It's also hard to believe that it was folded from a single piece of paper, but that's what modern origami is like. The book also is available at Amazon.
22027. The theme of this year's "Summer of Sherlock" celebration in Portsmouth is "Worldwide Doyle 2023" <www.tinyurl.com/mwjyj6mb>, with on-line lectures by Ross Davies and Mark Jones, Michael Gunton, Bryan Woods, and Christopher Pittard (June 28-July 4). The annual event honors the city's Conan Doyle Collection, which includes the collection of the late Richard Lancelyn Green.

22029. Reported: The Parasite and Other Tales of Terror, edited by Eric J. Guignard and Leslie S. Klinger for the Horror Writers Association (Naperville: Poisoned Pen Press, 2021; 240 pp., $14.99); nine (non-Sherlockian) stories by Conan Doyle, with an introduction by Daniel Stashower.
22030. Paxton Whitehead died on June 16. He started acting in Britain in 1956, joined the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1958, and went on to a long career on stage, screen and television. He played Sherlock Holmes in "The Crucifer of Blood" in 1978 and 1979, and in "The Mask of Moriarty" in 1994 and 1997, and there's much more about him in Scott Monty's fine tribute at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.ihose.co/paxtonwhitehead>.
22031. The spring issue of The Magic Door (published by the friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) has Douglas Kerr's article about Conan Doyle and actor Lewis Waller, Cliff Goldfarb's report on variant scripts for Irwin Allen's film "The Lost World" (with information on who was considered for major roles), and much more. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb (Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
22032. Brad Keefauver describes his Radix Pedis Diaboloiday: A John H. Watson Reverie (2019; 93 pp., $4.99) as a "decided horrible book," but in fact it's Watson's account of what happened when (as he notes in "The Devil" Foot") his brain and imagination "were beyond all control," and it's an imaginative exploration of a Watsonian hallucination.

22033. The Rosenbach Museum & Library in Philadelphia has announced a "Sherlock Monday" weekly series of 90-minute virtual programs covering 27 of the stories (from "A Study in Scarlet" to "The Empty House") beginning Sept. 18 and featuring senior manager of public programs Edward G. Pettit and a rotating group of co-hosts. You can watch the series live, or view the videos at the Rosenbach's YouTube channel. More information is available at <www.rosenbach.org/events/sherlock-Mondays>.
22034. 221B Tactical <www.22btactical.com> "brings entirely new product ideas to the tactical gear and apparel marketplace," and while they give credit to Sherlock Holmes for the name, they don't explain what use he made of tactical gear. Kindly reported by Ann Marlowe.
22035. "I think 'Where the Pavement Ends' is the best book of short tales by any debutant since Kipling's 'Play Tales'" is the quote from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on the back flap of the dust jacket of John Russell's Far Wandering Men (W. W. Norton, 1929). Russell's Where the Pavement Ends was published in London in 1919, so Conan Doyle must have written that after 1919. When and where?
22036. If you occasionally forget that a PDF of a new issue of this newsletter is available on-line, you're welcome to join the Google Group for monthly reminders; just let me know by e-mail <blau7103@comcast.net>.
22037. One hears of the lion's mane everywhere; Australia has issued a new set of stamps that show "Jellyfish: Underwater Wonders" (one of them the Lion's Mane). At least 1,000 jellyfish species of jellyfish drift on the currents around Australia, according to Australia Post.
22038. And more about the Lion's Mane: "This Jellyfish Less Dangerous Than Sherlock Holmes Would Have You Believe" was the headline on a story that ran in the Montréal Gazette (June 16) <www.tinyurl.com/5n6tmht>, reported by Branda Rossini. Dr. Joe Schwarcz also discusses the Lion's Mane mushroom (and there's some video).
22039. Steven Rothman will deliver this year's Baker Street Trust on-line lecture on Sept. 9 <www.bsitrust.org/2023/04/save-date-2023-lecture.html>. And the Trust is now accepting applications for Sherlockian research projects; two fellowships will be awarded, each with a stipend of up to $2,500, and the deadline is Sept. 15 <www.bsitrust.org/2022/05/fellowships.html>. 22041. The DeGolyer Library at Southern Methodist University in Dallas has an exhibition of highlights from Don Hobbs' collection of foreign translations of the Canon <www.tinyurl.com/yxesy8vr>, and there was a preview of the exhibition at the beginning of the "Lone Star Holmes" conference on May 26-27 <www.dfw-sherlock.org/2023-lone-star-holmes.html>. The library's exhibition celebrating the Donald J. Hobbs Collection will run through Sept. 15.
22042. One of the highlights of the conference was the unveiling of The Crew of the Barque Lone Star: The Facts, Legend, and Lore of the Society's Beginnings and 50-Year Legacy, edited by Cindy Brown and Steve Mason. The 148-page book is a splendid demonstration of what a Sherlockian society can do to preserve its history, and it's available from Barnes & Noble for $7.76 <www.tinyurl.com/3ppdj7eb>; you can also download a PDF of the book without charge at the Crew's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2238arsh>. And there's video history of the society at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ctsUyUMHykw>.
22043. Tim Collins' Sherlock Bones and the Case of the Crown Jewels (London: Buster Books, 2022; 192 pp., $9.99) was the first in his series of books for children (7-9 years old) featuring "the greatest detective the world has ever known" and "his trusty sidekick Jane Catson," with illustrations by John Bigwood and games and puzzles as well as mysteries. There are three books in the series so far, with a fourth due later this year, and there is more about Sherlock Bones at <www.tinyurl.com/5n7b76er>.
22044. More than 40 of the short stories have been dramatized in Tamil, and you can listen to them at <www.mirchi.in/podcast/thriller/sunday-suspense>.
22045. The Capitol Film Arts Alliance in Sacramento recently held a film competition in which eight teams were given the same one-page dialogue script and asked to interpret the dialogue into a one- to ten-minute film; one of the teams used Baker Street West and the Baker Street Players, and their film won two awards: one for best film (judges' choice) and the other for best film (audience's choice). You can see their "Sherlock Holmes and the Headless Bishop" at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=qaRiQzdYWgo>.
22046. "The Sherlock is on the lookout for its new Watson—by that we mean Assist-ant Manager, of course!" Greene King, who own The Sherlock Holmes pub in Northumberland Street in London, are advertising the job, and there's more information at <www.tinyurl.com/bdz83cps>.
22047. Jennie Paton spotted a new 30-second Sherlockian television commercial for the 2023 Toyota Tacoma at <www.ispot.tv/ad/1sgH/toyota-sherlock-t2>.

22048. Katie Spalding's Edison's Ghosts: The Untold Weirdness of History's Greatest Geniuses (New York: Little, Brown, 2023; 342 pp., $29.00) is an irreverent and entertaining exploration of the quirks and foibles of geniuses; the table of contents begins with "The Mathematical Cult Leader Pythagoras, and His Incredibly Stupid Death", ends with "NASA Forgets about Women, Toilets, and the Metric System" (and she includes "Arthur Conan Doyle Gets Pranked So Hard He Claims Fairies Exist"). The chapter on Conan Doyle is available on-line at CrimeReads <www.tinyurl.com/y9cp4y6s>.

22049. Denny Dobry's open house and book fair in Reading, Pa., will be held on Sept. 30 (rather than Sept. 23). Visitors to his home will be able to enter (and play in) his delightful recreation of the sitting-room, and browse the shelves in his book fair, where Denny will be selling all sorts of Sherlockiana and Doyleana that people have donated to the Baker Street Irregulars Trust (prices will be modest indeed), and publications of the BSI Press; it's well worth a visit; directions are available from Denny at <dendobry@ptd.net>. There are colorful images from his similar event in 2021 at <www.bsitrust.org/2021/06/book-fair-2021.html>.
22050. The late Russell Merritt's family will host a celebration of his life, on July 9 in Berkeley, Calif., and the event will be live-streamed for those who can't attend in person; the celebration will start at 1:30 pm (eastern time) and you can register at <www.tinyurl.com/2nb2pemb>.
22051. Sir Sydney Smith was a renowned forensic scientist and pathologist whose career included almost a dozen years working in Cairo; and in his memoirs Mostly Murder (1959) he discusses many of the cases he worked on there (as well as devoting a chapter to "Dr. Bell and Sherlock Holmes"). It has taken many years, but his book has finally been translated into Arabic, and there was a long review of the book (in English) in the Al-Ahram Weekly on June 1 <www.tinyurl.com/4b6dd73v>.
22052. Ardent fans of Laurel & Hardy may be interested in a new Blu-ray release of "Laurel & Hardy: Year One: The Newly Restored 1927 Silents" that's due soon from Flicker Alley <www.tinyurl.com/34escdma>. It will include their "Do Detectives Think?" (which features Oliver Hardy as Sherlock Pinkham).

22058. "Sherlock Holmes Movie Seeking Extras in Texas Hill Country" was the headline on an article in the San Antonio Express-News on-line (May 25) with the full story behind their paywall. The movie is "Sherlock Holmes: Mare of the Night" (listed at the Internet Movie Data Base as in pre-production), will star Les Best (Sherlock Holmes), Layton Wheeler (Young Sherlock Holmes), and Jonathan C. Rich (John Watson). The film web-site (with videos) is at <www.sherlockholmesmareofthenight.com>.
22059. Julian Symons' Bloody Murder (1972), subtitled "From the Detective Story to the Crime Novel: A History", was a grand survey of the genre, and now Martin Edwards' The Life of Crime: Detecting the History of Mysteries and Their Creators (London: Crime Club, 2022; 736 pp., $32.99) offers an updated, broader, and more personal survey of writers and the stories they have written. He has a chapter on "The Great Detective: Sherlock Holmes" (of course), and is kinder to Conan Doyle and Holmes than Symons was.
22060. Nancy Springer's Enola Holmes and the Elegant Escapade (Wednesday Books, 2022) won an Agatha Award (Best Children's/YA Mystery) at this year's Malice Domestic conference.
22061. The winners of Edgar Awards from the Mystery Writers of America included Martin Edwards' The Life of Crime: Detecting the History of Mysteries and Their Creators (for best critical/biographical) and the first episode of Anthony Horowitz's television series "Magpie Murders" (for best television episode/teleplay).
22062. "We are very rich in orchids on the moor," said Beryl Stapleton (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). You can still find wild orchids in Britain, according to an article in Country Life <www.tinyurl.com/u827svby> on May 27; Dartmoor isn't mentioned as one of the locales, but you can still see them there <www.tinyurl.com/ycxvepm9>.
22063. The article does mention the New Forest; Conan Doyle bought Bignell Wood, near Minstead in the New Forest, as a birthday present for his second wife Jean, and they used it as a rural retreat. That was after Watson yearned for the glades of the New Forest in "The Cardboard Box" (and "The Resident Patient").
22064. "AI Is About to Turn Book Publishing Upside-Down" was the headline on Thad McIlroy's article in Publishers Weekly (June 2) <www.tinyurl.com/mpaajy3x> (he believes that "the latest generation of AI is a game changer," adding that "every function in trade book publishing today can be automated with the help of generative AI," and that "the trade book publishing industry as we know it will soon be obsolete"). Of course reviewers will continue to be important (at least, that is, until AI learns how to write reviews as well as books).
22065. Nominees for Anthony Awards from Bouchercon 2023 include Harini Nagendra's The Bangalore Detectives Club (best first novel), Nancy Springer's Enola Holmes and the Elegant Escapade (best children's/young adult), Dan Stashower's American Demon and Martin Edwards' The Life of Crime (best critical /nonfiction); winners will be announced in San Diego in September.

22066. The Pakistani newspaper Dawn had an interesting essay on June 11 <www.dawn.com/news/print/1758991>, about "Agony Columns and Victorian Fiction", reporting on the exhibition on "News and Novel Sensations" at the McGill Library. The exhibition is no longer open, there is a 51-minute video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=D7fPJpuhfgo&t=3s> and an interesting web-site <www.libraryponders.github.io/index.html> that offers (among other things) access to Vibecheck, which allow would-be pastichists to input their text and see just how close they are to "Victorian vibe".

22067. "I saw it on the Internet, so it must be true!" Famous last words, to be sure, and it's certainly correct when it comes to the continuing flood of "news" about the next Benedict Cumberbatch series, the next Robert Downey Jr. film, and much more. But here's something so hilarious that it's worth watching: an announcement of a new film, due in theaters on Oct. 15, 2024:
22070. "21st-Century Editors Should Keep Their Hands Off 20th-Century Books" was the headline on a Washington Post editorial <www.tinyurl.com/56a4a6c4> on June 14, about publishers changing the text in books by Roald Dahl, Agatha Christie, Ian Fleming, and Ursula K. Le Guin to remove language that might be considered offensive today. Conan Doyle appears to have avoided this sort of "retouching" . . . at least so far.
22071. It has been many years since Robby the Robot made it into this newsletter (Sep 77 #4). Robby first appeared in the film "Forbidden Planet" (1956), and had small parts in many films and television shows after that. One of them would have been the television series "Holmes and Walston" that never was broadcast. But a pilot was made in 1975, in which Robby had been programmed with 3,000 volumes of Sherlock Holmes by an eccentric inventor and believed he was Holmes; the pilot seems not to have survived, but you can see a few minutes of behind-the-scenes footage, with Robby in Sherlockian costume, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=WQc72qGifel>.
22072. Bill Seil reports that the WuMo comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on June 10 <www.gocomics.com/wumo/2023/06/10>. And Mother Goose & Grimm on June 11 <www.gocomics.com/mother-goose-and-grimm/2023/06/11>.
22073. It has been many years since David M. Martill, studying fossils from the Lower Cretaceous formations of Brazil, named the tetrapod Irritator challengeri (Feb 96 #1). The fossil's name derives from the irritation that Martill and his fellow authors felt when they found that the snout of the fossil had been artificially elongated by the professional fossil-hunter who had found and sold the skull, and their desire to honor Prof. George Edward Challenger, of the Lost World. Paleontologists still are studying Irritator, and there's a new article on "A Predatory Dinosaur from Brazil and Its Surprising Anatomy" <www.tinyurl.com/48vpdke4>.

22074. "An evening of miracles followed." George Bernard Shaw wrote to Hayden Church, in "an amusing account of faking a séance," according a cataloguer at Bonhams in London. Shaw went on to say, "After that experience I could not discuss the subject with Oliver Lodge grieving for his lost son, nor with the infatuated author of Sherlock Holmes." The letter is one of many in an archive of correspondence that went to auction on June 21. Church was a prolific journalist who interviewed Conan Doyle ("Life After Death" in The Strand Magazine, Mar. 1919), and John Barrymore ("The Youth of Sherlock Holmes" in the Strand, Apr. 1922).
22075. Stephen Gaspar's Holmes of Baker Street (2023; 256 pp., $12.99) is a collection of eight traditional pastiches, most of them accounts of unreported cases, plus two stories (one of them involving Holmes) about Inspector Henry Barclay, of the Northwest Mounted Police. The author's web-site at <www.stephengaspar.blogspot.com> offers more information about his books.
22076. The Theatre-Goers, Homeward Bound, after a one-year hiatus, are resuming their monthly on-line screenings of Sherlockian films, usually on the last Saturday of each month, co-hosted with the Legion of Zoom. Contact Steve Mason <stevemason880@gmail.com> to join their mailing list.
22077. "Emsworth the Crimean V.C." (mentioned in "The Blanched Soldier") was one of the earliest to be honored with the Victoria Cross. You might be able to purchase one of the prestigious medals (for £400,000, according to Wikipedia), or you can settle for a replica (for only £15) from the National Archives <www.tinyurl.com/23vm9fku>; a miniature replica also is available (for £5).
22078. Peter McIntyre reports a new horse for racing fans to follow: Sherlock's Jewel <www.tinyurl.com/yc7zuu29>, who's doing well at the races.
22079. Canterbury Classics has a series of "classic pop-up tales" that includes The Hound of the Baskervilles (2023, $24.99), adapted by Claire Bampton, with artwork by Anthony Williams and pop-ups by David Hawcock; it's colorful, imaginative, and nicely done. If you're going to order from Amazon, search for [classic pop-ups].
22080. Daedalus Books <www.daedalusbooks.com>, one of the more energetic on-line sources for remainder books, has many interesting offers: just search the web-site for [sherlock holmes].
22081. Laurie R. King writes that she's "having such a good time with the rewrite of The Lantern's Dance, tweaking scenes, weaving in a great fun subplot, making the settings and characters come alive." If you'd like to know a bit more about the next Mary Russell mystery, due in February, here's the publisher's description <www.tinyurl.com/37axc985>.
22082. "I think Harry Potter was always destined to become like Sherlock Holmes," Daniel Radcliffe said recently, adding that "it'll get passed on." Now in his early 30s and a father, Radcliffe also said that he won't be performing cameo roles in new Harry Potter films and television series. There's more at Yahoo News! on June 15 <www.tinyurl.com/bdhnheew>.

22083. Burt Wolder has noted Rich Warren's interesting blog "A Road of Intangible Inclinations: The Chicago Booktrade 1886-1974", which recently (June 15) offered a piece titled "Ben Abramson Speaks About the BSI" <www.tinyurl.com/4759uh96>, with a link to a 1954 radio broadcast that included an interview with Ben, who presided over the Argus Bookshop and was the first publisher of the Baker Street Journal. And at the end you'll find links to three more entries about Ben.
22084. Night Legion is an Australian "power metal" band whose new album "Fight or Fall" includes "The Hounds of Baskerville"; there's a review (with a link to the lyric video) at <www.knac.com/article.asp?ArticleID=45538>, and the band's web-site is at <www.nightlegion.net>.
22085. Vincent Starrett's The Unique Hamlet is thought by many to be the iconic Sherlockian pastiche. The first edition's rare indeed, but Tage la Cour's copy (inscribed and signed by Starrett, advertised by a British dealer for £4,000 <www.tinyurl.com/59vkms32>, quickly sold. Randall Stock's revised census of the first edition is available at <www.tinyurl.com/3ncfteht>.
22086. Theatrics: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (by Andrew and David Hobbs) is touring in England through Sept. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/2p8p25ex>.
22087. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (by Tim Churchill and Catherine O'Reilly) will be performed at the Players Theatre in Nantwich, Cheshire, July 18-22 <www.facebook.com/shavingtondramagroup>.
22088. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Milam Community Theater in Cameron, Tex., July 29-Aug. 6 <www.milamcommunitytheater.com>. It also is scheduled at the Marion Art Center in Marion, Mass., on Aug. 4-20 <www.marionaartcenter.org>;

- at the Hanover Tavern in Hanover, Va., on Dec. 15-Jan. 21 <www.va-rep.org>; and at the Kanata Theatre in Kanata, Ont., on May 15-25 <www.kanatatheatre.ca>.
22089. "The Death of Sherlock Holmes" (radio-style) is due at the Cape May Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J., Nov. 3-11 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
22090. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at the City Lights Theater in San Jose, Calif., on Nov. 16-Dec. 17 <www.cltc.org>; and at the BlackBox Theater in Midland, Pa., on Dec. 1-10 <www.lincolnparkarts.org>.
22091. Mark Shanahan's "A Sherlock Carol" is scheduled at the Marylebone Theatre in London, Nov. 24-Jan. 7 <www.marylebonetheatre.com>.
22093. Tony Padilla's "Sherlock Holmes Confidential" will have its world premiere at the Palm Springs Cultural Center in Palm Springs, Calif., on Apr. 12-21 <www.desertensembletheatre.org>.

22094. Fans of the Internet Archive may not be aware of its Open Library, an on-line equivalent of a bricks-and-mortar library that allows you to read or borrow books using "controlled digital lending" <www.openlibrary.org>. A judge recently ruled against the Internet Archive in a copyright-infringement lawsuit brought by publishers, but legal arguments continue. Search the Open Library web-site for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] to see what's (still) available to read or borrow. You can read about the lawsuit at Wikipedia <www.tinyurl.com/yaj9ydzf>.
22095. Glen Miranker's enthusiastic collecting is not limited to Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He also collects Enigma machines, and was interviewed by Jay Jadot about obsessions; Max Magee reports that the inter-view was published on-line on Oct. 6, 2021 <www.tinyurl.com/mubn3v87>.
22096. "What is important is reading the books you like," Vincent Starrett said, adding, "I don't believe there are any hundred best books, or even 1,000 best books. There might be 5,000 best books—I don't know." According to June Provines, in her Chicago Tribune column "Front Views and Profiles" on Oct. 14, 1940.
22098. M. J. Downing's Sherlock Holmes: The Ghosts of Savannah (Louisville: Burns & Lea, 2023; 282 pp., $11.99) is the third in his series about Dr. Watson in pursuit of revenants, vampires, and Moriarty's occult army, defending the world against malevolent forces (with some echoes of "The Five Orange Pips"). The author's web-site <www.mjdowningsplace.com> offers an interesting look at what he calls the "Downing-verse", and a short story "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Case of the Vicarage Ghost" which you can find by searching for [vicarage].
22099. M. K. Wiseman's Sherlock Holmes & the Silver Cord (2023; 206 pp., $22.50) is Holmes' own account of a case he encountered six months after his return from the Great Hiatus, still suffering mental trauma from the events in Switzerland; there are mysterious deaths, confusing clues, worshippers of the occult, and questions of justice, good, and evil. The author has a web-site at <mkwisemanauthor.com>.
22100. Michael Jackson's 14-minute music video "Thriller" (1982), available on-line at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=sOnqijkTMAA>, includes wolf howls in the sound effects; according to an article at the Showbiz Cheatsheet on May 25 <www.tinyurl.com/bdd82a3y>, the recording engineer, inspired by a film of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", wanted his Great Dane to provide howls, but the dog "didn't want to be in show business," and Michael Jackson himself was responsible for the howls.

22101. It was in December 1972 that Harrison (Jack) Schmitt traveled to the Moon in Apollo 17, becoming the first (and so far the only) geologist to have visited there. In April he welcomed an American Association of Petroleum Geologists field trip to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Space Center in Houston and talked about NASA's new Artemis "Return to the Moon" mission <www.nasa.gov/specials/artemis>.
22102. Bouchercon (the long-running and always-interesting annual conference for mystery fans) <www.bouchercon.com> is due in San Diego (Murder at the Marina) Aug. 30-Sept. 3, 2023; Nashville (Murder and Mayhem in Music City) Aug. 28-Sept. 4, 2024; New Orleans (Blood on the Bayou) Sept. 3-7, 2025; and Calgary (Cross-Border Crimes) Oct. 21-25, 2026.
22103. Fans of the late Ogden Nash enjoyed his poetry, which was often Sherlockian, and he included a nice mention of Holmes in "Each June I Make a Promise Sober", which appeared in the N.Y. Times Book Review (June 7, 1953), and was reprinted in the Baker Street Journal (Oct. 1953), but never was published in any collection of his poetry. Karen Murdock annotated version of the poem, published in the Passengers' Log in 2005, is available on request from Karen <murdock1212@gmail.com>.
22104. "I have lived happily at Horsham," said John Openshaw (in "The Five Orange Pips"). A story about present-day Horsham at the Great British Life web-site (June 13) <www.tinyurl.com/3aumf3ye> says "Jam-Packed with culture and history, it's no wonder that this pretty market town constantly tops the list of best places to live in the country, let alone the county."
22105. The June issue of the Beacon Society's Not-So-Quarterly Newsletter now is available at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>, with the latest news from the society and its efforts to offer "teachers, librarians, children's museums, and children's theaters with local resources to bring the magic of Sherlock Holmes to life."
22106. "I seem to have all Niagara whizzing and bussing in my ears," Jim Browner said (in "The Cardboard Box"). The Postal Service has issued a sheet of Waterfalls stamps, one of them showing Niagara Falls, photographed by John Cancalosi.
22107. Julian Doyle's The Jericho Manuscript (2023; 254 pp., $13.17), reviewed in the Daily Express as "Sherlock Holmes meets the Da Vinci Code," follows the path blazed by Dan Brown. The author uses Holmes and Watson's investigation of a murder and a stolen manuscript to present his own conclusions about the truth behind the inconsistencies and contradictions in the long-accepted biblical accounts of the life and death of Jesus of Nazareth. In many ways it's similar to Edmund Aubrey's pastiche Sherlock Holmes in Dallas (1980), but Holmes is in early Edwardian times.

22109. Reported: Golden Age Bibliomysteries, edited by Otto Penzler (2023; 480 pp., $27.95) offers “fourteen tales of bibliophilic transgression from the Golden Age of the mystery genre”, including Vincent Starrett’s classic Sherlockian pastiche “The Unique Hamlet” (Otto introduces each of the stories).
22110. Sherlock Holmes keeps up with current events, as in a cartoon that accompanied an essay “The Wagner March on Moscow Offers Another Russian Enigma” in GIS Reports on June 24 <www.gisreportsonline.com/r/wagner-coup>. The artist is the Polish satirical cartoonist Jurek Wasiukiewicz.
22111. According to the Kirkus Review, Stephen Gallagher “has been called a horror writer, a fantasy writer, a writer for big screens and smaller ones, a writer who considerable talent has enabled him to slip in and out of genres precisely as if those tidy little boxes didn’t exist.” His television credits include the script for an episode in the “Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes” series (2000), and his The Governess (London: Brooligan Press, 2021; 39 pp., $5.09) is an imaginative ghost story, told by Edward Malone and involving Professor Challenger. The author has a web-site at <www.stephengallagher.com>, and the story was reprinted in Comparative Anatomy: The Best of Stephen Gallagher (Burton: Subterranean, 2022; 568 pp., $45.00)
22112. The schedule for Bouchercon in San Diego (“Murder at the Marina”), includes a panel on “The Game’s Afoot: Sherlock Holmes and His Influence on Mysteries” with Les Klinger, Jeri Westerson, Laurie King, Liese Sherwood-Fabre, and Mary Stojak at 9:00 am on Sept. 1 <www.bouchercon2023.com>.
22113. “Arthur Conan Doyle and the Adventure of the Gaiola Malediction” (by Ross Davies and Mark Jones), the first of the four “Worldwide Doyle” lectures during the Portsmouth Libraries’ “Summer of Sherlock” honoring the city’s Conan Doyle Collection (Jun 23 #1) is now on-line (and well worth watching) at <www.tinyurl.com/yc6uz67b>. ETA: Mark kindly has made all four of the lectures available at <www.bit.ly/worldwidedoyle>, and all of them are interesting.
22114. If you’re wondering about “estimated time of arrival” in the previous paragraph, in this modern age and on the Internet, ETA also means “edited to add.” Times change, and so do abbreviations.
22115. Chris Werby, son of the late Willy and Don Werby, is offering for sale the contents of the spectacular rooms that Willy created for S. Holmes, Esq., in San Francisco, and for the Grosvenor Hotel in Orlando; there are lots of images at <www.holmesroom.com>.
22116. Four pages (all that are known to have survived) of the manuscript of “The Crooked Man” were sold at auction at Sotheby’s in New York on July 20 for $95,250 (including the buyer’s premium). Randall Stock has posted a report on the manuscript (as well as the sale) at his “Best of Sherlock” web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/crooked-man-2023.htm>. An interesting aspect of the manuscript is the emendations (some by the author, and some perhaps by an editor), all visible in the images.

22117. Glen Dakin’s Sherlock Holmes’ Little Book of Wisdom (New York: Hero Collector, 2021; 109 pp., $14.95) is sub-titled “How to Deduce What on Earth Is Going On”; Dakin (who calls himself a “writer and cartoonist”) has great fun explaining how “to deduce the best way to solve the crimes of modern life.” His web-site at <www.glenndakin.com> offers a nice sample of his art and humor.
22118. It isn’t easy to come up with a title for a story that makes a reader feel that it has to be read. Peter Turnbull’s “The Extremely Pleasant and Most Helpful Lady with Three Ears” certainly qualifies, and you can read it in the July-August issue of Ellery Queen’s Mystery Magazine.
22119. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, offers Andrew Malec’s nicely illustrated report on the Chicago publisher Max Stein’s use of Frederic Dorr Steele’s artwork on the covers of piracies of Conan Doyle (and other authors), plus celebrations of the Terry/Rose play “The Return of Sherlock Holmes” (1923) and George W. Locke’s anthology of parodies At the Mountain of Murkiness (1973), and news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Timothy Johnson (#15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <johns976@umn.com>.
22120. Mark Jones and Paul M. Chapman continue to add to the interviews at their “Doings of Doyle” podcast <www.doingsofdoyle.com>, the most recent featuring Jonathan Cranfield, who has edited The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes for the Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle.
22121. SP Books, who have just published a facsimile of the manuscript of Truman Capote’s In Cold Blood <www.spbooks.com/14-manuscripts>, also still offer a similar volume for The Lost World (Dec 20 #1) for $200.00 postpaid.
22122. Alan Arkin died on June 29. He began his award-winning acting career on film in 1957, and went on to star on stage and television, winning awards in all three media. He also played Sigmund Freud in “The Seven-Per-Cent Solution” (1976).
22123. “Sherlock Holmes Playing Cards” from Laurence King/Orion Publishing come in an attractive box with a deck of cards and a booklet written by Nicholas Utechin and illustrated by Doug John Miller (whose artwork also can be seen on the cards); £12.99 in the U.K. <www.tinyurl.com/ymzr746v>. $11.29 in the U.S. <www.tinyurl.com/3x534ht2>.
22124. James J. Patterson’s Junk Shop Window (Bethesda: Alan Squire Publishing, 2023; 168 pp. $19.95) is a collection of essays on “myth, life, and literature,” and they demonstrate just how grand, and how much fun, a personal essay can be. “Literature” includes Herman Melville, Henry Miller, William Wordsworth, and Arthur Conan Doyle (Sherlock Holmes is aptly quoted in an account of a trip to the Wordsworth Trust Museum), and there’s also an amusing story about Patterson’s adventures while recording some of the Canon for radio in the 1970s.

22126. We hear of Sherlock Snoopy everywhere, thanks to Jennie Paton, who found him decorating crocs <www.tinyurl.com/4sxf76wk>.
22127. Orson Welles shot footage for a film “Too Much Johnson” (based on William Gillette’s play) in 1938, but the film never was completed. Some footage did survive (Sep 14 #2) and is available at the National Film Preservation Foundation’s web-site <www.tinyurl.com/494rdesj>, where there are two different version (links at “click here”). You can also watch the film, with music by Ben Model, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=6dkC8vG4x54> (a tip of the hat to Doug Chapman for reporting the link).
22128. Reported: The Best Mystery Stories of the Year, edited by Amor Towles (New York: Mysterious Press, 2023; 500 pp., $28.95); the contents include Derrick Belanger’s “The Adventure of the Misquoted Macbeth”, reprinted from the anthology A Detective’s Life: Sherlock Holmes, edited by Martin Rosenstock (Titan, 2022).
22129. Ali Standish’s The Improbable Tales of Baskerville Hall (New York: HarperCollins, 2023; 336 pp., $18.99), is an imaginative fantasy, for children ages 8-12; a chance encounter in Edinburgh brings young Arthur Conan Doyle to study at a school for gifted children where the faculty includes George Edward Challenger and the Brigadier Gerard, and Arthur's fellow students include Irene Eagle and Jimmy Moriarty. There's dire peril, humor, mystery, and a resolution that promises a sequel.

22130. You might not be able to stay at Bignell Wood (the house that Conan Doyle bought as a birthday present for his wife Jean), but you can stay at Little Bignell (a cottage on the grounds of Bignell Wood), which is listed at Airbnb www.tinyurl.com/3889kzsn as a "romantic getaway for two" in the New Forest.
22131. An exhibition on "Max Beerbohm: The Price of Celebrity" will be on view at the N.Y. Public Library from Oct. 20 to Feb. 4 www.tinyurl.com/2vu5sw6b; it will be co-curated by Mark Samuels Lasner, who has for many years collected and researched the British literary figures of the last half of the nineteenth century, and by Margaret D. Stetz, a profess at the University of Delaware. The exhibition will include the original artwork for Beerbohm's caricature of Conan Doyle.
22132. The late Charlie Watts was a collector as well as an inspired drummer (for the Rolling Stones); an auction at Christie's in London on Sept. 28 will include a first edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles signed by Conan Doyle with the comment "I perambulated Dartmoor before I wrote this book" www.tinyurl.com/ysr7hcxi.

22133. Adrian Nebbitt has noted an episode of "The Buick Berle Show" (Jan. 12, 1954); Milton Berle's guests were Mickey Spillane, Dagmar, and Basil Rathbone www.tinyurl.com/mvfyderb. Rathbone appears in Sherlockian costume at 41:50. No one will know if you watch the entire program to see why Dagmar was so famous all those years ago.
22134. "British Authors Adverse" was the headline on a story in the Chicago Inter-Ocean (Aug. 25, 1906), quoted by Rachel Lang in a post to the blog at the Theodore Roosevelt Center's web-site www.tinyurl.com/ye9jhpfd. "Sir Conan Doyle fears the reform would mean the end of the English language. He said: 'Reformed spelling might become universal, but it would cease to be the English language'" Any idea when and where Conan Doyle said that?
22136. It was while standing at the Criterion Bar that Watson encountered young Stamford (in "A Study in Scarlet"), and went on to a meeting with Sherlock Holmes. The Criterion has changed hands many times since then, and now is an Indian restaurant: the Masala Zone Piccadilly offers a thoroughly exotic décor www.tinyurl.com/3uycu2j and menu. There's no word (so far) of the commemorative plaque noting the Sherlockian history of the restaurant.
22137. Caroline Crampton presides over the Shedunnit podcast and YouTube channel, and recently interviewed Teresa Peschel about her recent Agatha Christie, She Watched (May 23 #4) www.youtube.com/watch?v=6gT_i5uHTug.
22138. Jon L. Breen's What About Murder? (1981-1991): A Guide to Books About Mystery and Detective Fiction (Metuchen: Scarecrow Press, 1993) offers a detailed examination of 564 books published in that decade, including histories, reference books, technical manuals, collected essays and reviews, anthologies, and much more, with insightful commentary that often includes identification of authors' errors. It's out of print, but readily available, as is his earlier What About Murder? (1981), which had only 239 entries; the two volumes demonstrate well the explosion of critical interest in the genre that began in the 1980s.
22139. A bit of theatrical news: William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of Alice Faulkner" is being performed at Colorado ACTS in Wheat Ridge, Colo., through Aug. 13; their web-site's at www.wheatridgetheatre.com.
22140. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Barnstormer Theatre in Tamworth, N.H., Aug. 24-Sept. 2 www.barnstormertheatre.org.
22141. "Sherlock Holmes & the Mystery of the Crown Jewel" (by Janet Yates Vogt and Mark Friedman) has been scheduled at the Main Street Theater in Houston, Tex, Apr. 21-May 11, 2024 www.mainstreettheater.com.

August 23 #1

22142. Holmes and Watson could have seen dinosaurs in London, and they're still there. After the Crystal Palace Exhibition closed in 1851, the building was taken down and rebuilt in Sydenham, and the newly-formed Crystal Palace Company commissioned the creation of fifteen life-sized models of extinct animals. The models are still there, protected by a Grade I listing, and you can see images of some of them in an article posted recently to the Artlyst web-site www.tinyurl.com/4uxt4e2z.
22143. From this newsletter in 1998: "Elementary, my dear Watson" was indeed said by Sherlock Holmes in one of A. Conan Doyle's stories. It really was. In which story?
22144. Nea Dodson has reported an intriguing Sherlockian video set to Kristin Andreassen's song "Crayola Doesn't Make a Color for Your Eyes", available at YouTube www.youtube.com/watch?v=wIBtrxEg7xc. Click on [educated in yellow] to see some similar videos.
22145. The next 221B Con (A Fan Con for All Things Sherlock Holmes) will be held in Atlanta, Ga., on Apr. 12-14 www.221bcon.com; there's no schedule yet, but you can consult their 2023 schedule to find out what sort of things go on at the convention.
22146. Raymond A. de Groat ("Harraway") died on July 25. He was a teacher and a life-long dedicated liberal activist, and for many years as enthusiastic member of the Scowrsers and Mollie Maguires of San Francisco. He served as their secretary in the 1970s and 1980s, and received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.
22147. Something for fans of William Gillette (spotted by Jennie Paton): the New York Public Library has digitized their hand-corrected typescript of the second act of his "Sherlock Holmes" www.tinyurl.com/3sarukpn. It's in the William Hooker Gillette Papers in the Berg Collection.
22148. Two-and-a-half minute commercials? Apparently. Ann Marlowe has reported this one www.youtube.com/watch?v=GnUo0CiatNI, with a mention of Sherlock at 1:41, presumably 1958-1960, when Westinghouse sponsored "The Westinghouse Desilu Playhouse".
22149. Laurie R. King reports that The Lantern's Dance (the new Mary Russell nov-el) has now "gone into production," and explains just what that means at her web-site www.laurierking.com; there also are some interesting posts about the new books at her blog "Mutterings" www.laurierking.com/blog.
22150. Michael Jackson's 14-minute music video "Thriller" (1982), available on-line at YouTube www.youtube.com/watch?v=sOngikJTMaA, includes wolf howls in the sound effects; according to an article at the Showbiz Cheatsheet on May 25 www.tinyurl.com/bdd82a3y, the recording engineer, inspired by a film of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", wanted his Great Dane to provide howls, but the dog "didn't want to be in show business," and Michael Jackson himself was responsible for the howls.

22151. Shannon Mann is the winner of the 2023 Irene Adler Prize: a $1,000 scholarship for a woman pursuing a degree in journalism, creative writing, or literature. The prize was established in 2017 by Lucas Aykroyd, an award-winning writer and public speaker in Vancouver, B.C., and it is indeed named in honor of the heroine of "A Scandal in Bohemia". You can learn more about the prize, and read the winning essay, at www.lucasaykroyd.com/scholarships, and there's a story in Yahoo! Finance (July 25) www.tinyurl.com/4fe632dn.
22152. Yes, Sherlock Holmes really did say "Elementary, my dear Watson" in one of A. Conan Doyle's stories, and you can credit (or blame) Jim Vogelsang for the discovery. The story is "The Adventure of the Red Widow" -- by Adrian Conan Doyle.
22153. Elizabeth Crowens reports that she has signed a three-book deal with Level Best Books for her new "Hollywood Mysteries" series set in the 1940s. Her sleuth is Babs Norman, and The Hounds of the Hollywood Baskervilles, due next spring, with feature Basil Rathbone.
22154. Don Hobbs has added language #114 (Tagalog) to his data-base of translations of the Canon. Don's massive (and colorfully-illustrated) "Galactic Sherlock Holmes" (with 18,361 entries) is conveniently available on-line at www.dfw-sherlock-org/galactic-sherlock-holmes.html.
22155. Kitchen at Holmes (a restaurant at 108 Baker Street) received a rave review in the Travel Magazine www.thetravelmagazine.net/kitchen-at-holmes on July 31. They offer breakfast a la carte, and "festive feast" menus at £55 and £65 www.kitchenatholmes.co.uk/restaurant.
22156. The Queen's South Africa medal, with three clasps (for Cape Colony, Orange Free State, and Transvaal), that was awarded to Private W. Milton for his service with the Langman Field Hospital during the Boer War, went to auction at Noonan May-fair in London on July 26, and sold for £550 (plus 24% buyer's premium) www.tinyurl.com/2294yk2. Surgeon A. Conan Doyle received the same medal (with the same three clasps), but unfortunately it is not known to have survived. The Official Medal Roll for the Langman Hospital was published in an article in the Journal of the Orders and Medals Research Society (autumn 1979) www.tinyurl.com/4e54n4yr.
22157. The never-ending Sherlock Holmes Museum saga continues: earlier this year (Feb 23 #1) John Aidiniantz, who founded the museum, served a sentence in jail, and now controls the museum again, won a suit against his brother. Now Honoria Cartlidge, who was fired from her £120,00-a-year job as senior manager, has been (partially) successful in a suit against the museum. She didn't win the £500,000 bonus she says she was promised, but the judge ruled that museum directors (including Cartlidge's ex-girlfriend) dismissed Cartlidge unfairly, and that she was entitled to unlawful deduction of holiday pay. You can read all about in an article in the Daily Mail (July 27) www.tinyurl.com/3yrmkmy.

22158. Nineteenth-Century Gender Studies is an on-line journal that is "committed to publishing insightful and innovative scholarship on gender studies and nineteenth-century British literature, art, and culture." The summer 2023 issue (reported by Ross Davies, who keeps an eye out for matters legal) contains Rebecca Nesvet's "Walking Aslant: Irene Adler Visits the Inner Temple" www.tinyurl.com/2p8c6srb. Authors have written about Holmes and Conan Doyle in past issues.
22159. Thierry Saint-Joanis is offering summer sales discounts (available until Sept. 23) on four "Sherlock Holmes on Screens" publications; details are available at www.tinyurl.com/537bbkwp.
22160. Jerome Coopersmith died on July 21. He launched his theatrical career in 1947, writing script for television series, and his many later credits included writing the book for the musical "Baker Street" (1964), for which he received a Tony Award nomination. He also wrote a script for "The Other Side" (a one-act play about Conan Doyle and Houdini), performed during "Autumn in Baker Street" in 2007, and during the Sherlock Holmes birthday festivities in New York in 2008.
22161. And Inga Swenson died on July 28. She launched her acting career on stage in 1949, and went on to many appearances on stage, screen, and television. Best known for her performance as Gretchen Kraus in the television series "Benson" (1979-1986), she also starred in (and won a Tony nomination) as Irene Adler in the musical "Baker Street" (1964), and was an honored guest at the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner in 2005.
22162. Scott Monty has a warm tribute to them both at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site www.tinyurl.com/mrx6kaw2.
22163. Howard Ostrom has reported a 1970 episode of the British series "It's Tommy Cooper" now available on-line at www.dailymotion.com/video/x8md4cu.
22164. An 11-minute skit "Great Performances of our Time" (at 12:54) stars British comedian Tommy Cooper as Holmes and Patrick Cargill as Watson. Howard notes that one of Cooper's stand-up lines (from a stage show) was, "I say, Watson, this is a most serious case. The window is broken on both sides."
22165. All those who own a copy of The Sherlock Holmes Hexalogy, which was letterpress printed and hand-bound at the Thornwill Press (Dec. 17 #2), will be aware of the fine work that they do. It's still available, along with many other titles, including their latest, Wodehouse's Leave It to Jeeves, at their web-site www.thornwillow.com.
22166. Andrew Norman's The Real Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: The Creator of Sherlock Holmes (Yorkshire: White Owl, 2023; 224 pp., $34.95) is a biography written by an author who studied medicine, became a writer, and has had access to and quotes from medical records and case notes of Conan Doyle's father Charles Altamont Doyle, who had been diagnosed as suffering from epilepsy and alcoholism. Norman believes that Conan Doyle's father suffered from a schizo-affective disorder, which includes symptoms of both schizophrenia and bipolar disorder and may have been inherited by Conan Doyle, explaining his conversion in later life to Spiritualism.

22167. "Together, we make up Unit 221B, named after Sherlock Holmes as recommended along the way by a UK law enforcement friend of mine when I was trying to figure out what to name the company. He said, 'That is what you and your crew do: you are the Sherlock Holmes of cyber-space.'" That's from Lance James, CEP of Unit 221B, explaining the origin of his company, which offers "products and services to companies seeking discreet, best-in-class, and advanced cybersecurity operations and training." Their web-site's at www.unit221b.com.
22168. Bignell Wood, the country home that Conan Doyle bought as a birthday present for his wife Jean in 1924, advertised for £2,950,000 last year (Nov 22 #3) www.tinyurl.com/uv9nxb5y, is now "under offer" (which means there's a buyer, but no contact has been signed).
22169. Ben Abramson presided over the Argus Book Shop, in Chicago and New York, published the 13 issues of the Old Series of the Baker Street Journal from 1946 to 1949, and was an early member of The Baker Street Irregulars, and a very good friend of Vincent Starrett; you can hear him (and others) talk about all of that in episode 269 of Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog at www.tinyurl.com/3dukc3m4.
22170. A reading list for fans of the "Elementary" television series (spotted by Jennie Paton): someone has compiled a list of all the books that are visible in Sherlock's brownstone home www.tinyurl.com/2h8yuku9.

22172. Sherlockian fan-fiction can be helpful, according to an article on-line at the Huffington Post (July 3, 2020) <www.tinyurl.com/mus7vdkc>.
22173. "The creator of Sherlock Holmes acknowledges that he is a bad penman" was the caption on an image of Conan Doyle autograph in Bernard Nessey's article "A Sheaf of Autographs" in the Apr. 1905 issue of the Royal Magazine, discovered by Ross Davies, who has reported on it in the August issue of A Common Newsletter, published by the ACD Society. You can read the article on-line, thanks to the Hathi Trust <www.tinyurl.com/4mdb87nj> (just go to pages 485-487), and you can learn more about the ACD Society at its web-site <www.acdsociety.com> (four of the images along the top of the opening page are live links to some of the society's goings-on).
22174. A. Wallis Myers' article about "Smoke, Smokes & Smokers" in the Sept. 1902 issue of the magazine includes a photograph of William Gillette as Sherlock Holmes, with a caption "Sherlock Holmes without a pipe could hardly be imagined." Myers reports that smoking on stage "is by no means as simple as it might appear," adding that Gillette "used always to employ very light tobacco which would burn for hours without losing its capacity for supplying smoke."

22175. By Common Consent (a blog that was "started by a group of Mormons to provide a thoughtful, enjoyable, and reasonable place to post and discuss Mormon topics," has (as might be expected) discussion of "A Study in Scarlet". A recent post by Michael Austin had an intriguing title: "Sherlock Holmes and the Giant Rat of Sumatra: A Study in the Impossibility of a Closed Canon" <www.tinyurl.com/mr2tunzc>, and a link to an earlier post by Ivan Wolfe on "Sherlock Holmes, 'Mormons', and Canon" <www.tinyurl.com/yfzsythk>. It's interesting that "Star Wars" fandom also has trouble agreeing on just what their canon is, and that Disney tried and failed to control the definition <www.starwars.fandom.com/wiki/Canon>.
22176. Ray Betzner's "Studies in Starrett" blog has some delightful discoveries, such as <www.vincentstarrett.com/blog/2023/1/17/mord-i-folio>, about his success, at long last, of acquiring a Swedish translation of "The Unique Hamlet" published in 1960 with attractive illustrations, now available for everyone to see.
22177. Otto Penzler has announced creation of a new Penzler Publishers imprint: Crime Ink <www.penzlerpublishers.com/announcing-crime-ink> will launch in the spring of 2024; their first title will be The Serial Killer's Apprentice (by Katherine Ramsland and Tracy Ullman).
22178. "The stout gentleman with the wig ought to be a Reynolds," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Country Life magazine recently offered a nicely-illustrated discussion of the life and work of Sir Joshua Reynolds <www.tinyurl.com/mrxz4vwi>.
22179. "The Play That Goes Wrong" recently was produced at the Kennedy Center in Washington; it is billed as "a hilarious hybrid of Monty Python and Sherlock Holmes." There's nothing Sherlockian about the play, except that it is a murder mystery, but it's a delightful farce and highly recommended if there's a production anywhere near you.
22180. The book collection of the late Charlie Watts, at auction at Christie's in London on Sept. 28 (Jul 23 #5) <www.tinyurl.com/ysr7hcxj> also includes a nicely inscribed copy of the first American edition of A Study in Scarlet <www.tinyurl.com/ym5b9uku>.
22181. We are indebted to Petri Wine for sponsoring the Sherlock Holmes series on radio from 1943 to 1950. There was an unusual (and attractive) porcelain advertising sign from 1964 available at eBay <www.tinyurl.com/33rbh2yj>.
22182. "Sherlock Holmes and the Great Escape" was a Chinese animation (released in 2019 as "The Great Detective Sherlock Holmes: The Great Jail Breaker"); Jennie Paton has reported it on-line, dubbed in English, at Daily Motion <www.dailymotion.com/video/x8n6hab>.
22183. CAT PAWZZLES PRESENTS PURRLOCK HOLMES, edited by Tim Baker (New York: Topix Media, 2023; 96 pp., $7.99) ($3.50 at Amazon), has a pipe-smoking cat in Sherlockian costume on the cover and offers "puzzles, ciphers, and itty bitty mysteries for feline fanatics." Dr. Watson also appears, along with Irene Catler, and Meowriarty.

22184. The late Jack Ritchie, author of more than 350 short stories (and one novel) wrote a pastiche "A Case of Identity" (in the Jan. 1982 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine) in which he identified Watson as Jack the Ripper; one of his specialties was hard-boiled noir for magazines such as Manhunt and Mantrap, and you can read some of the stories in that genre in The Best of Manhunt 4: the Jack Ritchie Stories, edited by Jeff Vorzimmer (Eureka: Stark House, 2922l; 221 pp., $15.95).
22185. The fall issue of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter is now on-line at the Trust's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mtv6wa8h>, with a colorful report on Denny Dobry's work supporting the Trust, and additional information about Steve Rothman's upcoming on-line Trust lecture on Sept. 9.
22186. When in southern Albania: there's a Sherlock's Irish Pub in Pogradec; the web-site's at <www.sherlock-irish-pub.business.site> (reports by Jennie Paton).
22187. Have you ever played with a Magic 8 Ball? There's now an on-line version, at <www.magic-8ball.com>. There's a (remote) connection to Conan Doyle: the original Magic 8 Ball was invented by Alfred Carter; his mother Laura Pruden was a Cincinnati clairvoyant who specialized in slate-writing and was praised by Conan Doyle, who sat with her twice in the 1920s, and said that she "is certainly one of the great mediums of the world" (in Our Second American Adventure).
22188. Theatrical news: Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Spotlight Playhouse in Berea, Ky., Sept. 1-3; web-site at <www.thespotlightplayhouse.com>.
22189. J. Hamilton Wright's "Sherlock Holmes and the American Problem" is scheduled at the Art Barn in Gaithersburg, Md., Sept. 16-Oct. 1; their web-site is at <www.tinyurl.com/yw8xnuz4>.
22190. Richard Tunley's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Blackwood Miners' Institute in Blackwood, Wales, on Oct. 3, and then on tour <www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=100079483407798>.
22191. Ken Ludwig's "Moriarty" is due at the Meadow Brook Theatre in Rochester, Mich., Oct. 4-29 <www.meadowbrooktheatre.com>.
22192. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Temple Theatre in Sanford, N.C., Oct. 12-29 <www.templeshows.com>.
22193. Matthew Ivan Bennett's "Sherlock Holmes and the Final Problem" is coming up at the Rose Wagner Performing Arts Center in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Oct. 27, for broadcast by KUER-FM <www.tinyurl.com/vjutufvn>.
22194. Jon Jory's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has been scheduled at the Theatre at Seneca Ridge Middle School in Sterling, Va., Nov. 10-19, 2023; the web-site's at <www.sterlingplaymakers.org>.

September 23 #1

22195. Burt Solomon's The Attempted Murder of Teddy Roosevelt (New York: Forge, 2019; 302 pp., $17.99) is entertaining historical fiction, with Secretary of State John Hay as the detective, trying to determine whether an accident in Pittsfield, Mass., in 1902 actually was an attempt to assassinate the president. It's Sherlockian only in that throughout the book John Hay enjoys reading from the just-published The Hound of the Baskervilles (reported by Jeff Bradway, who lives in Pittsfield) (as did I, in the distant past).
22196. There's no mention of plumber's rockets, but Britain's National Archives reported on toilet design <www.tinyurl.com/ya6p668n>; scroll down to see what was available in 1887.
22197. The new season of the French television series "Lupin" will launch on Netflix on Oct. 5. Omar Sy plays Assane Diop, a present-day gentleman thief inspired by Maurice Leblanc's Arsène Lupin; the series is well done indeed (although so far Sherlockian only for brief glimpses in one episode of a book-cover poster for Arsène Lupin contre Sherlock Holmes). The official trailer is available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cPLyU0tk80>.
22198. All of the Arsène Lupin stories are still in print; there's a ten-volume collection <www.tinyurl.com/3mnf78dh>, and The Best Stories of Arsène Lupin <www.tinyurl.com/5n94b6xm> that Amazon describes as "based on the popular Netflix series!" (but of course it's the other way round).
22199. Jennie Paton spotted a YouTube video about a Sherlockian subscription box available from Cromwell and Taylor <www.youtube.com/watch?v=gSUTMOKw9Kg>; the company specializes in cross-stitch patterns, supplies, and much more, and the subscription box is one of four Sherlock Holmes items you can order at their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3bkb4t2a>.
22200. The table of contents, and the editorial, in the summer 2023 issue of the Baker Street Journal are up at the BSJ web-site <www.tinyurl.com/3cmfvb7k> and there's still time to subscribe for 2023 and receive all five issues.
22201. Sherlock Holmes and the Telegram from Hell is the title of the next novel from Nicholas Meyer, Otto Penzler reports. It's based on the famous Zimmermann telegram, intercepted by British intelligence in 1917, which proposed an alliance between Germany and Mexico against the U.S. The book's due from the Mysterious Press in Aug. 2024.
22202. International Autograph Auctions Europe offers an interesting letter Conan Doyle wrote (probably in 1926), saying (in part) that "I was conscious at one time that Holmes was strained & for some years I only wrote one story a year. I can truly say I have never written to order or allowed the money side of it to influence me at all," and added that, "I have not felt him strained in this last series of six. Five of these are done, and I will not do the sixth if I have any reason to think there is a real declension. I have my ear on the ground" <www.tinyurl.com/4rvt8yxt>. It is estimated at €6,000-€10,000.

22203. Francis Feeney, who won fame in Hollywood, is being honored in his home town, Portland, Maine, where he was born in 1881, according to an article Karen Murdock discovered in the Aug. 10 issue of the Bangor Daily News <www.tinyurl.com/2e2a952h>. He moved to Hollywood as a young man, changed his name to Francis Ford, and acted in his first film in 1909; he directed his first film in 1912, and directed, and starred as Sherlock Holmes, in "A Study in Scarlet" (1914). He also had brought his kid brother John to Hollywood and cast him as Dr. Watson in the film; John Ford returned the favor by casting his brother as Dan Tobin (the old man with a beard) in "The Quiet Man" (1953).
22204. Sorry about that. If you had trouble accessing Bernard Nessey's article "A Sheaf of Autographs" in the Apr. 1905 issue of the Royal Magazine (Aug 23 #4), you should go to <www.tinyurl.com/4mdb87nj> and enter 592 in the 1/604 page-search box at the bottom.
22205. It's getting harder and harder for those who smoke to find places they can enjoy pipes and cigars and pipes, but some Sherlockian pipe-smokers will welcome news in the September issue of the Peterson Pipe Notes blog about the "pipe of the year" <www.tinyurl.com/4bnm5wtb>; it's part of Peterson's "Sherlock Holmes Series", and Peterson's own web-site <www.peterson.ie> is well worth exploring.
22206. I hope that somewhere there's a copy of the Garden City edition of The Complete Sherlock Holmes with this bookplate, and there's a story about why the book's not in my collection; I brought the book with me to New York in 1959, to Fordham University to play Sir Henry Baskerville in the Priory Scholars' recording of Chris Steinbrunner's adaptation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for broadcast by WFUV-FM. We rehearsed in the morning, and when we went out for lunch, I left the book behind in the studio; when we came back from lunch, the book had vanished, presumably taken by someone who wanted to read it, since it was no longer a mint, or even a very fine, copy. It had been a faithful companion, since the late 1940s, when I started reading the Baker Street Journal and of course needed a copy of the Canon. It would be wonderful to have the book again, and I would be happy to reward the finder with a newer and nicer copy of the Canon. The bookplates were sold in stores in the 1940s and 1950s, and are still available at Etsy <tinyurl.com/yvznsrwk>, in case you want to try to forge my signature and recreate that long-lost book. But keep in mind that the original will have my DNA on it.
22207. Ellen Fitzhugh died on July 16. She was an accomplished composer and lyricist, nominated for Tony and Emmy awards, and her credits included two songs performed by Vincent Price in the film "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986), in which she also voiced the Bar Maid.
22208. Copies of the Thornwillow Press letter-press printed and hand-bound edition of The Sherlock Holmes Hexalogy (Oct 17 #2) are still available from their web-site <www.thornwillow.com>. And you can read Zach Harney's recent interview with Thornwillow proprietor Luke Ives Pontiffell at the Collectible Book Vault web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ek7mxxkn>.

September 23 #3

22209. Hundreds of people gathered at Loch Ness at the end of August, hoping to find the Loch Ness Monster, but they were unsuccessful <www.tinyurl.com/mryk64x2>. It's nice to recall that some years ago (Apr 16 #5) a Norwegian company deployed an underwater robot equipped with sonar imaging to explore the loch, and located the model of Nessie made for the film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970); the model sank during filming, and BBC News <www.tinyurl.com/zlrkugg> reported on the discovery. There is an additional Sherlockian connection with the monster: Shirley Dickensheet ("Ivy Douglas" in The Baker Street Irregulars), who was working for the Fireman's Fund when the model sank in 1969, noted that the company paid the claim for the loss (and received some nice publicity); anyone who might want to rescue the monster as a Sherlockian souvenir will need to have a discussion with the insurance company.
22210. "Tales from the Darkside: The Movie" (1990), which includes Conan Doyle's "Lot 249", will be reissued in a new 4K Blu-ray & DVD combo pack ($35.99) on Nov. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/4vasci22>.
22211. It would appear that the Library of Congress Copyright Office is digitizing copyright-deposit material that's in the public domain. Here's what they have made available for the William Gillette film "Sherlock Holmes": <www.tinyurl.com/5dxz5sy7>.
22212. The 27-page manuscript of "The Bully of Brocas Court" (with a copy of the story in the November 1921 issue of The Strand Magazine) was offered at RR Auction in Amherst, N.H., on Sept. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/4rcw6rtp>, with an estimate of $50,000; the highest bid was $36,574 (including buyer's premium), which didn't reach the reserve, so the manuscript was bought in.

22213. You can go to www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/bully-brocas-court-2023.htm to see Randall Stock's detailed report on the history of the manuscript.
22214. Reported to be coming up on BBC Two in November: "Sherlock: Lucy Worsley on Holmes vs. Doyle" (a three-part series); according to the Bradford Telegraph & Argus www.tinyurl.com/mv94jt7v and www.tinyurl.com/389ff85s, scenes for the third episode (which will include the Cottingley Fairies) have been filmed at Cottingley Beck. Her blog about "Why I Love Sherlock Holmes" is at www.lucyworsley.com/why-i-love-sherlock-holmes, and it's likely that the series will be broadcast on PBS-TV, which has aired many of her past historical programs.
22215. "The Adventure of the Ignoble Bachelor" is the latest Baker Street Elementary comic book from the hands of Joe Faye, Rusty Mason, and Steve Mason, available (as are all of their comic books) at www.tinyurl.com/3cmfvb7k.
22216. Bob Barker died on Aug. 26. He began his long career as a television game show host on "Truth or Consequences" in 1956, and presided over "The Price is Right" from 1975 to 2007; when he retired from the program he told reporters, "The question that I'm hearing most often is why did I choose to retire just now. In December I became 83 years old, and I want to retire while I'm still young." You can see him in action in "The Price Is Right" in 1984, in a segment titled "The Great Sherlock Solmes" (with Janice Pennington in Sherlockian costume) www.youtube.com/watch?v=0z3VafiRzNo.

22217. He's back! Sherlock Holmes has returned to Picardy Place in Edinburgh. The life-sized bronze sculpture by Gerald Ogilvie Laing, which was installed in 1991 in Picardy Place (where Conan Doyle was born in 1859), and then placed in storage during the redevelopment of its traffic-island site, has been refurbished and welcomed back by members of the local council, Tania Henzell (designer of the Conan Doyle tartan), and Barry Young (of the Sherlock Holmes Society of Scotland. You can read all about it in the Edinburgh Reporter (Sept. 13) www.tinyurl.com/yeym296r, and watch video at www.dailymotion.com/video/x8o1ptf. On Sept. 15 the Edinburgh Live web-site www.tinyurl.com/2u6vhfeh had more about Picardy Place and Conan Doyle. Robert Stek reported on "The Secret of Sherlock's Statue" on May 18, 2015, at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog www.tinyurl.com/yu5wdtxu.
22218. The September issue of The Bilge Pump (the newsletter of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star), is available at www.tinyurl.com/42acdv7v, including a reprint of William A. Walsh's interesting article about "Harrison Schmitt: Bringing Holmes to the Moon".
22219. George F. Burrows ("Dr. Grimesby Roylott" in the BSI) appeared on the CBS-TV television series "To Tell the Truth" (July 5, 1965); you can watch the program at www.youtube.com/watch?v=MGzCe9PQGyg (if you don't feel like watching the entire show, his segment starts at 18:00). Kindly reported by Ann Marlowe.
22220. Arup K. Chatterjee's article about "Sherlock in India" in the Kolkata Telegraph (Aug. 30) www.tinyurl.com/3ft5c883 is his latest discussion of the Indian aspects of the Canon, and his web-site at www.arupkchatterjee.com includes links to seven other Sherlockian articles and paper.
22221. Bishop's Orchards in Guilford, Conn., have chosen a Sherlock Holmes theme for its three-acre corn maize this year www.tinyurl.com/mprcwkf4.
22222. Gayle Hunnicutt died on Aug. 31. Born in Texas, she acted in college and made her professional debut on television in 1966; she then moved to England and had a long career there, most notably (for us) as a stellar Irene Adler in Granada's "A Scandal in Bohemia" (1984).
22223. The Criterion Restaurant, where young Stamford helped Watson find someone to share rooms with (in "A Study in Scarlet"), has re-opened yet again: it now is an Indian restaurant: the Masala Zone Piccadilly Circus, which has a web-site at www.tinyurl.com/657tps7b; there was an enthusiastic review in the Guardian (Sept. 3) www.tinyurl.com/56krmj5s, but there's no word (yet) whether the commemorative plaque installed by the Inverness Capers has survived.
22224. Sharon Lynn's Death Takes a Bath (Level Best, 2022; 295 pp., $16.96), set in historic Bath, features (according to one reviewer) "an intrepid heroine, a dishy policeman, and a rabbit." It also begins with an homage to "The Cardboard Box" and includes bits and pieces from other stories. The author's web-site is at www.sharonlwrites.com.

22225. Watson reported (in "The Bruce-Partington Plans") that Holmes had undertaken a monograph "upon the Polyphonic Motets of Lassus." There are recordings of his polyphonic motets, but they're not often performed live; you can hear some of them sung by Chantry in Washington, D.C. on Feb. 25, 2024 www.chantrydc.org/concert-2. There's also an informative interview with Ann Margaret Lewis about Lassus and his music on the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog www.tinyurl.com/2h4scasp.
22226. As noted earlier (Jul 23 #5), The Best Mystery Stories of the Year, edited by Amor Towles (Mysterious Press, 2023); includes Derrick Belanger's "The Adventure of the Misquoted Macbeth"; it also features Towles' insightful and entertaining introduction "All Hail the Long-Suffering Cadaver", which you can read at www.tinyurl.com/47ez5bw7.
22227. The Beacon Society has announced its 2023 Nancy Springer Creative Writing Contest (honoring the author of the Enola Holmes series), with prizes for the best original Sherlock Holmes story written by a student in grades 7 through 12; details at www.tinyurl.com/y6v8ef3d.
22228. Hartwood Films, founded by the late Beryl Vertue in 1979, is the production company responsible for the "Sherlock" television series that starred Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman; it is now seeking a buyer or an investor to support its fast-growing operations, according to an article in The Times (Aug. 27). In the twelve months ending in March 2022, Hartwood reported sales of £51 million and a profit of close to £8 million, and paid out dividends of £3.2 million.
22229. There's a crime wave in Minstead: "Villagers who have been left terrorized by masked gangs have launched 'Operation Sherlock' to fight back against the crooks in honour of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle who is buried at the local church," according to an article published in the Daily Express on Sept. 13 www.tinyurl.com/aywdxwd6 (with video of the burglars). The BBC News story (Sept. 20) www.bbc.com/news/articles/cy9wxk0wd79o shows the operation's Sherlockian poster
22230. The "Holmes in the Heartland: Arch Enemies" conference in St. Louis was a success, with more than 90 people on hand for the festivities; there is a nicely illustrated report on the goings-on at the web-site of the Parallel Case of St. Louis www.tinyurl.com/msuwjnks.
22231. Treefort Media's new audio mini-series "Moriarty: The Silent Game" will be available at Audible on Nov. 9; it follows last year's "Moriarty: The Devil's Game", starring Dominic Monaghan (Moriarty), Phil LaMarr (Holmes) and Curtis Armstrong (Gregson), and with Helen Mirren as Lady Milverton ("the worst woman in London"). The Hollywood Reporter published a preview (with a link to an audio trailer) on Aug. 30 www.tinyurl.com/2s43cwz5.
22232. Arturo Pérez-Reverte's El Problema Final (Alfaguara, 2023) is his latest Sherlockian novel, so far available only in Spanish, at Amazon US and UK. There certainly will be a translation into English, but in the meantime, here's a summary in Spanish and English www.tinyurl.com/6aeytf77.

22233. This month's Whanganui Literary Festival (in New Zealand) included "Dear 26: The Art of the Letter", with 26 writers asked to create letters written by their choices of fictional characters, each starting with the same randomly assigned letter of the alphabet. You can read them here www.dear26.com, including the correspondence between Sam Spade and Sherlock Holmes.
22234. Would you like to be a Baron? There's a Barony for sale (it comes with a castle and a country house) www.tinyurl.com/37fkpr3u.
22235. It was in 1985 that Vincent Price first provided commentary for Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" television series on "Mystery" on PBS-TV. Jennie Paton reports that his prologues and epilogues for the first four programs can be seen at YouTube www.youtube.com/watch?v=yc-9ZtHuAeo.
22236. "What does it mean to be a fan?" Kira Deschler asked, posting to the Daily Dot web-site on Sept. 24 www.tinyurl.com/yf477wz8, and she suggests that a fandom "is a group of people who are similarly passionate about a piece of pop culture and create a community based on this shared interest."
22237. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Kam and James Morris Theatre in Lakeway, Tex., through Oct. 15 www.tex-arts.org. It also has been scheduled at the Hillbarn Theatre in Foster City, Calif., Oct. 5-22 www.hillbarntheatr.org; at the Gem Theater in Mulberry, Fla., Oct. 27 - Nov. 5 www.themissingpiecetheatre.org; and at the Sagebrush Theatre in Kamloops, B.C., Jan. 25 to Feb. 23, 2024 www.sagebrushtheatre.ca.

In plenty of time for holiday hinting (or shopping), Randall Stock's annual informative nominations for the best Sherlock Holmes books/DVDs of the year goes on-line at www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm on Nov. 1; there also are recommendations of older Sherlockiana, all with helpful explanations of his choices.
22247. Laurie R. King is celebrating the 30th anniversary of her first Mary Russell novel The Beekeeper's Apprentice, and the publication of the latest novel The Lantern's Dance with a series of "Russell and Holmes" days to be held in Santa Cruz, Calif. (Feb. 17); Seattle, Wash. (Apr. 10); Bethesda, Md. (Apr. 25), and Nashville, Tenn. (Aug. 27), with the last three timed for Left Coast Crime, Malice Domestic, and Bouchercon. Details and registration links for the events will be found in Laurie's latest newsletter www.tinyurl.com/ydjzdhzs.
22248. The book collection of Rolling Stones drummer Charlie Watts, at Christie's in London on Sept. 28-29, set some records: a copy of the first edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles signed by Conan Doyle and inscribed "I perambulated Dartmoor before I wrote this book" sold for £214,200 [$226,555] (including the buyer's premium), setting a record for a printed book from the Canon (a copy of The Sign of Four sold for $201,600 in 2022); the most ever paid for a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 was $156,000 at an auction in 2007.
22249. The copy of The Hound of the Baskervilles wasn't the most expensive book in the auction: a copy of The Great Gatsby signed by F. Scott Fitzgerald and inscribed to Harold Goldman (as "the original 'Gatsby' of this story") sold for £226,800.
22250. There were other Sherlockian books in the sale, including a presentation copy of the first American edition of A Study in Scarlet (1890), inscribed in 1891 "With A Conan Doyle's kindest recollections of pleasant partnership in travel" which sold for £32,760. You can view the catalogue of the sale at www.tinyurl.com/mr29ikrb.

22253. Andrew Lycett's The Worlds of Sherlock Holmes (London: Frances Lincoln, 2023; 207 pp., $32.00) is an account of "the inspirations behind the world's greatest detective." Author of the excellent biography Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (2007) as well as the collection Conan Doyle's Wide World (2020), Lycett provides an impressive and colorfully-illustrated discussion of how Holmes was created, and why he continues to fascinate each new generation of readers. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder interviewed Lycett about the new book (and much more) at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog www.tinyurl.com/2945an94.
22254. "Sherlock Holmes Could Teach Washington about Budgeting" was the headline on Peter Coy's lead opinion piece in the N.Y. Times on Oct. 2, according to Mike Berdan, who added, "Alas, there is not much Holmes in it, just his aphorism about eliminating the impossible." The headline appeared only in the print edition.
22255. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a booklet of stamps showing Winter Woodland Animals, with images of a [white-tailed] deer, a rabbit, an owl, and a fox. All of them are mentioned in the Canon. Four out of four isn't all that bad.
22256. "Things get green, slimy, and sticky with ghost photography," according to an article in the Manitoban (Sept. 28) about an exhibit www.tinyurl.com/nwr24xwd at the University of Manitoba. "The Undead Archive: 100 Years of Photographing Ghosts" is based on photographs taken by a Winnipeg doctor and nurse who were inspired by Conan Doyle's lecture on "Proofs of Immortality" in Winnipeg a hundred years ago.
22257. R. Hamilton Wright's two-act play "Sherlock Holmes and the American Problem" was first performed in 2016; the script, published by Samuel French in 2022, is one of many Sherlockian scripts available from Concord Theatricals www.concordtheatricals.com.

22258. "If you haven't figured out that in every version of Sherlock Holmes ever made that sex for Sherlock is crime solving, then you're not paying attention," Stephen Moffat said, during an interview published in the Glasgow Guardian (Sept. 8) <www.tinyurl.com/yc7tt6fz>.
22259. Howard Ostrom's "A-Z List of Sherlock Holmes Performers" now has more than 9,000 entries (with about 20,000 images); the list is available on-line at <www.nplh.co.uk/a-z-index.html>.
22260. School of Hard Knox, edited by Donna Andrews, Greg Herren, and Art Taylor (Cincinnati: Crippen and Landru, 2023; 200 pp., $47.00 cloth/$22.00 paper) is an anthology of new stories that break one (or more) of Ronald Knox's ten commandments for crime fiction. Daniel Stashower's "The Forlorn Penguin" is intriguingly Sherlockian, and Peter Lovesey, in his poetic "Knox Vomica" has great fun with just about every detective in the genre. The hardbound edition, which is signed and numbered, has a laid-in reprint of Knox's delightful Sherlockian pastiche "The Adventure of the First Class Carriage". The publisher's web-site's a <www.tinyurl.com/9367hac7>.

22264. The Public Domain Review recently posted on-line an interesting discussion of "modern slang, cant, and vulgar words" that one might encounter in London in 1860 <www.tinyurl.com/yedj3uxf>.
22265. "The Four Oaks Mystery" featuring Jeremy Brett (Sherlock Holmes) and Edward Hardwicke (Dr. Watson) was one of four segments created for ITV's 28-hour charity telethon that aired on July 16-17, 1992. It's available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/nwr24xwd>, kindly reported by Jennie Paton. The other segments, all available at YouTube, featured Inspector Piet Van der Valk, Taggart, and Chief Detective Inspector Reginald Wexford; in case you want to see the solution to the mystery.
22266. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter published by the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Gary Thaden's discussion of a letter Conan Doyle wrote to Minneapolis in 1923, Philip Bergem's report on August Derleth's The Chronicles of Solar Pons (1973), news from and about the collections, and (most important) a multi-page tribute to Julie McKuras, who edited 92 issues of the newsletter before retiring from the editor's chair. Copies of the newsletter can be requested from Timothy Johnson (#15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <johns976@umn.com>.

22269. Howard Ostrom has added "Spooks!" (1953) to the list of films in which the Three Stooges are seen in Sherlockian costume, and it's available at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y22AOPwxvZU>. The other films on the list are "Horses' Collars" (1935), "We Want Our Mummy" (1939), and "Shivering Sherlocks" (1948). Warning: the Three Stooges are an acquired taste now, but they were featured in 190 short comedies made by the Columbia Pictures Corp. and were highly regarded, once upon a time.
22270. "New views of Peking with Vincent and Ray" (the latest entry in Ray Betzner's "Studies in Starrett" blog) <www.tinyurl.com/2p9hybnm> is a splendid example of how much fun can be had from an accidental discovery (in this case, an archive of photographs from a trip to the Orient by Vincent Starrett and his wife in the 1930s).
22271. Vincent Price's prologues and epilogues for three more programs in Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" television series on "Mystery" on PBS-TV have been made available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=EEl4tYUxulQ>.
22272. Tim Major's pastiche Sherlock Holmes & the Twelve Thefts of Christmas (New York: Titan, 2022; 275 pp., $19.99) is an imaginative Christmas story that involves a cunning Christmas challenge set by Irene Adler upon Holmes, and cases brought to him by Norwegian explorer Fridtjof Nansen, and Edward and Lillie Langtry.
22273. The latest list (#6) from Type Punch Matrix of material from Curtis Armstrong's collection is now on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/yckp293a>. Unsold material from earlier lists also is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/mr4cx2u2>.
22274. The Wall Street Journal reported on Oct. 17 that Netflix is expanding its focus on games to include higher-end games that can be streamed from TVs or PCs, and that Netflix is discussing games based on "its Sherlock Holmes series." It's not at all clear what that series might be, other than the two Robert Downey Jr. films.
22275. Steve Trussel's web-sites on detectives on stamps have long been valued by Sherlockian and Doylean philatelists, and it was sad indeed to learn from Max Magee that Steve died on June 26, 2020. His interests were varied, as you can see from his web-site <www.trussel.com>, and it's nice to see that his web-site and many lists will be kept on-line (although not updated) so people will be able to see how much he accomplished.
22276. An Entertainment Memorabilia Live Auction in London on Nov. 9-12 will include five lots of interesting props that were used in Robert Downey Jr.'s "Sherlock Holmes" films <www.tinyurl.com/3832apu5>.
22277. Mark Gatiss is dramatizing Conan Doyle's "Lot No. 249" for broadcast by BBC Two at Christmas, according to a story in the Hollywood Reporter (Oct. 19) <www.tinyurl.com/55h5dhck>. And a report at the Deadline web-site (Oct. 19) <www.tinyurl.com/4u3kv79f>, the program will star Kit Harrington (Abercrombie Smith) and Freddie Fox (Edward Bellingham). The story was featured on Mark Jones and Paul M. Chapman's "Doings of Doyle" podcast on Aug. 27 <www.tinyurl.com/3pr3h8y4>.

22278. James Lovegrove's The Cthulhu Casebooks: Sherlock Holmes and 22279. the Highgate Horrors (New York: Titan, 2023; 509 pp., $22.95) is the fourth title in his Cthulhu Casebooks trilogy. And yes, it was a trilogy, until he found yet another Watson manuscript. The series is of course a tribute to H. P. Lovecraft, and the new book pits Holmes and Watson against the

- Mi-go (the race of extraterrestrials created by Lovecraft in 1931) and offers radically new versions of some of the Canonical cases. Lovegrove has written other more-traditional pastiches, as well as non-Sherlockian fiction, and his web-site's at <www.jameslovegrove.com>.
22280. Historian and presenter Lucy Worsley will host a BBC Two series "Killing Sherlock: Lucy Worsley on the Case of Conan Doyle", according to the BBC media center (Oct. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/3e2nnwfn>. There will be three one-hour episodes, due in December on BBC Two and PBS-TV.
22281. Street art has a long history, and it includes real humor; street artist EFIX (François Xavier Donguy) has had some non-Sherlockian fun, kindly reported by Samantha Wolov <www.tinyurl.com/2p8ax248>.
22282. Ann Kimbrough has launched the Sherlocki-Anns (for Sherlockians named Ann or Anne); they honor Ann Adler (the younger sister of the much more famous Irene Adler) and meet three times a year via Zoom (anyone can be an honorary member <travelswithsherlock.com/sherlocki-anns>).
22283. Howard Ostrom has reported a new statue of Sherlock Holmes, at the British Antique Museum in Kamakura (Japan). It celebrates that one-year anniversary of the opening of the museum, which features a recreation of the sitting room at 221B Baker Street. The statue is the latest addition to Howard's comprehensive (and nicely illustrated) essay "The World of Sherlock Holmes Statues" <www.nplh.co.uk/sherlock-statues.html>.
22284. Haydn Gwynne died on Oct. 20. She began her acting career on stage in the U.K., and went on to appear in many roles on television and radio, including Miss Wenceslas in "The Great Game" (2010) in the "Sherlock" television series.
22285. Col. Heeza Liar starred in a lengthy series of short live-action animated films created by Vernon Stallings during the silent-film era. You can see him in a deerstalker in "Col. Heeza Liar, Detective" (1923) found by Howard Ostrom at <www.tinyurl.com/5n7pkz2d>.
22286. American Theatre magazine's Oct. 18 report on the 20 most-produced play-wrights of the 2023-24 season has three playwrights who have Sherlockian credits: Ken Ludwig (#2), Kate Hamill (#6), and Jeffrey Hatcher (#7); details at <www.tinyurl.com/yc8xwpuv>.

22288. Many Sherlockians made a pilgrimage to Barts, where Dr. Watson first met Sherlock Holmes, but those who have visited St. Bartholomew's Hospital may not have visited St. Bartholomew-the-Great, the nearby church; the hospital and the church are celebrating their 900th anniversaries this year, and Country Life had a nicely-illustrated article about the church (Oct. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/yxj2p7bm>.
22289. "Der Mann, der Sherlock Holmes war" (1937) was one of the best Sherlockian films from Germany, readily available on-line; Jennie Paton has discovered a two-minute trailer for the film at <www.dailymotion.com/video/x8oxdgc>. The complete film (subtitled in English) is at <www.tinyurl.com/yvzyxvnx>.
22290. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Plowright Theatre in Scunthorpe, Lincs., through Nov. 4 <www.thehospitalplayers.co.uk>. It also is due at the Festival Stage during the Alabama Shakespeare Festival in Montgomery, Ala., on Apr. 15-May 12 <www.asf.net>; and at the Ron Maslin Playhouse in Kanata, Ont., May 15-25 <www.kanatatheatre.ca>.
22291. Orson Welles' "Sherlock Holmes" radio-style production at the Tighthead Brewery in Mundelein, Ill., will have an additional performance; it's now due on Nov. 5 and 12 <www.kirkwoodplayers.org>.

22298. The Priory Scholars have announced an additional event during the birthday festivities in New York: the return of the Gaslight Gala, on Friday, Jan. 12, from 6:00 to 10:00 pm; details at <www.gaslightgalanyc.wordpress.com>.
22299. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner (described as "The Mongoose Munch") will be held in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons on Jan. 20; there's more information (and an opportunity to book for the event) at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/event/annual-dinner-2024>.
22300. Nancy Springer's Enola Holmes and the Mark of the Mongoose (New York: Wednesday Books, 2023; 296 pp, $20.00) is the ninth in her series about Sherlock Holmes' sister. Enola, now on her own as a scientific perditioner, has to work hard and resourcefully to rescue Rudyard Kipling's good friend Wolcott Balestier. His sister Caroline Balestier also appears (people who know a bit about Kipling are aware that eventually he and Caroline marry, but that's not in the book).
22301. The Collider web-site reported on Nov. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/52aace9n> that Netflix chairman Scott Stuber has said in an interview that "we're working once again" on a screenplay for a third "Enola Holmes" film.
22302. "København's Sherlock Holmes" [Copenhagen's Sherlock Holmes] is a Danish silent film released in 1925. Only the title is Sherlockian, but Jennie Paton has reported the film at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vnUWZt-s74> (with Danish title intertitles).
22303. Mark Shanahan's two-act play "A Sherlock Carol" (an imaginative blend of Dickens and Conan Doyle) was originally produced off-Broadway in November 2021 and has had other productions since then; the script is now available from the Dramatists Play Service <www.dramatists.com> along with many other Sherlockian plays.
22304. Hopalong Basil stars as the detective in Arturo Pérez-Reverte's new novel El Problema Final, so far available only in Spanish, but Amazon gives you a hint of what it's all about <www.tinyurl.com/yf4vrj76>; Google Translate will be of assistance to those who aren't fluent in Spanish.

22305. "That's Hollywood" was a 1970s 30-minute series broadcast by WABC-TV (New York) and other stations; Jennie Paton has found their "The Amazing Sherlock Holmes" program at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=4aYNN79cwg>.
22306. The television series "Sherlock's Daughter", which was green-lit by Starlings Television in 2021 (Jan 21 #3), now has funding: C21 Media reported on Nov. 6 <www.tinyurl.com/4r2mbbh7> that the series (now titled "Sherlock & Daughter") has been bought by networks in Finland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Iceland, and Australia, and production is expected to begin in February. "A young American woman, after the mysterious murder of her mother, travels to London to track down her biological father, the legendary Sherlock Holmes, who isn't the mythological figure she has come to expect."

22308. Robert Sharfman notes that while golf is mentioned only in passing in the Canon, it was quite important to those who enjoy "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and he plans to found a Sherlockian society for people who play (or are interested in) golf, with a possible event in the Midwest. He also suggests that non-golfers will be welcome as caddies, or as drivers of the beer cart. You can contact him at <robertsharfman@gmail.com>.
22309. Monica Schmidt spoke about "Dr. John H. Watson's Invisible War" this month at the University of Nebraska's Leon S. McGoogan Health Sciences Library <www.tinyurl.com/5anntmxn>; she notes that usually she speaks to Sherlockians who don't have clinical knowledge, but this time she was speaking to clinicians who don't have deep knowledge of the Canon.
22310. Sidney Paget's signed watercolor painting of Conway Castle was at auction at Tennants in England on Nov. 3 <www.tinyurl.com/n33r7w88>, estimated at £100-£150. It sold for £160.
22311. "Meitantei Conan" [Detective Conan] was first a Japanese manga comic-book series created by Gyosho Aoama, and then developed into a long-running animated television series, animated films, and much more; Shinichi Kudo is a 17-year-old master detective who is turned by villains into a child and assumes the name Conan Edogawa (in tribute to Arthur Conan Doyle and Edgar Allan Poe) and pursues evil-doers. The English-language version is called "Case Closed". The manga series has been serialized in Weekly Shonen Sunday since 1994 and has more than 270 million copies in print world-wide; the anime television series was launched in 1996 and now has more than a thousand episodes, plus two-dozen movies and video games, and much more, and Wikipedia <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Case_Closed> has a long and informative entry. You can watch the television series at Crunchyroll and Apple TV+.
22312. The geese have returned to Baker Street! The illuminated geese first appeared four years ago (Nov 19 #6), and they are again celebrating Christmas by reminding passersby of "The Blue Carbuncle". You can see images of this year's installation at <www.tinyurl.com/38xw5mc8>.
22313. 22314. Conan Doyle: Mystery and Adventure, by Mark Jones (Handsworth Wood: Kaleidoscope, 2023; 384 pp., $35.00) is a filmography of the 1967 BBC-2 television series that dramatized 13 of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories. The series was created and developed by John Hawkesworth (who years later did the same for Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series), and it is sad indeed that only one of the programs is known to have survived: it's "The Mystery of Cader Ifan" [The Surgeon of Gaster Fell], locked away on Betacam tape in the vaults of the British Film Institute. Mark has done a spectacular job of researching and writing about the series, pursuing production notes, scripts, correspondence, and reviews, and you can order from Lulu <www.tinyurl.com/46v9dc9v>. You can also listen to Mark's presentation on "Conan Doyle and John Hawkesworth" to the Sydney Passengers (July 30, 2023) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=EVj97B4xqXU>.
22315. It's possibly a first: a Sherlockian virtual-reality film from Dillmeadow Media <www.tinyurl.com/bdedfyhk>. "Mrs. Sherlock Holmes" is a 13-minute VR film that was presented at the Belfast Film Festival on Nov. 4-5.
22316. Masamichi Migurashi's new Sherlock Holmes Bible: A 170-Year Story of the Eternal Detective <www.tinyurl.com/nvw62h7a> (published by Hayakawa Shobo in Japanese in 2022) has won the Mystery Writers of Japan award for "the best critical and research work" (and this is the first time that a Sherlockian work has won an award from the MWJ since it was founded 76 years ago). Needless to say, Sherlockians outside of Japan will be waiting impatiently for a translation of Mitch's book.
22317. The Agra Treasurers' ninth "Holmes, Doyle, and Friends" conference will be held at the Airport Clarion Inn in Dayton, Ohio, on Mar. 22-23; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/38xfepvf> (with links to programs for previous conferences).
22318. Bill D'Agostino's new one-act play "Teen Sherlock" has an amusing premise: "New kid Sherlock arrives at Baskerville High School just in time to solve the mystery of the missing hamster Conan. Can he and his new friend Jane Watson figure it out before it is too late? Cheetos, jokes, and misdirection are all involved in this fast-paced mystery." It's nicely done, and available for licensing. If you are interested, you can contact Bill at <williamdag@gmail.com>.
22319. The Rathbones, a rock 'n roll band founded in the early 1990s, named themselves in honor of Basil Rathbone, and this month they were inducted into the Iowa Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame, as reported in the Des Moines Register (Nov. 14) <www.tinyurl.com/mr2sny2f>; they have a Facebook page (with some videos) at <www.facebook.com/p/The-Rathbones-100063586807820>.
22320. Quite a few of the old black-and-white films have been colorized and made available at YouTube and elsewhere by companies that pursue films not protected by copyright, and a colorized version of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) was (briefly) posted on-line this month before being taken down when the owner of the copyright complained. And yes, it's true that a film made in 1916 is in the public domain, but not the restoration released by Flicker Alley in 2019 (with new intertitles in English).
22321. November 23 #4 The Weird Cat, edited by Katherine Kerestman and S. T. Joshi (Cody: Word-Crafts, 2023; 340 pp., $33.99), is an anthology of stories, essays, poems, and letters devoted (according to the editors) to the "beautiful, lovable, and enigmatic entities who straddle the world in which humans dwell and another beyond our ken." The contents include Conan Doyle's "The Brazilian Cat".
22322. One of Disney's production-used 8 1/4-inch maquettes of The Great Mouse Detective (aka Basil of Baker Street) will be offered at Heritage Auctions on Dec. 8 <www.tinyurl.com/y9r79sek>. A similar maquette sold last year for $5,760 (including the buyer's premium (Feb 22 #3)).

22323. "If Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes tales describe a detective who, from a few stray facts, sees through baffling mysteries, his 'Coming of the Fairies' tells the story of a man who, with all the facts in the world, cannot see what is right before his face." That's according to Daniel Immerwahr, in his review of Walter J. Scheirer's A History of Fake Things on the Internet (Stanford University Press, 2023) in the New Yorker (Nov. 20); you may be able to read the full review on-line at the magazine's web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/3hjpx23b>.
22324. The autumn issue of The Magic Door (published by the friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) has Douglas Kerr's report on the new edition of Conan Doyle's Memories and Adventures (which he edited for the Edinburgh University Press), A. J. Low's article about the "Sherlock Sam" children's mystery series, and much more. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb (Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto M4W 2G8, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
22325. Peter McIntyre reports that Dr. Doyle did very well at Laurel Park on Nov. 11, finishing first by 7 lengths. He has a record overall: you can see his statistics at <www.tinyurl.com/46m2usck>.
22326. John F. Baesch ("State and Merton County Railroad") died on Nov. 14. He was a fervent railroad enthusiast and had a long career with Amtrak, and a fervent Sherlockian as an energetic member of many Sherlockian societies on the east coast. He also was a frequent contributor to our literature, and received his thoroughly apt Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1998.
22327. Fans of the 1979 Russian "Sherlock Holmes" television series might enjoy a Nov. 11 article about the battles between Vasily Livanov (Holmes) and series director Igor Maslennikov <www.tinyurl.com/yeymuwve>; there's a convenient English translation at <www.tinyurl.com/a747at5h>.
22328. Video of Jennet Conant's lecture on "The Irregulars: Baker Street Spies in Wartime Washington" at the Atlanta History Center in 2008 is now available at <www.tinyurl.com/5ets3wae>. The title of her book actually was The Irregulars: Roald Dahl and the British Spy Ring in War-Time Washington; Jon Lellenberg noted in 2008 that the spies in Washington were members of the British Security Coordination (BSC), and that it was the Special Operations Executive (SOE) that had its headquarters in offices in Baker Street.

22329. Laurie R. King's The Lantern's Dance (New York: Bantam, 2024; 298 pp., $28.99) is billed as "a novel of suspense featuring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes," but it's much more than that. Russell and Holmes are in France, dealing with a dire threat against his son Damian Adler, and in the course of the story we learn far more about Holmes' family history than is hinted at in the Canon. No spoilers here (and it's difficult to say much more about the book without spoilers), but if you'd like to see Horace Vernet's painting "The Artist and his Companions traveling in the Desert" (now in the Wallace Collection in London), an image is on-line <www.tinyurl.com/4cka3xr4>. Laurie also blogs about the book at her web-site <www.laurierking.com>.
22330. The latest issue (#32) of the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Magazine offers the usual nice selection of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian articles, fiction, and artwork, among them "The Perplexing Problem of the Puzzling Proposition" (an examination by mathematician Brent Morris of the Canon's mention of Euclid); the cost is $13.00 (or $39.99 for four issues) from the Wildside Press <www.wildsidepress.com>.
22331. Aziz bin Adam has kindly forwarded an article in the Malaysian Star (Nov. 4) <www.tinyurl.com/y8pps55h> about an eight-hour tour of Dartmoor led by Alex Braeme, great-grandson of Robert Duins Cooke, who was the local vicar in 1901; the tour includes the cemetery at Ashburton and the gravesite of Harry Baskerville, Fletcher Robinson's coachman (whom Conan Doyle thanked for the use of his name when the book was written). There is more about Graeme and his tour in the autumn 2018 issue of Dartmoor Magazine, which is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/4bkpwpcs>.
22332. Joss Ackland died on Nov. 19. He made his stage debut in 1945, appeared in his first film in 1949, debuted on television on in 1957, and went on to a long and successful acting career; when he retired from the stage in 2010, he was credited by the Daily Express with having been in more plays than any other living actor. He had many Sherlockian roles, and you can read about them, and much more, at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/ymrhxhtr>.
22333. So Far Down Queer Street, an on-line journal that focuses on "Aspects of the Sherlockian canon and adaptations that are not ordinarily discussed in scholarly work," was launched last year (Aug 22 #2); they're now up to the third issue, with the fourth scheduled for next year. Their web-site's at <www.downqueerstreet.com>, with links to all three issues.
22334. KD Sherrinford's Meet Me in Milan (Extasy Books, 2023; 105 pp., $7.25) is the third in her "Sherlock Holmes and Irene Adler" series (Feb 23 #3); it is a romantic novel that starts with Holmes away in London and Adler needing to prove the innocence of her friend Renata, who has been accused of attempting to murder her husband Luigi. The game's afoot, with plenty of deception and intrigue, and (after Holmes returns to Milan) a successful conclusion to the mystery. Sherrinford has a colorful Facebook page on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/mr2d9scf>, and you can read more about the author and her books at <www.tinyurl.com/35hpeyhw>.

22335. Sherlock Holmes (Scott Shelby) and Dr. Watson (Jobeth Devera) will be among the many performers at the Great Dickens Christmas Fair & Victorian Holiday Party at the Cow Palace in Daly City, Calif., weekends through Dec. 17. Daly City is just south of San Francisco; the event's web-site is at <www.dickensfair.com>, and you can see Holmes and Watson promoting the fair at <www.tinyurl.com/yhdny2ur>.
22336. Jennie Paton has reported the entire Russian "Sherlock Holmes" television series (2013) with Igor Petrenko as Holmes and Andrei Panin as Watson on-line at <www.youtube.com/@BE4EPKuHO/videos>. The series was not popular in Russia, where fans much preferred the 1979-1986 series with Vasilii Livanov and Vitaliy Solomon. Try using the settings feature to auto-translate the subtitles into English.
22337. If you've not yet ordered a Sherlockian calendar for 2024, here's a link to one offered by the Strand Magazine <www.tinyurl.com/ysaxx3wx>; you're also welcome to explore their shop and blog.
22338. Sherlock Holmes continues to be popular with commercial publishers of novels for young adults: Publishers Weekly noted on Nov. 13 that Little, Brown has bought two YA novels from Clair M. Andrews. The first will be A Beau-tiful and Terrible Murder, set for winter 2025; Holmes and Adler "must work together to hunt down a murderer at Oxford who is killing classmates, one by one, in ways more gruesome than the next."
22339. Theatrics: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is running at the Pavilion Theatre in Castle Hills, N.S.W., through Dec. 9 <www.paviliontheatre.org.au>. It will also be produced at the Doraville Civic Center in Doraville, Ga., on Feb. 23-Mar. 10 <www.merelyplayerspresents.com>.
22340. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is being performed at the St. Croix Festival Theatre in St. Croix Falls, Wis., through Dec. 17 <www.festivaltheatre.org>; also at the Unity Theatre in Brenham, Tex., through Dec. 17 <www.unitybrenham.org>. It's also due at the Dorset Playhouse in Dorset, Vt., Dec. 1-10 <www.dorsetplayers.org>; The Barn in Skippack, Pa., Dec. 1-16 <www.playcrafters.org>; the Lincoln Park Performing Arts Center in Midland, Pa., Dec. 1-17 <www.lincolnparkarts.org>; the Polo Town Hall in Polo, Ind., Dec. 1-9 <www.polotheatre.org>; and the Abbey Players in Abbeville, La., Dec. 8-17 <www.abbeyplayers.com>.

22341. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Pasadena Little Theater in Pasadena, Tex., Dec. 1-17 <www.pasadenalittletheater.org>.
22342. Mark Shanahan's "A Sherlock Carol" will be produced at the Bay Area Stage in Vallejo, Calif., Dec. 1-17 <www.bayareastage.org>.
22343. "Sherlock Holmes and the Poison Wood" (a new rock musical with book, lyrics, and music by P. Burton Morgan and Ben Glasstone) is due at the Watermill Theatre in Newbury, Berks., Feb. 2-Mar. 16 <www.watermill.org.uk>; a short music video is on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v-KVKe6P1MtDI>.
22344. An addition to the birthday festivities in New York: Hal Glatzer's radio-style play "FlatFinders, 1881" at the Coffee House Club (47 Fifth Avenue at 12th Street), on Wednesday, Jan. 10. "How did Holmes and Watson, having just met, really find their flat in Baker Street? With the help of an estate agent, of course!" Admission at 3:00 pm is free, with no-host refreshments available, and the 30-minute play will start at 4:00 pm. Hal's web-site's at <www.halglatzer.com>.

22345. And for those who won't be in New York on Jan. 12, Brad Keefauver reports that The Dangling Prussian will be opening its virtual doors the evening of Jan. 12; details at <www.sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com> or from Brad by e-mail <bradkeefauver@comcast.net>.
22346. There was an interview with Guy Charles Owen, the manager of The Langham in London, at the Hotel Management web-site on Nov. 17; it is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/49rnyyus>. He said that his favorite "signature suite" is the Tower Suite, spread over three different levels in one of the corner turrets, and with an homage to Conan Doyle, a "former guest of the hotel." He did dine there on Aug. 30, 1899 (when he was commissioned to write "The Sign of the Four"), and he mentioned the hotel in that story (and in two others in the Canon). There's more information about the Tower Suite at <www.tinyurl.com/2pzcknj> (the going rate is £2,500 a night).
22347. Doyle's World: Lost and Found, by Daniel and Eugene Friedman (Garden City Park: Square One, 2023; 326 pp., $29.95), is sub-titled "the unknown histories of Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," and it's much more than just another biography of Conan Doyle. Their discussion of the parallels between his life and his writings (both Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian) includes new information about the people he encountered, along with interesting conclusions about how they influenced him and his work. Their book also offers reprints of two short stories, published in 1898 in London Society and Belgravia, that they believe Conan Doyle wrote and submitted to the magazines using a pseudonym. The publisher's web-site is at <www.squareonepublishers.com>.
22349. "I have loved watching you. Actually I meant to bring up a performance of yours I particularly remember. When I was doing my National Service, before I had even dreamed of becoming an actor, I saw your marvellous performance as Holmes in 'Hound of the Baskerville [sic]' and I was so taken aback by the precision and perfectionism of that performance, that I clung to that impression a few years later when I became an actor, and used to spend hours rehearsing details on my own." 22350. The Parallelogram, the newsletter of the Parallel Case of St. Louis, found its way into print in 1991 and it's still being published (although now as a blog); Madeline Quiñones' recent article "A Great Heart, Revisited" is an excellent example of what happens when someone takes a thoughtful look at something in the Canon and starts thinking about whether it makes sense (and comes up with a new perspective). You can see for yourself what she wrote, at <www.tinyurl.com/ypasjkve>.
22351. The November issue of A Common Newsletter (bringing tidings from the ACD Society) notes that they have now reached page 6 of their annotated edition of "The Terror of Blue John Gap", which is conveniently available on-line at <www.acdsociety.com/big/a/bjga.html>.
22352. It's not Wisteria Lodge, but Ready Token House in the Cotswolds seems just the place for admirers of wisteria, according to a story in Country Life on Nov. 21 <www.tinyurl.com/3mxt84x>.
22353. Mark Shanahan's play "A Sherlock Carol" seems to have more and more productions each year in the Christmas season, and Fergus Morgan has answered the question "why is theatre so obsessed with Dickens' festive tale?" in a long and interesting post to the web-site of The Stage on Nov. 30; you'll need to sign up (it's free) to read it at <www.tinyurl.com/bdfhyhdc>.
22354. Donald E. Curtis ("Jabez Wilson") died on Nov. 30. After eight years in the U.S. Air Force Security Service monitoring Communist China (for which he received a Badge of Honor from the Chinese government in Taiwan), Don went on to career in medical sales. He presided over the Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis for 25 years, and received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 2000.
22355. Vicki Delany's The Sign of Four Spirits (New York: Crooked Lane, 2024; 277 pp., $29.99), the latest in her series of "Sherlock Holmes Bookshop" mysteries that star Gemma Doyle (proprietor of the Sherlock Holmes bookshop on Cape Cod) and her friend Jayne Wilson (who manages the next-door Mrs. Hudson's Tea Room). The new mystery involves Gemma and Jayne, and their friends, with a medium who's murdered during a séance, and it's a nice addition to her comfortable series. Delany has more than one series going, and her web-site's at <www.vickidelany.com>.
22356. Ray Betzner celebrated the holidays at his Studies in Starrett blog with a splendid post about Starrett's "The Escape of Alice: A Christmas Fantasy" (1919), which was a delightful example of his wit and sentiment and love of literature. The post also is a fine example of the results of careful research. You can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/52amr3t7>.
22357. The Hulu series "A Murder at the End of the World" (2023) stars Emma Corrin as amateur detective Darby Hart, who's described as "Gen-Z's Sherlock Holmes" (and that phrase has appeared in a lot of the reviews of the series). For those in older generations, Gen-Z are the youngsters (11 to 26 years old) who have grown up with social media and smartphones. And while the series isn't really Sherlockian, it's intelligent and interesting.

22358. Sherlock spyware makes the news from time to time. It's sold by a mysterious Israeli company called Candiru (which is named after an Amazon fish reported to parasitize the human urethra). The fish has an entry at Wikipedia <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Candiru_\(fish\))>, and so does the company <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Candiru_\(spyware_company\))>. According to a recent post at the web-site of The Register (Sept. 16), the software was developed by Insanet, a different mysterious Israeli company <www.theregister.com/2023/09/16/insanet_spyware>, and the spyware uses advertising malware to infect computers and phones.
22359. Mike Poteet has noted the web-site Storiarts ("where style meets literature") <www.storiarts.com>, where you'll find some imaginative Sherlockian items; just search for [sherlock].

22362. An interview with Bill Cochran is the latest addition to the Baker Street Irregulars Trust's oral history project, now up at the Trust's web-site at <www.bsitrust.org>, along with articles and the Trust's newsletters.
22363. Don Hobbs describes his Sherlockian Theatrical Society as non-judgmental, "based on the belief that any play about Sherlock Holmes is worth attending." He attends a lot of plays, and you can read his reviews at the web-site of the Crew of the Barque Lone Star <www.tinyurl.com/yzbztv87>.
22364. Sherlock Holmes and the Arcana of Madness (Crystal Lake Publishing, 2023; 179 pp., $17.99) is an anthology of stories by John Linwood Grant, Angela Yuriko Smith, and Naching T. Kassa, all involving Holmes and Watson with the supernatural, and all tied to the work of the artist Richard Dadd; the publisher's web-site's at <www.crystallakepub.com>.
22365. "Baker Street Elementary" is the long-running comic strip created by Joe Faye, Rusty Mason, and Steve Mason, and it has now entered its tenth year. All of the strips are available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/5n89cupv>, and one of the best of them is #480

22368. David A. Weiss ("Crosby, the Banker") died on Mar. 24, 2020. He was living in Baltimore and a member of the Six Napoleons when his "Celestial Pastiche" was published in the Baker Street Journal in 1948; he was persuaded to move to New York and become a professional writer, and he was awarded his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1958. Julie McKuras' warm tribute to him ran in the spring 2008 issue of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter <www.tinyurl.com/2p9akefw>.
22369. Watch Harry Charles and Sherlock win the Longines FEI Jumping World Cup in A Coruña (in Spain) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZPxOFFL5Uc> (kindly noted by Jennie Paton).
22370. When in Baku (in Azerbaijan): miniature-books enthusiasts may wish to visit the world's largest museum of miniature books <www.minibooks.az>. An article at the Azernews web-site <www.azernews.az/culture/218848.html> on Dec. 13 notes that Conan Doyle is one of many authors in the collection.
22372. Ron Fish continues to publicize meetings of Sherlockian societies via his Sherlockian Calendar, including gatherings held via Zoom or other technology; it's a great way to find out what's happening, where and when. You can see his format at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>, and send information about upcoming meetings to him at <ronf404@aol.com>.
22373. Those who were at the Saturday reception last January may recall the spirited Dr. John H. Watson Fund bidding for being able to name a character in Bonnie MacBird's next pastiche The Serpent Under (the winner also received a copy of her recent What Child Is This? that was signed and inscribed by Bonnie and her illustrator Frank Cho, who also provided original Sherlockian artwork on the endpapers). Bonnie and Frank wrote about their collaboration at the CrimeReads web-site (Dec. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/wkmk5e>.
22374. "Sherlock & Co." is an intriguing audio podcast that stars Harry Attwell (Sherlock Holmes) and Paul Waggott (Dr. John Watson) in Goalhanger's modern version of the Canon, and dozen adaptations of Canonical tales can be heard at <www.youtube.com/@SherlockPod>.
22375. "It's totally legal for Batman to punch the Great Gatsby and yet I'm still waiting," Susana Polo complained, in a post to the Polygon web-site (Dec. 13) <www.tinyurl.com/4ktvcy8b>, noting that Batman and the Great Gatsby, like Sherlock Holmes, are now in the public domain.
22376. Burt Wolder notes that the Chris Beetles Gallery in London offers at its web-site <www.chrisbeetles.com/exhibition/286/the-illustrators> a catalog of The Illustrators: The British Art of Illustration 1831-2023, which is available for sale (£20.00) or on-line (free), with an interesting section devoted to Conan Doyle's father Charles Altamont Doyle. The gallery also offers original artwork by Conan Doyle's father, and uncle Richard Doyle.

22377. "Now it is clear that anyone working with rocket fuels is outstandingly mad. I don't mean garden-variety crazy or a merely raving lunatic. I mean a record-shattering exponent of far-out insanity." Isaac Asimov, in his forward to John D. Clark's Ignition!: An Informal History of Liquid Rocket Fuel Propellants (1972). Both of them were members of the Baker Street Irregulars, and you can read more of what Asimov had to say about liquid rocket fuels in a recent post to the Ricochet web-site (Dec. 7) <www.tinyurl.com/ysvhs9yw>.
22378. Laurie R. King is already thinking about 2025, and the next Mary Russell book, which will be about Mary's uncle Jake (who gave a throwing knife to a young Mary <www.laurierking.com/2023/12/russell-what>. The free download of Mary's Christmas (with artwork that wasn't in the 2014 print version) will be available until Jan. 6.
22379. Horror Dogs: Man's Best Friend as Movie Monster, by Brian Patrick Duggan (Jefferson: McFarland, 2023; 262 pp., $49.95) is a delightful example of the results of careful research; it's a splendid filmography, written by someone who obviously loves both dogs and movies. The Hound of the Baskervilles was for decades the iconic horror dog (although some people now prefer Cujo), but there are many others (from 1904 to 2022); the book is entertaining and instructive, and recommended.
22380. Smithsonian Magazine <www.smithsonianmag.com> has published many Sherlockian and Doylean articles over the years, both in print and on-line. Just search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] to find all sorts of articles (including some that were on-line only).
22381. Christie's (in London) offered a copy of the first printing of the first British edition of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, in a damaged second state of the dust jacket, on Dec. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/4ak98ne5>, with an estimate of £20,000-£30,000. It was sold for £23,940 (including the buyer's premium).
22382. Christie's also offered on Dec. 14 a list of the contents of Conan Doyle's psychic library kept by his secretary, Major A. H. Wood, with an estimate of £1,500-£2,500 <www.tinyurl.com/cpepxhzh>; it sold for £2,268 (including the premium).
- 22383.

22384. In 1982 the television series “Fantasy Island” included a segment titled “Save Sherlock Holmes” in which Ron Ely played a department store detective in a fantasy that had him rescuing Sherlock Holmes from Prof. Moriarty. The cast included Peter Lawford as Sherlock Holmes, Donald O’Connor as Dr. Watson, Mel Ferrer as Moriarty, and Rita Jenrette (whose activities in Washington inspired the name of the group of political-satire performers “The Capitol Steps”) as Nurse Heavenly. Jennie Paton reports that the program is on-line at www.youtube.com/watch?v=ObYAytZ1UCs (the URL noted in 2020 no longer works). Howard Ostrom adds that the YouTube channel also has the 1986 “Holmes Sweet Holmes” episode from the “Fame” series, and the 1991 “The Consulting Detective” episode from the “Father Dowling Mysteries” series. Just about everything seems to arrive on-line eventually.

22385. “Mystery Sign on This San Francisco Home Is Last Remnant of a Dangerous Charlatan” was the headline on a story at the SFGATE web-site (Dec. 10) www.tinyurl.com/2fhw823f. The sign, on the house at 2151 Sacramento Street, says that “This house, built in 1881, was once occupied by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.” Conan Doyle came to the house in 1923 to visit Dr. Albert Abrams, but stayed only a few hours. As for the man who lived in the house, the article notes that “It’s impossible to count the number of lies Dr. Albert Abrams told while defrauding patients.”
22386. It’s not Sherlockian, but here’s a trivia question: who was the first actor to play Ian Fleming’s hero James Bond?
22387. “One of the Most Obscure Disney Characters Ever Is Terrorizing the Lorcan Meta,” was the headline on Eric Switzer’s post to The Gamer web-site (Nov. 29 www.tinyurl.com/5ewv2auz). Disney Lorcan is described as an “immersive trading card game” that features Disney characters in original and re-imagined art styles, and the obscure character is Hiram Flaversham, a side character in “The Great Mouse Detective” (1986); there also are cards for Basil, Ratigan, and Fidget, and if you would like to know more about the game you’ll need to find someone who understands the gamer jargon in the article.
22388. One does hear of Sherlock everywhere, as in Siddhartha Mukherjee’s “Annals of Medicine: Sleeper Cells” in The New Yorker (Dec. 18); he certainly is familiar with the Canon, and ends his article with a ride to Baker Street. The article’s on-line at www.tinyurl.com/2hpf85x4.
22389. Peter McIntyre notes that Sherlock’s Jewel is performing well at various race tracks www.tinyurl.com/fu8p9t8d; you can watch Sherlock’s Jewel win a recent race at Tampa Downs at www.youtube.com/watch?v=t4cyva4CeDs.
22390. “You can put back anything but dust,” said Sherlock Holmes, “Dust is eloquent.” The quote is in an article at the web-site of Nautilus magazine (Dec. 11) www.tinyurl.com/4n48ymyh about the use of DNA and biochemical analysis of dust by modern forensic investigators. The article notes that the quote is from the BBC’s “Sherlock” television series.
22391. The Japan Times reported (Dec. 20) www.tinyurl.com/bdfut7fz on plans for an “Immersive Fort Tokyo” theme park to open in Tokyo on Mar. 4. One of the attractions will feature Sherlock Holmes.
22392. Reported: “Cushing Curiosities” is a six-disc Blu-ray boxed set honoring Peter Cushing, with 5 feature films, 6 BBC teleplays, a 200-page book, and more than 16 hours of special features ($95.00), issued this year by Severin Films; two of the discs offer the six surviving episodes of his 1968 “Sherlock Holmes” (with commentary by Kim Newman, David Stuart Davies, and others) www.tinyurl.com/nhb3hvx8.
22393. The Baker Street Irregulars restaurant, at 1152 1st Avenue in New York (at 63rd Street), formerly the Baker Street Pub, says that it’s continuing the pub’s tradition, but it’s “just a little more irregular than you remember” www.irregularsnyc.com.

22394. Ryan O’Neal died on Dec. 8. He launched his acting career in television in 1960, went on to films and stage, and was perhaps best known for roles in “Love Story” (1970) and “Paper Moon” (1973). He also played Gregory Stark in “Zero Effect” (1998), which starred Bill Pullman as the world’s best private detective, who is utterly brilliant, a deductive genius, emotionally unstable, and uses disguises, and Ben Stiller as his steady, reliable aide who eventually leaves him for a wife.
22395. Who was the first actor to play James Bond? Barry Nelson, in a one-hour dramatization of Casino Royale for the “Climax!” television series broadcast by CBS-TV in 1954. Peter Lorre played Le Chiffre, and you can watch the program at www.youtube.com/watch?v=qGNMKT-6i4Y.
22396. The trivia question was inspired by Jacques Ernewein’s article on “Casino Royale: 007 et l’Alsace de la Guerre Froide” in the June 2023 issue of Le Carnet d’Écrou (the journal of Les Évadés de Dartmoor), which also has an interesting article by Leon Sterndale about “Sherlock Holmes, la pièce de William Gillette, son adaptation par Pierre Decourcelle”. If you’d like to subscribe, the editor is François Hoff francois.hoff@orange.fr.
22397. Karen Murdock notes that the Canadian one-hour documentary “The Real Sherlock Holmes” (2012) is available at YouTube www.youtube.com/watch?v=3Eo-Cp9u4ME, with a number of Sherlockians interviewed.
22398. The Oxford English Dictionary is on-line and updated quarterly, and they have provided counts of how many time authors are quoted. Conan Doyle’s count is 844, which puts him behind William Faulkner and ahead of Virginia Woolf. You can see the list at www.tinyurl.com/msk4zzwb.
22399. “Killing Sherlock: Lucy Worsley on the Case of Conan Doyle” (a three-episode mini-series broadcast by BBC Two beginning on Dec. 10) received great publicity in the British press, including a colorful article in the Daily Mail (Dec. 1) www.tinyurl.com/3vcsj3rw and a press release from the BBC (Dec. 4) www.tinyurl.com/yc3mkwr9. BBC Arts also presented viewers with a “Sherlock Holmes Quiz: What’s the Truth About Arthur Conan Doyle?” (Dec. 10) www.tinyurl.com/9smc5yyf. The series has not yet been scheduled by PBS-TV (stay tuned), but you may still be able to watch the programs, with a short musical overlay (presumably to establish copyright ownership), at her YouTube channel www.youtube.com/@Lucy_Worsley/videos.
22400. Video of all three of the BSI Trust Lectures (Roberta Pearson in 2021, Ray Betzner in 2022, and Steven Rothman in 2023) are now available at the BSI Trust web-site www.bsitrust.org/2023/12/bsi-trust-lectures.html.
22401. The Portsmouth News reported (Dec. 14) www.tinyurl.com/5vcnmkxd that the former city records office won’t be turned into a Sherlock Holmes museum; consultants have said that the site is too small and is in the wrong location, and estimated that it would cost £2 million to refurbish the building and £2.5 million to turn it into museum, but only £331,000 to demolish the building. The campaign for a new museum had been led by Stephen Fry, patron of the Sherlock Holmes Collections.

22402. Mark Gatiss’ dramatization of “Lot No. 249” aired on BBC Two on Dec. 24. You can read the BBC’s press release (Dec. 6) at www.tinyurl.com/3a895vpk, an interview with him in Radio Times (Dec 20) www.tinyurl.com/2vsr52yu, and another interview at the web-site of the British Film Institute (Dec. 21) www.tinyurl.com/3jp5r7su. Gatiss said that “there’s definite potential in the Professor Challenger stories,” and added that he and Steven Moffat “talked a lot about Challenger as a separate thing, because he’s a wonderful character—Doyle did that rare thing of getting another one!” Gatiss had fun with the story, and the program was widely and favorably reviewed in the British press and on-line. It’s unlikely it will air here, alas.

22403. Theatrical news: Jon Jory's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is due at the James A. Garfield High School in Garrettsville, Ohio, Jan. 19-27; web-site at <www.curtainsuptheatre.com>.
22404. "Sherlock Holmes and the Whitechapel Fiend" (by Toby Hulse and Ross Smith) will have its world premiere at the Barn Theatre in Cirencester, Glos., on Jan. 26-Mar. 9 <www.barntheatre.org.uk>.
22405. Martin Parsons' dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" as a radio-play toured in Britain in 2022 and it will tour again. Mar. 5-May 5; <www.crimeandcomedytheatrecompany.co.uk>.
22406. Tal Aviezer's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Problem" is due at the Lyndhurst Mansion in Tarrytown, N.Y., Mar. 1-24 <www.lyndhurst.org>.
22407. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is scheduled at the Adelaide Repertory Theatre in Adelaide, S.A., Mar. 21-Apr. 6 <www.adelaiderep.com>; at the Garfield Center for the Performing Arts at the Prince Theatre in Chestertown, Md., Apr. 19-May 5 <www.garfieldcenter.org>; and at the Kanata Theatre in Ottawa, Ont., May 15-25 <www.kanatatheatre.ca>.
22408. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes and Ms. Watson" will be performed at the Vertigo Theatre in Calgary Alta., May 11-June 9 <www.vertigotheatre.com>.
22410. Reginald Candy's new "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Human Heart" will be performed at the Shaw Festival Theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., July 24-Oct. 13 <www.shawfest.com>.
22411. Rick Robinson's new "Sherlock Holmes and the Study in Scarlet" is due at the Oregon Cabaret Theatre in Ashland, Ore., Sept. 13-Nov. 3; web-site at <www.oregoncabaret.com>.

22413. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 170th birthday during the (very) long weekend from Jan. 10 to 14, and reports on many of the goings-on will be posted soon at the Baker Street Irregulars' web-site <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/reports>. In the meantime, here are a few brief paragraphs to tide you over, and you can also listen to Scott Monty and Burt Wolder discuss the festivities at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog at <www.tinyurl.com/yv5a6w2m>. Scott's report on the weekend is at <www.tinyurl.com/y3wtfcv7>. Michael Dirda also reported on the birthday festivities in the Washington Post on Jan. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/y3r9m8nh>.
22414. Locals and early arrivals enjoyed the ASH Wednesday dinner, and on Thurs-day morning the ACD Society's Doylean Awards Ceremony and a running of the Wessex Cup were held at the Mysterious Bookshop; the society's web-site is at <www.acdsociety.com>. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker that evening was author Tess Gerritsen, who explained in detail why the worst thing a Victorian could do when ill was to go to a hospital; her entertaining paper will be published in the Baker Street Journal later this year.
22415. On Friday the William Gillette Memorial Luncheon featured performances of two skits: Ray Betzner's "Mrs. Hudson and the Return of Sherlock Holmes" (with Curtis Armstrong as Holmes, Ashley Polasek as Mrs. Hudson, and Ken Ludwig as the narrator and Sherlock's bust); and Andrew Joffe's "Quantum of Sherlock" (with Paul Singleton as Holmes, Sarah Montague as Mrs. Money Penny, Andrew Joffe as Q, and Lee Shackelford as Blofeld. And the Susan Rice Mentorship Award (recognizing "commitment to mentoring Sherlockians as a means of keeping green the memory of Sherlock Holmes") was presented to Francine Kitts.
22416. Irregulars and guests gathered for dinner at the Yale Club, where Mark Gagen offered the traditional first toast to Pamela Wampler as "The Woman". The dinner agenda included the usual toasts, and rituals, and spectacular presentations by Curtis Armstrong (about grade-B villains in the Canon), and Ray Betzner, Steve Doyle, and Steve Rothman (on Alexander Woollcott's qualifications as a member of the BSI). And Eric Scae was announced as the winner of annual Morley-Montgomery Award (for the best contribution to the Baker Street Journal in 2023) was presented to Eric Scae, for his article "Five Quarter-Centuries of Confusion over 'The Missing Three-Quarter'" in the spring 2023 issue. You can subscribe to the BSI (four issues and a Christmas Annual) at <www.tinyurl.com/3vxncdhd>.
22417. The BSI's new Birthday Honours were awarded to Rudy Altergott ("Old Patrick"), Derrick Belanger ("The Board Schools"), Thomas Brydges ("Waterloo Bridge"), Fabienne Courouge ("Henri Fournaye"), Daniel Friedman ("Sir Leslie Oakshott"), Chuck Kovacic ("Baker Street"), Stephen Chahn Lee ("Alec MacDonald"), Danna Mancini ("McMurdo"), Maxine Reneker ("The Whole Art of Detection"), Olivia Rutigliano ("Lady Alicia Whittington"), Jessica Schilling ("The Queen's Shilling"), George Schwartz ("The Alpha Inn"), Robert Sharfman ("Killer Evans"), and Liese Sherwood-Fabre ("Mrs. Farintosh"). And the BSI's prestigious Two-Shilling Award was bestowed on Otto Penzler.

22418. Friday evening also saw the revival ("Out of the Abyss") of the Gaslight Gala, at Slatery's Midtown Pub, with cocktails, dinner, toasts, songs, a skit, a quiz, a raffle, and (of course) conversation. Planning for 2025 is under way.
22419. On Saturday morning Covent Garden West offered the usual opportunity for dealers to help those who wanted to add to their collections, and the Sat-urday luncheon and reception included the Dr. John H. Watson Fund's auction, which attracted enthusiastic bidders; the raffle prizes were a set of brass and leather coasters and etched glasses, and an attractive "Musgrave Ritual" shadow box, all hand-crafted by Danna Mancini. Finally, for those who lasted that long, the last event of the birthday festivities was the Adventuresses' Brunch on Sunday.
22420. You can plan ahead: the next annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars is scheduled for Jan. 17, 2025. You can also plan much farther ahead: the BSI's next special conference (similar to "Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire" at Bear Mountain in 2022) is scheduled for the summer of 2027. If you'd like to have information about future events (and much more) you are welcome to sign up for "News from the BSI" at <www.tinyurl.com/yc5tsz27>.
22421. One of the added features of the birthday festivities was a performance of Hal Glatzer's new one-act play "FlatFinders 1881" (a humorous exploration of Holmes and Watson's search for a flat they could share), at the Coffee House Club, and it's grand that it was recorded and available on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=9_51MLXZHPU>.
22422. The Yale Club kindly displayed some of the history of the Baker Street Irregulars in glass cases in the Club's library: the BSI's official gavel, made from wood from 221B, presented to Edgar W. Smith by the Six Napoleons; remnants from the cloth used to make the BSI's first official neck-tie, made for and worn by Christopher Morley; inscribed books; photographs and minutes from early annual dinners, and much more.

22423. Another nice feature of the festivities was the opportunity to visit the N.Y. Public Library to view their exhibition "Max Beerbohm: The Price of Celebrity" and Beerbohm's caricature of Conan Doyle. The exhibition has closed, but the caricature's on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/5xwv5jk>.
22424. Coming to auction at Potter & Potter on Feb. 15: the second half of Robert Hess' collection (including the only known copy of the first British edition of The Lost World in dust jacket, and Sidney Paget's personal robe), and Roy Pilot's library (including the manuscript of Uncle Bernac). Their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/2rnd6ds7>.
22425. There are two interesting Paget items on offer at Chorley's in Gloucester-shire on Feb. 6: an artist's sketchbook that was owned by Henry Marriott Paget (1856-1936) <www.tinyurl.com/vtxhx2uz>, and another owned by Walter Stanley Paget (1862-1935) <www.tinyurl.com/mpmr8br8>, each with an estimate of £200-£300. Both men were brothers of Sidney Paget, and all three were artists (and illustrated stories by Conan Doyle).

January 24 #3

22426. Mark Gatiss' dramatization of "Lot No. 249" aired on BBC Two on Dec. 24 and was streamed on the BBC's iPlayer, for viewers in Britain. As with so many other things on the Internet, there are work-arounds, many of them involving copyright infringement, and (sure enough) that has happened with "Lot No. 249", which is still available at the Dailymotion web-site <www.dailymotion.com>, which is owned by the French media company Vivendi. No spoilers here, for those who haven't seen the show, but Gatiss had fun with the story, adding a new character (with some nice Canonical echoes), and providing a different ending. Conan Doyle's story is of course readily available on-line, in case you'd like to read what inspired Mark Gatiss.
22427. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> kindly offers (via e-mail) his new edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses are Investitured Irregulars).
22428. Hal Glatzer's The Sign of Five (2023; 283 pp., $25.00) is a collection of five pastiches (reprinted from earlier anthologies) tied to his interests in Hawaii, Gilbert & Sullivan, and much more. His web-site, which is on-line at <www.halglatzer.com>, offers more information about his book, and about his play "Sherlock Holmes and the Volcano Horror" (along with a link to video of the play).
22429. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London is planning their next excursion, to India, Feb. 22-Mar. 9, 2025; details, as well as a link to a downloadable and colorful brochure, are at <www.tinyurl.com/mhzn7u9>, with a request for expressions of interest.
22430. Four pages (all that are known to have survived) of the manuscript of "The Crooked Man" were sold at auction at Sotheby's in New York last year for $95,250 (including the buyer's premium) (Jul 23 #3), and the new owner has sent one of the four pages to auction at RR Auction in Amherst, N.H., on Feb. 22, with an estimate of $40,000+ <www.tinyurl.com/3mefsu8s>. Randall Stock discusses the manuscript on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/382c5925>.
22431. RR Auction also is offering, on Feb. 14, a 34-page notebook in which Conan Doyle wrote about Spiritualism <www.tinyurl.com/mtsijkja2>, with an estimate of $8,000+. The web-site has a detailed description of the contents, and images of the pages.
22432. The Brattleboro Reformer reported (Jan. 23) <www.tinyurl.com/yvscd24> on the Landmark Trust USA's "Snow Golf" skills competition to be held on Feb. 25. The Trust manages Naulakha, Rudyard Kipling's home in Dummerston, Vt., where he is credited with inventing snow golf after being introduced to the game by Conan Doyle in 1894. You can stay at Naulakha for a night (or a week) <www.landmarktrustusa.org/rudyard-kiplings-naulakha>.
22433. "Lion's Mane Mushrooms Make This Crab-Inspired Fried Rice Roar with Flavor" was the headline on Joe Yonan's article in the Washington Post food section on Jan. 10; there was no mention of Sherlock Holmes, but you can read the article (and get the recipe) at <www.tinyurl.com/2jxtxpt9>.

22434. "Find your fit as we explore the streets of London and the infamous 221B Baker Street" is the suggestion from Yes.Fit, a company that offers to make running (and walking and bicycling) interesting <yes.fit/races/Sherlock>. Alas, Sherlock no longer is available, but you might still be able to buy the reward merchandise.
22435. Greg Darak has noted a nicely Sherlockian book available from Blackwell's Rare Books in Oxford <www.tinyurl.com/yc5prmkj>: a copy of the first edition of Christina Rossetti's The Prince's Progress, and Other Poems (1866) illustrated by Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who inscribed the book to Charles A. Howell, "from his affectionate friend." (£7,500). According to the cataloguer, Charles Augustus Howell "was one of the most notorious figures of his day, thinly fictionalized and roundly vilified by Arthur Conan Doyle in his story 'The Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton', where he was damned 'the worst man in London.'" And so he was, and there's much more said about Howell and Rossetti and others in the catalog.
22436. The new film "The Color Purple" got a lot of publicity for having the second-highest Christmas Day opening of all time (with $18.15 million in box-office receipts. Robert Downey Jr.'s "Sherlock Holmes" (2009) holds the all-time record ($24.6 million) <www.tinyurl.com/mwbkeh2d>.
22437. Sherlockians aren't the only people who celebrate on Jan. 6, according to Country Life <www.tinyurl.com/pz5rbkmc> and <www.tinyurl.com/mrx47htw>.
22438. The manuscript of "The Bully of Brocas Court" is available from Antiquariat Inlibris in Vienna for €75.000 <www.inlibris.com/item/bn60378>. There is a detailed history of the ms. at Randall Stock's "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/bully-brocas-court-2023.htm>.
22439. Tom Smothers died on Dec. 26. He played the naïve half of the two Smothers Brothers and became a star when their off-beat television series was launched on CBS-TV in 1967. He appeared dressed as Sherlock Holmes in the "Mistaken Identity" episode of television series "Hotel" on Feb. 1, 1984, but (alas) the episode seems not to be available on the Internet.
22440. The Beacon Society continues to administer the Fortescue Scholarship Hon-ours Program, and more than 120 people have completed all three exams and have received a Doctorate in Sherlockiana. The 2024 Recertification Exam is available on request from Steve Mason <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>, and there's more information about the program at <www.tinyurl.com/2vt9saym>.
22441. Robert Stek's An Ancestor of Mine ... (2022) is a pleasant pastiche revealing that Star Trek's Mr. Spock was the biological father of Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes; you can read it on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/3w7vyh8j>.
22442. Maryann B. Murray's Coda (Ocean Park: CSan Communications, 2023; 302 pp., $16.95) is set in Montpellier in 1894; Elizabeth Devereaux is in dire peril in a thriller that involves murder, missing documents, and a mysterious Norwegian named Sigerson, who will be familiar to those who remember what Sherlock Holmes was doing in 1894.

January 24 #5

22443. Robert Downey Jr. has won this year's Golden Globe award for best supporting actor in a film for his role as Lewis Strauss in "Oppenheimer". Downey has won other Golden Globe awards in the past, including best actor in a musical or comedy, for "Sherlock Holmes" (2009). Indeed, the film was considered to be a musical or comedy. Jeff Bridges won the award that year for best actor in a drama for "Crazy Heart".

22444. A collection of treasures from Queen Mary's Dolls' House will be on display at Windsor Castle this year to celebrate the centenary of its creation <www.tinyurl.com/4j8btf9m>, and there will be an on-line lecture on Apr. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/3ufnsx7e> that may (or may not) mention or show Conan Doyle's manuscript for "How Watson Learned the Trick". Fine Books & Collections (Jan. 24) <www.tinyurl.com/474pr8cf> has a nicely illustrated article about the Doll's House's library.
22445. Jean Upton, the editor of the always-interesting District Messenger (the long-running monthly newsletter of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London), has an attractive business card that proclaims that she is a librocubicularist. If you're not familiar with the word, Merriam-Webster has a nice definition <www.tinyurl.com/25uynr33> that credits Christopher Morley (in The Haunted Bookshop) for inventing the word.
22446. The China Global Television Network reported on Jan. 4 on a new Sherlock Holmes-themed exhibition at the Hebei Museum in Shijiazhuang (in northern China <www.tinyurl.com/29hvfsrc> though Mar. 31. This isn't the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition that has been seen in many museums and science centers since it opened in Columbus, Ohio, in 2014.
22447. According to Variety (Jan. 3) <www.tinyurl.com/44w2a63r> CBS-TV has given a straight-to-series order for "Watson" (expected to air during the 2024-2025 season). The series is set one year after Holmes' death at the Reichenbach, with Morris Chestnut as Watson, who had resumed his medical career as head of a clinic devoted to treating rare disorders, but "Watson's old life isn't done with him." Craig Sweeny created the series and will be the showrunner and executive producer; he was an executive producer and writer on the "Elementary" series that ran for seven seasons on CBS, and it's obvious that the network is hoping for another success.
22448. According to a story at Crunchyroll (Jan. 24) <www.tinyurl.com/yf7emtmd>, Sherlock Hound will celebrate his 40th anniversary this year. Two digitally remastered compilation films of the 1984 anime series that was directed by Hayao Miyazaki and Kiyosuke Mikuriya will be screened throughout Japan beginning on Mar. 22. "His name is Sherlock Hound. It's his business to know what other woofs don't know."
22449. Sherlocktron (Oct 87 #5) was launched by Willis G. Frick in the long-ago era of dial-up phone-line access to the Internet as an electronic bulletin board, and Willis has announced that "time and technology pass all of us by, and Sherlocktron has reached the end of its effective life and has retired to a small farm on the Sussex Downs to keep bees." Sherlocktron was older than the World Wide Web (which was invented in 1989 by Tim Berner-Lee, and opened to the public in 1991). Ave atque vale to Sherlocktron.

22451. The Norwegian Explorers' Christmas Annual for 2023 celebrates the 75th anniversary of the society, with a nice mix of articles essays, pastiches, poetry, artwork, and a puzzle; only a few copies of the 112-page booklet, edited by Ray Riethmeier and Phillip Bergem, are available ($12.00 postpaid); ask Phillip <pgbergem@gmail.com> if you're in time to order, and he'll tell you how to pay. Back issues for some earlier years, and conference books, also are available.
22452. Theatrical news: Rick Robinson's "Sherlock Holmes and the Final Problem" is running at the Theatre on the Ridge in Paradise, Calif., through Feb. 4 <www.totr.org>.
22453. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson--Apt. 2B" is scheduled at the Uptown Theatre in Mount Vernon, Iowa, Feb. 2-10 <www.mvltc.com>.
22454. Kyle Gallagher's "The Man in the Shadows: An Original Telling of Sherlock Holmes" will have its world premiere at the Halifax Playhouse in Halifax, W. Yorks., Feb. 5-9 <www.halifaxplayhouse.org.uk>.
22455. Zoe Drew-King's new play "We Can But Try" is scheduled at the Youth Initiative High School in Viroqua, Wis., Feb. 9-17 <www.yihs.net>.
22456. Nick Lane's "The Valley of Fear" will tour in Great Britain, Mar. 9-Apr. 20 <www.blackeyedtheatre.co.uk>.
22457. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be performed at the Ocala Civic Theatre in Ocala, Fla., Mar. 21-Apr. 7 <www.ocalacivictheatre.com>. It's also due at the Huronia Players Community Theatre in Midland, Ont., on Apr. 26-May 11 <www.huroniaplayers.ca>.
22458. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" is due at the Parsons Stage at North-glenn Arts in Northglenn, Colo., Mar. 21-Apr. 7 <www.phamaly.org>. Also at the Fells Point Corner Theatre in Baltimore, Md., from Apr. 25 to May 19 <www.fpct.org>.
22459. David MacGregor's "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes and the Fallen Soufflé" will be performed at the Sullivan Theater in Baton Rouge, La., Apr. 5-14 <www.sullivantheater.com>.
22460. Max Bush's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of Abbey Grange" and "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Capper Beeches" will be produced at the Patsy Miller Studio Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., Apr. 25-May 4; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/mps28he7>.

22462. Margaret Raether's "Sherlock Holmes & the Precarious Position" is due at coming up at the Taproot Theatre in Seattle, Wash., May 15-June 15; web-site at <www.taproottheatre.org>.

22463. The Baker Street Irregulars Press has published two new titles: Clutches of a Fiend is the new addition to the Manuscript Series (179 pp., $49.95); edited by Steven T. Doyle, it offers a facsimile of the manuscript of "The Illustrious Client", with an annotated transcription and scholarly commentary on the manuscript and on various aspects of the story (the Manuscript Series continues to offer readers an opportunity to come close to the moment when the stories were written, and the commentary is delightful).
22464. Sherlock Holmes and the British Empire, edited by Ross E. Davies (211 pp., $29.95), offers the proceedings and papers of the BSI's conference at the Bear Mountain Inn in 2022, with colorful images of the performers, and all of their scholarship. Both of the new titles (and many others) can be ordered at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/books>.
22465. Further to the item about Queen Mary's Doll's House (Jan 14 #5): The Royal Family announced on Jan. 30 that Queen Camilla hosted a reception at Windsor Castle for authors, illustrators, and binders involved in creating a new Modern-Day Miniature Library collection that will be displayed along-side the Dolls' House <www.tinyurl.com/yvsxuz2>. The 20 authors of the new miniature books include Anthony Horowitz (who has contributed "A Tiny Ghost Story"). The Queen has said that the Dolls' House's library (which has Conan Doyle's manuscript for "How Watson Learned the Trick") is "the most breath-taking space in the house." <www.bbc.com/news/uk-68139937>.
22466. The 34-page notebook in which Conan Doyle wrote about spiritualism, up for bids this month at RR Auction <www.tinyurl.com/y5a6znri> (Jan 24 #3), estimated at $8,000, sold for $12,378 (including the buyer's premium).
22467. CBS' "Watson" (Jan 24 #5) isn't the only Sherlockian television series in the works: according to Variety (Feb. 15) <www.tinyurl.com/kavtm8px>, David Thewlis is due as Holmes in "Sherlock & Daughter" (Nov 23 #1) on the CW channel with Blu Hunt as his daughter Amelia and Dougray Scott as Moriarty.

22468. Howard Ostrom's "A-Z List of Sherlock Holmes Performers" now has more than 9,200 entries (with more than 20,000 images), covering stage, screen, radio, television, the Internet, and much more; the list's available on-line at <www.nplh.co.uk/a-z-index.html>.
22469. The Jeremy Brett Sherlock Holmes Podcast has announced Brettcon 2024: The 40th Anniversary Celebration <www.tinyurl.com/mpw9zz3e>, scheduled for May 25 in Guildford (Surrey). The podcast <www.sherlockpodcast.com> was created by Gus and Luke Holwerda in 2019, and they've now hosted more than 40 episodes that will be of interest to fans of the Granada series. Episode 41 is a delightful interview with now-94-year-old June Wyndham Davies, who produced the series and tells great stories about it; episode 40 provides a discussion of and a link to video of "The Adventure of the Abbey Treasure" (filmed by Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke in 1988 for the Abbey National Bank). The podcast is well worth exploring, and there's a handsome video trailer for the convention

22470. An interesting look at the use of artificial intelligence to do research: <www.tinyurl.com/2rweutv2>. From Google Bard or some other AI program, and it's a grand example of how hilarious (and awful) the results can be. Alexander Orlov suggests that you try researching yourself to determine how good an AI program is.
22471. Ray Betzner's "Mrs. Hudson and the Return of Sherlock Holmes" (with Curtis Armstrong as Holmes, Ashley Polasek as Mrs. Hudson, and Ken Ludwig as the narrator and the bust), performed at the William Gillette Luncheon in New York on Jan. 12, is now on-line in the Inner Circle at the Red Circle of Washington's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>.
22472. The Beacon Society has announced its 2024 R. Joel Senter Sr. Memorial Essay Contest for students in grades 4 through 12; the deadline for submissions is Apr. 1, and details on the contest (and its history) can be found at <www.beaconsociety.com/joel-senter-essay-contest.html>.
22473. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London reports that there has been enough interest in their next excursion, to India, Feb. 22-Mar. 9, 2025 (Jan 24 #3) for them to proceed with planning; details, and a link to a downloadable and colorful brochure, are at <www.tinyurl.com/44s9fks7>, and there's still time to register interest at their web-site. A more detailed brochure will be available in March.
22474. Wanda Dow has found James Moriarty amongst the staff at Utica University <www.utica.edu/people/james-moriarty>. She also offers a chemistry quiz: what do you get when you combine tungsten, astatine, sulphur, oxygen, and nitrogen?
22475. The Southern Daily Echo has reported (Feb 19) <tinyurl.com/y4629unh> that most of the Lyndhurst Park Hotel has been demolished, and showed an image of the planned new development. Conan Doyle is said to have designed the entrance of the hotel and its battlement-style terraces in 1912; the Daily Telegraph said on Mar. 20, 2021, that a local historian had found a sketch that showed that his design for the front façade "was based on the spiritual view of the journey of the soul."
22476. If you don't remember Groucho Marx's "You Bet Your Life" series on NBC-TV, here's a nice excuse to watch it: the final question on Jan. 23, 1958, was Sherlockian <www.youtube.com/watch?v=beTpo2KCSFw> (kindly reported by Ann Marlowe).
22477. Rodger Garrick-Steele died on Dec. 10, 2020, receiving far less publicity when he died than when he was alive and accusing Conan Doyle of murdering Bertram Fletcher Robinson (and having an affair with Fletcher Robinson's wife); he worked hard, and unsuccessfully, to arrange for an exhumation of Fletcher Robinson, hoping to prove the murder, and he wrote The House of the Baskervilles, a book which was translated and published in Japan before it was published in Britain in 2005. If you would like to know more about him, you can run a word-search for his name in Steve Mason's compilation of the text of this newsletter from March 1985 onward; it's on-line at <www.beaconsociety.com/scuttlebutt-from-the-spermacetti-press.html>.

22479. Further to the report (Dec 23 #7) on plans for an "Immersive Fort Tokyo" theme park to open in Tokyo on Mar. 4, there's much more about the theme park, and its Sherlockian features, at <www.tinyurl.com/bdzk3bb8>.
22480. "And here's my tao about happiness. If you want to be happy for an hour, smoke some grass. If you want to be happy for a month, fall in love. If you want to be happy forever, take up book collecting." Mark Hime, in the latest on-line catalog from Bibliotopos <www.bibliotopos.com>.
22481. Sorry about that: the International Sherlock Holmes Exhibition (Jan 24 #5) actually opened in Portland, Ore., on Oct. 10, 2013.
22482. The envelope in which the Sept. 1964 issue of the Baker Street Journal arrived also contained a copy of a 100-question Sherlockian quiz prepared by Elliot Kimball, recommended by Bob Schutz, as one of the most remarkable quizzes ever penned. Now the quiz is being reoffered as part of the Bea-con Society's Fortescue Scholarship exam program, and if you would like to see (or take) this remarkable quiz, it is available by e-mail from Steve Mason <mason.steve8080@gmail.com>.
22483. Art and Chip Sansom's "The Born Loser" comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on Jan. 20 <www.gocomics.com/the-born-loser/2024/01/20>; kindly reported by Les Klinger.
22484. A warning for people who buy things from Acorn <www.acrononline.com>: they have a 30-day policy for returns (not stated in their catalog or at their website); I ordered a present from Acorn for someone months ago, and last month learned it was damaged, and they refused to replace it. So if you do order anything from Acorn, don't delay checking for damage.
22485. Wanda Dow asked: what do you get when you combine tungsten, astatine, sulphur, oxygen, and nitrogen? The answer's elementary: W-At-S-O-N. You're welcome to subscribe to her monthly two-page on-line newsletter Papers on the Sundial; it's free, and she's at <ha10tot@verizon.net>.
22486. Fiona Maher, author of The Secret of the Cottingley Fairies (Feb 18 #6), has followed up the book with a play: "Sherlock Holmes & the Man Who Believed in Fairies" (which features Holmes, Watson, and Conan Doyle). The play is scheduled for the Edinburgh Festival Fringe later this year, and her Crowdfunder web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2d8465r5> offers video of this month's script-in-hand performance this month.

22488. The single page of the manuscript of “The Crooked Man” (Jan 24 #3) offered at RR Auction on Feb. 22 (with an estimate of $40,000+), went unsold when bidding ($32,120 including the buyer’s premium) didn’t reach the reserve. Randall Stock discusses the manuscript at www.tinyurl.com/382c5925.
22489. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner are planning a meeting on Sept. 26 during the upcoming annual meeting of the Wodehouse Society in Nashville, Tenn. More information is available from Elaine Coppola <emcoppola@syrr.edu> or Curtis Armstrong <isle14ci@gmail.com>. The annual meetings of the Wodehouse Society can be (they claim) “binges on a scale calculated to stagger humanity” <www.wodehouse.org/conventionsinfo.html>. Adrian Mulliner will be found in Wodehouse’s pastiche “From a Detective’s Notebook”, first published in Punch in 1959 and now on-line at www.tinyurl.com/3sfbhp96, 22490. Canonical Cornerstones: Foundational Books of a Sherlockian Library, edited by Peter Eckrich and Rob Nunn (Indianapolis: Gasogene, 2023; 125 pp., $24.95), is a collection of essays by Sherlockians who explain in detail why the 17 books they recommend are both useful and enjoyable.
22491. And The Sherlock Holmes Review: 2023 Sherlockian Annual (Gasogene, 2024; 76 pp., $26.95) celebrates 40 years of Granada’s “Sherlock Holmes” series with articles and interviews, plus Ray Betzner’s warm tribute to Old Irregular Charles E. Honce, and much more.
22492. Also: Sherlock Holmes: Immortal Detective: Selected Writings of Donald A. Redmond, Volume 1 (Gasogene, 2024; 216 pp., $28.95), edited by Christopher Redmond, is a welcome collection of his father’s articles, notes, and essays, from 1964 to 1998, both published and unpublished, offering a welcome opportunity to see just how much fun can be had in the world of Sherlock Holmes. Gasogene’s web-site’s at www.wessexpress.com.
22493. When in Japan: you can visit the Sherlock Holmes Pub in Osaka. There’s a brief video tour <www.youtube.com/watch?v=NfaXYbjEwys>, reported by Yuichi Hirayama.
22494. Historical Dictionary of Sherlock Holmes, by Neil McCaw (Lanham: Rowman & Littlefield, 2019; 425 pp., $116.99 cloth/$50.00 paper), offers more than 1,000 entries on the life and times of Holmes and Conan Doyle, as well as a chronology and bibliography; McCaw, who died in 2020, was a professor of Victorian literature and culture at Winchester University, and the academic director of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth, and wrote that his “idea in writing a historical dictionary on a collection of what are ostensibly fictional stories” has been to help readers “begin thinking about the stories from other perspectives,” and he has done just that.

February 24 #5

22495. The Public Domain Review web-site has published a splendid article about J. M. Barrie’s My Lady Nicotine, in which he told his readers how wonderful it was to smoke the Arcadia mixture in his pipe. Barrie was a friend of Conan Doyle, and it’s surely no accident that Sherlock Holmes mentions the Arcadia mixture (in “The Crooked Man”) (Barrie’s Arcadia mixture actually was Carrera’s Craven mixture, and Carrera happily advertised that). The article (and the book) are conveniently available on-line at www.tinyurl.com/2h8ssnhf.
22496. It should be noted that Surbrug, in the U.S., marketed an Arcadia mixture, quoting Barrie on its tins and cans, quite likely without permission from Barrie. You can find their tins easily at eBay and elsewhere.
22497. It’s unique, and advertised at £224,850, Country Life reported on Feb. 1: a Land Rover Range Rover that was owned (and used) by Queen Elizabeth II <www.tinyurl.com/2jx3x6kk>. The Duke of Edinburgh drove the car, accompanied by the Queen, in 2016 to greet President Obama and the First Lady when their helicopter Marine One landed on the grounds of Windsor Castle, and then drove them all back to the castle.
22498. Nancy Springer’s Enola Holmes and the Mark of the Mongoose (Nov 23 #1) has been nominated for an Agatha (best children’s young adult mystery novel); the winners will be announced at Malice Domestic 26 in Bethesda in April. The Internet’s always full of rumor about plans for something near or far in the future, but there was a report at the Collider web-site on Nov. 7
22499. <www.collider.com/enola-holmes-3-netflix> that Scott Stuber, chairman of Netflix Films, said that “we’re working once again on a screenplay” for a third “Enola Holmes” film.
22500. “Visit Toronto” offers a video tour of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library <www.youtube.com/watch?v=XfV5_66sAEk>.
22501. The February issue of The District Messenger, the newsletter of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, is the first issue edited by Holly Turner, who has succeeded Jean Upton. The District Messenger does for the Brits (and others) what this newsletter does for the Yanks (and others), and all its more-than-180 issues are archived on-line at the Society’s web-site at 22502. <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/newsletter>.
22503. The ACD Society had its annual meeting during the birthday festivities in New York, on Jan. 11 at the Mysterious Bookshop. Video of the presentation its honors by Ross Davies, and a running of this year’s Wessex Cup, is on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=h4OPBtt6eZE>.
22504. This month’s auction at Potter & Potter of material from the collections of Bob Hess and Roy Pilot made many new owners happy indeed. The star lot in the auction was the manuscript of “Uncle Bernac” that sold for $37,000 (plus buyer’s premium); Randall Stock’s detailed discussion of the manuscript in on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/4wbj5pbu>. Sidney Paget’s dressing gown sold for $3,400. The complete auction catalog (with prices realized) is at <www.tinyurl.com/hj3szkzp>.

22505. David Kahn died on Jan. 23. His deep interest in cryptology led him to write The Codebreakers: The Story of Secret Writing (1967); it was and is widely regarded as the best book ever written about codes and ciphers, and those who deal with them (one of them was Sherlock Holmes and the dancing men cipher). He was appointed scholar-in-residence at the National Security Agency in 1995, and he donated his collection of books and artifacts to the National Cryptological Museum of the NSA.
22506. Laurie R. King’s new The Lantern’s Dance (Nov 23 #5) has its own page at her website <<https://laurierking.com/books/the-lanterns-dance>>, where she offers a downloadable reading-group guide to the novel. Laurie is an expert at using the Internet to keep her fans interested in her books, and her web-site’s well worth exploring.
22507. Laurie also contributed an interesting post about “Sherlock Holmes, That Enigma We Know So Well” to the CrimeReads blog on Feb. 14. She explains that “I write Holmes as a character, and it’s startling how much I’ve had to make up.”
22508. Neil Nyren offered an impressive look at Laurie R. King’s “Mary Russell” series at Crime Reads on Feb. 8 <www.tinyurl.com/3ntvmtpt>. And there’s still time to sign up for her “Russell & Holmes” days in April in Seattle, Bethesda, and Nashville <www.laurierking.com/russell-holmes-days>.
22509. The winter issue of the Sherlock Holmes Journal (published twice a year by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London) offers the late Russell Merritt’s vocative and well-illustrated article “Seeing Paget in Colour”, and much more. Information about subscription, and membership in the Society, will be found on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ysd85wax>.

22510. Illeana Douglas' Connecticut in the Movies: From Dream Houses to Dark Suburbia (Essex: Lyons Press, 2023; 340 pp., $39.95) is a pleasant and well-illustrated tribute to films made in, or related to, the state, including William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916), because his magnificent home Gillette Castle is in the state, and (although not Sherlockian) "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" (1948), which was directed by H. C. Potter, a member of the Baker Street Irregulars.
22511. Holmes, Marple & Poe, co-authored by James Patterson and Brian Sitts (New York: Little, Brown, 2024; 341 pp., $30.00), has three private detectives (Brendan Holmes, Margaret Marple, and Auguste Poe) solving crimes in modern-day New York; they're well aware of their namesakes, and their actual identities are an additional mystery.
22512. Terry Hunt's presentation about Christopher Morley at the Bryant Library in Roslyn, N.Y., on Mar.13 will be available on-line; you can register at the Library's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/57frrswa> (scroll down to "Christopher Morley Zoom Lecture"). Morley founded the Baker Street Irregulars, and his one-room writing studio, the Knothole, is preserved in the county park named in his honor near the Library. Terry, former senior curator of history and supervisor of historic sites for Nassau County, was responsible for the Knothole for many years.

22513. The Beacon Society continues to offer resources to help Sherlockian societies, and to help people find Sherlockian societies <www.tinyurl.com/2j486ym2>. Mike McSwiggin's interactive map of the active geographical societies is useful indeed, and their web-page now has my alphabetical list of all of the Sherlockian societies (well, all that I know of) that formerly was available at Sherlocktron, so that you can see the imaginative names that people have chosen for their societies. If you like numbers, there's a total of 987 societies on the list, including 477 active societies.
22514. Social media seems to be an interesting way to reach people who share your interests. Howard Ostrom reports close to 5,000 members (in at least 60 countries) at Facebook for his "Sherlock Holmes on Screens" (which covers stage, screen, radio, television, and the Internet); you can see (or follow) his posts at <www.tinyurl.com/47v7cufx>.
22515. Will Thomas' Death and Glory (New York: Minotaur, 2024; 292 pp., $28.00) is the latest in the fine series that stars private enquiry agents Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and Thomas Llewelyn (his faithful and long-suffering partner); the series now runs to 15 titles, and this time involves a plot by survivors of the Confederacy who hope to revive their lost cause and want possession of a warship that was bought from Britain in 1865 but never delivered. Thomas again offers nice plotting and interesting characters.
22516. "It's nice I've been chosen," Louis Hector said to Edith Meiser, after his successful audition for her "Sherlock Holmes" radio series (according to Bernes Robert in the Oakland Tribune, Apr. 7, 1935), "I used to play the role in England." Does anyone know when and where and in what play? According to Wikipedia, Hector emigrated to the U.S. in 1920.
22517. "The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare" (directed by Guy Ritchie) will be released on Apr. 19; the trailer's on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/42fx89uy>. The film, based on Damien Lewis' book The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare: How Churchill's Secret Warriors Set Europe Ablaze and Gave Birth to Modern Black Ops (Nov 16 #6) may (or may not) mention that members of the Special Operations Executive, which had its headquarters in Baker Street, called themselves the Baker Street Irregulars.
22518. "Gilded Newport Mysteries: Murder at the Breakers" is a new movie available on the Hallmark channel <www.tinyurl.com/ekbr9k96>. According to a review at the Film Fugitives web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2yewh4un> there are references to Conan Doyle in the film (and there are plot spoilers in the review).
22519. "Mountain creature--with 'massive' head and blue eyes--discovered as new species," read the headline on a report in the Miami Herald on Feb. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/ybabj7kn>. The "mountain creature" is a frog, about 1.3 inches long, and its species is Caligophryne doylei (Doyle's mist frog). Its Wikipedia entry <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Caligophryne> reports that it is found on a tepui on the border between Brazil and Venezuela and was named in 2023 in honor of Conan Doyle, author of The Lost World.

February 24 #8

22520. Elizabeth Crowens' Hounds of the Hollywood Baskervilles (Olney: Level Best, 2024; 254 pp., $16.95) features young and inexperienced private detective Babs Norman and her partner Guy Brandt, who have been hired by Basil Rathbone in 1940 to find his kidnapped dog (since the police just ask, "Sherlock Holmes has lost his dog?") There are other movie stars (and other kidnapped dogs), and of course villainy afoot, and the story's told with (sometimes slapstick) humor. The author will be at the Mysterious Bookshop in New York for a launch party on Apr. 4, and her web-site's at <www.elizabethcrowens.com>.
22521. Theatrical news: Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is scheduled at the Bates Masonic Lodge in Attleboro, Mass., Mar. 1-17 <www.tinyurl.com/sdk5zs2a>.
22522. Tim Kelly's adaptation of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the O'Reilly Theatre in Dublin, Ireland, Mar. 7-8; their web-site is at <www.oreillytheatre.com>.
22523. Kent R. Brown's children's play "Dracula: A Comic Thriller Starring Shirley Holmes and Jennie Watson" will be performed at the Traveling Players Studio in Tyson's Corner, Va., Mar. 9-17 <www.tinyurl.com/h3a273h9>.
22524. "The Great Murder Mystery" is a dinner-theater presentation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" scheduled at the Lost Estate in London, Mar. 12-May 24 <www.tinyurl.com/4hywm73a>.
22525. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Heiress" will be performed as an "old-fashioned radio-style play" in New Brunswick, Canada, Mar. 16-23 <www.tinyurl.com/3yx9dwe4>.
22526. Nick Lane's "Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of Four" is scheduled at the Robin Hood Theatre in Newark-on-Trent, Notts., Mar. 23-26 <www.rhtc.co.uk>.
22527. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes and Ms. Watson—Apt. 2B is coming up at the Alvina Kraus Theatre in Bloomsburg, Pa., Mar. 28-Apr. 14 <www.bte.org>.
22528. Richard Levin's "Sherlock Holmes & the Star of Arabia" will be performed at Tudor House in Lake Arrowhead, Calif., Apr. 26-May 4; their web-site is at <www.heislertheater.com>.
22529. I've long described this newsletter as "six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean." If you would like to run a word-search on a large file with all of the text since March 1985 (which is when I entered the computer age), you can now do that, thanks to Steve Mason, who updates his compilation each month and kindly posts at the Beacon Society's web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com/scuttlebutt-from-the-spermacetti-press.html>. If you occasionally forget that the PDF of a new issue of this newsletter is available on-line, you're welcome to join the Google Group for monthly reminders; just let me know by e-mail.

22530. The winter issue of Canadian Holmes (the journal of the Bootmakers of Tor-onto) offers Donny Zaldin's article about the Agony Column (in Victorian culture and in the Canon), Mark Jones' discussion of Conan Doyle's short story "The Black Doctor", and much more. Subscriptions are included with membership, $50.00 a year (print) or $35.00 (PDF), and $12.00 postpaid for a single issue <www.torontobootmakers.com/membership>.
22531. "Money back if not satisfied" was an offer made by Harper Brothers to its customers in 1929, and the Japanese publisher Hayakawa makes the same offer for its new translation of Tom Mead's Death and the Conjuror. You can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/2s426afz>.
22532. "The Case of Sherlock Holmes' Motorcycle" offers Brendan McAleer's amusing discussion of (and answer to) the question: "what kind of motorcycle did Sherlock Holmes ride?" You can read his article (and answer) at the Hagerty Media web-site <www.tinyurl.com/5epuncsd>.
22533. Jennie Paton has reported the discovery of some interesting footage from the long-lost Universal film "Sherlock Holmes Meets Dracula" (now available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ov0WnRzLrhQ>).
22534. Sasha Archibald's article in the Public Domain Review about P. H. Ditchfield's Books Fatal to Their Authors (1895) isn't Sherlockian, but it's a fascinating look at how dangerous being an author can be; you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/5n77vupc>.
22535. The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, edited by Jonathan Cranfield (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023; 359 pp., £125.00), is the second volume in The Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle, and includes the text of the book, detailed introductions; comparisons of first serial appearances and first editions, the text of "The Cardboard Box" and a discussion of the story's history, and explanatory notes. Some may question the publisher's boast that it's "the first scholarly edition" of the book (if they are aware of The Oxford Sherlock Holmes and Leslie S. Klinger's The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library and New Annotated Sherlock Holmes), but Edinburgh's project will include much of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work).
22536. The artist's sketchbooks owned by Henry Marriott Paget and Walter Stanley Paget (Sidney Paget's brothers), offered at Chorley's in Gloucestershire on Feb. 6 (Jan 24 #2) each estimated at £200-£300, were sold for £150 each <www.tinyurl.com/mz9mhvyf>.
22537. The Daily Beast says that "Benny Hill, classic '80s video games, Voltron, and Sherlock Holmes are components of this zany gem," its review (Feb. 27) of the film "Hundreds of Beavers" <www.tinyurl.com/3zruvp55>. There is a trailer at the official web-site <www.hundredsofbeavers.com>, and you can see images of the Holmes and Watson beavers at the film's page at Facebook <www.tinyurl.com/52vzt53u>.

22538. Sad news for those who have procrastinated about visiting Lew Trenchard, the home of Sabine Baring-Gould (Dec 88 #2 and May 18 #2). He wrote about the folk-tales of Dartmoor, including the spectral hounds, and his grandson William S. Baring-Gould's biography of Sherlock Holmes used details from his grandfather's life in describing Holmes' early years. Sabine Baring-Gould also was visited by Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes in Laurie R. King's novel The Moor (1998). Lew Trenchard, run as a luxury hotel and restaurant for the last twelve years, has now been closed due to "difficult trading conditions," and is expected to return to Baring-Gould family ownership. Oliver Mundy kindly forwarded one of the on-line reports <www.tinyurl.com/3v5dn57a>. One of the very best items on the restaurant menu (in 2004) was the Devonshire clotted cream ice cream.
22539. The Japanese eight-episode series "Miss Sherlock" (Oct 18 #5) is available on HBO Max, and it is well worth watching; it stars Yûko Takeuchi as Sherlock and Shihori Kanjiya as her friend Wato-san, and is full of Canonical echoes <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Miss_Sherlock>.
22540. Bill Seil has reported that Harry Bliss' comic strip was nicely Sherlockian on Feb. 26 <www.gocomics.com/bliss/2024/02/26>.
22541. Country Life continues to publish interesting articles about stately homes in Britain, including one (on Jan. 28) on Madresfield Court (in Worcestershire) <www.tinyurl.com/yxzv8kyv>; a house that has been owned by the same family for more than 900 years.
22542. The first of the "obligatory Canonical toasts" listed in the Constitution and Buy-Laws of the Baker Street Irregulars is to The Woman, and episode #282 of the interviews by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder at their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/bzce3t8b> is their discussion of "A History of The Woman" with Beverly Wolov, who was honored with that toast in 1997.
22543. "The Holmes You Never Knew: Black American Adaptations Then and Now" is a virtual lecture by Ann McClellan at the Public Library in Groton, Mass., on Apr. 23 (7:00-8:00 pm); she will discuss the Broadway musical "In Dahomey" (1902), the silent film "A Black Sherlock Holmes" (1918), jazz references, graphic novels, and modern fan fiction, and the registration link for the Zoom event is at <www.tinyurl.com/5n7uekbn>.
22544. There was a colorful report about The Langham in Upscale Living Magazine on Feb. 15 <www.upscalelivingmag.com/features/the-langham-hotel>; it's a lot fancier now than it was in 1889, when Conan Doyle dined there (and was commissioned to write "The Sign of the Four").
22545. Marvin Lachman died on Oct. 21. Marv was an outstanding scholar of crime and mystery fiction, and won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for his work on The Encyclopedia of Mystery and Detection (1976). He also received their Raven Award (for significant contributions to the genre) in 1997, and his later books included The Heirs of Anthony Boucher (2005) and The Villainous Stage (2014). He was the fan guest of honor at Bouchercon in 1984, and was knowledgeable and helpful to a host of friends.

22546. The Internet continues to offer a flood of rumors about, and comment on, the BBC's "Sherlock" television series, and occasionally older news turns up. "Sherlock creators reveal their choices for female Sherlock Holmes," was the announcement at the Digital Spy web-site on July 27, 2020 <www.tinyurl.com/2sfbtdra>. Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss had suggested Michelle Gomez, Phoebe Waller-Bridge, and Olivia Colman, and producer Sue Vertue proposed Jodie Comer (you can easily find their images and resumes on-line). But there were no suggestions for a female Watson; "You know what I get stuck on?" Moffat said, "Who is John Watson as a woman?" And yes, all seven seasons of "Elementary" had aired by then.
22547. Yes, that interesting footage from the long-lost Universal film "Sherlock Holmes Meets Dracula" (Mar 24 #2) might well have been posted on Apr. 1.
22548. The Kyodo News reported on Mar. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/3kntkn2v> that the "Immersive Fort Tokyo" theme park is now open; its web-site shows some of its Sherlockian atmosphere <www.immersivefort.com/en>. There's much more in a full-scale (and colorful) review posted to the Japan Wireless web-magazine on Mar. 7 <www.tinyurl.com/mww6tuzn>.
22549. Mark Johann <mkr9905@gmail.com> wonders if anyone knows anything about a plastic token, 1.25" in diameter, with interesting Sherlockian artwork. The M.A.T.C.A. was the Maryland Amusement Token Collectors Association, founded in 1979 (but apparently no longer active).
22550. Possibly something truly new for Sherlockians: Jennie Paton reports a video review <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Z07f7XgHBpw> of Jorge Félix's The Baker Street Canon (2024), which can be found easily at Amazon (for Kindle only); the video was created by someone who used invideo AI, and it's quite possible that the book also is an AI product. There's another video from invideo AI at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=z6J0k2_I368>, but Jorge may be the first AI author of a Sherlockian book. There is a lot more about Amazon and AI at <www.tinyurl.com/2md975sk>. Note that invideo AI should not be confused with Nvidia, which is a dominant supplier of artificial intelligence hardware and software.

22551. "The Wonderful Story of Henry Sugar" is a new film, nominated for an Oscar (best live action short film), based on a short story by Roald Dahl, now available on Netflix, with some fine actors, and well done indeed. Samantha Wolov has noted that in an early scene in a hospital a doctor is seen sitting at a table holding a book that has a Sherlock Holmes silhouette on its cover (a nod, perhaps, to Benedict Cumberbatch, who's one of the stars in the film. We'll be seeing more Roald Dahl stories on Netflix: in Sept. 2021 Netflix bought the Roald Dahl Story Company for $686 million.
22552. Sonia Fetherston has reported a tea available from the Republic of Tea in Larkspur, Calif. <www.republicoftea.com/calm-focus/p/v20851>, that may be of interest to Sherlockians: it's a green tea, with uplifting peppermint and lion's mane mushroom extract, and a touch of bright lemon. She found it in her CostPlus World Market, so it might be in other local stores.

22553. The winter issue of The Magic Door (published by the friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) has Gareth A. Reeves' article on "Examining Trace Fossils in 'The Terror of Blue John Gap'", David Sanders' report on Dana Richards' lecture on "Conan Doyle and The Fires of Fate", and much more. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Cliff Goldfarb at the Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
22554. Elizabeth Crowens, author of Hounds of the Hollywood Baskervilles (Feb 24 #8) will be happy to speak to Sherlockian societies via Zoom or in person. She lives in New York City, e-mail at <greatyear111@gmail.com>, and web-site at <www.elizabethcrowens.com>.
22555. You can watch Sherlock's Jewel come from behind to finish second on Mar. 9 at Tampa Bay Downs <www.youtube.com/watch?v=A7MQZxigEMc>; video kindly reported by Jennie Paton.
22556. Philip Cunningham is compiling a census of Michael Murphy's Conferment by Needle, a pamphlet issued in 1980 reprinting Vincent Starrett's correspondence with T. S. Eliot about Eliot's honorary membership in the Hounds of the Baskerville (sic); there were 230 copies, 1-221 numbered and nine unnumbered, some signed or inscribed by Murphy in black or green ink. Phil would like to hear from anyone who has a copy <pic121@comcast.net>.
22557. In case you weren't watching the Oscars ceremony this month, Robert Downey Jr., who has played Sherlock Holmes in two films, won as best actor in a supporting role as (Lewis S. Strauss in "Oppenheimer"), and "The Wonderful World of Henry Sugar" (Mar 24 #3) won as best live-action short film.
22558. Japanese director Hayao Miyazaki won his second Oscar (for best animated feature film) for "The Boy and the Heron". His first Oscar was for "Spirited Away" (2001), and he was the director of six early episodes of "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound" (1983).
22559. The manuscripts of four unpublished short stories by A. A. Milne, one of them an amusing Sherlock Holmes pastiche, have been published in the new The Complete Short Stories of A. A. Milne (Richmond: Farrago, 2024; 304 pp., £12.99/$22.27). The stories were found by the agent of the Milne estate in his papers at the Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas, and the new book has an introduction written by Gyles Brandreth, who imagines Milne in the next world, sitting on a heavenly cloud with two of his good friends and personal heroes, Conan Doyle and Barrie. If you'd like to see the manuscript of the Sherlock Holmes story, it sold at auction in 2018 <www.tinyurl.com/4krckc6> for $900 (including the buyer's premium).
22560. The new story ("Elementary, My Dear Vincent") appears to have been written and sent in 1933 to Vincent Seligman, and it's a nice addition to Milne's Sherlockian credentials, which started with "The Rape of the Sherlock" in Vanity Fair (Oct. 15, 1903). The burlesque was his first published fiction; it's not in the new book, but was reprinted in Ellery Queen Mystery Magazine (Feb. 1974).

March 24 #5

22561. A West Wind, edited by Thomas A. Horrocks and Ray Betzner (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 2024; 204 pp., $39.95), is subtitled "How America and Americans Influenced the Sherlockian Canon," and offers interesting essays that include Curtis Armstrong's expert analysis of just how good an actor Sherlock Holmes was when he pretended to be an American, Burt Wolder's well-illustrated examination of how Americans saw Holmes when the stories were first published, and many more. You can order the book from the BSI at <www.bakerstreetirregulars.com/tag/books>.
22562. Michael Culver died on Feb. 27. He began acting on stage in Britain, and went on to a career that lasted more than 50 years. Best known, perhaps, for his death scene (as Captain Needa) in "Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back" (1980), he also played Sir Reginald Musgrave in the Granada version of "The Musgrave Ritual" (1986).
22563. For everyone who fondly remembers Sherlock Hemlock: Jennie Paton has found a nice compilation of his many appearances on "Sesame Street" at YouTube <www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLxVUNwZo_UyO02nZVQyDIPQDBrALPFI_C>.
22564. "Remembering Gene Wilder" (a new 92-minute documentary now in limited re-lease in U.S. theaters) <www.tinyurl.com/2m8kjiymp> has had nice reviews; one hopes that it includes footage from "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975), a film which he wrote, directed, and starred in, and that it will soon be available on one of the cable channels.
22565. Petri Wine was heavily advertised in the good old days, and an unusual porcelain enamel garage sign was recently offered at eBay <www.tinyurl.com/5ddj7wu7> by a dealer in Australia, for AU$180.00 (plus shipping, of course). It would seem that Petri's advertising was different down under than here (there is no date for the sign).
22566. UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) has recognized Exeter as a City of Literature, and Exeter is celebrating the event with colorful murals at the city's Great Western Railways station. The murals include scenes from books by famous authors, and the announcement by the Exeter City Council allows you to see one of the murals <www.tinyurl.com/yc5e537k>. There's no mention of the Great Western in the Canon, but Holmes and Watson must have used it when they traveled to Exeter in two of their cases.
22567. Joel Cohen has reported a colorful slide-show on "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Poisonous Plants" at the web-site of the Science History Institute in Philadelphia <www.tinyurl.com/yckb3ust>.
22568. The first volume of Tripwire's graphic novel Sherlock Holmes and the Empire Builders: The Gene Genie <www.tinyurl.com/4zk7an7p> is now in print (96 pp., $35.00), and the first few pages are available (free) on the Global Comix digital platform <www.tinyurl.com/5n83r7sa>. It's an alternate-universe science fiction story, with striking artwork, and Oswald Mosely (leader of the British Union of Fascists) as the villain. Tripwire's web-site's at <www.trpwire1001.bigcartel.com>.

March 24 #6

22569. "Conan Doyle's books are always so good," the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VIII) wrote in 1911, thanking someone for sending him three charming books. The letter was offered at International Autograph Auctions Europe on Mar. 14 <www.tinyurl.com/x58f5axv>, with an estimate of

- €200-€300, and it was bought for €320 (plus buyer's premium). One hopes, of course, that the fortunate buyer will eventually some day be able to identify those three charming books.
22570. It's always interesting when films and television are reviewed by real experts: Jennie Paton spotted the Thoroughbred Racing Commentary web-site's review of various versions of "Silver Blaze" on Feb. 25 (Granada came in first) <www.tinyurl.com/2b5h2v9z>.
22571. The 2023 Baker Street Almanac is now on-line and available without charge <www.greenbag.org/almanacs/BS/2023.html>; more than 364 pages, so it takes a while to download the PDF file, but it's well worth it. That means that the print version of the 2024 Almanac is almost ready; the URL also offers information on how to subscribe.
22572. Laurie R. King has begun work on her next novel, about Mary Russell's Uncle Jake (who gave her, and then taught her how to use, her first throwing knife. You can read the (possible) opening of the Prologue at her blog at <www.tinyurl.com/ymx4n6bh>.
22573. The Swann Galleries auction of material from the Steve Forbes Collection included a lot with nine manuscript pages from, and other material related to, the last chapter ("Singular Records of a Circle") of Conan Doyle's The Edge of the Unknown (1930), estimated at $3,000-$4,000; it sold for $2,400 (plus the buyer's premium). Randall Stock's discussion of the manuscript is at <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/edge-unknown-2024.htm>.
22574. There's continuing discussion of what can happen when characters enter the public domain, and what has happened with and to Winnie the Pooh. "Winnie the Pooh: Blood and Honey" (2023) was so successful that there's now a sequel <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Winnie-the-Pooh:_Blood_and_Honey>.
22575. There are some people who still have 16mm projectors: a print of Christopher Plummer's television film "Silver Blaze" (1977) was sold this month at eBay for $115 <www.tinyurl.com/yved86hw>.
22576. The two "Moriarty" series now available at Audible (Sep 23 #5) continue to be well-reviewed and there was an interesting interview with Phil LaMarr (who plays Sherlock Holmes) posted at the Bleeding Cool web-site (Nov. 16) <www.tinyurl.com/23zjvi94>.
22578. Ross Davies has discovered an interesting (and expensive) letter from F. Scott Fitzgerald offered by a New York dealer <www.tinyurl.com/mvhwfw8s> in which Fitzgerald mentions having written an "utterly imitative" Sherlock Holmes story. This may (or may not) have become his first appearance in print: "The Mystery of the Raymond Mortgage" (non-Sherlockian), which was published in a school magazine in 1909 (Mar 17 #6). Fred Dannay found the story and reprinted it in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Mar. 1960) and in Ellery Queen's 15th Mystery Annual (1960).

March 24 #7

22579. John Allen's Stylometric Analysis of the Sherlock Holmes Canon (Allen & Allen Semiotics, 2021; 57 pp., $5.95) offers the basis behind his earlier Shadow Woman: The Creator of Sherlock Holmes and Brimstone (Mar 18 #4); Allen has used the function-word frequencies of Conan Doyle's stories and concluded this his first wife Louise wrote 27 of the Sherlock Holmes short stories and that his second wife Jean wrote 28 (with "The Empty House" being the only one written by Conan Doyle). Some of his non-Sherlockian stories also were written by Louise and Jean. Allen also has a Louise Conan Doyle Cyclopedia web-site, where he has been blogging since June 2017 <www.louiseconandoyle.com>.
22580. It may not be the better-known Guinness World Records, but on Feb. 16 the World Record Academy listed the world's largest Sherlock Holmes collection at the University of Minnesota <www.tinyurl.com/2pyn2x7c> (with some nice images of the collection).
22581. Christian Klaver's Sherlock Holmes & Dorian Gray (New York, Titan, 2024; 353 pp., $25.99) is the third in his "classified dossier" series. There are vampires galore, including Dracula and Mina and (now) Watson, who with Holmes are confronted with vicious enemies that include H. G. Wells' Doctor Moreau. Dorian Gray is decidedly different from the character in Oscar Wilde's story, and the focus of Klaver's book is on Watson rather than Holmes. The author's web-site is at <www.christianklaver.com>.
22582. The March issue of the Beacon Society's Not-So-Quarterly Newsletter now is available at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>, with the latest news from the society and its efforts to offer "teachers, librarians, children's museums, and children's theaters with local resources to bring the magic of Sherlock Holmes to life."
22583. Further to the item (Jan 24 #5) about the celebration of the 40th anniversary of "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound", Jennie Paton discovered a nice post to the SoraNews24 web-site (Mar. 26) <www.tinyurl.com/4t7ytti7>, with an image of the poster for the new theatrical release (and a trailer for the older Blu-ray collection).
22584. Holly Turner has reported in the March issue of the District Messenger on an antique dealer's offer of a silver salver presented to Dr. Joseph Bell by the Glasgow Infirmary in April 1862 <www.tinyurl.com/727wja85>.
22585. The District Messenger, launched in 1982 as the "grapevine service of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, is an excellent monthly round-up of goings on in the Sherlockian and Doylean world in Britain and elsewhere; current and back issues are available at <www.tinyurl.com/34u876mj>.
22586. Les Klinger has now edited 17 volumes in the Library of Congress' Crime Classics series; the latest is Richard Harding Davis' atmospheric In the Fog (1901). You can sample Les' introduction to the reprint at the Crime-Reads web-site <www.tinyurl.com/4bppwczu>. It's not really true that everything has a connection to Sherlock Holmes, but: the book's first edition had grand illustrations by Frederic Dorr Steele, and Davis mentored young Vincent Starrett at the beginning of his brief career as a war correspondent.

22587. There's all sorts of theatrical news: Joe and Brad Dickenson's "Sherlock Holmes: The Melodrama" is on at the Pocket Sandwich Theatre in Carrollton, Tex., through May 11 <www.pocketsandwich.com>.
22588. James Barry's "Sherlock's Excellent Adventure" continues on tour in Britain through July 6 <www.ourstartheatrecompany.com/what-s-on>.
22589. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" will be running at the Gateway Theatre in Richmond, B.C., Apr. 11-20 <www.gatewaytheatre.com>; presented in English with traditional and simplified Chinese subtitles (certainly understandable in a city that's said to have a population that's 74% ethnically Chinese). It also is scheduled at the Bell Tower Theater in Dubuque, Iowa, on Apr. 12-28 <www.belltowerthter.net>; and will be touring in England, on Apr. 20-27 <www.facebook.com/minttheatresociety>. It's next at the Greenbrier Valley Theatre in Lewisburg, W.Va., on May 10-18 <www.gvtheatre.org/baskerville>; and at the Ruth Humphreys Brown Theatre in Creede, Colo., May 25-Sept. 14 <www.creederep.org>.
22590. "Sherlock & Cinders" (by Tom Kirkham and Matthew Crosby) is scheduled at the Muse Theater in Jefferson City, Mo., Apr. 18-20; their web-site's at <www.itsybitsyboradway.com>.
22591. Teresa Pesce's "Sherlock" will have its world premiere at the Panida Theater in Sandpoint, Idaho, Apr. 19-27 <www.panida.org>.
22592. Max Bush's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of Abbey Grange" and "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Capper Beeches" will be produced at the Patsy Miller Studio Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., Apr. 25-May 4; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/mps28he7>.

22593. Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band" has been scheduled at the Placer Repertory Theater in Rocklin, Calif., May 3-4 <www.placerrep.org>.
22594. Ron Kelly Spurles' humorous "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Missing Heiress" will be performed radio-style (BBC in 1928) at the Sackville Legion in Sackville, NB, May 4 <www.tinyurl.com/ymamsrd2>.
22595. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Crown Jewel" (by Janet Yates Vogt and Mark Friedman) is to be performed at Wollondilly Anglican College in Tahmoor, N.S.W., May 7-9 <www.trybooking.com/events/landing/1178632?>.
22596. Bert Coules' "Watson: The Final Problem" is scheduled at the 59E59 Theaters in New York, May 22-June 9 <www.tinyurl.com/mrx9dzkc>; it's a one-man show starring Tim Marriott.
22597. "Sherlock and Watson: A Murder in the Garden" is a new comedy from Calf 2 Cow, launching a tour in Britain at the Maumbury Rings in Dorchester, Dorset, on June 7 <www.calf2cow.co.uk/sherlockandwatson>.
22598. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson--Apt. 2B" will be performed at the Robert Shackleton Playhouse in Cape May, N.J., July 17-Aug. 25; web-site at <www.capemaystage.org>.

April 24 #1

22599. According to Variety (Jan. 3) <www.tinyurl.com/44w2a63r> CBS-TV has given a straight-to-series order for "Watson" (expected to air during the 2024-2025 season). The series is set one year after Holmes' death at the Reichenbach, with Morris Chestnut as Watson, who had resumed his medical career as head of a clinic devoted to treating rare disorders, but "Watson's old life isn't done with him." Craig Sweeny created the series and will be the showrunner and executive producer; he was an executive producer and writer on the "Elementary" series that ran for seven seasons on CBS, and it's obvious that the network is hoping for another success.
22600. The latest (unconfirmed) film rumor is about plans for a new "Young Sherlock" movie based on Andrew Lane's Young Sherlock series of novels, in development at Motive Pictures, noted at the Covered Geekly web-site on Apr. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/fh4pmjzi>, and headed directly to the "don't hold your breath" file.
22602. When in Japan: you can visit the Sherlock Holmes Pub in Osaka. There's a brief video tour <www.youtube.com/watch?v=NfaXYbjEwys>, reported by Yuichi Hirayama.
22603. I've mentioned Neve Rendell's blog "The Great Baz" before (Jul 13 #2), and am happy to recommend it again, for the three-part post about who actually wrote Basil Rathbone's autobiography In and Out of Character (1962), kindly reported by Ann Marlowe <www.tinyurl.com/3j2xch8e>.
22604. Cliff Goldfarb, who likely isn't the only Sherlockian interested in genealogy, has reported Sherlock Cohn, who's really Ava Cohn, a photo genealogist whose web-site's at <www.sherlockcohn.com>.
22605. I don't generally report on Sherlockian statues and sculptures and miniatures, because there are so many of them now, but Jenny Paton has noted an unusual "Holmes and Watson" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=IhV86mLROK8>. Available in May for £69.00 <www.tinyurl.com/83hb5ezk>.
22606. Bill Seil has kindly reported an amusing interview with William Shatner in 2004 <www.youtube.com/watch?v=nuz0bivB3wc> in which he recalls acting with Basil Rathbone. "Billy Budd" was broadcast in 1955 in the (Canadian) CBC television series "Encounter", and the episode is conveniently available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=0GQasQrSjWo>.
22607. William Samples died on Jan. 2. He began his acting career in a Canadian film in 1980, and went on to voice a long list of characters in television animations, including Chief Inspector Greyson in 26 episodes of "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (1999-2001).

22608. Brenda Rossini, in her Oscar Slater: A Killer Exposed (MX Publishing, 2023; 405 pp., $36.95), offers a carefully researched discussion of the murder of Marion Gilchrist, the trial and conviction of Oscar Slater for her murder, and Conan Doyle's long (and successful) campaign to free Slater from prison. Rossini concludes that Slater actually was guilty of the crime, and explains in detail why she believes that others, including Conan Doyle, who wrote about the case and believed Slater innocent, were wrong.
22609. It isn't Sherlockian, but: Nicholas Meyer, the director of "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan" (and the author of a grand series of Sherlockian pastiches) was featured in a symposium about the film arranged by the American Society of Music Arrangers and Composers on Feb. 27. It's interesting, and nicely available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/4me36kry>. Kindly reported by Samantha Wolov.
22610. Richard L. Kellogg reports that Barry Baskerville and the Stolen Car (Air-ship 27), the ninth in his series of children's books, is now available at Amazon and elsewhere.
22611. Walter W. Jaffee ("The Retired Colourman") died on Mar. 8. He had a long career as an officer in the U.S. Merchant Marine, authored 18 books about ships and the sea, and edited Mobile Holmes: Transportation in the Sherlockian Canon in 2017 for the Baker Street Irregulars Press. He also was a long-time member of the Scowrsers and Molly Maguires, and he received his Investiture from the BSI in 2009.
22612. Judge Dee and Lao Sheh met with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson in London in 1924 in John Shen Yen Nee and SJ Rozan's "The Killing of Henry Davenport" in Ellery Queen Mystery Magazine (Jan./Feb. 2023), and while their new The Murder of Mr. Ma (New York: Soho Crime, 2024; 300 pp., $25.95) is not Sherlockian, it's inspired by the Canon and has Judge Dee and Lao Sheh again in London in 1924, investigating murders in the city's Chinese community. The novel's entertaining, and the Afterword "It Takes a (Chinese) Village" is available on-line at the EQMM blog "Something Is Going to Happen" at <www.tinyurl.com/dytjwvtw>.
22613. Philip Cunningham's census of Michael Murphy's Conferment by Needle (Mar 24 #4) is well underway, and a preliminary version now is available from him by e-mail <pj121@comcast.net>. If your copy is not yet listed in the census, you're welcome to come aboard; the pamphlet reprints Vincent Starrett's correspondence with T. S. Eliot about Eliot's honorary membership in the Hounds of the Baskerville (sic).
22614. The Strange Case of the Pharaoh's Heart, by Timothy Miller (Jersey City: Seventh Street, 2024; 288 pp., $18.95), is set in 1923 and has Sir Sherlock (a firm believer in Spiritualism), Watson, and Mrs. Estelle Roberts (and her spirit guide Red Cloud), traveling from London to Egypt to investigate the deaths of Lord Carnarvon and others, and the disappearance of a valuable artifact from Tutankhamun's tomb. They encounter T. E. Lawrence and Howard Carter, and of course solve the mysteries. Miller has a web-page at <www.tinyurl.com/56a2wkcX>.

22615. The Daily Mail reported (Mar.28) <www.tinyurl.com/5sv7vkje> that Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice have teamed up to write songs for a play which Rice's son Donald is producing. "Sherlock Holmes and the Twelve Days of Christmas" will feature Holmes investigating a serial killer who is dispatching his victims using methods suggested by the carol ("think partridges and milkmaids").

22616. The Cinemaholic web-site reported (Mar. 30) <www.tinyurl.com/3srd96fr> on CBS-TV's plans to begin shooting in Vancouver in June for their new series "Watson" (Jan 24 #5); Morris Chestnut will star as Watson, who has resumed his medical career as head of a clinic devoted to treating rare disorders, after Holmes' fatal battle at the Reichenbach.
22617. William H. Vande Water ("An Enlarged Photograph") died on Mar. 17. Bill enjoyed a wide range of interests, including the history of magic and (of course) Sherlock Holmes, contributing to our literature, and founding imaginative Sherlockian societies such as the Billy Club and A Case of Identifiers. He had a long career with CBS Television, and as the archivist of their film and tape library was well placed, when they decided to throw out a storage room of old videotapes, to rescue and preserve for posterity the 1957 "Odyssey" program devoted to the Baker Street Irregulars. He received his Investiture from the BSI in 1994.
22618. Christian Klaver's Sherlock Holmes & Mr. Hyde (New York, Titan, 2022; 344 pp., $19.99) is the second in his "classified dossier" series. Watson has become a vampire, and he and Dracula and Mina join Holmes in pursuit of a villainous cult, encountering both Jekyll and Hyde and others who are not quite the same as in books written by Stoker and Stevenson and Wells. The author's web-site is at <www.christianklaver.com>.
22619. Linda Hein has reported that the Hein & Company bookstore has moved, and now is in Sutter Creek, Calif. Their first author event will be held on May 7 and will feature Elizabeth Crowens and her Hounds of the Hollywood Baskervilles (Feb 24 #8). Photographs of the new store are available at her Facebook page <www.facebook.com/UsedandRare>.
22620. The Torists International and the Watsonians will celebrate the 65th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze horse race on June 28, at the Hawthorne Race Course in Stickney, Ill. There's no charge for parking or for admission; if you register you'll receive a racing program, a commemorative pin, and a $2 bill for your first bet (they don't know of any other Sherlockian event where you're paid to attend). For additional information, contact Jonathan Shimberg <www.toristintss@gmail.com>.
22621. The National Rifle Association's "Shooting Sports USA" web-site carried a report (Apr. 15) <www.tinyurl.com/243aftma> on the "Sherlock Holmes 1991" (described as "a one-of-a-kind pistol tribute to the legendary fictional detective") advertised by Cabot Guns. There's much more about the pistol at the company's web-site <www.cabotguns.com/sherlock>, and (sorry) it already has been sold, for $229,000 (which includes a luxurious "immersive two-day Sherlock Holmes scavenger hunt in Paris). Rob Bianchin, founder of Cabot Guns and a fan of Sherlock Holmes, has created an attractive concept for a Cabot Custom.

22622. Round the Red Lamp: Being Facts and Fancies of Medical Life, edited by Roger Luckhurst (Edinburgh University Press, 2023; 348 pp., £100), the third volume in The Edinburgh Edition of the Works of Arthur Conan Doyle, includes the text of the book, two stories that were added to the Crowborough Edition, detailed introductions, comparisons of first serial appearances and first editions, the text of two plays, essays and letters in the medical press, and explanatory notes. The next volume in the series will be The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, edited by Andrew Glazzard.
22623. The Edinburgh Edition will offer real scholarship on Conan Doyle's work, both Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian, and the books will be conveniently available for years to come, which will be truly important for anyone who wants access to what the editors have achieved.
22624. The April issue of the newsletter published by the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Phil Bergem's report on "The Klinger Archive", anniversary celebrations of "How Watson Learned the Trick" and Naked Is the Best Disguise, and new from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Timothy Johnson (#15-G Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <johns976@umn.com>.
22625. Nicholas Shakespeare's Ian Fleming: The Complete Man, published last year in Britain, now has an American edition (New York: Harper, 2024; 820 pp., $45.00); it's a fascinating biography of an author who quickly became secondary to the character he created (something not unfamiliar to admirers of Conan Doyle), and Doyleans will enjoy the mentions of Fleming's close friend Richard Hughes, who founded the Baskerville Chapter of the BSI in Japan after World War II, was a character in books by Fleming and John le Carré, and was simultaneously a spy for the British and the Soviets (using the code name Altamont for the Soviets).
22626. Vanessa Thorpe has reported in the Observer (Apr. 20) that Gareth Rubin is the latest author of a pastiche authorized by the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. <www.tinyurl.com/msr6xzaz>. His Holmes and Moriarty is scheduled by Simon & Schuster UK in September, and Rubin also wrote about his book, in which Holmes and Moriarty will be forced to work together on a case, and they'll "compete, collaborate, stab each other in the back, and save one another from fatal peril" <www.tinyurl.com/kttmc7er>.
22627. The collection of the late Rodney P. Swantko (who died in 2022) will be at auction at Sotheby's in New York on June 26, and it will include some truly spectacular material, such as the manuscript of "The Sign of the Four" (estimated at $800,000-$1,200,000), the original Sidney Paget artwork for his illustration of the death of Sherlock Holmes at the Reichenbach, and a copy of the rare Starrett variant of his classic pastiche "The Unique Hamlet" <www.tinyurl.com/4tmm25x5>. Randall Stock has a detailed discussion of the manuscript of "The Sign of the Four" (the most valuable Conan Doyle item ever to be sold at auction, in 1996, for $519,500 including the buyer's premium) at his always-informative "Best of Sherlock Holmes" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/mss/sign-of-four-2024.htm>.

22628. Hartswood Films, founded by the late Beryl Vertue in 1979, is the production company responsible for the "Sherlock" television series that starred Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman; The Times reported last year (Sep 23 #5) that the company was seeking a buyer or an investor to support its fast-growing operations. The latest news, at the Deadline web-site (Apr. 17) is that ITV Studios is in the lead to invest in Hartswood <www.tinyurl.com/zy7a95p3>.
22629. Who knew? Dr. Watson once was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize. That was in 2014, when Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for drama. The play features one actor as computer repair technician Josh Watson, a humanized version of an artificial intelligence device named after IBM's earlier creation, Alexander Graham Bell's assistant Thomas Watson, and Sherlock Holmes' companion. The winner of the prize was Annie Baker's "The Flick", which the prize committee described as a "thoughtful drama with well-crafted characters that focuses on three employees of a Massachusetts art-house movie theatre, rendering lives rarely seen on screen."
22630. If you've wondered about buyer's premiums at auctions, Sotheby's has announced that on May 22 they will reduce their premium, to 20% on the first $6 million (their current premium is 26%). It will be interesting to see whether Christie's and other auction house also reduce their buyer's premiums. If you're planning to bid higher on something, Sotheby's premium above $6 million will be 10%.
22631. "This Here Is Your Life, Sherlock Holmes" (a 34-minute parody of the radio series "This Is Your Life"), commissioned by Sean Wright for performance at the June 1976 meeting of the Non-Canonical Calabashes, was written by Daws Butler and others, and Sean believes it was broadcast by Mike

- Hodel on his "Hour 25" program on KPFK-FM in 1976. You can hear the recording at Audible <www.tinyurl.com/2586epc6>, with Ben Wright as Sherlock Holmes.
22632. Reported: all 177 episodes of the television series "House" are now available on Hulu and Amazon Prime; the series ran for 8 seasons (2004-2012) on Fox and starred Hugh Laurie as Dr. Gregory House. Wikipedia offers a long entry on the series <www.tinyurl.com/ms4jt8er>, which had as its premise "if Sherlock Holmes were a medical doctor, he would be Gregory House," and discusses many (but not all) of the Sherlockian allusions in the series.
22633. William S. Dorn ("The Newgate Calendar") died on Apr. 18. He taught courses on Sherlock Holmes at the Univ. of Denver for more than 25 years, was a prolific publisher of Sherlockian calendars and other Sherlockiana from his Pencil Productions, created and sold the first Sherlock Holmes bobble-head, and was an enthusiastic member of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. Bill received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1999.
22634. The late Chris Steinbrunner, who happily believed he was a Watsonian rather than a Sherlockian, would be delighted to read Olivia Rutigliano's post to the Crime Reads blog (Apr. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/2ub7zb56> ranking "the 81 best, worst, and strangest Dr. Watson portrayals of all time." One may well wonder how many other people actually have seen them all.

22636. Another (older) rumor: the Collider web-site reported (Nov. 7, 2023) on an interview with Scott Stuber, head of Netflix Film, who said that Netflix is "working once again" on a screenplay for a third "Enola Holmes" film.
22637. Theatrical news: Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Community Gathering Place in Humboldt, Sask., May 2-6 <www.facebook.com/humboldttheaterclub>.
22638. "Sherlock Holmes and the Great Royal Goose Chase" (by Peter Sham and Brad Carroll) is due at the Delta Presbyterian Church in Lansing, Mich., on May 10-18 <www.starlightdinnertheatre.com>.
22639. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson--Apt. 2B" will be performed at Osceola Arts in Kissimmee, Fla., May 30-June 15 <www.osceolaarts.org>.
22640. Ken Ludwig's new "Moriarty" is on the schedule at Theatre SilCo in Silverthorne, Colo., June 14-July 7 <www.thesilco.org>.
22641. Kyle Gallagher's "The Man in the Shadows" is due at the Salford Arts Theatre in Salford, Greater Manchester, July 22-23 <www.tinyurl.com/nzn44prf>.
22642. Oliver Gray's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be on tour in Britain again, July 27-Sept. 8 <www.illyria.co.uk>.
22643. More than 1300 shows have been announced for the Edinburgh Festival Fringe <www.edfringe.com>, three of them Sherlockian: the Ghostwriters' "Adventures of the Improvised Sherlock Holmes", Aug. 1-25; Nigel Miles-Thomas' one-man "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act", Aug. 1-25; and Blue Orange Arts' one-man retelling of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", Aug. 2-24.
22644. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes" will be performed at the TPS Center Theatre in Seattle, Wash., Aug. 2-25 <www.theatrepugetsound.org>.
22645. Christopher M. Walsh's "Miss Holmes Returns" will be performed at the Waterville Opera House in Waterville, Maine, Aug. 30-Sept. 8; their web-site is at <www.watervillecreates.org>.
22646. Liam Paterson's opera "Sherlock Holmes and The Sign of Four" will be performed at the Leeds School of Arts in Leeds, Yorks., Aug.-Sept.; web-site at <www.northernoperagroup.co.uk/leeds-opera-festival-2024>.
22647. Ken Ludwig's "Moriarty" will be performed at the Lyceum Theatre in Arrow Rock, Mo., Sept. 6-15 <www.lyceumtheatre.org>; and at the freeFall Theater in St. Petersburg, Fla., Nov. 8-Dec. 15 <www.freefalltheatre.com>.

22648. Reported: The Last Island: Discovery, Defiance, and the Most Elusive Tribe on Earth, by Adam Goodheart (Godine, 2023)), describes North Sentinel Island, "a small patch of land in the Andaman archipelago," and other Andaman tribes' encounters with the outside world; it may (or may not) include mention of "The Sign of the Four".
22649. The musical "Sherlock Holmes and the Poison Wood" (with book and lyrics by Poppy Burton-Morgan and Ben Glasstone) was produced at the Watermill Theatre in Newbury, Berks., last year; the original-cast recording's available for your listening pleasure at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/v5mc8pjt> and Spotify <www.tinyurl.com/3kbz24wc>.
22650. CBS-TV has announced that "Watson" will debut mid-season, on Sundays at 10:00 pm after football season ends (they'll be showing "drama encores" in that slot during football season).
22651. The Frederic Dorr Steele Memorial's seminar on "Murder, Mayhem, and Masterpieces: The Art of Illustrating Mysteries" at the Salmagundi Club (in New York) on June 7 will feature CrimeReads editor Olivia Rutigliano (on the evolution of British detective fiction and the role of illustration) and illustrator and graphic designer Jeff Wong (on how his career collides with his passion as a book collector); more information is available from Burt Wolder <burt@fdsteele.org>.
22652. For those who fondly remember the Sherlockian episodes of "Star Trek: The Next Generation" ("Elementary, My Dear Data" in 1988 and "Ship in a Bottle" in 1993): it seems there were different scripts with different explanations of how the holodeck worked. Chris Snellgrove posted about it at the Giant Freakin Robot web-site on May 5 <www.tinyurl.com/4ewp87bw>.
22653. Anne Perry died on Apr. 10, 2023. Perry was a prolific author, credited with more than 100 books, and was best known for a series featuring Thomas and Charlotte Pitt, and another featuring William Monk. She also contributed the Introduction to The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries, published by the New American Library in 1985 with 22 stories from the Canon; her web-site is at <www.anneperry.us>.
22654. A brief time-out for a visit to South Dakota, a state which seems to have no resident Sherlockians. There used to be a Sherlock & Co. escape room in Sioux Falls, but it closed some time ago, and we missed the production of "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" at the Mitchell Christian School in Mitchell in April. But there still was (of course) a Sherlockian connection there, found in Deadwood, where Sen. George Hearst, who had made a fortune mining gold in California (and silver in Nevada), arrived in 1877 and opened the Homestake Mine, the largest gold mine ever in the Western Hemisphere (readers of "Thor Bridge" will recall Sen. J. Neil Gibson, the Gold King from a western state). Hearst also owned the San Francisco Examiner, the newspaper that launched his son's publishing empire. One wonders what William Randolph Hearst thought when he read "Thor Bridge" in Hearst's International Magazine in 1922.

22655. Sam Siciliano's The Gentleman Burglar (New York: Titan, 2024; 317 pp., $16.95), the latest in Titan's long-running series of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", is an imaginative double pastiche, bringing together Holmes, his cousin Henry Vernier, Arsène Lupin, and Maurice Leblanc in a mystery inspired by The Hollow Needle but, with some added twists and turns, in a story that's nicely told as much in the style of Leblanc as of Conan Doyle (and that's not easily done). The author's web-site is at <www.samsiciliano.net>.
22656. The next 221B Con (A Fan Con for All Things Sherlock Holmes) will be held in Atlanta, Ga., on Apr. 11-13, 2025 <www.221bcon.com>; there's no schedule yet, but you can consult their 2024 schedule to find out what sort of things go on during the five-track program of panels, roundtables, performances, and workshops at the conference.
22657. I've seen the film, so you don't need to. "The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare" was released on Apr. 19 (Feb 24 #7) and the trailer's on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/42fx89uy>. The film was based on Damien Lewis' The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare: How Churchill's Secret Warriors Set Europe Ablaze and Gave Birth to Modern Black Ops (Nov 16 #6), but there was nothing about members of the Special Operations Executive, which had its headquarters in Baker Street, calling themselves the Baker Street Irregulars.
22658. However: the movie was co-written and directed by Guy Ritchie ("Sherlock Holmes" and "Sherlock Holmes Game of Shadows") and it stars Henry Cavill (Sherlock Holmes in two "Enola Holmes" films). It's an exciting film with plenty of action and shooting and explosions, and thoroughly heroic Brits and evil Nazis, and is far less graphic than a lot of other modern films.
22659. It's a minor item from the good old days (reported by Ann Marlowe): the 6-minute animation from Walter Lantz Productions "The Dog That Cried Wolf" (1953) shows Dizzy the sheepdog in Sherlockian costume at the end of the film <www.youtube.com/watch?v=bpH_U09I6fw>.
22660. Apologies to whoever it was who sent the letter from M. A. Lesser that appeared in the N.Y. Times Saturday Review on Feb. 10, 1900, about "Dupin and Sherlock Holmes" (and I wish I could remember whom to thank). Lesser mentioned earlier comments by Henry Austin on imitators who appropriate Edgar Allan Poe's plots, ideas, and methods to feather their own nests. Austin said (in part) that "perhaps the most gaudy example of this kind of free-booter is furnished by Dr. A. Conan Doyle. His alleged detective, Sher-lock Holmes, out of whom he had made so undeserved a reputation, will be found, by any one who takes the trouble to compare Holmes's exploits and methods with those of Dupin, about the crudest and most contemptible imitation of a strong original in all literary annals."
22661. Austin's comments appeared in his Preface to Poe's The Murders in the Rue Morgue and A Tale of the Ragged Mountains (R. F. Fenno, 1899), a book that is not advertised by any book dealer on the Internet, and not held by any library. We are indebted to Ross Davies, who has found Austin's "Preface" on-line at the web-site of the Edgar Allan Poe Society of Baltimore, and has kindly provided a useful URL <www.tinyurl.com/bdszuu9n>.

22662. Douglas Stuart's new Fair Game: A Holmes and Watson Adventure (Cambridge: Vanguard, 2023; 239 pp., $12.99) brings Holmes and Watson to the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904, as guests of President Theodore Roosevelt. There's a dire (and unsuccessful, needless to say) plot to assassinate the President, a detailed description of the attractions of the Fair, and an encounter with Irene Adler Norton.
22663. Caleb Carr died on May 23. His first real success as an author came with The Alienist (1994) and Angels of Darkness (1997), and he went on to write The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes (2005), in which Holmes and Watson travel to Edinburgh to assist Mycroft in defending Her Majesty against a plot that involves Holyrood and David Rizzio (he was Queen Mary's secretary and met his death at Holyrood).
22664. Aziz Adam has reported a Kickstarter campaign for a new game "The Beekeeper's Picnic" <www.tinyurl.com/5ybfvmxe>. The company is called Jabbage <www.jabbage.itch.io>, and you'll find a demo for the game at the Jabbage web-site <www.tinyurl.com/5ybfvmxe>.
22665. Nicholas Meyer's new Sherlock Holmes and the Telegram from Hell (New York: Mysterious Press, 2024; 285 pp., $26.95) brings Holmes and Watson to the United States in 1916, hard at work for the British government, pursuing what's now known as the Zimmerman telegram and meeting J. Edgar Hoover and Alice Roosevelt Longworth in Washington, and succeeding in foiling a dastardly German plan. Meyer, who has been writing Sherlock Holmes stories for a decade longer than Conan Doyle did, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of The Seven-Per-Cent Solution with a fine addition to his long list of Sherlockian novels.
22666. Apples of Gold, a small theater company broadcasting a weekly devotional podcast in Charleston, W.Va., often presents radio drama; their dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" aired in 2023 with Marshall Valentine and Ken Guthrie as Holmes and Watson, and is conveniently available at their web-site <www.applesofgoldstudio.com>. Their "The Hound of the Baskervilles" aired on May 22 this year, with Matthew Emch and Kennie Bass as Holmes and Watson <www.youtube.com/watch?v=uMZ0ovt57Aw>.
22667. "The Cabinet of the Unsolved" (the CBS Radio Mystery Theater's title for "The Man with the Watches") (which many consider an apocryphal addition to the Canon) was broadcast in 1978, and Jennie Paton has reported it available on-line at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=r9SnI_5USCI>. "The Mysterious Rochdale Special" (the apocryphal "The Lost Special") also can be heard at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=0EnNiqBu-2Q>. The long-running CBS series also offered many Canonical stories, as well as some of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian tales.
22668. Pantasy, a Chinese company that offers a wide range of building-brick collectibles, has three that are Sherlockian (versions the house at 221B Baker Street) <www.pantasy.com/collections/sherlock-holmes>. 22670. Variety has reported (May 14) <www.tinyurl.com/3vmcz8ua> on some additional cast (and characters) for the "Watson" series due on CBS-TV after the end of the football season.
22671. The University of Minnesota Libraries will celebrate the golden anniversary of the Sherlock Holmes Collections with a "Sherlock Holmes at 50" exhibition at the Elmer L. Anderson Library in Minneapolis, June 3-Sept. 30 <<https://libnews.umn.edu/2024/05/sherlock-holmes-at-50>>. The conference (same name) <www.norwegianexplorers.org/2024%20conf%20reg.html> (July 26-28) is now at capacity, but you can ask to be on the waiting list.
22672. Tom Schantz died on June 4, 2023. Tom and his wife Enid launched the Aspen Bookhouse in 1970 and went on to publish a series of reprints of early pastiches from their Aspen Press, many of which were imaginatively illustrated by Enid. They continued to sell and publish books from The

- Rue Morgue in Boulder, Colo., and were delighted to meet old and new friends and customers at Bouchercon, Malice Domestic, and Left Coast Crime.
22673. There's an amusing 5-minute video of "Sheerluck Holmes on the Fatal Flaws of Chinese EVs" <www.tinyurl.com/4hc95p4x>; produced by Xinhua Global Services, the video was made before an even more important flaw was created, when the U.S. imposed a 100% tariff on Chinese EVs.
22674. The Rosenbach Museum & Library in Philadelphia has completed its "Sherlock Mondays" weekly series of 90-minute virtual programs (Jun 23 #2) covering 27 of the stories (from "A Study in Scarlet" to "The Empty House"), hosted by senior manager of public programs Edward G. Pettit and featuring a rotating group of Sherlockian co-hosts. You can watch all of the programs at the Rosenbach's YouTube channel <www.tinyurl.com/3u4xy7cw>.
22675. The Postal Service has issued a sheet of stamps showing five horses (six, if you count the one in the selva at the top), and you can see the sheet on the next page. Horses are mentioned in many of the Canonical stories, but since these are American horses, one is tempted to say that they honor the horses in "A Study in Scarlet". On the other hand (or hoof), one of the horses (second from the left in the second row) is, according to the Postal Service, a chestnut horse with a white blaze; one could say that it looks remarkably like Silver Blaze.
22676. Of course Silver Blaze is said in the Canon to have been a bay rather than a chestnut. Bays and chestnuts can have the same body color, but bays always have black manes and tails, and it is indeed convenient that we can't see the color of the mane on the horse on the stamp; the horse in the selva has a black mane, and therefore is a bay, marked with a star rather than a blaze.

22691. Scuttlebutt from the Spermaceti Press Sotheby's offered "The library of Dr. Rodney P. Swantko" at auction in New York on June 26 <www.tinyurl.com/bdexvft5>, and the catalog is well worth browsing, to see the sort of interesting rarities he pursued and added to his collection. He also was a generous donor to libraries such as the Lilly Library at Indiana University, the Newberry Library in Chicago, and the Chicago History Museum, but he appears to have kept all of his Sherlockiana in his own collection.
22692. Lots 9 through 13 in the auction were of particular interest to Sherlockians and Doyleans, beginning with the manuscript of The Sign of the Four, and their detailed description of the manuscript certainly is well worth reading <www.tinyurl.com/5dhz4d2h>. Estimated at $800,000-$1,200,000, the manuscript sold for $960,000 (including the buyer's premium), making it the most valuable Sherlockian item ever sold at auction. There's more information about the manuscript to be found at Randall Stock's "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/466ccmhw>.
22693. The auction continued with Sidney Paget's spectacular original artwork for "The Death of Sherlock Holmes" <www.tinyurl.com/2dche4ep>, with an estimate of $250,000-$350,000, it sold for $384,000. Randall Stock has more information about the artwork at <www.tinyurl.com/yc4keu93>.
22694. The next item was a copy of the first British edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles <www.tinyurl.com/22pjuuxr>. Estimated at $6,000-$8,000, it sold for $7,200.
22695. Then came an inscribed copy of Vincent Starrett's The Unique Hamlet, one of the only ten copies of his iconic pastiche that were stated as printed for the friends of Vincent Starrett <www.tinyurl.com/537763j9>; the estimate was $30,000-$40,000, and bidding didn't reach the reserve. Randall Stock's page about the pastiche is at <www.tinyurl.com/y2c2b6ve>.
22696. And last, but certainly not least, was a copy of the large-paper edition of Starrett's The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, inscribed to his friend Lloyd Springer <www.tinyurl.com/57ed8n53>. There were only three copies of the large-paper edition; they were specially bound for the author, and this is the only copy known to have survived. Estimated at $1,500-$2,000, it sold for $1,320. Randall Stock has more information about the book at <www.tinyurl.com/5b7c7rub>.

22697. One can get a sense that Swantko's interests included more than books: the 47 items in the auction included 8 volumes about golf.
22698. You can also see a Canonical manuscript in Washington (a fine excuse for a visit to the nation's capital): the Folger Shakespeare Library reopened on June 21, and there's a temporary exhibition of literary treasures from the Stuart and Mimi Rose Collection on display, one of them the manuscript of "The Valley of Fear" <www.tinyurl.com/5a5mdhv9>. The exhibition will end on Jan. 5. The game's also afoot in their 82 copies of First Folios (with the quote in "Henry IV Part 1" and "Henry V").

22699. The spring issue of The Magic Door (published by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's warm tribute to the "Bigelow Index" card file (which now has about 53,000 cards, and was thoroughly useful when a cyber-attack last October shut down the on-line catalog for all 100 branches of the Library for three months); Jessie Amaolo's report on the collection's acquisition of the one important edition of the Canon that Cameron Hollyer noted in 1986 that they did not have: the first book edition of A Study in Scarlet, illustrated by Conan Doyle's father; and much more. You can ask for a copy of the newsletter from Cliff at the Toronto Public Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
22700. Roger Corman died on May 9. He had a long Hollywood career as a director and producer, and became famous (or infamous) for making low-budget films. He also helped launch the careers of Jack Nicholson, Francis Ford Coppola, Robert De Niro, and others, and in 2009 was awarded an honorary Oscar for lifetime achievement. Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine (edited by David Stuart Davies) reported in 1999 on a rumor that Corman was planning to film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (he never did, but one can be sure it would have been interesting).
22701. Howard Ostrom has reported that 6,000 people follow his "Sherlock Holmes on Screens" group at Facebook (which covers stage, screen, radio, television, and the Internet) <www.facebook.com/groups/sherlockholmesonscreens>; it's a lively group indeed.
22702. Greg Darak reports that Howlin' Wolf Records offers a CD with the score of "Murder by Decree" (the grand 1979 film that starred Christopher Plummer and James Mason <www.howlinwolfrecords.com/storemurderbydecree.html> for $18.95; the CD also has some music not used in the film, and the web-site has a link to a 12-minute audio documentary about the score.
22703. Howlin' Wolf also still offers an "In the Name of Sherlock Holmes" CD with Róbert Gulya's score from the 2011 Hungarian film "Sherlock Holmes Néveben" for $13.95 <www.howlinwolfrecords.com/storeitnosh.html>.
22704. Karen Ellery, who presides over the Tea Brokers of Mincing Lane (a society for Sherlockian lover of tea and tisanes), reports the society's official T-shirt <www.zazzle.com/tea_at_once_t_shirt-256003383475187607>, available for $22.95 with imaginative artwork by Sidney Paget. The reason why the artwork's imaginative is that Paget never showed Sherlock Holmes drinking tea: the original of his illustration of Holmes with cigar and cigar case (from "The Resident Patient") has been carefully altered to show him with a tea cup and saucer.
22705. Christie & Co. have announced that the Brambletye Hotel in Forest Row (in Sussex) is for sale <www.tinyurl.com/5yn4rfer>. Holmes and Watson stayed at the Brambletye, presumably in one of its 19 rooms, and there's an aptly-named Two Two One Restaurant (alas: Black Peter's Bar & Restaurant now seems to be closed). The hotel also has a Moriarty Boardroom, a Sherlock Holmes Suite, and a Dr. Watson Lounge, all available for £1.5 million.

22706. Conan Doyle's The Refugees made news world-wide, thanks to an Agence France-Presse report published in the Guardian on May 29 <www.tinyurl.com/jv6sbxwr> that a copy of a Finnish translation of the book checked out 84 years ago had been returned to the Central Library in Helsinki; the due date of the loan was just a month after the Soviet Union invaded Finland in 1939, and "the return of the book might not have been the first thing on the borrower's mind," librarian Heini Strand suggested.
22707. Editor Carla Kaessinger Coupe has assembled a nice assortment of Sherlockian homages in the latest issue (#33) of the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Magazine, which also has Kim Newman's detailed discussion of the BBC's 1960s Sherlock Holmes television series; the cost is $13.00 (or $39.99 for four issues) from the Wildside Press <www.wildsidepress.com>, and the magazine also is available as eBooks (single issues or subscriptions).
22708. Jennie Paton has reported an interesting interview with Sherlockian playwright Jeffrey Hatcher at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=rYd6p59ibs0>.
22709. Maggie Schpak ("The Soup Plate Medal") died on June 23. She was an artistic genius, designing and crafting jewelry and props for movies and television vision series, as well as medals and awards for members of the Baker Street Irregulars, and spectacular raffle prizes for the Dr. John H. Watson Fund. Her interview for the UCLA oral history library is on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/s4snm2u6>. Maggie received her Investiture from the BSI in 2007.
22710. I've long described this newsletter as "six or more pages a month of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean." There was an amusing discussion of gossip (and gossips) by Jonathan Self in a post to the Country Life web-site on June 11 <www.tinyurl.com/48ae69vs>.
22711. This year's "Summer of Sherlock" celebration in Portsmouth, honoring the city's Conan Doyle Collection (which includes the collection of the late Richard Lancelyn Green) <www.tinyurl.com/2s3jret5>, offers (free) on-line presentations by Prof. Christine Ferguson, Paul Chapman, Ross Davies, Mark Jones, Mattis Boström, and Douglas Kerr (July 2-15). You can register for the Zoom lectures at the web-site soon.
22712. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcast is now 17 years old, and well deserves their boast that it's the oldest Sherlock Holmes podcast. You can listen to them celebrate the anniversary at <www.tinyurl.com/3ptez74z>. One of the nicest things about the podcast is their archive of all the previous episodes.
22713. The June issue of the Beacon Society's Not-So-Quarterly Newsletter now is available at the society's web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>, with the latest news from the society and its efforts to offer "teachers, librarians, children's museums, and children's theaters with local resources to bring the magic of Sherlock Holmes to life." This issue offers the winning entries in this year's Joel R. Senter essay contest, and it's impressive indeed to see how well youngsters can do.

22714. Karen Murdock notes something for completists who have Charles Wysocki's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" artwork as a print, plate, calendar, or jigsaw puzzle (Sep 10 #7 and Dec 14 #4): a different version of the artwork in his Americana Adult Coloring Book (Dayton: Mead, 2016); the artwork's Sherlockian only for the title, and the coloring book is safe for all ages.
22715. "Murder by the Book" (promoted as "a criminally good exhibition!") is now on display at the Cambridge University Library, through Aug. 24, with an interesting web-site <www.cam.ac.uk/stories/murder-by-the-book> that shows many of books and other items on display. The exhibition includes a copy of the first edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles, and much much more, in their "celebration of 20th-century British crime fiction."

22716. The Independent reported on June 18 <www.tinyurl.com/mte6mche> that Enola Holmes will be on display at Madame Tussauds in London when a new film and TV-themed zone opens to the public on July 19, and there's video of Millie Bobby Brown at the unofficial unveiling of the wax figure.
22717. Peter McIntyre and Kate Karlson were at Monmouth Park (in New Jersey) on June 15 to watch Sherlock's Jewel run and (unfortunately) finish dead last <www.tinyurl.com/mtpjwpez>. But the horse has a good record overall, having finished in the money in half the races in which he's run; here's his lifetime record <www.tinyurl.com/7up5xh3w>.
22718. If you enjoyed vol. 1 of Tripwire's graphic novel Sherlock Holmes and the Empire Builders: The Gene Genie (Mar 24 #5), the company is offering two different signed covers for the issue <www.tinyurl.com/5956svfe> (and lots of other artwork as well).
22719. The latest news from Laurie R. King <www.tinyurl.com/49btsr3r> is that the title of her upcoming book about Mary Russell and her Uncle Jake will be Diamond Deceiver. There's also a tribute to her first agent, Linda Allen who died last month, and a free download of "The Marriage of Billie Birdsong" (an extract from the Russell/Martinelli cross-over The Art of Detection) available until July 15.
22720. "Baker Street Irregulars Is Still Going Strong 36 Years After Tom Cruise Learned to Sling Bottles for 'Cocktail' at Famous New York Bar" (according to a story at the Morning Honey web-site) <www.tinyurl.com/3cpunty6> (June 10). That's the bar and grill on the Upper West Side, which also charms guests with poker and bingo nights, and occasional magicians.
22721. Michael W. Homer will lecture on "The Adventures of Arthur Conan Doyle and His Spirit Guide Pheneas" on-line on Oct. 6, using previously unpublished material to explore the seances in which Pheneas appeared to Conan Doyle's home circle. Mike has written about Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes for the Baker Street Irregulars Press and many scholarly journals, and there's more information about the event at <www.tinyurl.com/3wkanf9d>. The lecture is sponsored by the Last Tuesday Society, which is headquartered at the Viktor Wynd Museum of Curiosities, Fine Art, & Natural History in London <www.thelasttuesdayociety.org/museum>.

22722. There's a fine Wikipedia entry for Sir Henry Thompson, but it doesn't mention The Octaves. "Sir Henry Thompson was holding that evening one of those charming 'octave' dinners at which it was my occasional privilege to attend," Conan Doyle wrote, in 1906, in his article "An Incursion into Diplomacy". Eight people at 8:00 for eight courses was the rule for the dinners, and you can read more about Sir Henry in a post at the Inside Croydon web-site (on June 10) <www.tinyurl.com/55edphuf>. Conan Doyle's article is available (thanks to Alexis Barquin) at the Arthur Conan Doyle Encyclopedia web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2zd5en6y>.
22723. The Frederic Dorr Steele Memorial's seminar on "Murder, Mayhem, and Masterpieces: The Art of Illustrating Mysteries", at the Salmagundi Club in New York (May 24 #1), has been rescheduled to Sept. 13 (4:00 to 6:30 pm). It will feature CrimeReads editor Olivia Rutigliano (on the evolution of British detective fiction, and the role of illustration) and illustrator and graphic designer Jeff Wong (on how his career collides with his passion as a book collector); more information is available from Burt Wolder <burt@fdsteele.org>.
22724. Donald Sutherland died on June 20. He began his acting career on television in 1962, appeared in his first film in 1963, and starred as Hawkeye Pierce in "M*A*S*H" in 1970. He appeared as the spiritualist Robert Lees in "Murder by Decree" (1979), and was cast as Moriarty in a never-produced film "Limehouse", based on the John Gardner novel The Return of Moriarty (scheduled for production in Apr. 1976); there's a first-draft screenplay by Erik Lee Preminger in someone's collection.
22725. This Work of Storytelling, edited by Cathy and Glen Miranker (San Francisco: Quartering Press, 2024; 63 pp., $60.00), is as close as we'll ever get to Conan Doyle's speech to the Author's Club in London on June 29, 1896. There's a full-color facsimile of the eight-page manuscript, with a transcription and knowledgeable essays by experts. There's only passing mention of Sherlock Holmes (who in 1896 was thoroughly deceased), but it's a grand opportunity to learn more about Conan Doyle. It is available from the Wessex Press <www.wessexpress.com/html/Miranker2.html>, and (signed by the editors) from the Mysterious Bookshop <www.tinyurl.com/29njz3h2> (for $75.00).
22726. Sherlock Is a Girl's Name, edited by Narrelle M. Harris and Atlin Merrick (Bittern: Clan Destine, 2024; 193 pp., $21.99), is an anthology of stories inspired by the Canon, all of them presenting Sherlock Holmes as a woman, in genres that include imaginative fantasy, alternate universes, science fiction, and other genres. Harris also edited the anthology The Only One in the World (Oct 21 #4).
22727. She also has written a novel, The She-Wolf of Baker Street (2024; 290 pp., $22.99). It's set modern times, and the she-wolf is Mrs. Hudson, who is a werewolf; Holmes and Watson are on hand, along with many other characters from the Canon, some human and some not, some heroes and some not, and the story's told with verve and drama and humor. The author has a web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/47j86e7f>, and Clan Destine has an interesting (and colorful) web-site at <www.clandestinepress.net>.

22728. Powell's Books in Portland, Ore., is one of a very few survivors in a vanishing world of old-time massive bookshops, and it's still a destination for collectors: the line of customers grew until it was nearly two miles long, at a recent warehouse sale at Powell's, according to a story at OPB's web-site (June 3) <www.tinyurl.com/55fc2atk>, kindly forwarded by Bill Seil.
22729. Jennie Paton reports the Sherlock Patisserie in Zamalek in Cairo (Egypt) <www.facebook.com/p/Sherlock-patisserie-61552743720496>.
22730. Sherlock Holmes: The Exhibition (the new name for the International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes) is now at the Farmington Museum in Farmington, N.M. <www.farmingtonnm.org> through Sept. 28. The exhibition debuted in Portland, Ore., in 2013, and has toured widely since then. It's truly impressive, Doylean as well as Sherlockian, as you can see at the EDG website <www.tinyurl.com/yytm7m9s>.
22731. Chloe Robyn Smith has an unusual hobby: creating closed fore-edge artwork on her books. One of them is a collection of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and you can see her at work at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=nL3XQKh24N0>. Her YouTube channel's at <www.youtube.com/channel/UCrUHTnF6deuWhumeQc1eZow>.
22732. H. A. Saintsbury appeared as Holmes in the Gillette play, with Kenneth Rivington as Watson and Charlie Chaplin as Billy, touring in Britain in 1903, and a program from the Grand Theatre in Wolverhampton (Sept. 14, for six nights only) was offered at Bonhams in London on June 20 with an estimate of £600-£800 <www.tinyurl.com/pmmmbmphd>; it sold for £2,560 (including the buyer's premium).
22733. Theatrical news: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is running at the Chester Little Theatre in Chester, Cheshire, through July 6 <www.chesterlittletheatre.co.uk>.
22734. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville" is due at the Okoboji Summer Theatre in Okoboji, Iowa, July 2-7 <www.okobojisummertheatre.org>; the French Creek Theatre in Sheffield Village, Ohio, on Sept. 13-22 <www.tinyurl.com/23eb8txf>; and at the Wayne Theatre in Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 25 <www.waynetheatre.org>.

22735. Fractal will perform "The Sherlock Files" (an improvised mystery) at the Interchange Theater in Milwaukee, Wis., July 26; the theater's web-site is at <www.interchangetheater.com>.
22736. Oliver Gray's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will tour in Britain, July 27-Sept. 15 <www.illyria.co.uk>.
22737. Kate Hamill's "Ms. Holmes & Ms. Watson--Apt. 2B" is scheduled at the Caine Lyric Theatre in Logan, Utah, Oct. 4-12 <www.cca.usu.edu/theatre>.
22738. Todd Wallinger's "The Enchanted Bookshop" is due at the New Castle Playhouse in New Castle, Pa., Aug. 9-18 <www.newcastleplayhouse.org>.
